Yachting Party

One of the very smart events of yesterday was the yachting party given by Mr. and Mrs. E. Bottler on board their yacht Black Swan. This gay affair was in honor of Mrs. Charles Porter Downey and her daughter, Mrs. Daniel Derby of Michigan. Mrs. Bottler is Mrs. Downey's sister.

Bon Voyage

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laurence Doheny entertained with a handsomely appointed dinner last week, a bon voyage courtesy to Mr. and Mrs. Anson Lisk, who are on their way to Europe.

Mah Jongg Luncheon

Mrs. Beverly Keim is giving a mah jongg luncheon next Wednesday at her home, 820 South Westchester Place, for Mrs. Hoyt Mitchell, who will sail in April to spend the summer abroad. The guests include twenty of Mrs. Mitchell's close friends.

Dinner for Eastern Visitors

Mr. Joseph Painter of Pittsburg entertained at dinner Monday evening to compliment his neice, Mrs. H. P. Tucker; and her daughter, Mrs. A. S. Merrill of Chicago. There were sixteen guests. Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Merrill are visiting their aunt, Mrs. A. E. P. Brown of South Manhattan Place.

To Honor Miss Isabel Kiernan

Miss Harriet Eugenie Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Eugene Andrews, received 100 of her friends at her home on South Virgil street yesterday afternoon. The event was in honor of Miss Isabel Kiernan of New York City, who is Miss Mildred Finley's house guest. It was one of the very smart teas of the week and the decorations were carried out in significance of St. Patrick's Day. The youthful and charming young hostess was assisted by the Misses Mildred Finley, Gail Seyster, Isabel Mushet, Mary McAllister, Virginia Anderson, Dorothy Henry, Polly Hampton and Harriet Ford.

Polo at Midwick

Pool players and polo enthusiasts had a table all their own at the Midwick Country Club last night. The company including Messrs. and Mmes. John B. Miller, John B. Miller, Jr., E. G. Miller, Lafayette Hughes, Arthur Perkins, Jack Holt, Howard S. Dudley, John Legat, Capt. and Mrs. R. L. Hammond, W. J. White, Roy E. Craig, Messrs. and Mmes. A. P. Kinney, Donald O'Melveny, Alfred Wright, Miss Louise Burke, Mr. Carleton Burke, Maj. W. W. Erwin, Capt. Hobart Gay, Col. Beverly Brown, Maj. John Miliken, Maj. Carlos Brewer, Capt. J. M. Swaing, Capt. F. D. Sharpe and Mr. Gerald Cudahy.

Mrs. Russell McDonell Taylor entertained ten friends at luncheon last Sunday, afterward attending the polo game.

Mah-Jongg Luncheon

Mrs. A. T. Kinney, of Cleveland, gave a delightful mah-jongg luncheon Wednesday at the Midwick Country Club. There were twenty guests and a spirited game of mah-jongg followed the luncheon.

Gerard-Wright

An interesting wedding took place in the Church of Our Saviour in San Gabriel Tuesday at four o'clock when Miss Corinne Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wright, became the bride of Mr. Edgar Clemens Gerard of Los Angeles. Rev. John R. Atwill read the service. The bride is an attractive and popular member of the younger set and she was lovely in a wedding gown of white embroidered crepe, with a veil of Venetian lace that had been her mother's. The veil was fastened with a bandeau of pearls and orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Opal Stickney, maid of honor, wore a dainty georgette in shades of coral with a picture hat and flowers in the same shades. The bridesmaids were: Miss Dorothy Wright, sister of the bride, who were a charming frock of orchid silk and a white picture hat, her arm bouquet of sweet peas and forget-me-nots; and Miss Dorothy Winslow of Los Angeles, who wore golden silk and a white hat and carried daffodils. Mr. and Mrs. Gerard left immediately for an extended wedding trip, after which they will be at home in Los Angeles.

Here From Seattle

Mme. Raymond Anzias de Turenne has just arrived from Seattle to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. Anzias de Turenne. It will be remembered that Mme. R. Anzias de Turenne was decorated by Marshal Foch for her services during the war. She has been entertaining Marshal Joffre during his stay in Seattle.

At Beverly Hills

At a week-end party, Maj. Charles M. Parker of Chicago, who makes his home at the Beverly Hills Hotel, will have Mrs. C. M. Lews, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Swift and Mr. and Mrs. John Pearsall, complimentary to Mrs. Lewis, who sails shortly for the Hawaiian Islands. For the occasion, Maj. Parker has arranged a large table for dinner [illegible] Friday evening, followed by dancing at the weekly informal ho[illegible] dance, a horseback ride and luncheon on Saturday and a little [illegible] party" at the preview on [illegible] evening.

Recent arriv[illegible] Beverly Hills Hotel inc[illegible] A. Fisher and daught[illegible] mons, of Denver; Mr. and [illegible] W. B. Beebe of Portland, Or., Mr. S. R. Cooper and Mr. H. T. Sloane of San Francisco, and Mr. and Mrs. Alex B. Johnson of New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Tomlinson of Duluth, Minn., and their nephew, Mr. Edward Cobb Davidson of Bay City, Mich., are spending some time at the Beverly Hills Hotel. On Tuesday evening, Mrs. Tomlinson entertained at a small dinner for her niece, Miss Jeanie MacPherson, who makes her home in Hollywood.

On Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Patterson welcomed twenty-five friends into their new home on Crescent Drive, Beverly Hills. The evening was spent in dancing, after which the guests were served a delightful supper in the private dining-room at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

What will perhaps be the largest specialty shepherd dog show, is being planned by the Beverly Hills Hotel for one day only on Sunday, April 29. Entries will number over 200, and fifty prizes will be awarded.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Woodin and daughters, the Misses Jane and Martha, who have spent the winter at the Beverly Hills Hotel, are returning to their home in Chicago at the end of the month. Complete arrangements have been made for them to make their home at the Beverly Hills Hotel after September. Mr. Woodin, who is a prominent horse fancier, owning the Woodin Farms Stables of hunters and jumpers, just outside of Chicago, has purchased a tract of land adjoining the Hollywood Country Club, where he will establish his stables.

Mr. Carleton L. Elmes of Chicago, who has spent the last three months with Mrs. Elmes and their son Charles at the Beverly Hills Hotel, returned this week to his home. Mrs. Elmes and Charles will remain throughout April, go[illegible] east early in May.

At Los Angeles Country Club

One of the delightful events of the week at the Los Angeles Country Club was the luncheon given Thursday by Mrs. Frederick Charles Hartmann. Interpretive dancing added much to the pleasure of the occasion. The company included Mmes. Erasmus Wilson, James Tabor Fitzgerald, John Burton Chaffey, E. Willes Reeder, Herbert Collins, Giles Hall, C. O. Lindburg, H. J. Whitley, Delancy C. Smith, A. Bennett Cooke, William H. Millspaugh, G. H. Kress, Ralph R. Campbell, C. S. Swaine, Sherman Wiggins, Harry Purdon, Adele McNear, D. Orena, M. J. Chichester, W. S. Bartlett, Lanier Bartlett, James H. French, Ada Brand Stocker, Willedd Andrews, S. C. Dunlap, Grantland Long, Patrick Campbell, Francis Germain, John P. Gordon, A. H. Greene, Frederick Perkins, Evelyn Downing, W. I. Hollingsworth, E. S. Bacon and Misses Mildred Finley, Isabel Kiernan, Madeline Pindon, Ynez Orena, Alice Russell Campbell, Jeanette Campbell, S. Stavnow, Edith Rennie and Miss Ramsburgh.

For Mrs. Day

At the home of Mrs. Harry A. Ford on South Virgil street, the ladies of the First Congregational Church gave a delightful tea Tuesday afternoon to compliment Mrs. William Horace Day of Bridgeport, Ct. Rev. Day was for many years the pastor of the First Congregational Church, going from here to Bridgeport. Mrs. Day is being extensively entertained by her Los Angeles friends.

The Inexpensive—
As Well As The Finest

In every grade of home-furnishing which is worthy of possession the "California" presents especially attractive values and very comprehensive selection of the newest and best.

We realize that there are many people who know the "California" only by its beautiful window displays and who have acquired the erroneous conclusion that this must be a high priced store.

It is to these people that we specially emphasize the invitation to come and compare values and designs in any furniture requirements for any room in the home.

A very unusual and most interesting bedroom suite—moderately priced—will be displayed in one of our windows this week.

You will find here styles in bedroom furniture that represent the latest and best in America and values that will quickly reverse any impression you may have had of this store as being high priced.

In suggesting that you come and compare values we would stress the assurance that you will not be urged to buy. The "California" does not believe in high pressure selling methods. We are glad to have you come and look—at your leisure, because we know that if you do so you will come back when you are ready to buy.

Wyatt, Milbank Johnson, John Rich, Arnold Burkelman, Randall Hutchinson, Alexander Barret, Antonio Moreno and Miss Margaret Goetz.

Dance at Country Club

While the Saturday night dinner-dances are proving so delightfully popular at the Sunset Canyon Country Club, those on Tuesday evenings are attracting an equal share of interest among the members and their friends. Next Tuesday evening the 20th inst., Mr. and Mrs. T. McMullen of Glendale have invited sixty guests for the dinner-dance. Miss Geraldine Waltz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Waltz of 1425 South Hoover street will also be a charming hostess the same evening to a large party of her friends, about 100 invitations having been extended.

Hurst-Smith

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Carrie Smith and Mr. Ralph Barrington Hurst took place at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Oscar P. Stevenson, on Wednesday morning, Rev. Boddington reading the service. Only the immediate relatives were present. After a wedding breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Hurst motored to Sharon, where for the present, they will make their home.

Luncheon and Matinee

Miss Helen Sheehan, whose marriage to Lieut. Samuel Arthur is to take place in May, was entertained on St. Patrick's Day by Miss Mary Isabelle Alpaugh, with a luncheon at the Chateau Cafe and theater party afterward at the Morosco. The guests were Misses Florence McGarry, Pauline Estes, Mary Belle Chapman, Winifred Golden, Lillian Sheehan, Mrs. D. J. Sheehan and Mrs. Duane Van Horne.

Raymond B[illegible]

[illegible] the Raymond ball last night [illegible] the direction of the Misses Cotterill, Mr. R. Hayes Hamilton projected his motion pictures of various guests at the Raymond [illegible] golf, tennis, billiards, departing for picnics, or on the veranda.

The Raymond orchestra at the weekly Sunday concert will be assisted by the California Girls Quartet. Misses Lucille Gibbs, Margaret Wilson, Madge Becker and Maybelle Berry compose the group.

Last week's women's open handicap golf tournament resulted in a three-handed tie between Mrs. George B. Burrage of Chicago, Mme. DeLaFont of London, and Mrs. Arthur Raymond on a net of forty-four.

Thursday will be radio night with the concert from KHJ broadcasting station featured.

Registering the last few days at the Raymond were Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Godfrey, Miss Margaret Owen, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Clarke, Scarsdale, N. Y.; C. P. Smith, Utica, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ballantie,n Newark, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Horace C. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Van Leer, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Returned Home

Mr. and Mrs. John Abramson have returned from their month's stay in Denver and Kansas City. Mrs. Abramson is planning a series of luncheons and dinners to be given during the spring months.

At the Maryland

Last night the opening of Palm Terrace at the Maryland was a gala affair. Among those entertaining was Mrs. Peter Alexander, around whose beautiful table were grouped Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Stephens, Dr. and Mrs. Burdette Post Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wilson, Mrs. Broadwater, Mrs. C. Miller, Mrs. George Farwell, Mrs. John Ewing and the hostess, Mrs. Alexander.

Miss Margaret Kiernan and Miss Helen Kiernan, also winter guests at the Maryland, were hostesses for an attractive group of young people. Seated around the gaily-decorated table, the decorations carrying out the St. Patrick motif, were Miss Isabelle Craig, Miss Arlene Westwood, Miss Frances Sellwood, Miss Elizabeth Curtis, Miss Dorothea Setzer, Miss Muriel Westbrook, Miss Kathlerine Crowley, Mrs. Harry H. Cammann, Jr., Miss Helen Hostetter, Rose Craig, Eric St. Clair, Claude Gaffney, Edwin Gaffney, Frederick Bornman, Lawrence Lester, Frank Little, Harold Bond, William Charlet, Harry H. Cammann, Jr., Donald McCoy and the hostesses, the Misses Kiernan.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Walton, who also make their home at the Maryland, were hosts for one of the most attractive dinner parties of the evening, entertaining a party of nine covers in honor of Mrs. B. B. Bell of Chicago, who is leaving for home very soon after spending the winter in Pasadena.

The decorations of Mr. and Mrs. Walton's tables were beautifully carried out, with a centerpiece of choice flowers and other table accessories which blended most artistically with the decorations of the new Palm Terrace.

Recent Arrivals

Diamond Protection for Patrons of Feagans & Co.

There is sometimes an almost imperceptible difference in diamonds which separates their values by hundreds of dollars. Unfortunately this difference is not always noticeable to the casual buyer who may be inexpert in appraising gems.

To those who would buy diamonds the name and the reputation and the experience of Feagans & Co. stand as sentinels safeguarding the selections of patrons.

Here the buyer in the most casual mood may safely rely upon the sincere representation of every gem in the vast "Feagans" collection. Every stone has been selected with an expert care and judgment achieved only after many years of experience and close contact with the leading diamond markets of the world.

From the diamond of one-quarter carat on up to those valued at a king's ransom. No stone enters the stocks of Feagans & Co. that reveals the slightest imperfection through the powerful magnifying eye-loop.

Here will be found diamonds offered at consistent values and where an imperceptible difference exists between two stones it will be pointed out.

The confidence of patrons and the name of "Feagans" are fully protected in every transaction here.

Luncheon Party

Mrs. Hancock Banning was hostess at a beautifully appointed luncheon, Wednesday, at the Hotel Maryland, entertaining a group of friends in honor of Mrs. C. A. Severance of St. Paul, who is spending the winter in South Pasadena, and her house guest, Mme. Slavko Grouitch. The affair preceded the mah jongg party in the Maryland lounge.

The big round luncheon table on the mezzanine floor was adorned with a centerpiece of roses and each place was marked with a corsage of camellias and a small Chinese nut basket. The unique place cards were miniature Chinese shrines, containing a small image of one of the Chinese gods.

Plates were set for the honor guests, Mrs. Severance and Mme. Grouitch, Mme. Rodezno, Mrs. Alexander Barrett, Mrs. William Lee Wollett, Miss Florentine Michaud of St. Paul, Mrs. Erwin P. Werner, Mrs. R. D. Shepherd, Mrs. Chester T. Hoag, Miss Katherine Mellus, Mrs. Charles Jeffras, Mrs. W. K. Jewett and the hostess, Mrs. Banning.

Risch of New York City, Miss Gladys Bowie of New York City, and Mrs. F. M. Brown of Jamaica, L. I.

The coach to thus provide this exhilarating social diversion is similar to the old four-in-hand known as the "Pioneer," which was extensively used some years ago by Reginald Vanderbilt, one of New York's most enthusiastic horsemen, when taking his private coaching parties to and from the Metropolitan race meets. The same coach, frequently driven by Mr. Vanderbilt, himself, was also a familiar sight at the National Horse Show Association meets a few years ago. It was usually drawn by a quartet of famous horses from the Vanderbilt stables.

At Vista del Arroyo

Mrs. F. R. Turner was luncheon hostess to seventeen friends at Hotel Vista del Arroyo Saturday. There were places for Mmes. Susanne Butterfield, Chicago; S. D. Allen, Barre, Vt.; J. B. Hoover, Fred A. Linck, H. S. Miles, Fred W. Wood William Campbell, C. E. Barber, A. I. Whitehead, Louise Harwood, Grant M. Lorraine, George A. Wallace, H. C. Richardson, Ralph B. Clapp, William Dalgarno and Mrs. Thomas Schrader.

Extraordinary preparations are being made at Hotel Vista del Arroyo, Pasadena, to make the "Carnival of Nations" dinner, entertainment and ball Wednesday evening the most brilliant ensemble of the spring at this hotel.

More than a score of artists and entertainers have been engaged for the occasion, each of whom will appear in the grand revue as the representative of some foreign nation. They will be garbed in the dress of the nation they represent. Songs and dances will make up most of the program.

Sorority Banquet

At the University Club, on the evening of the 10th inst., the Delta Gamma Sorority held its annual banquet. One hundred and twenty-five members were present, representing colleges from many parts of the United States. The banquet-room and the tables were decorated with garlands of dainty spring blossoms. The evening closed with a play by the Alpha Nu Chapter of the University of Southern California. A mah-jongg party will be given by the Delta Gamma at the new Mary Louise on April 14.

Engagement Announcements

Mr. and Mrs. John Howell of 2620 South Vermont avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Olive Ida Howell, to Mr. Daniel Munns of Regina, Sask. The marriage will take place in the early autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Recht of South Hobart Boulevard announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rose Recht, to Mr. Reginald Shultz, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Shultz. They will be at home to their friends on the afternoon of the 25th inst.

St. Patrick Luncheon

Mrs. Louise Jungquist of South Manhattan Place gave a St. Patrick's luncheon Tuesday, the decorations being in keeping with the day. Mrs. Jungquist was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Walter Overell.

Charity Ball

Society will dance for charity on the evening of the 3rd of April at the Hotel Maryland. Among those working for the interests of this affair are Mmes. William A. Brackenridge, Frank Gates Allen, Francis F. Baer, Sidney L. Berg, James B. Boswell, David Blankenhorn, John B. Callery, Frank Carpenter, C. C. Clarke, Louis B. Clarke, John S. Cravens, F. Breakfast-Bridge

One of the pleasant events of Hollywood society last week was the breakfast-bridge given at the Hollywood Country Club by Mrs. John Jay Curtis of Vista Terrace. There were places for thirty-six at the two large round tables, beautifully decorated. The guests of honor were Mrs. Frank Hamilton Tobey of Chicago and Miss Bradley King of Hollywood. Adorable baskets of spring flowers were at each place, and after breakfast a game of bridge was enjoyed.

Watts-Nienke

Coming as a surprise to their many Southern California friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Neinke of Riverside and Mr. J. Hampton Watts of this city. The ceremony was at Ventura on Tuesday evening, February 21. The young couple kept their marriage a secret until yesterday, when announcements were sent out to their friends. The wedding is the culmination of a long romance which began in high-school days. The late war proved but a slight interruption, and, in fact, added to the romantic details, for the ring used in the ceremony was purchased in France by the groom.

Mrs. Watts is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Nienke of Riverside. She attended Riverside Junior College and is a talented and popular member of the Riverside younger set.

Mr. Watts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Watts of Los Angeles. Before the war he attained prominence by his work in Christian Endeavor circles. When the war broke out, he was a member of the famous Wild West Division, and later served as a sergeant in the battle of the Argonne and in Belgium. Upon his return from the war, he completed his education at Occidental College, where he made a name for himself in various school activities. The groom expects to take up educational work. The couple may make a trip around the world.

Out-of-Town Society

SOUTH PASADENA

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. F. H. Blair of 1800 Milan avenue entertained with an informal luncheon. Her guests were members of the alumni chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Bridge and businesses were combined during the after-luncheon hours.

An informal dinner party was the courtesy paid a group of friends on Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Branstool of 119 Windsor Place. The table was made attractive with spring blossoms. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Harvey of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Cramer of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Sproal of South Pasadena. Mah Jongg filled in the evening hours.

Friday Mrs. Fred Bookenoogen of 1014 Magnolia street entertained at luncheon for Mrs. A. Schwelsinger and Mrs. William Warren of Santa Monica, Mrs. Will Lindsay and Mrs. Ray Millmar of Santa Ana, Mrs. Jess Hardy of Fullerton.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wilson were host and hostess at a smart St. Patrick's dinner party, given at their home, 1710 Fletcher avenue. Forty guests were bidden.

Monday afternoon Mrs. Percy Will York 1922 Monterey Road entertained. A group of friends discussed in detail the subject of California art. Miss May Lancaster of Los Angeles gave a reading from Van Dyke.

Another St. Patrick's Day affair was the huge dance at the American Legion clubhouse. This rendezvous, because of its large floor space and unusually convenient parking facilities has fast become a popular center for local social affairs.

Friday the Beati Hora Luncheon Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Pierce of Milan avenue.

On Monday at 6:30 p.m. the Misses Dora and Minnie Raab of 1109 Buena Vista street entertained with a buffet supper in honor of fellow-members of their Sunday School of which Mrs. M. M. Reeder is teacher.

GLENDALE

Mrs. Lillian Dew of 650 North Kenwood street, entertained with a card party last Thursday afternoon, as a benefit for the linen fund of the Tuesday Afternoon Club. Five hundred was played, Mrs. F. R. Gartley making high score. Those present were: Mmes. C. F. Parke, E. S. Roake, T. Wood, H. E. Clough, Nathan Rigdon, Herbert Tolle, F. R. Gartley, P. E. Corey, Eugene Gilliland, Homer Lockwood, W. H. Boothby and F. G. Scott.

The motif of St. Patrick's Day was used in house and table decorations, Saturday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Delos Jones of Justin avenue, entertained at a party, complimenting Fletcher West. There were fourteen guests.

Misses Leona and Eleanor Brice were hostesses Saturday afternoon, at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mrs. Alvin Brown. Mrs. Brown, who was Miss Josephine Emery suprised her friends last week with the announcement of her marriage which occurred early in February. Sweet peas and jonquils attractively decorated the Brice home on North Kenwood, pink baskets of Easter eggs were presented to each guest, the honor guest receiving a huge pink egg containing directions in rhyme for finding gifts which were hidden in a mammoth crepe paper egg tied with bridal ribbons. There were twenty-five guests.

Mr. Claude Caswell of 230 North Central avenue, was the surprised and delighted host at a celebration in honor of his birthday anniversary Monday evening. The dinner table was decorated with green and white, and all appointments were appropriate for the St. Patrick's season. Covers were placed for Mr. and Mrs. C. Briton, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Dillinger, and Mr. and Mrs. Caswell.

Mrs. Frank Brannum of Springfield, Mo., was the incentive for a dinner party, Tuesday evening, given by her aunt, Mrs. M. S. Russell of 337 West Wilson avenue. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brannum and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Russell.

Wednesday morning, Miss Thelma Rupp, and Clifford Cox of Pasadena were married in the Glendale Presbyterian Church. Rev. W. E. Edmonds read the marriage service. Peach blossoms and other spring flowers with palms and ferns formed a beautiful setting for the bridal party. Bridal music was furnished by Oscar F. Walton of Los Angeles, who played the wedding march and accompanied Mrs. Jerome Hirsch of Los Angeles, who sang Chanson de Slorian, by Godard. The bride was gowned in white satin crepe, embroidered with crystal beads, and a veil held in place by a bandeau of silver and orange blossoms. Her only attendant was Miss Myrtle Morris, whose dress was of white with trimmings of coral and gold. Trueman Johnson of Pasadena was best man. A bridal breakfast was served to the guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Rupp, 712 Orange Grove avenue, parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Cox will make their home in Pasadena, as Mr. Cox is connected with the First National Bank, there.

A bridge luncheon was the first social affair to be given in the new home of the Tuesday Afternoon Club. This affair was for the nonsection members and was given Saturday afternoon. There were 300 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Cleophas and their daughter, Miss Gertrude Cleophas, entertained with another of their delightful Sunday afternoon musicales and teas, last Sunday, at their home at 337 North Central avenue. There were fifty guests.

Wisteria attractively decorated the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Wyman at 1326 North Maryland avenue, Wednesday evening when they entertained ten guests with a Mah Jongg party. The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Priest, Mrs. R. M. Hutchings of Kansas City, Mr. and Mrs. Maslen of Hollywood, Mr. G. H. Ford, and Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Wernette.

Helena Rubinstein Week

Mlle. Manka Rubinstein

Sister of Mme. Helena Rubinstein, the celebrated Beauty Expert, of Paris, London and New York, has arrived with a fascinating array of aids to feminine loveliness and will demonstrate their uses—as applied to individual needs—all this week. The display has been arranged in the Toilet Goods Department.

THE RUBINSTEIN HOME TREATMENTS WILL BE EXPLAINED HERE THIS WEEK ONLY.

Beginning March 19th

As preventative and remedial agencies, the famous Valaze Beauty Preparations are recommended for the following—

Protecting the skin from sallowness, sun stains, freckles and harshness.

Maintaining a clear, attractive skin. Overcoming relaxed facial muscles, double chin and loss of face oval.

Preventing and obliterating wrinkles and crowsfeet.

home at 535 Fortieth street. Mrs. Paulsen received a bouquet of red and pink carnations from Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wickersham, who were among the guests, and the rooms held an abundance of dainty blossoms of the season. The evening was devoted to dancing and a light collation was served at the close of the affair. A number of prominent persons of local shipping circles were included in the guest group.

The M's and P's, members of a recently formed social club, were the guests of Mrs. J. A. Phillips at a pleasurable affair, which took place at the Phillips home at 4643 Oliver street Thursday. Sweet peas, in artistic arrangement, lent lovely color to the interior of the house. The afternoon concluded with a delectable collation.

WHITTIER

To celebrate her husband's birthday anniversary, Mrs. A. W. Farewell and her husband's sister, Mrs. Charles Theaker, arranged a surprise party at the Farewell home, 520 East Bailey street, Tuesday evening. Most of the guests were recently or formerly from Michigan, where the Farewells lived before coming to California. An impromptu program was presented, consisting of both vocal and instrumental music, and a minstrel act was given by Mr. Farewell, with his son Cyrus at the piano. A collation was served late in the evening. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dingman, Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Prayton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Theaker, Mrs. Helfridge, Omar Theaker and A. P. Farewell, father of the host.

Miss Alma Maclean entertained a number of friends at her home, 330 North Whittier avenue, Tuesday evening. The affair was thoroughly informal and music and conversation whiled away a pleasant evening. Musical numbers were given by Mrs. E. Baxter, Mrs. Weldon Peel and Miss Alice Beck and Miss Estelle Peel. The guest list included the Mmes. E. Baxter, Esther Saunders, McWhirter, Elliott, Weldon Peel, J. G. Maclean and the Misses Grace Cadwell, Marguerite Hoard, Alice and Ethel Back, Stelle Baxter, Ada and Estelle Peel, Percey Gosney, Bessie Pickard, Erma Zahnke, Bessie Clark, Marjorie Maclean, Pearl Daniels, Mabel Green, Lucy Clements and Ethel Landreth.

Mrs. Edward Keasby entertained at her home on East Bailey street Tuesday with an attractively appointed luncheon in compliment to Mrs. J. R. Milliken of Newcastle, Ind., who is spending some time on the Coast as the house guest of her sister, Mrs. J. Chalmers Newsome of East Hadley street, Whittier. The near approach of St. Patrick's Day was the incentive for the decorations, which were in Irish green. An attractive luncheon was served, places being laid for the Mmes. J. R. Milliken, J. Chalmers Newsom, Jack Swain, Ralph Thyness, all of Whittier; Mrs. L. U. McClure of Los Angeles, mother of the hostess; Mrs. Claire Newberry, also of Los Angeles, sister of the hostess; Mrs. Gordon Macleish of La Habra and the hostess, Mrs. Keasby. The afternoon was passed informally with social conversation and needlework.

EAST WHITTIER

The Hacienda Country Club was the scene of a delightful dinner party Monday evening, when Mrs. A. D. Cox entertained in celebration of her husband's brithday anniversary. The affair was arranged as a suprise to Mr. Cox. The guests assembled at the Cox home, 422 North Brighton avenue, Whittier, at 6 o'clock, and motored to the Country Club house, where they were hospitably received by Mrs. Mamie Armstrong, club hostess, and were served an attractive chicken dinner at 7 o'clock. The evening following the dinner was spent at cards and dancing. The St. Patrick's Day motif was ingeniously carried out in the decorations and appointments for the birthday dinner, and also at the card games later. At the dinner table covers were laid for eighteen, most of the guests being from Whittier. Mrs. M. H. Cox and her daughter, Mrs. Stevenson, mother and sister, respectively, of the host, were guests from Los Angeles.

Mrs. San Mendenhall, Mrs. O. W. Maulsby and Miss Gertrude Little were members of the entertainment committee that planned for the annual birthday luncheon of the East Whittier Woman's Improvement Club Wednesday afternoon at the clubhouse. The affair was one of the largest and happiest of the entire club year, almost the entire membership attending, and many of the members bringing guests. The cosy clubhouse has lately been remodeled and some new furnishings added, which make it doubly attractive and homelike.

Mrs. Heartha Suckadorf entertained with an attractively appointed dinner Tuesday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Suckadorf of Catalina street, in compliment to a number of friends who are visiting the Golden State from Chicago. Violets and other springtime flowers were used decoratively, and places at the dinner table were laid for Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Peterson, Miss Roy and Miss Zealer, all of Chicago; Miss Florence Annabel, the hostess, Miss Suckadorf, and the Messrs. Arthur and William Suckadorf.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Warner were hosts to a coterie of congenial friends at a delightful dinner party Tuesday evening, the appointments being in recognition of St. Patrick's Day. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cooper, the Misses Gladys Kaufman, Marjorie Warner, Pearl Leverton, Madge Warner, and the Messrs. Bruce Dennison and Milton Stone.

VENTURA

Mrs. Alice Titus McGill of Los Angeles spoke before the Ventura Club League on Tuesday. Mrs. McGill was honor guest at a prettily appointed luncheon for six guests given by Mrs. Ella Mack, the league president.

A nice affair of the week was the E.C.O. card party, given at the clubhouse on Tuesday evening under the club auspices. Mrs. Frank Brigham was chairman. Twenty tables played, the games being bridge and 500.

Little Miss Betty Ward, who has recently come here from San Luis Obispo, with her parents, the Chester Wards, to live, had a nice party at her grandmother's home, Mrs. Frank Jones, on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Crawford entertained a number of friends at a Spanish supper Saturday night.

Mrs. Howard Durley entertained at an informal afternoon for Miss Dortha Mae Penn, who left this week for Los Angeles to make her home.

Mrs. Mary Allison was 78 years old Sunday and the occasion was made a gala one in her family. Among her gifts was a real pot of gold—it contained $78, one for every year of her life. There were many other beautiful remembrances. A family dinner at which nine were seated was enjoyed.

Two birthdays and a wedding anniversary were celebrated at an elaborate chicken and beef barbecue at Foster Park, Sunday. The birthdays belonged to Hoover Love and Billy Allen and the wedding anniversary was that of Mr. and Mrs. George Black of Santa Barbara.

Edward G. Bell and his bride, a Whittier girl, were here for the week-end and received many attentions from friends, as the wedding is very recent. Sunday a barbecue for fifty helped celebrate his brief visit at his old home here.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Shinn entertained a number of friends at an evening of cards and dancing Friday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Blackstock gave a dinner for ten on Saturday evening.

Mrs. Hal Hammons was hostess to her bridge club on Saturday afternoon.

Miss Eva Rasmussen and Mrs. Morris Barnard were hostesses at a nice party on Saturday afternoon [illegible] home of the former. The affair especially honored Mrs. Joe Gavin and Mrs. Robert Lamb.

Miss Helen Cavnah was hostess to her bridge club and a few invited guests on Saturday. The affair was made into a surprise party, complimenting Mrs. David Darling, Jr.

Mrs. Wesley Bialock was hostess to the Avenue Reading Club this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Blanchard entertained friends at a nice dinner prior to leaving for Santa Paula.

Mr. and Mrs. Alan Pope gave a dinner for seven on Thursday evening.

RIALTO

Notable guests at the handsome home of the Pendletons, North Riverside avenue, are Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Rollins of Rawway, N. J., former neighbors of the Pendletons in their old eastern home. Mr. Rollins is president of the Record Publishing Company, and a prominent politician. That Mr. Rollins is a native son is possibly most interesting to people of the sunny Southland; born in California he left here with his parents in the early days when but a small child. This week he returned for the first time to his native State, marking the vast advance in transportation methods since he traveled eastward by prairie schooner.

Luella Preston and Evelyn Oglesby entertained their teacher and classmates of the Methodist Sunday-school on Saturday at the Preston home, West Foothill Boulevard. Old-fashioned games and more modern guessing contests passed the time all too quickly away. Refreshments of ice cream and home-made cake were served by the young hostesses. Sharing in the good time were Martha Tolle, Elizabeth Jones, Julia Winters, Marie Whtson, Bernice Miles, Etheline Sharp, Evelyn and Irene Grow, Mrs. George A. Miles, Mrs. P. H. Grow and Mrs. G. Preston.

In their new quarters at the F. R. Golahar place, North Olive street, the Boy Scouts of Rialto spent a jolly evening with their Scout Master, William Moon, Jr. The boys take great pleasure in furnishing the interior of their new hall. Sixteen members of the troop were out, only four being absent from the gathering.

On Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Crowder had the pleasure of entertaining unexpected guests, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cribb of Anaheim, for supper and an informal evening of sociability. Mrs. Cribb is Mr. Crowder's sister.

W. P. Martin of Pasadena was in Rialto the first of the week. On Wednesday at the reciprocity day meeting, Mrs. W. P. Martin of Pasadena and Mrs. N. L. May of Riverside were appointed honorary members of the Rialto Woman's Club. Both were identified with the growth and development of the club when residents of this community. Dr. J. H. Lash of Hollywood, a former pastor of the Rialto Congregational Church, addressed the club, taking as his theme, "Robert Browning as an Interpreter of Life." The social hour was exceptionally happy. Springtime blossoms transformed the clubroom into a bower of beauty. Visitors from neighboring clubs were present.

YORBA LINDA

Because this is March the color of green has been reflected in social events here this week. Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Welch cleverly entertained the members of the XX Club Tuesday night. Dinner was served in a St. Patrick's setting. After dinner a very pleasant evening was enjoyed.

Books formed the topic for discussion at the meeting of the Yorba Linda Women's Club on Tuesday. Miss Maxwell of the Fullenton Public Library gave one of her splendid talks on the value of books. Mrs. Weston Smith was hostess and had charge of the program, several musical numbers were given by local talent. The ways and means committee planned a dance for March 17. This was a great success. A large number of masked figures and some costume dancers were present. The card rooms were well patronized, and a splendid time was enjoyed by all present.

Los Angeles called to a number of ladies from here on a shopping tour, and a visit to the theaters, on Wednesday. Among those to enjoy the sights of the big city, were: Mrs. B. M. Selover, Mrs. Ross Johnson, Mrs. H. R. Brown, Mrs. E. R. Walker and Mrs. B. Carter.

BUENA PARK

Early days were related Tuesday by Mrs. E. E. Thurman when the Buena Park Woman's Club celebrated its thirty-fourth anniversary. The event was held in Tustin at the home of Mrs. Charles Preston, who formerly resided in Buena Park. Mrs. Thurman is one of the oldest members and she told of the club's organization when it was known as the Ladies' Mutual Aid Society. The late Mrs. John Wright was the founder. Spring flowers were used through the rooms and for the luncheon table where a pot luck luncheon was enjoyed at noon. A musical program was held after luncheon, Mrs. Lee Harvey and Mrs. Fred Bastady being the soloists, Mrs. Elmer Follis was the accompanist. Among those who enjoyed the day were Mmes. L. J. Robinson, S. S. Greenwalt, Mae Feagan, George Hawkins, J. F. Greenwalt, John Page, O. R. Dano, H. H. Haggart, E. S. Follis, Harvey, Bastady, Thurman, W. W. Shaw, Glenn Crilly, George Cole, E. L. Cole, C. S. Cox, C. G. Snyder, John Johnson, D. N. McDowell and Mary Baker.

Mrs. H. H. Haggarty has been entertaining guests from the East this week. The visitors who have been enjoying local hospitality are Mrs. J. W. Lynch and Miss Ella Graham. They are spending some months in California and are from Sharon, Pa.

Needlework was the business of the meeting Wednesday afternoon when the Jolly Stitchers met at the home of Mrs. R. Umbago. The hostess served luncheon at the close of the meeting. Those attending were Mrs. M. Shaw, Mrs. Leighty, Mrs. W. Loughboro, Mrs. W. Knott, Mrs. R. Conghran, Mrs. Kettler, Mrs. George Cole, and Mrs. E. L. Cole.

cake adorning the place of honor was a feature of the entertainment. Favors of red hats and red balloons, with candles and roses in the same vivid shade with the dainty little misses, made a most beautiful combination. This was all under the shade of the trees in the yard. Here games were played until late in the afternoon when dainty refreshments were served. There were thirty-five present to honor Miss Madge. Many pretty gifts were presented to the little hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Heiden were hosts to the newest five hundred club, this being the third meeting. Naming the club was part of the ceremony of entertainment. The club will be known as the Jolly Bunch. The pretty ranch bungalow was brightened with huge bowls of marigolds and ferns. The color scheme in favors and score cards was of the same bright shade. First prizes were won by Mrs. Hart and Mr. Mochow, consolations going to Mrs. Mochow and Mr. Chewning. Comprising the club are: Mr. and Mrs. Louis Mochow, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall, Mr. and Mrs. William Gluth, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Barker, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Chewning and Mr. and Mrs. Heiden. Guests were Miss Leona Heiden and Wilber Heiden.

Including the members of their family and visiting guests from Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Schneider entertained at dinner Sunday. Covers were laid for the three daughters and their families. These were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Scott of Bellflower, Mr. and Mrs. John Beale of Fullerton, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Young of La Habra, C. Walgrin of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. William Rath of North Whittier Heights, Mrs. Rath's mother and sister, Mrs. C. E. Buhman, Miss Alvina Buhman. These latter are visiting the Raths for the winter, and all are old-time Iowa friends of Mr. and Mrs. Schneider.

MONROVIA

Mrs. Henry Waterman was hostess at a daintily appointed luncheon on Tuesday at her lovely home on North Primrose avenue when she entertained the members of the Foothill Luncheon Club. The hostess used a color motif of purple and yellow. This color was also used in profusion in flowers on the tables. This club is composed of twelve members, and included, Mrs. H. R. Miller, president; Mrs. La Verne Watt, Mrs. W. A. Spinks, Mrs. Henry Klein, Mrs. Montague H. Graham, Mrs. Hugo B. Krutsch, Mrs. Hardy C. Harris, Jr., Mrs. Loring L. Day, Mrs. C. T. Renaker, Mrs. L. N. Wheeler and Mrs. J. Allen Munro.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Banks were hosts to a number of their friends on Tuesday evening at their home in Highland Place at a delightful dinner party. Places at the daintily appointed table were arranged for Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Day, Mrs. C. Doras, and Mrs. Anna Snyder, of Millersburg, O., who has been spending the winter here as the house guest of her sister, Mrs. C. O. Banks; also for the members of the West Side Dinner Club, which included Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Halbert, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Everest and the host and hostess.

Mrs. Harry Nelson was hostess at a smartly appointed luncheon on Tuesday at her home on Grand avenue. Mrs. Nelson seated her guests at one large table which was attractively decorated with a great bowl of sweet peas. Her guests for the occasion were the members of the Duarte Bridge Club, which included Mrs. A. E. Rutledge, Mrs. Clarence White, Mrs. J. M. Bashor, Mrs. Freeland Hunter, Mrs. Gordon Maddock, Mrs. E. E. Edwards, Mrs. O. R. Greene, Mrs. J. R. Mildren, Mrs. E. L. Brewer and the hostess.

Mrs. F. L. Riggs and two daughters, Miss Marie Riggs and Miss Gertrude Riggs, arrived in this city recently from Los Angeles to make their home here. Mr. Riggs just recently took over the management of the Mission Theater. Mr. and Mrs. Riggs and daughters will make their home on East Palm avenue.

The members of the X.B.N. Club met at the home of Miss Margaret Broxon on East Palm avenue on Saturday afternoon. Bridge was the diversion during the afternoon. Members present were Miss Evelyn Young, Miss Viola Vollmer, Miss Sally Edwards, Miss Ethel Crall, Miss Ivy Anderson and the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Colburn entertained at an attractively appointed dinner and bridge party on Monday evening at their home on North Primrose avenue. The guests were members of the Bridge Club of which they are members. Assembled for the delightful affair were Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sarwine, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Moore, Dr. and Mrs. S. E. Salisbury, and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Clark.

Mrs. Frances Beall of Cassiopolis, Mich., is a house guest at the W. A. Chess home on West White Oak avenue. Mrs. Beall has spent some time in Southern California, but expects to return to her eastern home soon.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Mildren of West White Oak avenue furnished the setting for a delightful affair on Friday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Greene and Mr. and Mrs. Mildren were joint hosts at a dinner party followed by an evening of bridge. The decorations were very attractive and carried out the St. Patrick motif. Bouquets centered the daintily appointed table and other appointments furthered the idea. St. Patrick's place cards marked covers for thirty-two guests.

One of the enjoyable affairs of the week was the dinner and bridge party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schwartz on North Primrose avenue on Wednesday evening, when they entertained the members of the Fortnight Dinner Club. Members of the club included Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Eager, Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Harbert and the host and hostess. Guests of the club were Mr. and Mrs. Hardy C. Harris, Jr., and Miss Gertrude Bird.

Mrs. E. A. Hackman of West Orange avenue was hostess recently to members of the Shamrock Club of the Catholic church. A business meeting preceded a social hour. During the evening plans were made for the club's St. Patrick's party.

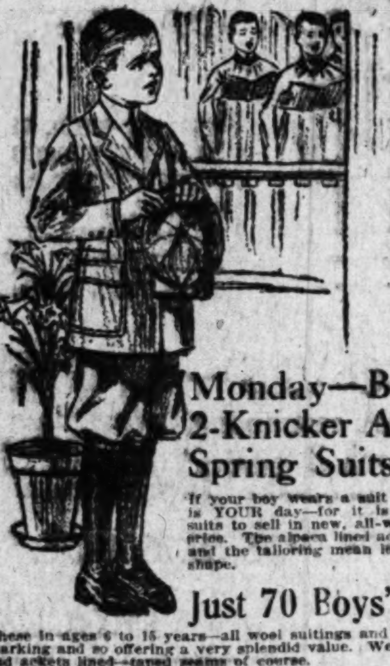
Hamburger's

ESTABLISHED 1881

Broadway, Eighth and Hill Sts.

There's Pride in a Boy's Heart at Eastertime!



Yes, there is—if at no other time your lad seems to care a straw about his appearance, you'll find that "'round 'bout Easter" the urge of Spring gets hold of him—and he likes new clothes.

He likes Hamburger clothes, too—real he-boy clothes, bought in a real boys' store, where "a feller feels at home," as one boy said—and where you, dear parent, find values that make up the major consideration in most mothers' minds when it comes to outfitting the young rascals.

Monday—Boys' 2-Knicker All-Wool Spring Suits 9.75

If your boy wears a suit between 9 and 17-year sizes, Monday is YOUR day—for it is then that Hamburger's has the 75 suits to sell in new, all-wool Spring mixtures at this very low price. The alpaca lined jackets, the sturdily taped trouser seams and the tailoring mean long wear and a holding of the well-fit shape.

Just 70 Boys' Norfolk Suits, 6.00

These in ages 6 to 15 years—all wool suitings and corduroys—not intended for such low marking and so offering a very splendid value. Well made in Norfolk style with knickers and jackets lined—taped seams of course.

Little Boys' New Spring Reefers, 8.75

Natty little tweeds that have the cutest tailoring worked into them. Sizes 2 to 8 years—and just as clever as they can be.

Boys' Brushed Wool Sweaters, Only 4.50

We can scarcely keep them in stock—and this Monday offering brings just 50 to sell at this substantially lower-than-usual price. Sizes 30 to 36.

Be Sure to See the New Furnishings-Values!

CHIFFON SILK STOCKINGS, 2.50

It is a certainty that chiffon silk hose will make a most acceptable gift to any woman or maid—and so great are Hamburger's stocks that it is only a matter of settling on the price one cares to pay—and the color one wishes. Prices for good qualities start at 2.50 and run up to 7.00 the pair. Nationally known brands and our famous Black Agate carrying the unqualified Hamburger guarantee of satisfaction. (Main Floor.)

NET BERTHAS WITH REAL FILET, 2.75

Berthas and more Berthas—everyone is asking for them—and small wonder when one considers the soft, illusively feminine charm they give to Spring frocks.

These are a very unusual offering, we think—better than we have had the good fortune to offer at so small a price before. Only 6 dozen of them—and no one knows when they'll come so good again. A happy gift thought here, too. (Main Floor.)

STERLING SILVER BUD VASES, 1.95

With everyone searching for Easter gifts, how welcome is the news of these 36 vases to sell at a price so small. And sterling too—that always makes even the tiniest gift acceptable. While the quantity of these is limited, there are many other interesting gift thoughts in the silver section—being snapped up rapidly, but as they go others come. So, there is always something good in the silver section—value like this, however, cannot come so very often. (Main Floor).

NONE TOO EARLY TO ORDER EASTER CANDIES

Hamburger's "Famous for Quality" candies—candy-food as safe for childhood as it is goody-goody. All kinds of little Easter Novelties are ready—and it were well to place those "sweetheart" orders now for the great lovely boxes of Mission and other packings that are ever welcome Easter gifts. Easter eggs, of course—but such GOOD ones! And all the hundred and one little bunnies, chicks and other kiddie-thought sweets that go with Easter. (Main Floor).

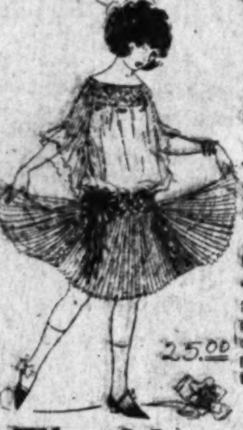
Girls' Spring Party Frocks, 25.00



Seems as if almost every little girl has parties on her list in Springtime—and not only that, but all summer she needs a "party frock" now and then—such is the way of a young girl's summers! And these are particularly lovely—soft, pretty Georgettes, and some taffetas in glowing changeable colors—with any number of silk crepes—verily little "loves" of dresses. In sizes 8 to 14 years, with styles suited individually to the different ages therein.

Girls' Easter Hats—SO Pretty!

This year, as never before we are specialising in millinery for the little girl, the little-older than a little girl and the girl who is even older than that—the "young miss" we call her—and you will be interested in the new millinery priced from 3.95 up—oh, up to any price one has in mind—that awaits her ladyship's Easter choosing.

(Hamburger's—Second Floor—Monday)

The New Radium Silk Petticoats—"Prints" . . 5.00

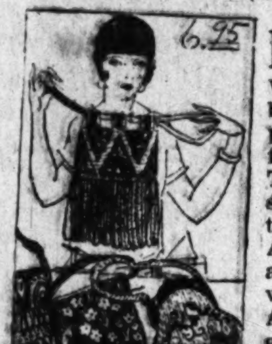
"These are just what they want," said the buyer—and the writer found no reason to wonder that women have been asking for just such as these. Prints that are gay—and yet very wearable—radium silk that is soft and clinging, making a happy complement to the straight line frocks of spring. Fringe on many—beautiful colors in all—and then some exceptionally good silk jerseys that have really found new ways of making a flounce attractive.

Value surely—and the very essence of Spring loveliness.

(Hamburger's—Second Floor—Monday)



Imported Beaded Bags, 6.95

What better news for Easter! Imported beaded bags—always those most in demand—and these particularly interesting in their new colors and fresh motifs.

That they were to have sold for more will be instantly verified in YOUR mind when you see them—there is such a difference in bags!

As there are just 200 in the lot and the colors are many, we warn that just that which you want may be gone if you delay too long.

And a word for gift-seekers: No one would guess they cost so little—and "she" always enjoys a beaded bag.

We have been surprised at the number of these we have sold for "Easter gifts" in this sale—and that gave us the thought that perhaps YOU were thinking of a home gift for Easter—and yet wanted the expenditure to be moderate.

To buy a phonograph on easy terms is such a usual matter—and such a simple matter—that if you do lack a phonograph, it would be a pity to let such an opportunity as this slip by—for though Hamburger's controls the Californian in Los Angeles—yet the price is ordinarily more than 115.00.

Plays All Makes of Disc Records

—and that is but one point of these phonographs. They likewise have the desirable flat-top—are console type—have gold-plated parts—silent motor—and the mahogany used in them is exceptional and the beautiful cabinet work brings out the best there is in the wood.

Wide sleeves and slashed sleeves—and short sleeves—in a word, all the sleeve whimsies of Spring make it imperative that one has long gloves—preferably good ones like these, of course. Moreover, the price of these holds a special value appeal for the woman who knows quality—and the color range is so genuinely good that there's many a neat saving possible in their purchase. White, beautiful cream shades, tan, mode, brown are some of the tempting reasons to purchase—either for gifts or personal use. (Main Floor.)

THE NEW RIBBOZINE EMBROIDERED NETS

HAVE you seen them? If not, let Monday find you looking—providing you are interested in these soft, drapey nets and crepes that are to find themselves ere long made into such attractive frocks, overblouses and so on.

One gray ribbozine motif on a sheer georgette is most suggestive of a spring frock—and many other Persian motifs in silk embroidered designs are lovely indeed at 6.50 to 17.50 the yard. (Main Floor)

FIRST THOUGHTS MUST GO TO CORSETS

For they tell us we can no longer trust our beauty to the ways of nature unaided. All sorts of unsightly contours result. So, Hamburger's secured the services of Miss Nolan, New York corsetiere, to exploit the virtues of Binner corsets.

If you have or have not corset troubles—you will find Miss Nolan's demonstrations enlightening.

Perhaps just the prevention of troubles to come—perhaps the rectifying of discomfort or unsightly lines. All week—the Binner—Miss Nolan—Hamburger's. (Second Floor)

FAVORS FOR EASTER PARTIES—ORDER NOW

So often people ask us to hurry a favor order! Always glad to do our best, but just a little fore-handedness will give you so much better results that we ask you to plan with us now if you are thinking of an Easter party.

So rapidly is our favor-making increasing that sometimes we must say "no"—if you come too late.

And the ready-made favors are at their very best right now—there is such an interesting display, that even if one is not planning a party now is a good time to see the Favor Section. (Third Floor)

Easter Linens!

What is it about Easter that makes one think "new linens?" Perhaps just the general up-cleaning and replenishing of home—things that go with spring.

However that may be, Hamburger's has anticipated your thoughts and brought values of a very worthy sort—of an especially interesting sort for Monday and all-week presentation.

Cool! Refreshing! Imported Dotted Swiss, 75c

What more can one ask of a summer frock than the cool, dainty freshness of an imported dotted Swiss dress—provided, of course, that the dotted Swiss is of the very beautiful quality that makes up this Monday offering at Hamburger's! One would welcome the quality even at a much higher price—while this Monday economy comes as an added incentive for immediate buying. Almost any color you could have in mind—with the dots prettily contrasting. Width is 31 inches.

Imported Zephyr Ginghams at 50c

One never tires of these lovely, soft ginghams—how would it be possible when the makers are continually finding so many new witcheries of color with which to make them tempting—and when Hamburger's finds a way to price them only 50c the yard! Width is 32 inches.

New Patterns in Soft Voiles are 50c

Voiles! One could as easily think of summer without flowers as to omit a thought of shimmery-soft voiles from wardrobe plannings. All the new fashion influences are here reflected—a bevy of tempting patterns and colors awaits your choosing—which for best choice must be early in the season.

"Crispy" Imported Organdies, 50c

Something about these lovely organdies makes one think of fields and fields of summer wild flowers—perhaps it is the fresh up-standing way that organdy has. At any rate, no summer field was ever more picturesque in color than this group of organdies. A generous 45-inch width.

Economy Silk Mixtures, 75c a Yard

Here again we find color and color and more color! And all this color enhanced with the pretty sheen that the silk threads give to this more than useful fabric. So many women are choosing it for lingerie because it wears and launders most satisfactorily—and at this Monday price assuredly deserves its name of "Economy" silk. Width is 36 inches.

Silk Sales Are Making History at Hamburger's This March-time

Not only making value history in the annals of merchandising, but making departmental history as to volume of business done in the store. And where there is so much success—there is ever a reason. Here it has been found in the quality, diversity of choice, the value and the quantity of the silks gathered for Hamburger's great March presentation.

For Monday, There Are More Values—To Wit:

Cheney Bros. Navy Chiffon Taffeta, 1.95

How could a department help doing a record volume of business when it offers such a value? "Cheney" tells the story of quality—"Taffeta" the story of fashionable desirability. In the beloved color of navy blue. Width 36 inches.

5000 Yards Heavy Silk Crepe de Chine, 2.95

A quality suitable for so many fashionable uses at a price so very attractive, the five thousand yards will soon go. Fifty light and dark colors, including the much-in-vogue light grays and tans, 45 inches wide.

36-Inch All-Silk Foulards, 1.35

A thousand yards to sell at this enticing price. Presented in a great variety of new patterns and colorings.

Penikees' 1923 Rhapsodie, 4.50

The designs are those stunning stripe and block effects that are to be so good this season for both day and evening wear. 38 inches.

36-Inch Tricolette Tubing, 1.25

Plain and fancy in the full color range of 1923. Obviously an exceptional value at 1.25 the yard.

36-Inch Radium Silk, Yard, 1.95

Its heavy quality and high luster finish proclaims it instantly an unusual value at 1.95 the yard. In all the best-liked colors.

40-Inch Black Canton Crepe, 2.65

The black crepe frock holds an important place in the new mode. Thus will women welcome this low price for heavy, all-silk Canton crepe.

White Sports Satin, the Yard, 95c

This is a beautiful fibre and cotton mixture in striking plaid and stripe effects so much in vogue for sports wear.

Klo-Kanna—a Spring Favorite, 7.50

A new weave that enjoys an unusual popularity in the making of frocks of distinction. Presented in all the new spring colors.

Follow-Thru—A New Crepe, 5.95

An eponge stripe gives unusual smartness to this new weave, which is the medium of some of the season's smartest sports costumes.

Cummings and Mr. and Mrs. William Sanderson.

Mrs. Ezra Christensen entertained the members of the Sunset Canyon Bridge Club last Wednesday. Her home was effectively decorated with jonquils and the table appointments were of yellow. Those who made high score were Mmes. Ray Fence and Roy Campbell and Miss Emma Clader.

Fifty guests attended the wedding of Miss Virginia Lenz and Harold F. Cox last Sunday afternoon. The ceremony was read by Rev. F. T. Allen of the Methodist Church and took place in the living-room of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Lenz, 352 Magnolia street. Spring blossoms and greenery made a most attractive decoration. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Hale Kirkpatrick of Burbank. Miss Jessie Tanner of Santa Barbara was bridesmaid and Byron Cox of Oxnard was groomsman.

PLACENTIA

Mrs. Lewis Edwardson, assisted by Mrs. Lisle Morehouse, entertained the Jolly Nine Card Club at the home of the former, Friday evening. A delicious chicken dinner was served at 7 o'clock, small tables being used. The color scheme of pink and white was carried out in sweet peas, roses and hyacinths. Five hundred was played after the repast, there being six tables. Substitute guests were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Foss. The six-months' score of the male members of the club will be kept, and the half having the lowest score will entertain the balance of the club.

Mr. and Mrs. William Travers entertained at dinner Thursday evening. Covers were laid at the attractively-arranged table for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. William Annin and Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Longstreet.

"Recipe Day" was a decided success Wednesday at the Round Table Club, when the members responded with many delicious dishes for the banquet. Shamrock Day was observed by the use of the "green," the ladies wearing caps and shamrocks in honor of Ireland's patron saint. There were forty-five plates served. The hostesses were: Mrs. C. R. Farrar, Mrs. Fred Cline, Mrs. J. L. Orr, Mrs. H. P. Bender, Mrs. C. P. Smith and Mrs. W. C. Cober. An entertaining and instructive program was given in the afternoon.

A bridge luncheon was given by Mrs. L. G. Elvy of North Main street Thursday. Cherry blossoms were used in a very effective decoration for the luncheon table. After a session of bridge whist, a 5-o'clock tea was served. Included in the guest list were: Mrs. M. M. Martinet, Mrs. A. S. Ericon, Mrs. L. Z. Kroeger, Mr. J. Kirsch, Mrs. W. J. Hiense, Mrs. F. Tauch, Mrs. Elmer Bruod of Anaheim.

GARDEN GROVE

A delightful affair was given recently by the art and craft section of the Women's Club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Henry, with Mrs. Henry and Mrs E. M. Hunt as hostesses. Five hundred was the form of amusement for the evening in which the husbands were invited to join. Red and blue was the decorative scheme with cherry blossom flowers for tables and jardinieres. High score was made by E. R. Stillens, and Mrs. Harry Elmore, consolation to Vernon King. A dainty collation was served at the close of the game by the hostesses, after which a social hour was enjoyed by the thirty-five guests present.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Richey and family were the honorees at a farewell reception given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Allen Monday evening. The affair was a complete surprise as the Richey family were invited dinner guests at the Allen home, the reception taking place afterward. Mr. and Mrs. Richey have been active workers in the civic and religious life of the town for a long time. The Rev. B. Silkwood on behalf of the fifty guests present presented Mrs. Richey with a beautiful Bible. After a pleasant evening a light luncheon was served.

The pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Hogue on Arcadia street was the setting for a very pleasant evening of a number of the high school teachers, who were the guests of Miss Ellen McKenzie Dodson, English teacher. After a resume of school matters, a dainty collation was served by the host, Miss Dodson, assisted by Mrs. Hogue. Guests included: Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Merchant, Mr. and Mrs. Hogue, the Misses Coddie Ziegler, Eva O'Brien, Katherin Long, Edith Alton, Vivian Newman, Mable Woodworth, Bertha Jones, Esther Anderson, Alice Thornberg, Paul Spring, Claud Crosby, C. E. Burgess.

Forty dollars and a delightful evening was the result of the Five Hundred party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Hotz Monday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Elmore won the prizes. There were thirty-five present. Refreshments were served.

The funds received enriched the Woman's building fund.

ORANGE

Mrs. George Hell was the charming hostess Monday afternoon at a farewell party given in honor of Mrs. M. C. Porter, who is soon to take up her residence in Los Angeles. The guests were members of the Orange W.C.T.U. and included Mmes. C. L. Benson, C. A. McGill, Elizabeth Mills, T. L. Faris, Charles Frost, George Peterson, O. U. Hull, W. E. Girton, George Smith, Theodore Starkey. The lovely affair took the form of a handkerchief shower and came as a complete surprise to the honoree. Beautiful decorations of freesias and varicolored sweet peas transformed the rooms into a veritable garden.

One of the happiest surprises of the week-end social calendar was the celebration of the fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Harms, Jr., who were the honorees at a merry party given by Mrs. C. E. Short and Mrs. W. S. Lentz at the home of the former. After a bounteous dinner, the evening was spent with progressive whist. Those enjoying the happy evening were Mr. and Mrs. John P. Harms, their sons, Ernest and August, Mrs. A. L. Short and daughter, Miss Anna Short, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Short, Mr. and Mrs. John Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Harms and son, Henry of Richfield, George Harms and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lentz.

Mrs. R. W. Thornburn entertained at a pleasant birthday party at her new home at Olive, Saturday. The beautiful home, nestled near the foothills with an inspiring view of moutain and valley, was gay with sprays of peach blooms, yellow Marguerites and cornflowers. Places were laid for twenety-five guests at a daintily appointed table.

BREA

"Just boys," were entertained at the home of Miss Margaret Corl Corlett of West Burch street, at a 6 o'clock dinner Monday evening.

The lads were all members of Miss Corlett's Sunday-school class, and the affair was a farewell party to Jessie Perrine, who leaves shortly with his parents to make their home in Red Bluff, Cal. Games and music passed a pleasant evening. Those present were Clark Calderwood, Othel Blakesley, William Corlett, Harold Carter, Hugh Brawley, Earl Pendelton, Edwin Freeman, and the honoree, Jessie Perrine.

Gordon Estes of the Sterns lease was another lad that was honored with a party. This was to celebrate the young man's birthday anniversary. A surprise dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. Estes, on the return of Mr. Estes from school at Pasadena. Yellow was the predominating color, the poppy being profusely used in yellow baskets. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Middleton, Mr. and Mrs. George Rayner, Mr. and Mrs. Clair Raynor, Miss Ella Armstrong and Jack and Percy Raynor of Fullerton.

Miss Helen Reed was the recipient of a very pretty surprise party at the home of her teacher, Mrs. Marie Marsh of South Walnut street Tuesday evening. Miss Reed will leave soon for Fort Worth, Tex., to make her home there. The guests were all school mates from the eighth grade of the grammar school. A pleasant evening was spent in games, charades and music, after which a two-course luncheon was served. Those to wish the honoree farewell were the Misses Hazle Warfield, Lucile Brawley, Doris Woodward, Minnie Orteg, Alice Winchel, Dorothy Senn, Martha Rutlege, Inez Morrison, Gladys Paschal, Helen Heartfield, Angeline Lacaza, Evelyn Harvey, Annabelle Sommers, Martha R. Rutlege and Helen Reed.

POMONA

Mrs. W. A. Kennedy of Park and Walnut streets entertained a group of relatives and friends on Monday, at which time she arranged a delightful party in honor of the birthday anniversary of her father, William S. Bell. Mr. Bell is from Hollywood, and arrived at his daughter's home Monday with his sisters, Mrs. Katherine Nelson and Mrs. Robert A. Kingan. Among the other guests were Mr. and Mrs. John F. Sankey of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Lawrence of Claremont and Mrs. M. F. Kennedy.

In honor of the ninety-first birthday anniversary of W. R. Stevens, 59 West Fourth street, his wife invited several close friends and relatives to partake of a generous feast Tuesday afternoon, at which time all joined in wishing the host many happy returns on reaching another milestone in a ripe old age.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Irwin, 80 Palm Place, were hosts at dinner Thursday evening, the company of twenty-four guests including members of the Olio Club and their husbands. Dinner was served cafeteria style early in the evening, and afterward there were games and a good time in general.

Entertaining for members of the Valley Boulevard Club, and special guests, Mrs. Roy Fryer of Spadra gave a very enjoyable affair Wednesday afternoon. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Theodore Hitt and Mrs. Charles J. Fox.

Mrs. Charles F. Darrow entertained at her country home on Thursday afternoon in honor of her cousin, Mrs. Alice Moore, of San Francisco, who has been visiting here for several months.

At the regular meeting of Pomona Ebell Club Friday afternoon Miss Ethel Richardson, assistant to Will C. Wood, Superintendent of Public Instruction, was the main speaker, and discussed in detail the provisions of the budget as they apply to the Department of Education. Mrs. L. A. Beebe, district chairman of the department of industrial welfare for the Los Angeles district Federation of Women's Clubs, was another speaker bringing to Ebell a message of vital importance and concerning the cut in the State budget for women in industry from $130,000 to $91,000. Later in the afternoon the recital section pre-

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.—[Advertisement.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.—[Advertisement.

Dainty apricot blooms and foliage were employed by Mrs. Edwin J. Dirking in carrying out an effective green and white decorative motif in her attractive apartments at The Charlemagne Wednesday afternoon when she was hostess at an informal tea. The early portion of the afternoon was devoted to fancywork, chat and listening to a radio concert. The green and white note was also carried out in the tempting two-course collation which was served. Mrs. Dirking's guests numbered Mrs. Ralph Edward Shaw, Mrs. Clayton K. Close, Mrs. M. T. Dacus, Mrs. Paul Thonhoff, Mrs. Paul Smith, Mrs. Everett Earl Simpson, Mrs. Edward Middough, Mrs. J. D. Rowlands and Mrs. O. H. Whildin.

Complimenting Miss Norma Young on the occasion of her birthday anniversary, Miss Inez La Rue entertained with a surprise supper party at her home, 318 North Lemon avenue, Saturday evening.

In honor of Miss Lois Smith, whose marriage to Jack H. Fisher of Los Angeles is to be an event of the near future, Miss Ruth Todd entertained Friday afternoon at her home, 510 Lynn Haven Court, with a miscellaneous shower. The bride-elect was the recipient of many charming gifts. Music featured the afternoon's entertainment and a collation was served.

TULARE

An "Irish tea," the third of a series of "Teas of All Nations," which are being given by women of the Congregational Church, was held Saturday afternoon at the attractive home of Mrs. W. H. Jones on North N street. Boughs of greenery with clusters of cut ferns and baskets of poppies, other wild flowers and shamrocks were used profusely in the artistic decorations. Many were present to enjoy the hostess' charming hospitality and the appropriate program that had been arranged. Prof. Adolph Boch rendered an excellent vocal and violin solo, feelingly accompanied by Mrs. Mabel Clement at the piano. Mrs. F. C. Suiter gave several clever Irish readings in her usual happy manner. At 5 o'clock, over the cups of fragrant tea, visiting was the occasion of the hour, the trip to "The Emerald Isle," being voted one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season.

Members of the Tuesday Night Club were happily entertained Saturday by Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Harper at their cozy home. Golden poppies and acacia boughs with yellow streamers gave a golden tone to the brilliantly lighted rooms. Bridge formed the diversion of the evening and at a late hour dainty buffet refreshments were served. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Elmo Zumwalt, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Parlier, Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Gist, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ellis and Mrs. R. E. Rounsaville.

In tribute to the ninetieth birthday of her mother, Mrs. Bamesberger, Mrs. Katherine Hesse entertained at her home on South H street Thursday evening. Out of town guests included Mrs. W. D. Hammerly of San Carlos and Mrs. Mary A. MacDonald of Oakland. At the birthday dinner, served late in the evening, four generations were represented.

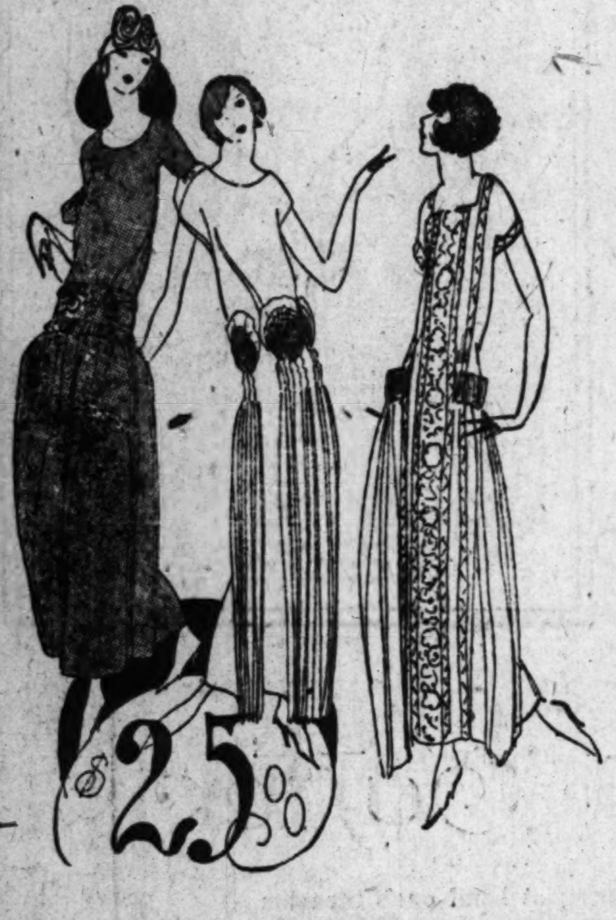
A Hundred Specially Bot Dresses at $25

And they're going to do much to spread the word that "Prices are very low at Jacoby's"



—At the left of this advertisement we have pictured three of these dresses—and while there are only three out of a hundred they give you an idea of what to expect in this very unusual offering.

—If the pictures could have done as much towards telling you about the character of the materials—about the way these garments are made—and about the color range—we would have made this a pictorial advertisement without words—

—As it is, we just want to state that these dresses are made as we little thought that $25.00 dresses could be made—that they're made of heavy printed crepes, of Roshanara, of Roxana, of Canton Crepe and of Flat Crepe in nearly all of the good new colorings and in all sizes up to 44.

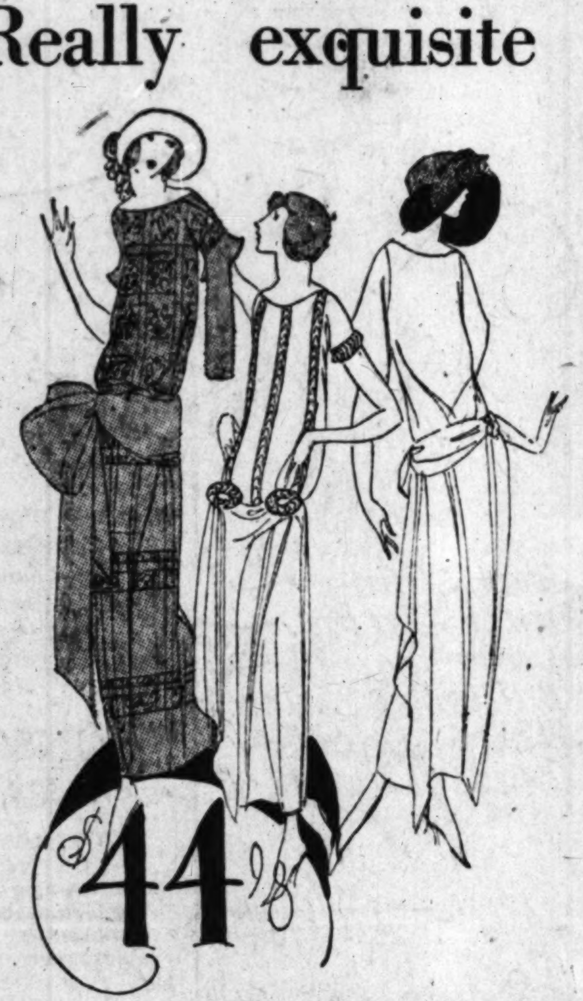
Really exquisite Frocks $44.98



—The Garment Chief thinks that the headlines to this advertisement should have said something about how very special these dresses are at $44.98. We think you're going to be so enthusiastic about them that the price wouldn't matter even though it were dollars and dollars higher.

—Besides the three models pictured there are a great many others developed in flat crepes, Crepe Elizabeth and Canton Crepe and some particularly attractive ones in the new Egyptian prints and still other three-piece models of Roshanara.

—Colors galore in all sizes up to 46½.

Smart new SUITS at $35

—Suits are selling as they haven't sold in many seasons and the reason they are, no doubt, is "the suits" that have been created for this Spring and summer.

—We're proud, indeed, of these smart new suits of Poiret twill with their narrow belts and their braided and embroidered trimmings. We know they're priced unusually low at $35.00—

—They come in tan, navy, gray, and there are some in novelty velour checks. Sizes to 46.

WEAR RUBIES; WIN POWER

Los Angeles Scientist Finds Age-Old Secrets Regarding Mystical Use and Properties of Precious Stones

BY GRACE WILCOX

Dr. O. C. Getsinger, scientist and writer now living in Los Angeles, who has deciphered the oldest hieroglyphic writing in the world has discovered during his twenty years of residence in Egypt and India that there is a deeper significance than psychology attached to precious stones.

The Hindu believes that the soul of man exists outside his body and envelops him as an atmosphere or aura; that this soul merely uses the body as a vehicle through which it functions in the material world; that the soul is a vibrating enity or spirit moving in a sea of ether or light and that these vibrations, high or low, produce colors which may be seen by persons of spiritual insight.

"A learned Hindu friend of mine who has spent a lifetime delving into these soul mysteries," said Dr. Getsinger, "declares that it has been found that meditation concerning things relating to power, rule and authority turn the aura to the red field of the chromatic scale; that emotions of affection register pink tones; that an analysis of facts and observations tending to discover the truth affect the orange field; that all thoughts relating to art, music, poetry, idealism, etc., come under the yellow color; that thoughts of science and classification of phenomena generates a blue tint, and that green manifests when by deduction one attempts to form definite conclusions regarding theories or beliefs; that violet or indigo is the color of impartiality, impersonality, and manifests in the aura when one is just, fair and right.

SECRETS OF POWER

"Thus in ancient times, when one wanted to stimulate any particular quality of mind, he elected from his jewels such as had the particular color or cambination of colors corresponding to the psychological effect desired.

"For instance, when power and gratification of ambition were to be obtained, a red ruby was worn, as this color vibrating into the aura of the wearer started up a wave of vibration in the ether and thus increased the force that was in harmony with his aims. The pigeon-blood ruby, which combines red and indigo, is symbolical of royalty and emblematical of the two attributes—authority and justice.

"To the Hindu the diamond represents indestructibility, hence it is the symbol of immortality. It has always been the chief royal jewel, because it was believed that the Kings of India and the high caste Brahmin were the 'twice born,' the immortal ones; the reflection of the seven primary colors in the diamond indicated that the Kings and Brahmin had attained to the seven degrees of soul evolution and were as the ray of white light.

"In affairs of the heart, the pink ruby was considered necessary for a happy outcome; in intellectual pursuits, the red ruby and the yellow topaz were worn together; in seeking the muse and inspiration, the yellow topaz alone was worn; the pearl was the emblem of knowledge and wisdom along spiritual lines—for the pearl is concealed from the eyes of man in the depths of the sea and there guarded by the close-mouthed clam."

Asked concerning the superstitions revolving around the opal, Dr. Getsinger said:

"The opal contains nearly all the refractions of light that the diamond does, the fire within it coming from the volcano which produces it.

"Orientals consider it unlucky merely because of the fact that it is a soft and sensitive stone, hence they believe that the magnetism or vibrations of the wearer are absorbed and retained by it. If by chance the opal has been worn by one of low vibrations or one having evil thoughts and is then possessed by one of higher vibrations and purer thought, it has the power to bring the last owner misfortune through the malign influences cast over it by its former wearer.

BIRTH STONES

"Queen Victoria's love for opals and her constant wearing of them, restored them somewhat to popular favor, although I believe they are generally now worn only by those born in October."

Regarding the connection of gems with astrology, Dr. Getsinger explains that the ancients believed that certain stones were influential during certain months, when the twelve signs of the zodiac exerted an effect on the human mind and body.

"Thus for each sign of the zodiac," he says, "a certain stone was worn as an influence for good fortune, as follows:

"The garnet, the stone of Acquarius, for those born from January 21 to February 21; amethyst, the gem of Pisces, February 21 to March 21; bloodstone, Aries, March 21 to April 20; sapphire, Taurus, April 20 to May 21; agate, Gemini, May 21 to June 21; emerald, Cancer, June 21 to July 22; onyx, Leo, July 22 to August 22; cornelian, Virgo, August 22 to September 22; chrysolite, Libra, September 22 to October 23; acquamarine, Scorpio, October 23 to November 21; topaz, Sagittarius, November 22 to December 21; ruby, Capricorn, December 21 to January 21.

In the folk lore of precious stones, one finds the following re-

Suddenly the doors of the Plaza Church opened. A subtle savor of incense stole almost insensibly upon the throng. Then preceded by boys in ecclesiastical vestments, a small procession of priests and acolytes issued from the church—the Church of Our Lady, Queen of the Angels. In solemn procession they crossed the unpaved way to where a bearded bell-founder was waiting. The crowd pressed around the holy ones of the church. Then with due cere-

FLIRTING WITH NITRO

Dick Singleton, Oil Well Shooter, Tells of Miraculous Escapes from Explosions

BY ERIC ERGENBRIGHT

"Forty-eight years on a nitro can Yo! Ho! Ho! and not a d—n spill."

Such is the chantey of Little Dick Singleton, thrill seeker, and for half a century, driver of a nitroglycerin hack in the oil fields. Little Dick is 74 years old now, but he still regards life as he did years ago.

One would think him satiated with hair-lifting experiences. One would naturally think that, for the average life of the oil well shooter is only about four years, and Little Dick has been in "the game" just twelve times that long.

But Little Dick is not satiated. Life does not bore him. He has never lost his love of excitement and danger.

He does not feel the weight of his seventy-four years. No harum-scarum boy ever sought thrills with more enthusiasm than Little Dick Singleton.

Even now he is on his way to Mexicali and other border towns to see whether they can furnish any brand of excitement unknown in the early oil fields.

A QUIET DAREDEVIL

Little Dick does not appear to be the daredevil that his actions proclaim him. He is a retiring chap, gifted with a quiet sense of humor that is very appealing. His voice of late has become slightly sad. He is alone in the world. His wife died last year, and only recently his one son was killed in a nitro explosion.

I have known Little Dick slightly for some time. I met him first in the Midcontinent oil field. He was then driving a "death car."

I met him again last week, this time in Los Angeles. Our conversation, however, soon drifted to oil and to nitroglycerin.

Little Dick knows all about nigroglycerin, and when he talks about it it is well worth one's while to listen.

Strange as it may seem, Little Dick never tells of his own narrow escapes. The hero of his tale is always some other shooter.

On the occasion of our last meeting I asked him pointedly to tell me of his thrilling experiences. He refused. Instead, he related to me the adventures of his son, Herb Singleton. A few of those stories I shall repeat here. They are typical of the shooter's life.

BUMPING WITH DEATH

One morning a few years ago Herb was driving over a rough and tortuous road in Northern Oklahoma. In the back of this shooter's car were 200 pounds of nitroglycerin. The road wound up and over a steep hill.

Herb made the ascent without mishap. Halfway down the descent the brakes gave way. The car lunged forward, picking up speed with every revolution of the wheels.

Herb frantically tried to avoid the worst bumps. Any one of them might mean death.

Suddenly he gasped.

Scarcely 100 yards in front of him the road turned abruptly to the right.

THE FATAL CORNER

Almost before he realized the dread meaning of it all the speeding car had reached the corner. Herb knew that he could never make the turn. Death, seemingly inevitable, stared him in the face.

Before him was a thirty-foot embankment. He took a firmer grasp of the bucking wheel and held his car for the drop. Every minute he expected to be blown to kingdom come. The car plunged over the bank. Herb gritted his teeth.

The car came to a stop with a jar. It had not turned turtle and, by the mercy of God, the nitro did not explode.

Herb Singleton had one chance in 1,000,000 for life and he drew the lucky number.

INCREDIBLE LUCK

A few months later he was driving in Southern Kansas. He started out one morning in a blizzard. His car was heavily laden with "liquid death." Another driver, in charge of a car loaded to capacity, went with him as consort.

The air was filled with driving snow and the ground was covered with a blanket of white. The roads were in the horrible condition which only Southern Kansas roads in winter can attain.

Southern Kansas is hilly country. Motorists remember the names of certain hills in that part of the world long after they forget the names of towns through which the roads pass. One of the worst is that steep mound known as Niotaze Hill. The road which Singleton and his companion took that bliz-

'ROUND ABOUT LOS ANGELES

Classes in lip reading are now being formed at the Grand-avenue and Sixteenth-street schools. Have you any Sibylline offerings?

Who is our unknown artist of the jig-saw? Many of our older houses are ornamented with the ibis, the crane and other birds done with a jig-saw. One of these houses is on Sunset Boulevard; another is on South Hill street.

Hannah Mingus intends to carry on. She recently lost her husband, C. W. Mingus, who operated a milk route truck service between Los Angeles, Clearwater, Hynes, Graham, and other points in the county. Now she has applied to the State Railroad Commission for a validation of her operation of this milk route as successor to her husband.

Now, Edward Laurence Doheny, the oil magnate-horticulturist, is to have himself done in oil by Arthur Cahill. Having painted about everyone worth while in and around San Francisco, Mr. Cahill came here some months ago, and has done quite well, thank you. Among others, he has painted portraits of Arthur H. Fleming, who recently gave $4,200,000 to the California Institute of Technology; John D. Spreckels of San Diego and Gen. M. H. Sherman.

The latest edition of the telephone book is at hand. It starts with the A. A. A. Pattern Manufacturing Company and ends with Rose Zwissler. In between are some of our best-known names, though the character sketches give evidence of haste and the plot is somewhat disconnected. The illustrations are of fair quality, and largely consist of taxicabs going somewhere in a hurry. But why did the publisher leave out the artificial limbs which used to intrigue our childish fancy? The last page contains an injunction to "Say it with flowers." What is the significance?

It was in a First-street restaurant, which is not featured by the laying of Epicurean napery. In drifted a battered derelict, a beachcomber of the streets. Following a hoarse-voiced conference with the proprietor, a man who would be rated "minus-1" on the milk of human kindness, the derelict slunk out, the gray phantom of man. In his wake followed a hatless individual, of the featureless kind. "Things breaking pretty hard for you?" he asked, with a rising inflection. We did not hear the rest, but a pocket-book was brought into play. That nameless Samaritan is laying up treasures in heaven.

FAST PACE OF FLAPPERS LEADS BOYS TO STEAL

Judge Hahn's Extraordinary Experiments With Young Criminals; Turned Back to Right Living

BY HARRY CARR

Are we wise or foolish in the way we handle child criminals in California?

Many social workers feel that the methods of our juvenile courts; of Whittier State School; or the California Junior Republic are visionary and too idealistic.

They object to the rule at Whittier whereby any boy is free to run away if he feels like it. They regard this as pampering crooks.

On the other hand, there are sociologists who believe that California's plan of turning juvenile prisons into schools is the real answer to the worst problem of the world today.

Judge Edward Hahn, on January 1, took over the work of the Juvenile Court. It was the acid test of applying an experienced critical mind to this riddle.

The accompanying article is a summary of the conditions as Judge Hahn has found them.

Solomon in all his glory was dim and faded compared to a little colored boy who burst into Judge Hahn's court yesterday. He had a necktie that, by comparison, made a rainbow look like a mud puddle. It signalized the end of a curious compact between a little darky and the Superior Court. It was one of an interesting series of experiments that Judge Hahn has been conducting since he took over the Juvenile Court on the first of the year.

The boy had been brought into court as a thief.

"John," said the judge as the little fellow sat across the table rolling his chalky eyes. "John, what's the matter with you, anyhow?"

"Well, jedge," sighed John, "I cain't nevah have no good times lak dem other boys; cain't go to no movies; cain't go to nuthin'. Ain't got no money."

In his youth Judge Hahn knew what it meant to be a little boy without any money; to sleep around in old barns, crying himself to sleep on an empty stomach.

JOHN'S NECKTIE

So he fished into his pocket and brought out a dollar.

"John," he said, "I'm going to invest this in giving you a good time. Come back and tell me what you did with it."

John had never had a necktie in his life, so 35 cents of the money went for a scarf that looked like a little royal between two paint cans. He spent 30 more on the movies. He had 35 left and the responsibility was too much for him. He had come back to ask the court's advice about those three last dimes and the final nickel.

FLAPPER HIGH LIVING

The increased cost of good times, in the opinion of Judge Hahn, is the chief cause of the appalling outbursts of juvenile crime. Boys can't take their girls to dances in street cars any more. Being a boy involves money, automobiles and luxuries that would have staggered our ancestors.

Recently an overgrown boy of 15 was brought before Judge Hahn, a confessed bandit and automobile thief.

He said that he had fallen in love with a young married woman 20 years old. He had to have money to take her around.

He had a revolver. One night he went around to a lonely drug store. Only one clerk was there. He went in and stuck a gun under the man's nose. He got $65 out of the cash register. That was so easy that he held up an oil station. Before he was arrested he had committed six hold-ups and had stolen four automobiles.

A CROOK'S PHILOSOPHY

"It wasn't only the money, judge," he said. "I got so I liked it."

"But did you ever philosophize about your crimes?" asked the judge. "Did you ever stop to figure out that you hadn't any right to take away the money these people had worked hard for?"

The boy thought it over carefully, then he said, "Judge, I'll tell you how it is committing crimes. Did you ever soak a snowball at a man passing along a sidewalk?"

"I have," said the court solemnly.

"Did you have anything against him?"

"N—no," said the judge.

"Well, that's the way it is holding guys up. You ain't got anything against them; you just like to see if you can get away with it. You see the guy walking past and you got a snowball; and so you soak him just for luck. That's the way a guy commits crime."

A REPENTANT GANG

An interesting case of a gang of boy burglars came into court the other day—just such a gang as fills the police with despair. There was a boy under arrest; sixteen boys were called as witnesses and several school-teachers to accuse him.

"There's no need to call these witnesses against you," said the judge, "because I know you will tell me the truth yourself."

The boy's eyes filled with tears; to the astonishment of the teachers and the policemen he reeled off a list of burglaries, most of which they had never dreamed of.

"Who helped you?" asked the court.

The boy hung his head and did not reply.

"Well, boys," said the court to the fifteen other boys who were sprawled around the courtroom,

BOOKS CELEBRITIES READ

The old question as to what books they would choose to have if cast away on a desert island came up at a Hollywood soiree attended by film stars recently.

Cecil de Mille announced in all seriousness that among his books would be a Montgomery-Ward catalogue.

The various books that they chose were as follows:

THEODORE KOSLOFF

"What is Art," Tolstoi.
The Holy Bible.
"The Cherry Orchard," Chekhov.
Poems by Oscar Wilde.
Poems by Tagore.
"Biography of Lincoln," by Alexandroff.
Poems by Turgenev.
Any of Dostoevsky's Romances.
Poems by Balmont.
Interpretation of the Ten Commandments by Tolstoi.

GLORIA SWANSON

The Bible.
"Self Mastery," by Coue.
"Outline of History," by Wells.
Chinese Poems (ancient.)
"Robinson Crusoe," by Defoe.
Bound Volume of "Life."
"The Frogs" by Aristophanes.
"Fiji and Its Possibilities," Beatrice Grimshaw.
"Essays of Elia," Charles Lamb.
Emerson's Essays.

JACQUELINE LOGAN

"Accepting the Universe."
"Ways of Nature," both by Burroughs.
Marcus Aurelius.
"This Freedom," A. S. M. Hutchinson.
Homer's "Illiad."
"Atolls of the Sun," O'Brien.
"Treasure Island," Stevenson.
"Queen Victoria," Strachey.
"Eminent Victorians" Strachey
"The Cruise of the Kawa," Geo. Chappell.

WALTER HIERS

The Bible.
"Sherlock Holmes," Doyle.
"Penrod" and "Seventeen," Tarkington.
"California Almanack," Rob Wagner.
"Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."
Ring Lardner's Baseball Stories.
Hoyle's Book of Card Games.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction, often at a very rapid rate, and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overstoutness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure, are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of your superfluous fat. The medicinal ingredients I employ do not depend for their reducing power upon starvation diet or tiresome exercise. Taking them, they should produce a loss of weight without you doing anything else.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

FLAPPERS' PACE RUINS YOUTHS

"you see how it is. We've got James where he must either be a tell-tale or a liar. I guess you had better help him by telling me yourselves. Which of you was with him?"

WHOLESALE CONFESSION

Without the slightest hesitation, six boys raised their hands.

"James," said the judge, when he had taken their names, "did you ever have anything stolen from you?"

"Yes, sir. Somebody stole my bike."

"What would you like to have done to him if he is ever caught?"

The boy looked pitifully at the judge. He was on the horns of a dilemma. Suddenly he burst into tears. "I'd want him sent to jail," he sobbed.

"Well, James," said the court, "that's what ought to be done to you, but I'm going to appeal from your decision against yourself. I want all you boys to talk this thing over and let me know what you think we ought to do about it."

A very sorry, woe-begone looking collection of scared little boys went over into the corner for a council of war. Finally they announced their decision. "Judge," said the ring-leader, "it ain't going to do this guy where we took the knives and stuff any good to lock us up. If you'll let us go we will dig around and earn the money to pay him back."

THE BOY PRISONS

"I don't know whether or not they will ever do it," said the judge afterward, "but it was a good gamble."

The real juvenile criminals are sent to the State School of Correction at Ione. The younger ones and the less hardened are sent either to the California Junior Republic near Chino or to Whittier.

The California Junior Republic is maintained largely by private subscriptions from public-spirited citizens. It has its own government; its own boy courts for enforcing discipline.

COURT'S DIGNITY

Judge Hahn has never sent but one boy to that institution except with his own consent. As a usual thing they love it after they get there.

This one rebellious youngster who yelled when they took him there was defiant at first. They brought him before a judge who was 15 years old and heavy with dignity. The rebel "sassed" him something scandalous. "Well, if you feel that way about it," said the court crushingly, "you can go to the lock-up until you learn to respect this court."

The boy came out of jail only half chastened. Finally he got interested in the herd of blooded stock maintained by the school.

WARMING THE CALF

One night one of the thoroughbred cows gave birth to a calf. It was cold and the baby died before morning. Another cow was to become a mother and the little boys were careworn.

One morning the head herdsman came out to the barns at daybreak. There on the barn floor lay two little boys with their blankets; between them lay a little new calf which they were keeping warm with their bodies and all three were fast asleep. The littlest one was the bad little boy.

Many similiar reformations have come from Whittier.

Although regarded by many critics as a dreamer, Fred C. Nelles, the superintendent of Whittier, has made many interesting experiments with juvenile criminals. Under his regime Whittier was changed from a prison into a school. The worst boys and the dullest ones are sent elsewhere. Whittier is now a school confined to boys with distinct possibilities? Not all are committed there by order of court. Some are sent voluntarily by their parents. None are there under guard.

NO HANDCUFFS

Any boy who wishes can run away if he likes. There are no fences. After he escapes every effort is made to get him back. When he comes back his worst punishment is the wrath of the other boys. One boy broke the record of the prize cottage. He asked to be sent to Ione rather than face the boys whose perfect score he had spoiled.

Very often a boy, when he first comes to Whittier, refuses to work. In such cases Mr. Nelles makes no attempt to force him.

"I don't know the reason," he tells the boy, "but there just seems to be a rule in life that people who don't work, don't eat. Whatever the reason is, we will have to carry it out. However, the State is willing to be kind to you. You will not be allowed to starve. You can sit at a separate table from the workers and we will feed you on a diet of bread and milk."

CAN'T FACE RIDICULE

Three days is the longest that any boy has ever stuck it out on bread and milk; he cannot face the ridicule of the other boys.

Every boy has his own room at Whittier and his privacy is respected.

When they come before the Court both Judge Hahn and the superintendent at Whittier try to find out what the boy wants to do in life. Even the worst juvenile criminals usually cherish secret ambitions.

In the majority of cases, they want to be mechanics. In a vast majority of cases the boys who steal automobiles do not sell them. They either want to go somewhere or they just want to ride around. In about five cases out of six they only take cars carelessly left with the keys in the cars.

One boy who went to Whittier was simply crazy about driving cars. They made him the truck driver at the school and he turned out to be a reliable, decent man.

CLOSE THE SHOPS

The carpenter shops, the paint, the plumbing and the automobile shops at Whittier have saved many boys from going the route of Little Phil Alguin. Unfortunately, the readjustment of State finances may necessitate the closing of all these shops. Also it will be necessary to close the Whittier research department which has attracted attention all over the country. It always has been considered necessary to trace the ancestry of pigs and cows, but never before have they bothered about boys.

By the operation of the State budget, the appropriation for Whittier has been cut 24 per cent and the salary appropriation has been cut 37 per cent.

Although this, on the face of it, endangers the existence of Whittier as a school and suggests the necessity of turning it back into a jail with whips and leg irons, there is a plain way out. From its farming and other operations, the school earns considerable money. If this money, which now amounts to something over $65,000 in the contingent fund, were turned over to the school with the future money to be earned, it will be possible to go on with the manual training and even with the research department.

Nelles at Whittier and Judge Hahn have arrived at certain interesting conclusions in regard to so-called bad boys.

They both agree that juvenile crime is usually the result of bad home conditions.

WHY THEY FALL

Also that, taken young enough, it is not especially difficult to return an offender to the beaten paths.

That boys, as a rule, are inclined to be "square," and will keep their words.

That girls are harder to appeal to; are more likely to resent punishment.

Judge Hahn finds in his work that more than 50 per cent of the boys who go wrong come from foreign families, who try to raise them by the narrow, strict standards of money-starved Europe.

That the extravagant, lavish standards of today have created a necessity for money on the part of school-children that turns them to crime.

Collection of Antiques Will be Seen Here

Mme. Pietro Cattadori will bring an important collection of antique Italian and French furniture and works of art, tapestries, brocades, velvets, damasks, embroideries, ecclesiastical robes, needlework coverings, etc., to the ballroom of the Green, Pasadena, on Monday of next week. To this collection has been added from the Grand Canal, Venice, a choice selection of real laces and table linens, also Burano laces from the school of Queen Margherita of Italy.

Many of the objects to be exhibited were derived from such world-renowned sources as the collection of Stefano Bardini. The Palazzo of Marchese Carriana in Mantora, Italy, the Palazzo Montpassier in Bologna, a palace comprising more than 400 rooms and a residence for centuries of the Dukes of Montpassier, and from other noble families.

Some of these works of art once formed the splendor of the Ducal Courts of the Medici and the Gonzaga.

Stop Rheumatism!

S. S. S. Is the Great Builder of Red-Blood Cells and Rheumatism Must Go! Used Since 1826—Just Try It!

"Rheumatism? Me? No, indeed, it's all gone, every bit of it. It's sunshine and joy for me now, for the first time in years. I feel a wonderful glory again in the free motion I used to have when my days were younger. I look at my hands and think of the twists and swellings they used to have. I bend 'way over to the floor. I haven't been able to do that in many years. I can thank S. S. S. for it all! To me it was a rising sun of joy and liberty. Brothers and sisters in misery, do not close your eyes and think that health, free motion and strength are gone from you forever! It is not so. It is here and now for all of you. S. S. S. is waiting to help you." There is a reason why S. S. S. will help you. When you increase the number of your red-blood cells, the entire system undergoes a tremendous change. Everything depends on blood-strength. Blood which is minus sufficient red-cells leads to a long list of troubles. Rheumatism is one of them. S. S. S. is the great blood-cleanser, blood-builder, system strengthener, nerve invigorator. It stops skin eruptions, too, pimples, blackheads, acne, boils, eczema. It builds up run down, tired men and women, beautifies complexions, makes the flesh firmer. Charlie Batiste, Florence, Texas, writes:

"Suffering has gone from your face, mother!"

"I take great pleasure in letting you know what S. S. S. has done for me. I have used four bottles of S. S. S. I am up so I can walk. The pain has left my leg. Before using S. S. S. I was in bed three months and could not walk. I will recommend S. S. S. to all who suffer with Rheumatism."

Start S. S. S. today. It is sold at all drug stores in two sizes. The larger size bottle is the more economical.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT

Most people do not realize the alarming increase and remarkable prevalency of kidney disease. While kidney disorders are the most common diseases that prevail, they are almost the last recognized by patient and physicians, who content themselves with doctoring the effects, while the original disease undermines the system.

Your other organs may need attention—but your kidneys should have attention first because their work is most important.

If you feel that your kidneys are the cause of your sickness or run down condition commence taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, because as soon as your kidneys begin to improve they will help all the other organs to health.

A Trial will Convince Anyone.

Thousands and thousands of people everywhere have testified that the mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized and that it stands the highest for its remarkable results in distressing cases.

Symptoms of Kidney Trouble

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you suffer from annoying bladder troubles, frequently passing water night and day, smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment, headache, backache, lame back, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, uric acid rheumatism, lumbago, loss of flesh or sallow complexion, kidney trouble in its worst form may be stealing upon you.

Swamp-Root is Pleasant to Take

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.

SPECIAL NOTE—You may obtain a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root by enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. This gives you the opportunity to prove the remarkable merit of this medicine. They will also send you a book of valuable information, containing many of the thousands of grateful letters received from men and women who say they found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed in kidney, liver and bladder troubles. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample size bottle. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—[Advertisement.

LONG PURSUITS

It seemed strange to me that an auto dealer would have sold a car to an unknown Gypsy. I said so. "Can any Tom, Dick or Harry buy a car on time?" I asked.

"Not quite," the car-jerker told me. "Dealers pay credit investigators a small fee to look up prospective purchasers. But it's easy to pass the credit investigator's okeh. I think most of them go down the street, play a couple of games of pool, and then come back to Mister Dealer and say: 'He's all right. Let him have the buggy if he wants it.'"

"You must roll up big mileage chasing lost cars," I commented.

"You said it," the car-lifter assured me. "Last week I turned up 1500 miles. But long trips do not recover cars, always. A half an hour's headwork is sometimes as good as a day's driving. I play hunches pretty often, myself.

"One night I played a hunch and picked up a car in less than an hour after the report was handed to me. It came about like this:

PLAYING A HUNCH

"They told me at the office that this embezzler was working as a waiter at a roadhouse near Culver City. I shot out there and it seemed that nobody had ever heard of the man. It looked like a bum steer, so I left.

"On the way back to town, I noticed that my report stated that this man was a prop man in a movie studio at Hollywood when he bought the car. I was just then passing a Culver City studio. Things were lively on that lot at the time—many people being hired. In front was a flock of autos.

"So I played my hunch. I stopped and looked the cars over. Sure enough—there was the little wagon I was after. And the key was in the switch, all ready and waiting for me. I hopped in and drove it into a garage around the corner. I telephoned the office, telling them of the recovery, and then I called it a good day's work."

"What do you suppose that poor prop man did when he found his car was gone?" I asked.

"I think he walked home," said the car-lifter, grinning, then he went on.

HOBO HELPED

"There was an interesting case in Santa Ana. I had a straight tip that an embezzler was in touch with his brother-in-law down there. The brother-in-law kept a lunch counter—a little ptomaine parlor between two brick walls.

"I knew the brother-in-law would never tip me off to the embezzler's whereabouts. They knew we were after him. So, on the way to Snata Ana, I picked up a bum along the road—he said he wanted a ride.

"I took him right up in front of the lunch counter, this bum, and slipped him a dollar. 'Go in,' I said, 'and eat your head off. But don't forget to ask the boss biscuit-shooter where his brother-in-law hangs out. Tell him you're an old friend.'

"Well, the bum pulled the stunt perfect. I waited about half an hour in the flivver in front. Pretty soon he slides out, wearing a big smile with a toothpick in one corner of it. 'The pot wrestler shot me the works, chief,' he said. So by night I had Louie's car under lock and key."

THE GAY WIDOW

The car-lifter then proceeded to tell me of another catch—a gay, young widow who lived in a Los Angeles downtown hotel and who bought a high-priced sedan, on time. After making one payment, the earth seemed to open up and swallow her. She disappeared with the car. It took the car-lifter about two days to find that this gay widow, who moved in the best society circles, spent two or three nights every week at a notorious dance hall in Sonoratown.

"And the reason she hung out down there was plain to me when I found out that the narcotic squad was on her trail."

"A drug user?" I asked.

"Correct," he replied. "And being a hop-head, she had gone where there was hop. I figured that out without a string of twenty beads. So I played a hunch again. I said to myself: 'This gal has made a rush for the border. She is either at Tijuana or at Mexicali.' And I was right again. Three days later we picked up the car at Brawley."

"I thought all time-buyers of automobiles were poor people—the kind who buy the little, cheap cars," I said.

FRISKY SALESMEN

"Not all. There is every sort of person who embezzles."

"Is there any especial occupation which has more auto embezzlers than others?"

"Yes—salesmen. Now I happen to know that salesmen aren't any worse than paper-hangers or brakemen, or other people. I guess it is just because there are so many of them here in Los Angeles that we all the time are chasing after salesmen. And all salesmen need automobiles. The kind we meet up with in this business are usually bum stock peddlers or slickers who travel the hay belt selling soap powder, metal dishrags or the like.

Don't some of these embezzlers get mean when you catch them—refuse to give up the car?"

"Some do. Two youngsters put up a loud squawk and wanted to battle. I had caught them on a street right here in town. So I just motioned to a cop who was standing on the corner. When those kids saw the cop, they bounced out of the car and ankled down the block as if the Bolshevist army was after them."

CROOKS OR FOOLS

"Maybe they were criminals," I suggested, brightly.

"They were either that or fools," said the car lifter. "Because it is only one or the other that embezzles automobiles. It's a losing game for the embezzler."

"Surely every defaulter is not a crook or a fool," I objected. "Some poor men hit a row of hard luck and simply can't make their payments."

"Dealers always meet those chaps more than half-way," explained the car-lifter, patiently. "If a man can't pay, that is no reason for him to go hide himself in the bushes. The dealer would rather drag out a contract on ten-dollar payments than to take back a car. They are either crooks, or fools, I tell you. And some of them are both. For that matter, any petty crook is a fool. He can't beat the game. He always loses."

SAN QUENTIN WALTZ

"You mean to say that an embezzler never gets away with a car?"

"Oh, you tell the world they get away with them—lots. But any auto embezzler has his record tied right onto him, like a can on a dog's tail. He can drive the car for a year, maybe. But at the end of the year he can't renew his license. We watch the records and the Motor Vehicle Department helps us nab embezzlers who try to trade, buy or sell cars, or get a license. Of course, some simps try to sell or turn in an embezzled car. Then we get them right and they learn the San Quentin waltz. They are embezzlers under the law, then.

"Some embezzlers are in bad with the law before we get a report on them. Often they are wife deserters. Last month I was sent after a Mexican sport who left his wife and two kids. And the wife was soon again to become a mother.

"I skirmished around for a few days and finally located this Mexican's sister out in Elysian Park. I managed to get acquainted with her, took her to a movie and then started to talk about my family. And she started to talk about hers. First thing you know she had wised me to that brother of hers. I got him.

MEXICAN BEAU BRUMMEL

"Another time we located a wanted car—a little speedster—in front of a dance hall. It was late at night and I had to chase clear across town to get a garage dolly to tow it away."

"Why didn't you drive it away like you did the prop man's car?" I wanted to know.

"Couldn't. Big tire lock was on it. So I had to tie up the car until I had time to get a dolly and return. I let the air out of the tires and drained the gas tank. A half an hour later I came back.

"And the young blade who had the car was trying to start it. His girl was in the seat beside him. I took the car and the last I saw of the young fellow he was trying to explain matters to his girl."

"Wasn't that sort of rough?" I inquired.

A FUNERAL CAR

"No. Not nearly so rough as the time we jerked a car right out of a funeral procession. But what could we do. It was better to get it then than to wait until they had reached the boneyard.

"Honest folks don't cause anybody or themselves any trouble, remember that. It's the crooks who cause all the grief. It's the fellow who rates his reputation at a few dirty dollars who tries to beat it with an unpaid-for automobile. And then he spends the rest of his life trying to cover up the black spot on his record. See what I mean, now, when I say petty crooks are always fools?"

"I get you. The crooks are always trying to beat your game."

"That's it. And if we let them get away with their crookedness, what would become of law and order? We'd become an anarchy, that's what."

"I never thought of your business in that light. It sounds like car-lifting is a pretty important job, after all."

"More important to catch car embezzlers than to catch murderers," claimed the car-lifter. "Because if it could be done, more people would become embezzlers than would become murderers."

LUCKY CROOKS

"I won't argue with your philosophy," I replied. "But now tell me of a few cases of crooks who have beat the insurance company."

"Allright. A young fellow admitted to me that he had bought a roadster for $600 and had driven it for a row of gasoline cans until it was worn out. He had paid off all but $150 on the contract and had a $500 fire and theft insurance policy on the car.

"One dark night he drove his roadster onto a lonely country road and touched a match to it. Then he walked back home, whistling a jolly tune. And a short time afterward he collected his $500.

WRECKED CAR

"I heard of another poor pinhead who ran his car over a bluff, wrecking it completely and on purpose.

"Then he rolled over in the dirt a few times, tore his clothes, scratched his face and kicked himself on the shins. He came back to town and told the police about the 'narrow escape' he had. Our claim agent all the time knew this fellow lied; that he had framed the wreck. But there were no witnesses to the affair. And in court, one man's word is as good as another's. We had to pay him, that's all. But that man had a narrower escape than he ever knew. If we had ever got a thing on him, he would be doing the lock-step now, sooner or later, going through life like that, he will trip himself up.

"Yes," concluded my friend, "the car-lifter, they all trip themselves up sooner or later. Honesty is the best policy for a policy holder. If auto crooks knew the game as I know it, they would go straight."

THUMBING OVER HISTORY PAGES

mony in the mellifluous southern tongues was blessed a bell—the first bell of the oldest parish church on the Pacific Coast.

What purports to be a picture of that very bell, with three priests gathered around it, has recently come into the possession of Mrs. Alice Harriman, the California campanologist, by gift of C. C. Priest of the pioneer photographic concern of C. C. Priest & Co. The picture, which is used to illustrate this story, shows three priests gathered around the bell in the patio of the old Plaza Church. One of these priests, an old man, still lives in Fresno, but neither he nor Monsignor Harnett of St. Vibiana's remembers the names of the other two.

DIMLY RECALLED

The Fresno priest, in writing to Mrs. Harriman, says that he dimly recalls hearing one of the original priests of the church say that the bell was cast in the plaza across from the church. That is all. Now Mrs. Harriman is trying to find the other two priests, for the bell of the oldest parish church on the Pacific Coast is of historic interest to Los Angeles and to the nation.

Though the oldest parish church on our coast, the present Plaza Church was not the first one here. the first one, soon outgrown, stood about where Buena Vista street, if cut through, would intersect Bellevue avenue, that thoroughfare of fits and starts.

On August 15, the Feast of the Assumption, 1814, the corner-stone of the new church was laid and blessed by Father Gil of San Gabriel. But the next year the river rose and covered the site, which was to the east of the present Plaza, and in 1818 work was restarted on the present site. Then came fresh delays, and it seemed for a time that Los Angeles would be without a church.

TO THE AID

But the good fathers at San Gabriel came to the aid with a gift of seven barrels of brandy, and the church-loving residents matched this spirituous gift with 500 head of cattle. By the way, this ecclesiastical gift of brandy was not the only present of liquor to the new church, for there are records of similar presents from the other missions.

Jose Antonio Ramirez was the architect, and the church building was done by Indians from San Gabriel and San Luis Rey. On Dec. 8, 1822, the church was dedicated, the Mission San Gabriel loaning a bell for the occasion. This is a recorded fact, so it must have been some time subsequent to this that the bell cast in the old plaza for the church was blessed in a setting fancifully set forth in the foregoing paragraphs.

Dear Sirs: I was told of your Balmwort kidney tablets by a prominent business man here. He told me they did him so much good that I purchased a box, sometime ago. I was so discouraged at the time I got them, that I thought nothing could help me, but before I had used one-half of them, they had done me so much good, helping my back and kidneys that I am telling all my friends about them. I can now say that I feel like a new man in every way, though I have only taken one box. I have more life, more ambition than for years and all my rheumatism pain seems to have left me, with which I was troubled. I surely recommend them to anyone needing kidney medicine. I am 50 years old and have lived here for 20 years.

"JOIN THE REJOICERS"
Get Sleep—Strength—Health Quick! Get Rid of Misery!

Take quick-acting, mild, balmy Balmwort Tablets. You know better than to go right on suffering; you know that things will get worse—if you don't get help.

You Can Be Free! You Can Enjoy Life!

You need not lose sleep and get old and haggard, worn-out and "achey" before your time. Look to the Kidneys and Bladder. See that they get help when they cry out for it by feelings such as these: Sleep and rest disturbed by bladder pain and irritation; backache with a dragging, weary stiffness and soreness of the joints, and muscles, or sudden stabbing, fleeting pains like rheumatism or neuralgia; blinding—dizzy headache, drowsiness, feverish and chilly sensations; distress or pain in region of bladder with frequent calls, followed by smarting; stinging or burning sensation; sometimes a lack of control and the necessity of leaving your bed from one to six times during the night.

Such feelings give rise to nervousness, depression and weariness, causing irritability that makes you cross and peevish.

You may have some of these symptoms: if not attended to, the condition may grow serious. Balmwort Tablets have been helping folks everywhere for the past 15 years. Thousands, right in your own locality, rely on them and send us thankful letters of recommendation. In most cases, the first few doses influence astonishing benefits so that the patient is soon delighted with the improvement toward recovery. Go now to your druggist and get the regular size box, $1.25, or the Trial size, 60 cts.

Remember! Balmwort is inexpensive, and the results must satisfy you or money back. They contain no habit-forming drugs or opiates. Now is the time!

"Thousands have proved it."

REWARD: The Blackburn Products Company, Dayton, Ohio, hereby offer a Reward of $1000 if every letter published is not the genuine unsolicited expression of the users of their medicine, given without pay of any kind.

Prominent Painter and Decorator
Found Help Eight Years Ago—And Now Again—
By Using Balmwort Tablets

Dear Sir: I am at present taking Balmwort tablets for my kidneys. I have not taken all of one box yet, but it certainly has done me worlds of good.

About 8 years ago I had a severe attack of kidney trouble and was confined to my bed for 2 weeks. At that time I took 3 boxes and thought I was entirely cured, but about 2 weeks ago I had another attack, even worse than before. I had severe headache, dizzy spells, spots before my eyes, and every bone in my body ached. The cords in my legs and arms seemed to knot up so that I couldn't straighten out. Had frequent calls, but no flow, and such sharp pains I thought my end was near. The flow is natural now and free from pain and am sure I'll never be without Balmwort again. You have my permission to publish this. I advise anyone to use Balmwort tablets. Yours very truly,
JOHN J. CORTLANDT.

THE NEW

IN STORES AND HOMES

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

By Olive Gray

Up-to-Dancet:

Hand-painted sports attire, a striking novelty and fraught with beauty, as proven by the Fashion Revue at that great new theater, this week. Artistry in making of the garments, which are on exhibition from a leading specialty shop, art in posing models, art in ensemble and one need not remind that ART, with large letters, is intertwined with the entire theater building wherein the revue takes place.

For the coquette of Spanish tinge, the lace drapery on hat or poke may fall gracefully at one side, extending to the shoulder. Few other types may with safety adopt this mode.

Napery Takes a Hand

"Save my soul, if they are not made from table damask!" exclaimed Angela as we paused before that big store where the new house frocks were on display. Sure enough that was their foundation—table damask in various lovely colors—rose, blue, yellow, even red and white check. Combined with white and cut upon simple yet becoming lines, these new frocks set the feminine heart to wishing. There is something so trig, so substantial and home-loving about them that I'll wager their popularity with women who care.

Roll Your Own

No, no! Not straight cut, but somewhat on the bias and not to smoke, either. I refer to those flower up-turns for off-the-face hats. You can buy them ready to apply. They are triangles, solid with flowers and they may easily be attached to the close-fitting crown, producing the popular hat of the summer season.

Strung for You

Beads strung and strongly strung, for embroidery on gowns and wraps, hats and blouses; this is one of Fashion's latest devices to help in the couture of Milady of handy hands. You simply purchase them by-the-yardage in any chosen color and apply the strung beads to the pattern designed to trim your garment. Thus there is no straining of eyes to thread tiny beads upon a strand and the work goes so rapidly that no patience is lost over the work.

The popular Colonial tongues for low shoes come in all the popular laces—gold, silver, cream and white. These dainty flares are so enticingly feminine as to afford allure and so insubstantial that they do not seem to enlarge the foot, as do some of these shoe fronts. To maximize the foot is an affront, as every woman knows.

Anklets

The shoe stores are putting forth pretty anklets, to go with the shoe ornaments—buckles, bows and so on, of brilliants. The anklets are in the form of slides, sometimes with pendants, placed upon black faille ribbon.

East Indian

Among the new cottons for dresses and for skirts, none are more interesting than those made in India and imported by that big store out Seventh street. The colors are absolutely "fast," it is said, and the weaving is done by hand, upon native looms. Warm and lustrous in tone, these fabrics proclaim themselves at a glance as something quite away from the usual.

Almond Green

One of the most attractive of the green shades selected by Fashion for Spring millinery and dress, is almond green. Almonds are first among fruit trees to put forth leaves and it is, doubtless, because of this, that the refreshing color is so popular during the early season. This especial tint is becoming, too, many being able to wear it who have believed themselves incapable of using the color.

A Fly Fly-Swatter

You may laugh, perhaps, when I speak of the newest mode in fly-swatters, but there are fashions in these household implements, as well as in hats or porch frocks. Why should not an instrument which lives with us in our homes be made beautiful as well as useful? The latest ones are. Their usefulness is augmented by being double, the screen bent upward and fastened into a handle which is bound in patent leather, hand-painted in flower designs.

MANDATES OF LA MODE

The train of the moment is placed at the side.

Pale violet and yellow tones are shown in lingerie.

Smart sports hats are of cut-out felt in contrasting tones.

Evening gowns of bright-colored velvet feature side trains.

Natural Tuscan embroidery trims brilliantly-colored faille hats.

The newest thing in umbrellas has a top of painted porcelain.

All-fur and fur trimmed velvet wraps are smartest for evening.

Fur-trimmed white apparel is favored for early southern wear.

A slashed jacket has tongue-shaped panels around its lower edge.

Chinchilla, ermine and squirrel are used to trim velvet evening wraps.

Wide bandeaux of plain or metallic ribbon are worn by the younger set.

Velvet makes the evening wrap. The cape back and straight lines are popular.

Interesting variations of the Spanish shawl are prolonging its vogue.

The SEAMSTRESS

ON THE SAFEST UNION

Vacation? No'm, I haven't had none yet. And I reckon I'm going to get along real well this year without one. 'Course I could of used it and enjoyed it real well. Lonny (that's my husband) and me been talking about it ever sence June. And the reason we haven't never gone is account of the strikes . . . Ma'm, ye'm, I know plenty people have taken the chanct and gone away. And Law, they will all be home again, I reckon, before any of them railroad brotherhoods of this or brotherhood of that, about sixteen I think, will come to a settlement between them and the President and the railroads and the government and the State authorities and the strike breaker and the agitators and all . . .

Yes'm, it has been real mean. Nearly every day you read where the situation was auful serious and the trains was lible to be tied up. Yes'm, and you read of the troubles about tarrin' and featherin' and accidents and explosions. Well, and the next day you went all over it again and read about how some of the trains had been taken off . . .

My land! yes'm, it certainly has kept folks from travelin'; yet and still, the society department has had a long list every day about people what has gone for the summer and got there safe . . .

Ma'm? Why yes'm, I recken we could of asked the ticket agents and railroad people when it was safe to start. But it looked like to me that they would be a little prejudiced. And then the President has taken it so serious that it looked like to me, we ort to too.

Well, then they talked so much about the coal giving out and I thought that if they settled the railroad strike and they couldn't settle the coal strike why what good would it do; because, no matter how much the settled engineers wanted to run the trains, if they got all their old rights back and all their new ones made good, and everything they wanted—how were they going to run the trains if they didn't have no coal to run 'em with and they haven't ever tried coal oil yet?

Well, it certainly is inconvenient to the railroads, and real slandering, too, and inconvenient for them what wants to travel and I reckon the laborers' families ain't having ice cream every day for dinner, neither.

Ma'm? No'm, I ain't got any relatives a-striking that I know of, though it looks like I might have, I got so many of 'em. But Cousin Sue Lamb wrote that she had intended to send me a dozen fresh aigs by parcel post and some fried chicken, too, but what with these strikes she was afraid they would be delayed so that the aigs would hatch on the train, mebbe, or get too old to eat. Its funny, but every time Cousin Sue allows to send me something from off their rich farm something happens to prevent her.

Well, as far as I can see they ain't no mails been stopped yet, but its the same every morning and every afternoon, when you pick up the paper. . . .

Yes'm, they say, twicet a day, that things looks auful serious, and something is going to happen, maybe. Then when you git all wrought up and ready for it, it gits settled some way and you might of just as well not worried.

And here the summer is most over and, whilst they may not have ben quite so many trains it looks like to me that most folks haven't minded waiting a few hours for a later train, and have gone on just the same. . . .

Goodness knows! It's auful uncertain just yet what length to make the skirt. But if I was you I wouldn't try to save money by using a narrow hem just now. No'm, it's best to get plenty of goods, because if you don't need it to lengthen your dress later, why you will need it to put some kind of a flappy long drapery on it to hang and swash around your feet. Well, it looks like to me, that—My land! I'd ruther have somebudy cut my throat and be done with it than to git a pin crost-ways of it, like I come pretty near getting that one.

Ma'm? Oh, no'm, it don't exactly skeer me. I'm used to pins in my mouth. You can't do much sewing without it. But I just don't like to have 'em go down quite so far and get crost-ways.

Well, crepe satin is the very best material and the stylishest what you can get to make a fall dress. Yes'm, and it's pretty near as warm as serge and don't need such good tailoring besides being prettier draped. . . . Well, I reckon you ort to have a cabuchon to set at the side of the long waist where the skirt is draped; yet and still, it seems to me I saw a oxydized silver buckle with rhinestones in it, in that box of trinkets you showed me one day when you was putting away the winter clothes up in the third floor. Now why can't you get that out. It certainly would be pretty and unusual on a dressy black dress.

Yes'm, I pretty near remember everything I see. It comes in handy sometimes like this. Well, yes'm, mebbe you have got something in the box I could use; because I think as long as I didn't take no trip I can have a new dress. But my land! It mustn't be too fixy. Just take a look at me and you can see. . . .

Well, it looks like to me that what happens always is for the best. All this dishcomraddle about strikes has kept me at home, afraid to stir, but I reckon the sewing business is agoing to keep up forever. They don't seem never to be no strike, like the washwomen's strike, and they ain't no dressmakers' union. It looks like to me they's some distinction in doing some kind of work what they ain't no union to. Ruther than be laid off when I don't want to, and subscribin' to fusses when I don't want to, and workin' when I don't want to, I'll stick to the only union I belong to—the materimonial union between me and Lonny—and keep on going out to dressmake.

THE HOME IN LOS ANGELES of those nationally-famous garments that have been "designed and tailored by Printz" Beautiful, fashionable Printzess Apparel—in a glorious Easter presentation at the Ville de Paris!

To those who know—to those with whom the beautiful artistry, the fineness of Printzess Apparel is a familiar thing—to those who feel that the identity of Printzess Modes with the Ville de Paris is a very happy one—to all of these the message of an Easter presentation of what-is-new in Printzess-Land goes forth with significance all its own.

Announcement, to be sure—and invitation, to be sure—thus is this page to be interpreted by those who know what "Printzess" means. An invitation to the others, also—yet something stronger: an urging, let us say, to come—to see for oneself the charm and superiority of Printzess Apparel—to learn just how perfectly Printzess Modes can meet the needs of Easter and a new season—to become, indeed, Printzess devotees in fullest sense of the word. The occasion of such brilliant and complete displaying merits planning—merits a special downtown trip, a tour of the Ville de Paris' Third Floor Sections for an Easter Presentation of Printzess Apparel—for Spring!

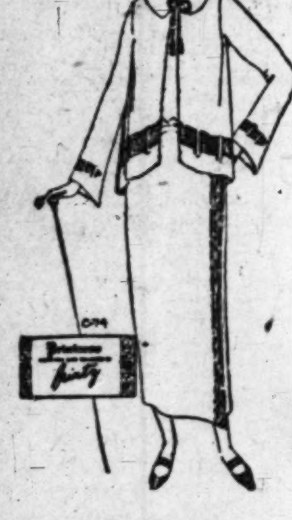
PRINTZ designers have contrived a high degree of smartness in these New Spring Models. Never has Printz offered a more charming Spring selection nor one of such style variety.

SUITS achieve new prominence, this season. There are sport models, inimitably smart and practical. There are dressier styles, too, with a more elaborate charm. The three-piece suit, decidedly voguish this spring, enjoys a new feature of Printz design in that it may be put on and off like a coat. The Printz suits are developed in a variety of fabrics which cannot fail to please those who demand quality as well as beauty.

COATS display a new style interest, also. Chic sport styles in the popular overplaids; trimmed models for dressier wear, continuing the youthful, slender lines so generally becoming.

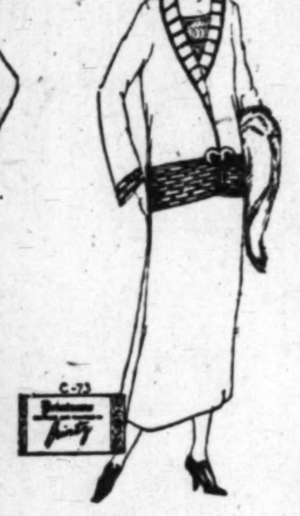
WITH the style and quality always present in Printz garments, another exclusive advantage is offered—the Printz "Personalized" Style Service.

EVERY Printz model is designed for certain figures; the new mode is adapted by means of individualized lines to all the varying types of normal figures.



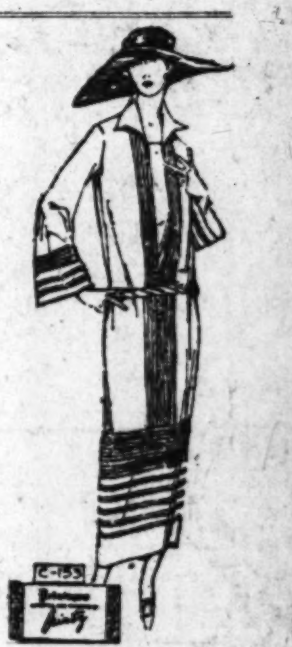
A Fetching Three-Piece Suit at $75.00

The vogue of the three-piece suit is assured for Spring—when so attractively embodied in Trico Twill, trimmed with lustrous silk stitching. In Navy and Tan.



A Handsome Costume Suit at $95.00

A Twill Cord Jacquette Coat in side-buckled mode accompanies a Twill Cord Skirt whose Egyptian crepe bodice completes the three-piece costume. In Navy and Tan.



A Dress of Slender Lines $39.50

Long rows of stitching accentuate the slender grace of this tailored Twill Cord Dress, with military collar and clasped belt adding dignity to smartness. In Navy and Tan.

A Side-D Cord D $49.5

Also widely of the sleeves ed, its with a Navy and Tan.

batch of nitre. They mixed it in a wooden tub and let it stand over night. Nitroglycerin freezes at 45 deg. Fahr. When they looked at it in the morning they found it frozen solid. They did not know what they had produced by their experiment. They took an ax and chopped it out of that tub. Think of it—chopped nitroglycerin with an ax. Just one time in five million that it would not explode, and they were lucky enough to pick that time.

"Result—we have nitroglycerin."

"Just what does it take to set that stuff off?" I asked.

"That," replied Little Dick, "is a difficult question to answer.

WHEN IT EXPLODES

"I have experimented a great deal to gain what knowledge I possess on the subject. I have found that if a piece of iron weighing sixteen ounces falls thirteen inches on a drop of nitroglycerin it will cause an explosion every time. If it falls twelve inches the nitro will never explode. In such experiments the nitroglycerin is always in normal condition.

"Friction will always cause an explosion. A drop of the stuff in the springs of a car will set off the entire cargo.

"A bump in the road is sometimes sufficient to set off a carload of it, yet there are times when a terrific jar will not cause it to explode.

"No driver ever knows at what moment he will be blown to bits. It is a dangerous business."

I agreed.

WEAR RUBIES, WIN POWER

garding the investing of gems with supernatural and medicinal qualities:

SUPERSTITIONS OF GEMS

The agate was said to be the emblem of health and wealth, to alleviate thirst, stay storms, sharpen sight, impart strength, render grace and eloquence and cure insanity.

Amber was believed to be good for stomach-ache, fits, scrofula and jaundice, also to reduce swelling glands, the amethyst was supposed to be an antidote for poison, sharpened the wits, a preventive of intoxication and an emblem of sincerity.

Beryl was the favorite stone for divination, foretold the future and reviewed the past; the bloodstone, if rubbed with heliotrope, caused its wearer to become invisible, and was a specific for dyspepsia; the carnelian cured tumors, cleared the voice and preserved harmony; coral was a fever cure; the diamond cured insanity and epilepsy; the emerald stopped hemorrages and strengthened the eyes; the garnet averted plague, was a defense against thunder.

Jade has always been considered a cure for kidney trouble; jasper was good for lung troubles, was a charm against scorpions and spiders, and would save its wearer from drowning; onyx caused nightmare; the opal was used as a heart stimulant; the pearl cured stomach trouble and skin diseases.

The ruby was an amulet against plague, poison, sadness and sensuality; topas averts sudden death.

The crystal or quartz balls are still used by mystics, astrologers and others to foretell the future, disclose the past and conjure up distant scenes.

THE FIRST DIAMONDS

It is said that the first French woman to lead the fashion as a wearer of diamonds as personal ornaments was Agnes Sorrel, famous in the time of Charles VII.

Among the famous diamonds and other precious gems listed by C. A. King, a noted authority on jewels, the following are included:

"The King of Portugal," as large as a hen's egg, pea shaped; color deep yellow; weight 1680 carats uncut.

"The Rajah of Mattan's" uncut 367 carats. "The Nizam's" uncut 340 carats.

"The Great Mogul," one of the most famous stones in the world, found at Coulour, cut as a rose, 280 carats.

FAMOUS STONES

"The Great Table," 242 1-2 carats; "The Regent," 136 carats; "The Orloff," faint yellow, 193 carats; "The Star of the South," 124 1-2 carats.

"The Kohinoor," another celebrated stone throughout the world—186 1-2 carats.

"The Grand Duke of Tuscany," or "The Austrian," cut as a double rose—139 1-2 carats.

"The Shah," (Russia) "The Nassack," "The Piggot" sold for $150,000; "The Dresden's Diamond;" "The Empress Eugenie;" "The Pasha of Egypt;" "The Dutch."

"Hope's Blue Diamond," better known in American than any other stone, present weight 44 carats; brought from India and sold by Tavenier to Louis XIV in 1668.

"The Polar Star," owned by Princess Yassopouff; "The Treasury of Dresden's"—emerald green.

"The Devonshire," the largest known emerald two inches in diameter.

The Easter pageant which is to be staged at the Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, Easter Sunday, is being looked forward to with interest by people who have witnessed the previous artistic endeavors of Adeline Leone McAdam, principal of the McAdam Normal School of Dancing.

Miss McAdam will produce this Easter the most unique color picture ever presented in pageantry in California. The services of 250 children and professional dancers are required in staging this pageant.

Miss McAdam stands first in her work, having produced some of the most elaborate and gorgeously staged pageants ever seen on the Pacific Coast. The program starts promptly at 2:30 p.m.

SCHEDULED WITH THE IDEA OF INTERESTING PRE-EASTER SHOPPERS COMES OUR ANNUAL MARCH SUIT EVENT

$35.00 TO BE THE PRICE

—at which suits that are usually appreciably more in price may be chosen by those who take advantage of our plans for this important occasion.
—And a wonderful array these suits make, to be sure; so varied in appeal, too!
—There are suits of the tailored order approved by business women; suits that will attract matrons; the less dignified box models that appeal to members of the younger set—such versions as show the wrap-around jacket and the regulation box in long or short lines; the blouse jackets that tie on the side and those of the fuller back order.

Poiret Twill, Whipcord and Checked Velours —have been used in the building of these suits; the colors are those strongly in demand—tan, gray, rookie and navy, the last-mentioned, plain or with hairline stripe; black, too.

The Trimmings are Delightfully Varied —showing as they do the effective simplicity of diagonal inserts and bias bands, as well as of more or less elaborate beading and embroidery. A few have side-fastening silk braided cords.

125 suits are included in Monday's offering. Marked with outstanding moderation in the first place, you'll readily appreciate their worthwhileness at the lowered price to rule during this event—at $35.00, choosing will be the better part of wisdom. Our advice is that you put in an early-as-may-be appearance in the Suit Section.

Let It Be Printed! That's What La Mode Dictates in Connection with Silks; So These

New Blouses at $5.95

—have done well to choose printed Habutai as the material for their making.

—And being new, you'll take it for granted that the Jacquette has an honored place among them; how completely this graceful little affair has conquered the feminine world! The surplice fronts that tie on the side are featured, as are collars, ties and bindings of pongee.

—Then, too, there are blouses with turn-down collars, just waiting for knitted sports ties to complete their charm. Noteworthy is the wide ribbon hip band and the sleeves of just-below-elbow length.

The Very Fetching Printed Patterns —are effectively carried out in navy on white, navy on tan and tan on navy.

When We Tell You That

On Monday We'll Feature Evening and Dinner Frocks at ¼, ⅓ and ½ Less

—then you will be prompted to quick action; for you know, as well as your friends and neighbors, that such an offering from The Broadway is one that should not be lightly passed by!

—The regular prices of these dresses have been $49.75 to $95.00; size ranges are broken, of course, but the variety of models and colorings leaves room for varied choice.

—By way of description you'll find:

—A petal-skirted frock of Alice blue chiffon, adorned with narrow gold lace edging.

—Soft white frocks of georgette and chiffon, their panels embroidered with crystal beads.

—Silver embroidered jade net over jade taffeta go into the making of another graceful dress.

—Of apple green chiffon with girdle of twined silver and further adornment of tiny green roses is yet another.

—Rich silk velvet gowns in black, American beauty and flame find place in the lower-priced groups.

—The new mountain haze shade shows itself mistily on a chiffon frock with crystal embroidery.

—These brief paragraphs but touch the fringe of the attractive dresses included in Monday's remarkable offering. Their featuring at a fourth, a third and one-half less than their regular prices should result in active selling; our idea is that all of them will find owners during the day.

When Comes the Time That

Diamond Rings

Are Purchasable at The Broadway

at $24.75 and $37.50

—then, so we think, are many footsteps likely to be turned the way of the Jewelry Department. And such will be the case, Monday.

—One remembers, perchance, that daughter's graduation is not afar off; one thinks with satisfaction of the opportunity of indulging a personal fancy; it's possible that a certain dear relationship may be ripe for cementing—for one reason or the other, the purchase of a diamond ring may be in your thoughts. If so, make a point of seeing Monday's valueful array.

They're of 18-K. White Gold and are built along the new lines which emphasize the charm of raised settings. In some cases, reconstructed sapphires are introduced to offset the diamonds. They're really exceptional rings at Monday's low prices—$24.75 and $37.50.

March 19 to 24, We'll Observe

Rider Net Week

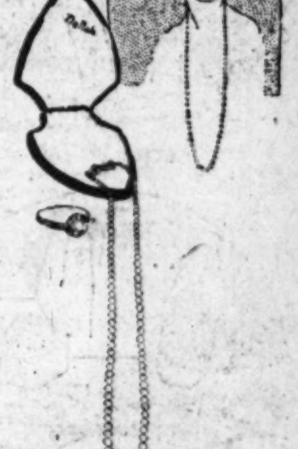
—and we'll do it in the time-honored way—by featuring the merchandise under discussion at lower-than-usual prices.

Both Double and Single Mesh Nets Will be 3 for 25c
—These well known nets may be had in light, medium and dark brown, in blonde, black and auburn; choice of cap and fringe styles.

—The Broadway—Aisle Three

We Were Fortunate in Securing the Discontinued Lines of

Deltah Pearl Beads at a Third Less



—and the good fortune is mutual, for we will, of course, offer them likewise, at a third less. Monday is the day chosen for bringing these lovely pearl beads to your attention; well chosen, don't you think?—Easter, and its attendant gift-giving being so close at hand.

The Exquisite Luster and Lovely Color
—of Deltah pearl beads is well known, as is their beautifully even graduation. All necklaces included in Monday's offering carry the maker's usual guaranty.

Prices Range from $6.40 to $35.00
— varying because of the differing lengths of the necklaces and because some are more expensively set with stones than others.

All clasps are of white gold; all are set with diamonds, the more expensive ones with reconstructed sapphires as well as diamonds.

A Pre-Easter Sale of Gloves

At Prices of Striking Lowness

75c, 95c, $1.50, $1.95, $2.95 and $3.95

—Timely, to say the least, is this remarkable offering of gloves. Such good-looking ones, too, of chamoisette, suedette, lambskin and French kid—better lay in a supply while prices are so low.

—The various groups to be featured, in a pre-Easter event, beginning Monday, are described herewith.

Fancy Strap Wrist And Gauntlet Gloves 95c

—A remarkable featuring of "sample" gloves in 12 and 16 button lengths, with many smart cuff effects and fancy gauntlet tops.

—We consider this offering indeed out of the ordinary. 50 dozen pairs in the lot.

Imported French Kid And Lambskin Gloves $1.50

—Two clasp P.K. and overseam gloves, plain or attractively embroidered at the wrists in two-tone effects. White, black, brown, mode, beaver and tan included in the assortment.

—These are sample gloves and if marked in the regular way, would be much higher priced.

12-Button Chamoisette Gloves 75c

—100 dozen chamoisette gloves with spear-point backs will be featured at the low price quoted.

—In coffee, sand, beige, covert, mode, oak, gray, brown, black, and white; these gloves launder extremely well.

Black Kid Gloves $3.95

—Soft and perfect in workmanship these black kid gloves with full arms and plain embroidery are indeed remarkable at this low price.

—All sizes in the lot, but due to the rather limited quantity of 25 dozen we urge early selection.

Strap-Wrist Chamoisette Gloves 75c

—Only 50 dozen strap wrist gloves with heavy two-toned embroidery on the backs, are included in this assortment of covert, mode, gray, oak and brown.

16-Button Lambskin Gloves $2.95

—Excellent French lambskin gloves with well finished over seams and desirable full arms; in brown, beaver and white.

—The new import duty on gloves is almost as high as our retail price—thus we suggest that you take advantage of this unusual offering.

Strap-Wrist, Fancy Gauntlet and Driving Gloves $1.95

—A wide assortment of strap wrist fancy gauntlets and driving gloves of cape and lamb; a few of kid; in black, brown, gray and white. Also 60 pairs of 12 and 16 button lambskin gloves.

Silks Are Having Their "Day"

—right now, in a very bright, rich colorful way, lending inspiration for all kinds of stunning garb—sports, dinner, street, eve- grouped at this so-low price for Monday. Usually they sell for more.

Crepe Miranda $3.50 Yd.

—'Tis a finely woven crepe of pure silk, in a soft, rippling, lustrous texture, which you will find will adapt itself to draping admirably. It is shown in cadet, ivy, white, medium rose, sapphire, mephisto, deer, zinc, Bagdad tomato, scarab, orchid, mallard and black.

Wool Poiret Twill at $1.85

—Poiret twill of a fine texture, 42 inches wide. Marked less than usual at $1.85 for Monday.

Canton Crepe, $3.50 Yd.

—Who is there who knows not the wondrous beauty, and serviceability of Canton crepe? Many lovely soft shades are shown in this array. The texture is very fine.

Silks Featured at $3.95

Fancy pussy willow, fancy Radiums and Cheerio prints in Persian and Egyptian designs. Some are regularly priced; others taken from two higher lines.

Golf Crepe Featured at $3.50 Yd.

—Silk ratine, kordette crepe (a fiber weave) and printed silks are grouped at this so-low price for Monday. Usually they sell for more.

—Also lessened to $3.50 yard is crepe satin.

New Dinnerware

—is an absorbing subject just now—it just seemed to [illegible]—and some of the colors and patterns depicted are [illegible] cate and graceful as the attributes of spring.

The "Renaissance"

—pattern has a wide border of under glaze horizontal lines in dull blues and hand filled garlands of paste flowers is very appealing. The trade mark "Booth Silicon China, England" on each piece assures one of the quality. 6 person service at $52.00.

The "Dresden"

—pattern from the Grindly Potteries is charming, richly toned in Minton shades, showing effective designs. 40-piece, six-person service, $23.00.

The "Susquehanna"

—from the American Potteries is a new design, having a narrow mesh like border in black with sweet little pink buds and touches of green to enliven it. 50-piece sets at $25.85.

SILVER FOX

For 300 years—since first introduced in 1607—169 years before the United States of America was born, the SILVER FOX has been the fur of Europe's Royalty—America's Elite.

The Silver Fox is a freak of Nature. Nature did not permit this freak to occur often. It appeared now and then in the family of "reds." Consequently they were very scarce. Their scarcity and wondrous beauty put a high premium upon them. In 1672 Lord Strathcona, Managing Director of the Hudson Bay Company, the largest fur trading house in the world, inaugurated an effort to raise these priceless animals in captivity.

The reasons that prompted Lord Strathcona's efforts were:

European Royalties' increasing and insistent demand for this imperial fur, and
The rapid depletion of the supply because of the destruction of their habitat by the ax and plough of the settler.
The ravages wrought by the professional hunter and trapper.

Lord Strathcona's effort failed. The supply continued to dwindle by the further settlement of the country and the intensity of the hunter's pursuit. Dame Fashion would not be thwarted—the DEMAND INCREASED.

In 1892 Chas. Dalton commenced experimenting. In 1910 he sent to the London market 25 pelts for which he received an average of $1,386.00 each.

From the success of Chas. Dalton, the humble hunter and trapper, was born a new industry—FOX HUSBANDRY—the production in captivity of the most beautiful of all fur-bearing animals, to supply the ever growing demands of Dame Fashion and her followers.

FOX HUSBANDRY, although in its infancy, has made poor men millionaires. The diminishing to the vanishing point of the Silver Fox in its wild state, the rapidity with which all fur-bearing animals are being exterminated, the greatly increased demand occasioned by the adoption of furs as the "vogue" for traveling, motoring, the dansant, opera and street wear, provides in this new industry a distinctive opportunity for unusual profits in a non-speculative, fascinating business.

Upon request there will be mailed, free of charge, a copy of F. Austin Tiegen's intensely interesting book on this subject, "What Civilization Destroyed."

GOWNS ARE FEATURE OF "WE GIRLS"

Star Dazzling in Display of Paris Frocks in Rapid Sequence of Costume

There is a very distinct advantage in appearing in pictures—gown changing is a comparatively leisurely process for the actress. That, at least, is Florence Oberle's fervid opinion, after her first week of dashing from one gown to another in her seven changes in the role of the age-defying mother in "We Girls," at the Morosco.

Although a former Morosco stage favorite, Miss Oberle's activities have been largely before the camera in more recent years. She was recalled from the silent drama for this particularly exacting part of the modern society flapper-mother who resents the fact that her daughter canont always stay a child.

In addition to rehearsing the role, Miss Oberle spent her free moments for two weeks in preparatory shopping. And then in the final dress rehearsal she discarded two of the gowns because they "clashed" with some of the color effects in the stage settings. That meant eleventh-hour replacement.

OPENS STYLE SHOW

Miss Oberle first appears in "We Girls" wearing a flesh-colored negligee, trimmed with blue velvet ribbons and French flowers. From that she changes to a gown with Egyptian gold cloth waist, embroidered with pearls and jet. Five shades of lemon and burned orange are in the tulle skirt.

Then follows a white taffeta sport skirt with graduated bands of black. The hat is black and white with long chiffon streamers. After this comes another race to the dressing-room to don an afternoon gown of green lace, embroidered with white velvet flowers. With this goes a large French hat of white georgette crepe and a French wrap of black and gray charmeuse.

For the finale of the second act, Miss Oberle trips on carrying a large patent-leather cat-doll, and wearing black satin pajamas. Five changes so far.

In the last act Miss Oberle wears an orchid sequin evening gown with georgette drop skirt, followed by a black evening gown over flesh-colored net.

Observation Is Eltinge's Secret of Stagecraft

The performances of Julian Eltinge, who is at the Orpheum Theater this coming week, have always been noted for the perfect details and mannerisms of the feminine character he impersonated so superbly. These, with the ease and grace he has mastered, are among the outstanding features of his portrayals, which in the main have kept his artistry without peer.

After he is once on view and the glamour of his radiant presence has a bit subsided, there begin to be revealed the little mannerisms of feminine types, known to all. There are the mincing steps, the roguish glances and the dainty gestures, characteristic of and necessary to the charms of any coquette.

How Julian Eltinge developed his feminine art may not be generally known, but the fact is that he studied none other than the stately Lillian Russell for what is known as the stage carriage. Lillian had it she knew how to swing in from the wings as if she owned the place, and Eltinge has adopted her attributes in this respect perfectly, always self-assured and at ease. The unceasing pep and ginger came from a close study of the way Blanche Ring plays a part. And for mannerisms, Mr. Eltinge pieced out from the stock which Minnie Ashley employed to good advantage.

WARNER BROTHERS START NEW PLAYS

"BROADWAY AFTER DARK" COMES NEXT AFTER "MAIN STREET"

Production activities at Warner Brothers are going merrily along. After nine weeks, Director Beaumont has finished the actual "shooting" on "Main Street" and the cutting and titling will be started immediately, as the picture is booked for an early release.

Chester M. Franklin has returned from the Feather River country, where he was directing "Wolf Fangs," and will probably finish the picture in four weeks. Rintintin, the police dog hero, has a featured role in the production.

With the arrival of Harry Rapf and S. L. Warner from New York bringing with them their latest "catch" in the person of Edmund Goulding, well-known scenarist and novelist, preparations are being made to start "Broadway After Dark."

The other production to start about the time that "Broadway After Dark" does is "The Gold-Diggers," one of the three Belasco plays bought by Warner Brothers.

TURPIN IN PART OF OWN FATHER

ONLY ONE MOLD FOR FACE OF ECCENTRIC STAR EXTANT

It was funny indeed to see Ben Turpin, made up to look like his own father, standing before a mirror studying his artificially aged features, but it was a bigger kick to hear his remarks, after he was photographed in "old man" make-up, and again before the same mirror with the photo in one hand and his face pressed against the glass.

"If I'm going to look like that when I am an old guy, I want to be bumped off now," said Ben. He still lays claim to the fact that he knows he is not good looking, but is "cute."

All this took place while Dick Jones, supervising director of Sennett productions, suggested that Turpin play a dual role in "Pitfalls of a Big City," the new Mack Sennett comedy special now in work, as it seems to be impossible to locate a character capable of impersonating a Turpin relation.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

"Annette" writes: "I have been greatly annoyed lately by coughing and a tickling sensation in the throat and hoarseness after singing. My bronchial tubes are affected, causing asthma at times."

Answer: You can be very easily relieved of this bronchial trouble by using essence Mentho-Laxene. This relieves quickly and certainly brings about a change by its tonic and laxative action, and therefore is superior to ordinary preparations, which only relieve. You can feel the medicine working on the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes, giving a feeling of freshness and strength. Purchase a 2½-oz. package of essence Mentho-Laxene and make according to the directions on bottle and take eight to ten doses daily and you should soon be free of your trouble.

Teacher asks: "I have pimples and suffer from constipation, headache, and never feel strong and well. Please prescribe for me."

Answer: You should overcome constipation and cleanse the system of accumulated poisons by taking 3-grain Sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) for several weeks or more. These tablets are very beneficial, especially in hot weather, as they have a tendency to cool the blood and improve its quality.

Mr. R. D. asks: "Is it safe to reduce one's weight? I weigh 240 pounds and would like to reduce at least 40 pounds. What is a safe, harmless remedy?"

Answer: Obtain of any well-stocked druggist a tube of 5-grain Arbolone tablets and take as per directions accompanying. These tablets are very easy to take and quite reliable for obesity.

"Mrs. G. B." writes: "I suffer a great deal with stomach disorders—heavy feeling after eating, heart palpitation, wind and gas on stomach, etc. Am restless and irritable. Afraid to eat a hearty meal. Sometimes great pain. I fear appendicitis."

Answer: The neglect of constipation and indigestion is the most frequent cause of appendicitis. It is better to prevent than to cure by an operation. I advise that you obtain tablets Triopeptine and take according to directions accompanying sealed carton.

Girl upon the

"But growing up is difficult.
The public puts one in a niche
And after years have passed it's hard
To take a chance and blithely pitch

"Into the discard all the things
That brought success. As Marguerite
In 'Faust' I thought I'd found the part
That would at last divert my feet

"Into the pathway that would lead
To roles mature, but at the last
I gave it up. It's difficult
To break abruptly with one's past."

I watched her with a grave intent
Sitting before the wide hearth there
The firelight playing on her face
And on her mass of golden hair.

Girlish she looked, and young and sweet,
Diminutive, the ideal face
For young-girl parts, and yet I felt
She'd not attained her rightful place

Among the world of artists, for
However thralling in the past
Her work has been the time must come
When she will hazard all at last

And try new roles of greater depth.
"You know," she stirred then in her chair,
Clasped and unclasped her ringless hands—
"I'm looking, searching everywhere

"For some new play, and now I think
That to do something really great
I'll drop old methods; wipe a sponge
Across tradition's much-scrawled slate.

"The great directors, from now on,
Must also write just for the screen,
Must cut and title every foot—
Direct and supervize each scene.

"Too many cooks and broth, you know.
A great play is a one-man work.
Backed by a cast that's pliable
And sympathetic, will not shirk."

She paused, and gazed into the fire.
A silence fell between us two.
I watched the flames in their attempt
To burn the topmost log quite through.

And Mary's future puzzled me
Until I thought of Juliet.
I pondered on Francesca, too,
And then reviewed the storm and fret

Of Mary, Queen of Scots. Just then
The great log broke, a tongue of flame
Leaped high and brightened all the room.
And so, some day, Miss Pickford's fame

Will leap and startle all the world.
Before I met her I had thought
Girl parts were all that she could do
And that maturity held naught

Save a retirement from the screen
When some new ideal girl appears.
But talking with her for an hour
Banished these thoughts, allayed these fears.

Oh, age must come. The years will take
Her girlish beauty. Even so
They'll bring a recompense in work
Finer than that which we now know.

Her gift is more than youthfulness.
Creative fire will endure
In spite of time. "Our Mary's" best
Is still to come. Of that be sure.

OF INTEREST TO ARTISTS

several years ago, but this is the first exhibition he has ever held in Los Angeles. He has painted in the Colorado city half his lifetime, reaching out to the mountains in his immediate neighborhood, then, farther still, into Canada. Not content with these—or, rather, so content that he wanted more—he even went to Switzerland a few years ago, and the subjects from the Alps that he is exhibiting are among his most successful efforts, radically different in color and feleing from those [illegible] America.

I think that, judging from his pictures, while Charles Partridge Adams loves art much, he loves nature with equal fervor, and the fine sincerity of his approach to every subject gives his pictures the simple charm that is inherent in such an attitude. Would that all painters had it!

The artist has adopted a unique scheme in designating his pictures. They have no titles, but each is given a number and an appropriate descriptive line or two of poetry, more often than not from Browning of whom, Adams confesses, he has always been a great lover and constant reader. We are therefore not informed as to where this or that mountain range has been painted, though we can often guess from the truthful evidence of the picture itself, generally a "speaking likeness," a genuine counterfeit presentment.

According to the modernists—vide Charles Percy Austin—there is no poetry in painting, only estheticism. If we are to believe them, to speak of a "poetic landscape" is to utter a moth-eaten banality, one that may have passed current a few decades ago, say in the time of Ruskin, but that is strictly taboo today. However, I don't quite agree with Austin and the other modernists in this, for in a sense there is poetry in all good art, there is, in fact, poetry in all things that are beautiful. By the same token I find, as I said, much poetry in the mountain painting of Charles Partridge Adams—who, by the way, hails from Charles Percy Austin's own town, and who was, no doubt, one of the modernist's first teachers in estheticism. Which goes to show how small the world is, and how we all travel in circles.

But the esthetic quality is not lacking in Adam's work. There is plenty of good solid painting; there is very often, the "significant form" that the modernists tell us we must always look for when we want the esthetic thrill. Color is part of this "form" of course, and some of Adam's mountain scenes are wonderful in color, especially in the use of blues, which have the depth of jewels.

Before we leave this exhibition, let me quote a few of the "titles:"

"One mountain for a moment in the dusk."

"Autumn the leaves is straining and strewing."

"Rose, in a soft mirage of tender light."

"When jocund day stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops."

"Day's turn is over, now arrives the night."

"The transitory gleam."

"Above me and around, the mountains."

"This light, this glory, this fair luminous mist."

"On his broad shoulders the imperial robe of winter hangs."

These lines are all finely descriptive, and they are poetic, and—begging pardon of the modernists—they are attached to poetic transcriptions of nature that have also many of them, considerable esthetic value.

IMPRESSIONS FROM GLOUCESTER HARBOR

The label in art is often so misleading that it is well to leave it off whenever possible, even though there seem to be fifty-seven varieties, of as many varying flavors. After all, art is art, and there are really only two kinds—good art and bad art.

I know not, therefore, whether to rank Thomas L. Hunt, who is exhibiting about a score of pictures at the Stendahl galleries this week, a post-impressionist or not. I am sure, though, that he belongs as fully to the school of impressionists as any other, and that his work is a modern development—an up-to-date development, if you like—of the plein-air studies so conscientiously pursued, fifty years ago, by Claude Monet and his confreres.

He is modern in the best sense. He has absorbed all the best traditions of his artistic forebears, and to them he has added his own discoveries and those of his affiliated seekers for the truths of sunlight and shadow—with the happy result that his gamut of color far transcends Claude Monet's: it is keener, quicker, more brilliant, a rainbow broken into its component parts. So was Monet's color, perhaps, but fifty years ago no man dared look unblinkingly at his bits of rainbow—he felt compelled to break them up into even smaller bits, making a sort of iridescent powder of them. This, at any rate, seems to me to be the chief difference between the impressionists of yesterday and those of today. This is one of the differences—of course, there are others—between Monet's studies of haystacks and water lilies and Thomas L. Hunt's studies from Gloucester Harbor.

The sunlight of Gloucester is no doubt more brilliant than that of Giverny-sur-Seine, the mists, when they creep over the docks and fishing smacks, are less elusive and subtle, less persuasive and lingering—they are, indeed, fogs, hurrying past with the wind. The American impressionist, in the last analysis, can never be exactly like the French one, since the two countries are so radically different in "atmosphere." I had almost said temperament—and why not?

But Hunt does not paint Gloucester's fogs. He does not even let us know that there are any. He is engrossed with the picturesque old harbor's sunlight, and with the effect of sunlight on the multicolored belongings of those who go out in small ships.

Gloucester is old, and therefore beautiful from the painter's standpoint. It has tremendous esthetic value. It is the richest sketching ground on the Atlantic coast—richer than any on the Pacific, since it is its long-continued human life—human life, and decay, and death—that has added "quality" to its natural beauty, a quality that does not, as yet, inhere in Laguna Beach, or La Jolla, or Carmel. Gloucester has poignant beauty, it is at once radiant with the color of today and sad with Jack Lane is showing some perfectly entrancing French chapeaux together with many lovely spring hats of their own creation. Everyone knows that Jack Lane hats have individual touches which set them apart from any others one may chance to see upon the avenues. You can select just the hat for every occasion in this clever shop, where the keynote is becoming and youthful lines with lots of style and dash! Tenth floor, Brack-Shops.

Alluring, indeed, are the hats made for madame at the lovely new shop opened by Alice M. Dixon at 731 W. Seventh St. She specializes in hats which fit the head and which have at the same time attractive and becoming lines. Her hats of kid and suede are stunning, so also are the many new models enhanced by exquisite imported flowers—the very latest conceits in millinery are displayed at prices not too high! 13965.

Along with fit and finish, for which the "Laurel Cut-Right" (formerly Williams-Wear) wash dresses are justly famous, goes the cheerful service. They have a motto which they live up to—"To please you is our pleasure." Drop in at 903 Brack-Shops and see for yourself. Main 1203.

Perhaps you long for music in your home and no one plays or sings! Of course a phonograph is just the thing—but the purse is slender—you are at a loss what to do! Have you forgotten about those diamonds hidden away in the treasure chest—why not make them work—do their part? You never wear them, so why not sell them to Mr. Fergusson—he pays market prices and diamonds are worth a lot today. He is at 206 Haas Bldg., Seventh at Broadway.

Girdles to be worn with cotton dresses are made of gayly colored leather thongs on elastic bands.

Every mother knows how difficult it is to find a suit to fit the wee lad who has passed the baby age and has not reached the estate of "boy"—and she will welcome the news that at the Babe's Boudoir, 641 S Grand, they have just what she wants! These cunning "in between" suits have individuality—they really fit!

The motif on one of the new patent leather belts signifies "Peace and Happiness."

If your hair is bobbed it would look as cute as can be with ringlet curls all 'way round and marcel waves on top! You will be delighted with the way it is done on the permanent wave machine by those unusually clever girls, Mae Wilkerson and Irene Johnston, at 512 Loew's State Bldg. Of course, they curl long hair beautifully—so that it can't be told from natural curls, dress the hair and teach you how to care for it after the wave. They give every one their personal attention. "Fighting Blood" Enacted by Young

O'Hara, now in the making at Powers studios.

Youth and the drama of youth in the H. C. Witwer "Fighting Blood" stories is being interpreted by youth. Mr. O'Hara is just 23 years old, Clara Horton, playing opposite, is 18, while the average of the company is 24 years. Mal St. Clair, who directs this unit, is 25 years old. So the company has the distinction of being the most youthful of any in the picture world.

Yet, while youth, hopeful and courageous is being exploited, the delicious comedy flavor of these pictures the soaring romance and the delightful features carry an appeal to all ages. Mr. O'Hara has completed nine of the series.

"Fighting Blood," the first of the series, is now released and is winning favor everywhere.

Conrad Nagel's great ambition is to play Hamlet. He was born in Keokuk, Iowa.

NOT FOR MARIE

When Marie Prevost was informed by Monte Blue that the Warner Brothers had secured the Belasco play, "The Gold Diggers," and that she would probably be chosen for the leading role, she became indignant. "I don't want to play in mining pictures," she said and Blue is still having a tough job trying to convince Marie that "The Gold Diggers" is not a mining picture, but rather a story of a more lucrative form of mining and minus so much hard work.

ARTICLE NO. 25

Pre-emptive Bids

A pre-emptive bid is a bid of more than one as an original bid or a bid of a greater number of tricks than required to overbid a previous bid by opponents. The object of such a bid is two-fold: First, to give partner the information that the pre-emptive bidder's hand is of such a character that he must prefer one suit as trump, and that, with that suit as trump, he can go game with but average assistance from partner; second, to shut out, if possible, adverse bidding by opponents—that is, to pre-empt the bidding.

The latter requirement is really the only excuse for the pre-emptive bids; that is, the desire to shut out adverse bidding by opponents.

For that reason pre-emptive bids must be high enough to effect this purpose; and only bids such as three Spades, four Hearts or five Clubs or Diamonds are of any value in shutting out adverse bidding.

The modern player is too alert to the purpose of these bids to pass is he has any justifiable bid.

The following represent sound original three-Spade bids by dealer:

Hearts—10.
Clubs—9, 7.
Diamonds—A, 4, 2.
Spades—A, K, J, 7, 6, 4, 3.

Hearts—
Clubs—K, 4, 2.
Diamonds—Q, 7, 6.
Spades—K, Q, J, 10, 4, 3, 2.

Such hands are good for Spades only, and in the great weakness in the Heart suit makes it desirable to shut out such a bid by opponents. The same holdings in the Heart suit would make them sound original four Heart bids by dealer. For example:

Hearts—A, K, J, 7, 6, 4, 2.
Clubs—9, 7.
Diamonds—A, 4, 2.
Spades—10.

Hearts—K, Q, J, 10, 4, 3, 2.
Clubs—K, 4, 2.
Diamonds—Q, 7, 6.
Spades—

The points to remember in making pre-emptive bids in the Spade suit are: First, to require a game bid in Hearts to overbid; and second, to have hand containing no assistance for a possible Heart bid by partner. In pre-emptive bidding of the Heart suit, require a game bid of Spades to overbid and no assistance for a possible Spade bid by partner. The foregoing should make clear the reason for a three-Spade and a four-Heart bid with practically the same holdings.

The same course of reasoning should make it apparent that a pre-emptive bid of less than five in Clubs or Diamonds is of little value in shutting out a game bid in Hearts or Spades by opponents. The following represent sound original five-Diamond and Club bids by dealer:

Hearts—10.
Clubs—K, 4, 3.
Diamonds—A, K, J, 10, 9, 7, 5, 3.
Spades—7.

Hearts—7, 3.
Clubs—K, Q, J, 10, 9, 7, 5, 3, 2.
Diamonds—A, 4.
Spades—

There is really very little value in pre-emptive bids except against inexperienced players.

The experts are too alert to the possibilities of a pre-emptive bid and too quick to infer which suit the pre-emptive bidder is trying to shut out, to make such bids of any great value. For that reason the novice should not try pre-emptive bids until he thoroughly understands their character and their purpose.

The partner of a pre-emptive bidder should not assist unless he has one of more tricks more than an average hand. A pre-emptive bid includes, as part of the bid, an average hand by partner, so that latter must hold more than average strength to justify a raise.

COLLEEN MOORE WINS HER WAGER

Colleen Moore really opened Crystal Pier last Sunday.

Driving to the beach, she enjoyed a short but invigorating swim in her new bathing suit.

"The water is too cold for comfort," admits Miss Moore, "but I had to go in to win a bet from my brother, Cleve, who wagered me three theater tickets against a pair of golf stockings that I wouldn't dare to try it.

"I got the tickets."

Eats Anything—
Sleeps Like Log

R. C. Miller Was in Hard Shape But Simple Intestinal Antiseptic Surprises Him

"I suffered from gas on the stomach so that I couldn't keep food down and [illegible] in bed all night. After taking one bottle Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) I can now eat anything and sleep like a log." (Signed) R. C. Miller.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—[Advertisement.

Easter Frocks and Wraps

The Two-Piece Costume

IT has won an enviable niche in Fashion's hall of fame. It has attained a prestige which only the truly deserving, in the mode or elsewhere, can ever claim.

For it has beauty, charm, style and versatility, all in one. It adapts itself to more occasions than perhaps any other phase of the mode. Nothing else, in short, can quite replace it.

Robinson's are displaying Two-Piece Costumes for the young girl or the matron. In a wide variety of fashions and fabrics, and at many prices. Costumes of piquet, piquetine, puff-up crepe, Roshanara—braided, embroidered or printed.

In such new shades as graystone, moth, pecan, cobweb, cinder, Cordilla, Porto Rico, batwing, navy and black.

THIRD FLOOR

Frocks for the Dinner Hour

FROCKS to grace any hour at which they appear, for that matter, so very lovely are they. Frocks for every age and type. Frocks to be worn at formal afternoon functions, and at dinner. Other Frocks for the most formal evening occasions.

Fashioned of exquisite fabrics: georgette, chiffon, metal fabrics, creamy net and lace. Designed on lines dignified or youthful; straight and slender or widely bouffant.

Beaded Frocks of apricot, jade, rose, orchid and blue. Others of all white—jeweled white, beaded white, white with just a touch of color.

There is one group of beautiful gowns designed especially for larger women. Fashioned of sheer summer-like fabrics, beaded in shimmering colorful designs—beautiful enough for the most exacting taste.

THIRD FLOOR

Wraps Display Applied Design

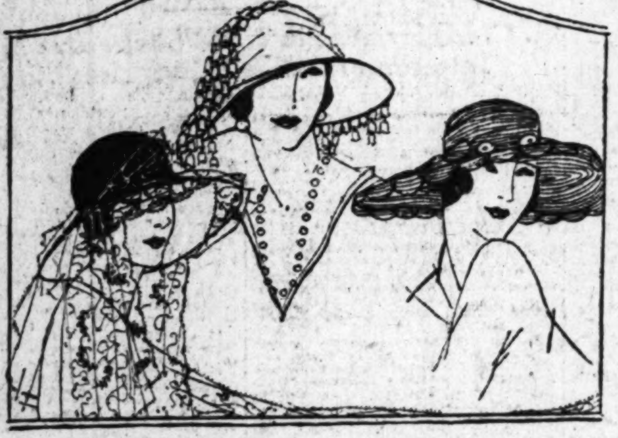
THE Wraps for spring achieve the unusual in widely differing ways. Some by line, some by color or fabric, some by adornment. But all with the success born of true artistry.

They may be long, slender and wrap-around as to style. Or they may be almost a cape, having the suggestion of sleeves. Or they may be Capes in actual fact. Robinson's are displaying all three types.

Some of silk, heavily embroidered in self or contrasting color. Some entirely plain, save for the rich fur which collars or borders them. Others of wool fabrics—with the sheen of silk.

All so beautiful that one could almost wish never to remove them, however lovely the frock beneath.

THIRD FLOOR



Easter Millinery

FROM the woman's standpoint, a Hat is more than merely a part of her wardrobe. It is one of the pillars in her house of life, the corner-stone of her peace of mind.

How important then that she select the Hat which most enhances her personality. Which makes her beauty more beautiful—her charm more vivid. She will find such Hats at Robinson's, where models for all types have been gathered together.

Garden Hats, Sports Hats, Street Hats, Afternoon and Dinner Hats. Hats from Paris, from New York—Hats so entrancing that she will find choice difficult. Three from among many hundreds equally lovely, are sketched.

At the left a French hat of black milan, the brim faced with orchid pleated taffeta—the whole completed by a long lace veil:

In the center is a large poke hat of caramel crepe de chine, faced with braid, and trimmed with showers of tiny caramel-colored blossoms.

Sketched at the right; an all-black Dinner hat of real horse-hair braid, the brim formed by silver-edged petals of malines.

THIRD FLOOR

For Spring—The Paletot

NOT so informal as the sweater, nor so formal as the long wrap, but adaptable to the countless needs between these two, is the Paletot. A short box coat that one slips into almost with one motion. Tied at the side with a youthful air of inconsequent grace.

For sports, for street, for wear with frock or separate skirt, the Paletot is fashion's latest whim.

Paletots of silk and wool duvetyn, brocaded. Of silk knitted fabrics, printed in Paisley patterns. Of chenille fabric, checked in tan and brown. Of llama cloth, Cube de Laine, Lennox crepe, Thames cloth.

In black and white, tan, gray, brown,—in the shades one likes best for all-around wear. They are priced moderately beginning at $37.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Silk Sweaters in the Larger Sizes, $39.50

OF PURE heavy silk, woven in faintly discernible stripes, or in plain weaves, these are Sweaters which were designed especially for larger women. Sweaters which larger women will like for every reason of line, fashion and finish.

They are more than just larger sized Sweaters. They are the expression of specialized designing for an individual type. They will lend slenderness and length of line, grace and poise.

In Tuxedo style, banded with contrasting color, and finished with narrow self sashes, they may be had in beige, brown, purple, black and navy. And sizes from 42½ to 54½. Priced at $39.50.

THIRD FLOOR

Leather Hand Bags Special At $5.00

THE low price is possible only because of a very special purchase—a purchase of 144 beautiful Hand Bags for Monday shoppers.

Their quality is more than exceptional at this price—so unusual, in fact, that every Bag should go within the day.

There is a remarkably wide range of styles from which to choose, among them Pouch Bags, Swagger Bags and Envelope Bags, with single or double handles.

In such beautiful leathers as pin seal, cobra grains, beaver and velvet calf, vachette and patent leather. Lined with fine moire, and fitted with mirror and coin purse.

And in black, brown, gray and tan. All to be only $5.00 on Monday.

FIRST FLOOR

Furs—New For Spring

BEAUTIFUL fox skins selected for their qualities of richness in color, length of brush, beauty of finish and sheen, may be seen Monday at Robinson's.

Foxes of every kind and color for spring and summer; blue, taupe, beige, platinum, brown, white and black.

Dyed Foxes begin in price at $27.50.

Natural Blue Foxes begin at $195.00.

Natural Silver begin at $275.00.

THIRD FLOOR

New Upholstered Furniture

100 Pieces of Upholstered Furniture were received within the week. All of that fine construction and appearance which one expects to find in Robinson's Furniture.

Davenports, Arm Chairs, Rocking Chairs—in widely varied sizes and styles—all new, all distinctive and beautiful.

Davenports may be had for only $95.00. Chairs and Rockers for only $45.00. Upholstered Chairs and Rockers in bedroom size, with down cushions, are priced at $47.50 and $50.00.

Others may be had at higher prices.

A very beautiful Karpen three-piece Suite, with carved base in Italian polychrome, consists of Davenport at $378.50; Arm Chair at $210.00, and Wing Chair at $225.00. (All in temporary covering of taupe sateen.)

Pieces in temporary covering will be upholstered without labor charge, when the fabrics are purchased at Robinson's.

WHO ARE THE SAPHEADS?

What is Actually Behind Some Apparent Stupidities of the Director

BY HARR CARR

Burn up your scenarios, children. It's all over. William De Mille of Lasky's has issued an edict in which he announces that he will not open any more envelopes suspected of containing screen stories. Hereafter, all such emanations of genius will be returned to the writers in the same envelope in which they arrived.

Although the other studios are not so frank about it, they have nearly all turned their backs upon original stories by any save writers of established reputation.

It looks like hard times ahead for talented amateurs.

I talked to William De Mille about it. I knew that he was about the last one in whom hope had died in the chase for fresh young genius.

"Maybe there is a young Shakespeare lurking around somewhere, waiting to be discovered," he said, "but I will respectfully pass along the job to someone else. I'm licked.

"I have read at least 10,000 scenarios. Out of that number I have never bought a single one. This isn't even a gambling percentage.

"I don't deny that there may be a glowing genius concealed somewhere in the ruck, but you have to wade through too many morons to find him. Hereafter, when I want a story I am going to a writer whose established reputation assures me that he knows his job.

"I don't want an amateur writer any more than I would want an amateur lawyer or an amateur doctor."

I asked him if he had never found any good ideas in any of the 10,000 scenarios.

IDEAS ALONE USELESS

"Ideas?" he said. "Certainly. Lots of ideas. The world is full of ideas. To love or be loved by one's mother is a good idea. For a poor boy to become a rich and powerful millionaire is a good idea. But what good does that do me? What I want is a story with real characters and situations. At any rate, I have thrown up my hands. I'm through."

I think Mr. De Mille's rebellion is a bigger event than it seems.

The truth is, screen stories swell to heaven. The artists who build the sets have made great strides. The cameramen have accomplished marvels. The actors have advanced in their technique. But the authors have furiously ploughed around in frenzied, futile circles, scratching up dust and feathers; but not getting anywhere.

As a general thing, the stories that appear on the screen are simply beneath contempt.

Even the novels purchased for the screen are changed around until they are senseless and pointless.

Pola Negri's first American appearance has been rendered ridiculous and her whole future imperiled by the absurdity of making Bella Donna a Pollyanna.

Warner Brothers paid a young fortune for "The Beautiful and Damned;" then absolutely wrecked it by putting on a silly ending that completely altered the entire point of the story.

The author of "Hungry Hearts" went back to New York in tears when she saw what they did to the end of her story.

The excuse offered by the studios for these remarkable inbecilities is that the producers are handicapped by the censor boards.

This is neither sincere nor true.

The real reason is one known only to those on the inside of the movie world.

THE REAL SAPHEADS

The real reason is the baleful influence of a collection of sapheads—of supercilious half-wits known generically as "The New York office."

"BARNUM WAS RIGHT"

New York Playgoers Delight in Clever Cohan Farce-Satire

E. M. KELLEY
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]
[Copyright, 1923, Public Ledger.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—A good measure of nonsense, that proverbial relish of the wisest men, was provided by at least three of the new plays that were shown in New York this week (there were seven, including two special matinees,) or, as one of the critics and ardent Muscovian fans observed between the acts of Brock Pemberton's brilliant French farce the other night, "Little as one might think it, we New Yorkers have our lighter moments."

"Barnum Was Right," is the Cohan brand of farce. In fact, though Louis W. Werba is the actual producer, and Phillip Bartholomae and John Meehan are down on the program as authors, the hand of George M. Cohan is everywhere in the production—in the deftness with which the scenes are turned, the smartness with which they are played, and the sanity of the structure behind the general insanity of the theme and plot. For to Cohan and the Theater Guild go the first and second prizes respectively for managerial authoritativeness.

"Barnum Was Right" is supposed, like "The Tavern," to be a satire on a certain brand of play, and some of the reviewers are gloating because the mystery melodrama is at last getting the lampooning it deserves, but, as a matter of fact, "Barnum Was Right" is quite able to stand on its own feet as uproarious farce, with no apologies to any other form of dramatic entertainment.

We emphasize this, because we, ourselves, refused to go to see "The Tavern" until the very last week of its run; we had been led to believe that it was a show with its tongue in its cheek. Nobody told us that it was fun, only that it poked fun at itself, and we thought it was Cohan caviar and that we shouldn't care for it.

The new piece is the kind of farce at which the audience stop coughing and explain to each other. Barnum was right in assuming that there was one born every minute, according to Donald Brian, who is the hero of the piece, and his old grandfather, who was in the circus business impressed the slogan upon him.

Therefore, when he undertakes to win his girl by managing her father's estate and paying off all the notes, he turns the place into a tavern, and baits it for what are known as the suckers.

He gets the newspapers to print stories about the pirate's treasure that is hidden within the old walls of the manor house, and buried about the grounds. Then he hotly denies the rumors and opens up his hostelry and plants coin and fake jewels in secret compartments and mysterious passages.

Stimulated by his protests that there is nothing in the tale of the buccaneer's treasure, the guests begin to arrive. Thus the riot starts.

The plot thickens, and the nonsense accumulates. There is a hired man, but supposed to be harmless, and played so well by Denman Malley that it is a treat to watch his facial expression through the opera glasses. He wanders through the plot inquiring, "What seems to be the trouble?" Or, raving of "Doubloons. Doubloons. The old walls are bulging with millions of doubloons."

There is Marion Coakley as a most alluring heroine, who turns down a yacht and a finished actor, Robert Adams, for the 100 per cent Americanism Cohan has inspired Donald Brian to express in a make-up like that of a glorified shoe salesman.

There is a really lovely vamp, Lillian Tashman, and oh, all sorts of interesting characters, who make you feel as if the whole matter were of the most vital importance to them, which isn't always true of the cast of a farce. Even

The Old Reliable Serial

BY GRACE KINGSLEY

A SEASON of the black-and-blue drama, otherwise known as serials, seems to be setting in with unusual severity. They are high-browing up some of the serials to be sure, by giving them a shot of history here and there, but in the main the good old stand-by thrillers are still with us.

Serials belong to the early Universal period of film literature. They are the yellow-backed novels, the ten-twent'-thirt' of the screen. Some folks dote on serials. These are such as love blood with their gore, and just can't bear a picture that hasn't at least half a dozen fights and one or two murders in it.

Serial Land is a funny old place. If you would believe the black-and-blue drama, the policeman has not yet been invented.

Ever see a cop in a serial? Of course not.

There are several kinds of black-and-blue drama. First, of course, there is the historical serial. The subject is always something exciting, preferably with Indians in it.

Then there are the Perils of Pearline, the Ravages of Ruth, and others of that sort, in which the heroine will drag herself up one side of a church steeple and down the other to escape the villain—anything for a thrill.

A REAL STAND-BY

The good old stand-by in the serial factory is the one about the poor old inventor, his beautiful daughter, the tall, strong hero, and the gang that is trying to steal the invention.

Sometimes nowadays they doll this up with airplanes and radio, but it's the old stuff in all the essentials, just the same.

The serial heroine never has a mother. She is always a half orphan, and her poor old father is an inventor. As an inventor the old man makes Marconi and Edison look like a sick snail on an upgrade.

True, just what his invention is, is always rather nebulous. It is spoken of in hushed subtitles as "that which would destroy the earth's life in twenty seconds," or is a marvelous machine that can do anything from recording thought to doing the family wash.

It is this invention, as I have said before, which is the bone of contention between the heroine's white-haired old father and the masked gang—the Dirty Dozen or the Order of the Itching Palm.

The master crook is the fellow

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

I DON'T know why it is but picture directors seem to have a complex for getting their feminine stars to wear riding habits upon the least provocation. It makes little difference whether the star can wear such mannish garb or not, she is generally so attired at periodic intervals. It is all in the game, of course, when the film is of the fashionable variety, but I am not particularly concerned with the appropriateness of such a costume to a story as I am with its appropriateness to the actress. The trouble is that few of them look well or even passably decent in such attire. But no matter how knock-kneed or bowlegged they may be nothing can stop them when they feel the riding habit habit coming on.

What especially prompts me in writing about this is "Bella Donna." In that picture there is a sequence where the heroine portrayed by Pola Negri is supposed to be out on the desert, and as no doubt befits the surroundings she puts on the usual and no doubt appropriate riding pants.

Now Pola is in some of her actions and movements, about the most attractive and graceful person on the screen. She knows as probably does no other actress how to give a vivid meaning to the expressiveness of her face and her body. She is fascinating to look at as long as she wears any kind of feminine apparel—the more seductive the lines of the gown the better for her. But when instead she appears in a pair of flaring white trousers and a silk shirt and necktie she looks like a rampant suffragette. She walks with a swagger, and puts her hands in her pockets on every occasion, and simply loses all the natural attractiveness that was hers.

There is probably only one actress who can consistently wear a riding habit effectively and that is Gloria Swanson, and Gloria was born for clothes anyway. She would look well in a pair of overalls. At least, I am sure, she would don them attractively. Because after all is said and done, Gloria is fundamentally a manikin, and her ability to adapt herself to her garb has never changed.

Pola first grew upon us in the picturesque costumes of a romantic period, and in those picturesque costumes I believe she should stay for the present. I cannot see her wearing successfully the clothes of the day, beautiful as she may look in some of the costumes that she displays in certain scenes of "Bella Donna." Really, none of her modern pictures, even those imported from abroad, have pleased us tremendously, and I think it is going to prove a serious mistake starting her off in America in something altogether new and foreign to the personality that her public likes best. Later on a change might be desirable, but the charm of this woman lies in a peculiar dramatic and emotional potency which hardly belongs to the more or less repressed present.

I am not one to insist on a player remaining true to type. Far from it! But I do insist on Pola remaining ardently feminine at all times, and picturesquely so, if possible.

Anyway, let some of the others make monkeys of themselves in riding habits if they want to, because they have little else to do. Not so Pola.

Once in a while in my musical meanderings I uncover a bit of information that touches on the past experiences of some of the popular film stars. The other day, for instance, I learned all about the youth of the Beery boys, Wallace and Noah, from an old-time vocal teacher of Noah, whose name is Gilbert Coleman Farley. He has lately settled here with a view to coaching singers.

He told me among other things that at one time during his early career Noah Beery was on the high road to becoming one of the world's famous opera stars. Noah had one of the greatest voices that he had ever encountered, he said, and he has always regretted that his former pupil didn't continue his career in song.

Farley knew Noah when his voice was changing, as a boy. At that time the young Beery sold peanuts in a theater in Oakland, and he used to excite all kinds of attention because his voice would

FATE FULFILLS EARLY DREAMS

Helen Eddy Thrust Into Early Ambition

Actress Appearing in Two Different Roles

Spoken Part Wins Showing at Pantages

BY KENNETH TAYLOR

Even before she played the part of Romeo in a production of "Romeo and Juliet" at the Manual Arts High School a few years ago, Helen Jerome Eddy has wanted to go on the legitimate stage.

But fate took a hand in the game. Along came a motion-picture offer and—blopey! went the dreams—some of them. For with the exception of two Hollywood Community Theater productions a season or so ago, her high school work was the last time Miss Eddy actually faced her audience.

Fate took a hand again recently. Fate, and Mr. Alexander Pantages. Acting as spokesman, Mr. Pantages asked Miss Eddy to make a personal appearance in conjunction with her picture, "When Love Comes," which will show next week at the local Pantages Theater. And it looked like a good opportunity, to Helen, to get out in the open and do her stuff—out where the howling mobs could voice their appreciation or disapproval in the way howling mobs are wont to do. Maybe she could decide, then, whether it was the spotlight or the camera that held the most in store for her, and brought the most out of her.

CALLED CONSULTATION

And so it was that Ray Carroll was called in again. Or maybe it was Miss Carroll who called Miss Eddy in, inasmuch as Miss Carroll, who is producing the Helen Jerome Eddy pictures, has the actress under contract for some time to come. Anyway, the result was that a very dramatic little sketch, named "Case Number Twenty-Nine" was written by Miss Carroll, rehearsed by Miss Eddy, and given tryouts. The tryouts went over good, considering the short length of time that the sketch had been in rehearsal. It was deemed good enough to show to Mr. Pantages.

Yes, sir, ever since her high school days, the dream of legitimate stage work had been constantly on her mind. And here she was, actually preparing for it. M. Coue, what do you think of that?

Well, Mr. Pantages was ready to be shown. He sat out in the front of the house, and he wouldn't let them use any scenery or any make-up, or any costumes, or anything. The stage was all set—for an acrobatic act, and that didn't resemble the courtroom scene that "Case Number Twenty-Nine" required at all. But Mr. Pantages stood by his decision firmly. If the company could forget actual facts and live their story up there on a bare stage, with no trimmings, and no audience out in front to lend encouragement, why they were good enough for any theater of his. So off they went.

REHEARSAL GOES

Doors, windows, and objects of furniture were indicated by suit cases. Thus equipped, they went through the sketch. And Miss Carroll, who witnessed the rehearsal from the wings, asserts that they went through it without a hitch, completely losing themselves in the parts. And she also asserts that she peeked out at Mr. Pantages and found the vaudeville magnate weeping copiously—not at it, with it. So there was no question whether the act was good or not. It was signed at once.

Thus it looks as though Miss Eddy had a busy week lined up ahead of her, in all her dual personalities. For besides appearing on the Pantages stage, she will hold a prominent part on two local screens, in "The Flirt" at the Kinema, and in "When Love Comes" at Pantages.

WALLIS STUDENTS IN TWO PROGRAMS

Two companies of the students stock company of the Wallis School of Dramatic Art gave entertainments last Friday night. "My Rich Uncle" company consisting of Merrill Cellars, Paul Holmes, Roy Standard, C. W. Wallis, Ruby Jones, Donald Chapman, Alice Jones, Mary Akers and Elizabeth Webb, entertained at the Lafayette Junior High School for the P.-T.A. Another company gave a four-act comedy, "The Coupon Man," played by Hortense Prohaska (director,) Marion King, Margaret Jones, Effie Funk, Oliver Cornell, Donald Wilson, Marie Anderson, Josephine Treadway, Herbert Kane, Charles Kressa and Martin Strader, for the Daughters of Veterans, in their hall, Sixteenth and Main streets.

Next Friday night a public "Review" will be held in Wallis Hall, when dancing, dramatic readings, pantomimes and one act of a three-act drama will make up the program. The public is invited free of charge.

PLAYCRAFTERS' PROGRAM

Four original one-act plays will be presented by the Playcrafters in their second performance of the season tomorrow evening at the Gamut Theater. "The Chaos," by Lucy Field Greene; "Moon of Madrid," by Fulton Dent; "Poor Husband," by Symon Henry, and "The Tenderfoot," by Richard Sloan. Added to this diversified program will be a classic dance number by Doris Cleveland, and selections by Miss Evelyn Pickrell, violinist.

MELFORD'S NEXT

Waldemar Young has begun the adaptation of "Salomy Jane" from Paul Armstrong's play based on Bret Hart's story. This will be George Melford's next Paramount production, following "You Can't Fool Your Wife." "Salomy Jane" will be produced at the Lasky Studio.

accompany her and may direct Norma Talmadge in "Secrets."

Laurette Taylor is soon to make another picture. It will be one of her famous stage vehicles, either "One Night In Rome" or "Happiness." Hedda Hopper has returned from Europe and is seriously considering an offer to come to California as a feature player, and Mary Alden will be starting westward just as soon as she finishes a part in "Barred Doors," a distinctive picture. James Kirkwood too, is soon to leave. His contract to play "The Fool" expires within a few weeks, and he will play with Mrs. Wallace Reid in her propaganda picture.

An interesting case involving motion-picture agents has just been settled out of court here. It is the case of Mary Astor, who is becoming very popular as a leading woman.

She was discovered about two years ago by Harry Durant, then with Famous Players, who became her manager. He advanced money to her, coached her, and introduced her to a great many people. And when she had got well launched on her career her parents stepped in and said that the agreement between Mary and her manager was not binding as she was a minor.

However, Mr. Durant won the first step of a legal battle and Miss Astor's parents have now consented to a settlement out of court whereby Mr. Durant remains her manager. She is going to play the leading part in Richard Barthelmess's next picture, and then it is said Famous Players-Lasky have some interesting plans for her.

A BEAUTY SHOW

Broadway is going to see a great beauty parade next Sunday.

"Mighty Lak A Rose" is opening and as Dorothy Mackail, the leading woman, is a popular ex-Follies girl, all her old associates are going to attend the first performance en masse.

Except for "Brass" the only other film opening on Broadway this week was "Jazzmania," a Mae Murray picture, which was shown at the Capitol. This was well received, as her pictures always are.

I never really appreciated the humor with which Miss Murray endows her productions until I saw "Adam's Rib," Cecil De Mille's latest which is just as absurd, but which seems to have been treated seriously by its maker.

The big moment at the opening of "Jazzmania" came when the audience overwrought and disappointed at the profusion of clothes worn by Miss Murray gasped with relief when they saw her finger a costume that seemed made of all of eight or ten beads.

"Jazzmania" has already been shown in Los Angeles, I believe, so I won't relate the plot. It is delightful extravaganza, not so good when Miss Murray acts, but oh when she dances!

Rex Ingram's latest production, "Where the Pavement Ends" was shown privately last week, and all of us who doubted that Ramon Novarro was a great find are hanging our heads in shame and begging Rex Ingram to give us the laught that we deserve. He made a great picture suffused with tenderness and charm and a lyric sensuousness. And he has photographed his wife like an angel.

inevitably break on the word "Peanuts." The first part of the word would be said in a contralto tone and the last in a basso profundo. It always stopped the show whenever Beery would come around.

Wallace Beery never had any vocal ambitions. He had a voice, just as he has now, that you can hear a mile away, but he never used it except to try to tell some manager why he should go on the stage, and as he talked loud enough and long enough his voice finally got him there. And I assure you that it is a pity that you cannot hear it now on the screen, because beside it, I'm telling you, the lion's roar is as the cat's mew.

Grant Carpenter of Warner Brothers scenario staff reports the finish of the first draft of "The Gold Diggers," the David Belasco play which Warner Brothers will film. Actual production will be started about April 1. The director or cast has not been announced.

"BABY" WORKS HARD

Mickey McBan Begins Labors on Thirty-seventh Film

Mickey McBan, noted for his aquatic prowess and popularly known as the "Bimini Baby" in recognition o fthe awards he has won at that water resort, is now at work on his thirty-seventh film, 'Daytime Wives," which is being made at the R-C studios under the direction of Emile Shautard. Incidentally, it is the third time he has been with Chautard, and the director is very enthusiastic about the work of the little man. General predictions are that he will be foremost among the budding starlets this coming year.

At the age of 3 years he won two medals one for a six-foot dive, and another for a fifty-foot swim. Recently he has won awards for a ten-foot dive, a fifty-yard backstroke, and general swimming excellence. He is the youngest member of the Amateur Athletic Union, which is, in itself, quite an honor.

No doubt his work in the water has brought about his fine physical condition, which enables him to work almost incessantly. He is never "exhausted" in the general sense of the word, and when he is tired after a day on emoting he turns to the plunge for refreshment. This never fails to restore the pert little grin to his face.

RUBINI WILL PLAY AT METROPOLITAN

Jan Rubini, America's popular violinist, composer and conductor, was formally introduced to audiences at Grauman's Metropolitan Theater yesterday.

Mr. Rubini plays a number of popular selections from the world's greatest masters. His technique and artistry have made him immensely popular with lovers of good music.

BACK AGAIN

Wyndham Standing is busy at the Robertson-Cole studios in his first American-made production in two years. Standing recently left on a world-tour, which he interrupted long enough to appear in a Dutch-made screen play based on Sir Henry Arthur Jones's stage play, "The Hypocrites." "Daytime Wives" will reusher Standing into the cinematic fold.

SERIALS HAVE PROBLEMS, TOO

that runs the subterranean hotels with the trapdoors, torture chambers, etc. If we would believe the serials, our fair country is full of the underground devils, our land is honeycombed with caves full of villians, torture chambers, secret doors, neat little devices to chop off your head, cisterns to drown you in, and other cheerful things for the villian to play with.

There is always some foreigner in charge down there. Serials always use a foreigner to do their dirty work. He used to be a Japanese, suave and fascinatingly fiendish. Then he became a Chinese. But nowadays all Chinese are benevolent in pictures. During the war he was always a German.

NOT A BIT ORIGINAL

The gang always is trying to steal the invention, though why, it's hard to tell. They spend far more money, trouble, time and effort on the darned thing than it can possibly be worth—enough to invent something of their own. They seem like ingenious lads, too, judging from the different kinds of torture they have invented.

Why don't they let the poor old bird put his invention on the market, and just get some of their smart boys together to make something a little better? But no. That wouldn't suit their depraved natures. They'd rather steal somebody else's ideas. That's those babies every time.

Sometimes there are merely plans of the invention that are stolen. An inventor, it seems, never keeps a copy of his plans. If somebody gets the original—blooey goes his invention!

There is always a deeply mysterious man, King Pin of the bloody boozoes, who is known as the lobster claw or the snake's hips or something. The claw has a hook in the place where his hand ought to be. Probably in moments of peace, he unscrews the claw like Capt. Cuttle and screws in his knife or fork, whichever fancy dictates he shall eat with. But we never catch him in moments of peace.

He's a bad egg, he is. He'll "slay a little baby for the coral on its neck" as quick as look at it, he will!

I never saw one serial in which the champ crime hound wore a suit of armor that looked suspiciously like the kitchen stove.

Every moment I expected the picture to turn out to be one of those eaxhes such as you read, with the ad at the bottom. I expected him to break out with an ad for stove polish, but he never did, though I went faithfully every week to see.

A TRUSTFUL "GOIL"

The heroine is always beautiful, and oh, what a trustful creature she is! No matter how often that girl gets kidnaped, she never seems to learn any better. Just let her hear a whistle under her window, and off she goes! A note in a strange handwriting will bring her forth instanter. And as for a telephone call—well, she'll put on her bonnet and fly in a minute. She always forgets all about the last time she was kidnaped and nearly drowned in the cellar before the hero came along and found the combination to the plumbing, or that other time when she was nearly beheaded by a neat little device in the Chinese den, only the hero came along in the nick of time just as the Chinese knife was descending for the last time, and saved her.

Not that she would have greatly missed her head probably. It never seemed to do her any good. No, she certainly didn't inherit her pap's brains. But oh, that strong, handsome, Johnny-on-the-spot hero!

His sole occupation in life seems to be looking out for the heroine. Which is certainly a kind dispensation of an all-wise Providence, since the girl never seems to have sense enough to look out for herself.

The elements are just nothing at all to this hero! He's right there Reginald every time. Distance is no more to him than it is to the telephone. If the girl is carried off in an airplane, out of the heavens he will drop in another plane. If the villain takes her down in a submarine, why, he gets another submarine, just like that! With one blow of his powerful arm he busts the other submarine, grabs the girl, and down goes the villain submarine, gurgle-gurgle gurgle-gurgle to the bottom.

He gets hold of his Claw, steals the hook, puts a pencil in, and makes the dirty knave write a full confession. Nobody knows what he does with the confession, but anyhow he's got it. Or else he grabs the Knight of the Cookstove, uses his trusty can-opener, and shucks the villain, exposing him for the bullying knave that he is.

The villain is always kind of gone on the heroine, which makes it all the more intricate.

Sometimes there is a comedy character in the black-and-blue drama. He is nearly always an Irishman. And he is true blue. Irishmen in the drama are always goodhearted. Who ever heard of an Irish villain?

The dirty work at the crossroads is always done by Mexicans, while the subterranean stuff is pulled off by some other kind of foreigner.

The heroine — but there! It's time for the fifty-ninth chapter of "The Poisoned Bathing Suit" to go on, down at the Sea-Shell, and I just mustn't miss it. The hero is just the grandest looking thing!

VALUABLE PAINTINGS IN EARLE PRODUCTION

Paintings valued at over $50.000 and upon which William P. S. Earle and Paul Dodge, art director for the Earle company, have been working for many months, will play an important part in the making of the screen version of "Tutankhamen." These paintings, which took over eight months to perfect are the result of several years of experimenting and Mr. Earle promises the silent drama many new and startling effects when the film is finally presented upon the screen.

Camera work on "Tutankhamen" has already started at the Hollywood studios and Directr Earle is gathering for the portrayal of the various Egyptian roles a cast of talented and well-known players. Those already announced in the line-up are Carmel Myers, in the part of Arvia, the dancing girl and slave of the Paraoh, Malcom McGregor as the hero Karmit and Sam de Crasse as the wily and villainous high priest, Paheri.

Dix might attain a popularity equal to Wally's, but that would be on the strength of his own personality and ability. The public is the one to decide whether he possesses the necessary qualifications. I could not decide it.

A. M. G., Fort Worth—You were right about the salary of Will Hays. It is reputedly $150,000 a year, while that of President Harding is $75,000.

Mrs. Belle R., Los Angeles—Huntley Gordon, who played the male lead in "The Famous Mrs. Fair," was born in Montreal, Can., and was educated at Banister Court School, England. Mr. Gordon has had an extensive screen career, having played important roles in "The Glorious Lady," "Society Snobs," "Frisky Mrs. Johnson" and other films.

Mrs. Sarah E., Chicago—Eugene O'Brien plays the lead opposite Norma Talmadge in "The Voice from the Minaret," which has just been shown in this city.

Josephine D., San Diego—May McAvoy is less than five feet tall. She was born in New York in 1901 and educated there. One of her recent screen successes was in "Grumpy," in which Theodore Roberts was featured. She has been selected for the cast of "Only Thirty-Eight," which William De Mille will produce for Paramount.

W. E. R., Baltimore — Almost every motion-picture company has its own scenario staff. Therefore few manuscripts are accepted from outsiders. A very good photoplay list was published in the March issue of the Story World.

Mrs. Mabel G., Los Angeles—The fact that "Souls for Sale" is another Rupert Hughes story is almost sufficient to warrant it being a good picture. It is a little too early to tell the release date yet, but in all probability it will be shown at the California Theater in this city. Eleanor Boardman is featured in the feminine lead, while Richard Dix, Frank Mayo and others have important parts. Probably nobody will be really starred.

J. K. J., Culver City—The comparing of Bobby Vernon comedies with those of Chaplin, Lloyd, Keaton, Semon and others is all a matter of personal taste. Bobby Vernon is a popular comedian. The Chaplin, Lloyd and Keaton pictures are probably more highly rated as attractions by the exhibitors, but this is no sign that the Vernon comedies are not very good of their kind. They are, however, somewhat different in character.

Roger W., Los Angeles—Mary Carr played a leading role in "Over the Hill," which was produced and distributed by Fox. I understand she has several children.

Jack R., Placentia, Cal.—There is always room for another good actor, be he cross-eyed or not. The essential thing is, he must be a good actor. The address of Hal E. Roach studio is Washington Boulevard, Culver City; Christie Film Company, Inc., 6101 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles; Mack Sennett, 1712 Glendale Boulevard, Los Angeles.

Helen H., Muncie, Ind.—Richard Barthelmess and Harrison Ford are both married. It was Douglas MacLean who played the stellar role in "The Hottentot." I understand that his next picture, "A Man in Action," will be even funnier than "The Hottentot." You can address him in care of the Hollywood Studios, 6642 Santa Monica Boulevard.

R. H. I., Los Angeles—"Once to Every Woman" was produced and distributed by Universal, starring Dorothy Phillips. The picture was released in September, 1920

James D., Los Angeles—Kenneth Harlan receives his mail at the B. P. Schulberg studio, 3800 Mission Road. He has been married and divorced. He recently completed the stellar role in "East Side, Westside," which is being produced by Irving Cummings for the Principal Pictures Corporation.

CUTTING ONE

While preparing for his next Paramount picture, "Lawful Larceny," which Edmund Goulding is translating from stage to screen form, Director Allan Dwan is cutting and titling his forthcoming production, "The Glimpses of the Moon," which was made at the Long Island studio with Bebe Daniels, Nita Naldi, Rubye de Remer, David Powell, Maurice Costello and Charles Gerrard in the principal roles.

COHAN FARCE IS APPLAUDED

if the maid hadn't blown off the roof with TNT as her humble contribution to the fun of the evening, the entertainment might still have been classified as dynamic.

"MARCH HARES" AMUSING

"March Hares," by Henry Wagstaff Gribble, produced at the Little Theater at special matinees this week, deserves honorable and appreciative mention. This play had a brief appearance here two seasons ago and is now repeated "in response to many requests."

A mad family, consisting of mother and daughter and the latter's fiance, dwelling together under one roof, become involved in dissension. The young lady brings home a feminine affinity, and her betrothed follows suit by introducing a youth who he claims is as sympathetic to him.

The play merely concerns itself with the reactions of each member of the household to the others. And it is really a whimsical study of a group of shy and self-centered characters, each determined on making his or her own respective personality felt.

It was so tentatively produced that it seems hardly fair to criticise it as a production, but it did need O. P. Heggie or H. B. Warner to clarify the part that was rather muddily personified by Moffatt Johnson, and it did need the intelligence of Cohan or Hopkins to motivate the delectable foolery.

It is one of those rare plays with a cumulative third act. Surprise follows surprise, neat turn treads on neat turn, and when you finally discover that Norma Mitchell, as the trouble-making affinity, has an affinity of her own, to whom she has been married for some years, the effect is one of the new genuine surprises theatrically, of the season.

Miss. Michell, by the way, recites a long, said poem in free verse in a way to make the season memorable. She is an actress, and knows what she is doing.

"Go-Go," the new musical comedy, presented by John Cort at Daly's Sixth-Street Theater, is said by the critics to be another "Shuffle Along." They say that dancers of darker hue have set high standards for this theater that the members of the cast of the new show seem to be just about able to sustain.

It is fashionable just now to cavil at the book of all musical comedies not of the Viennese school and tempo, but we are inclined to believe that almost any plot that moves as rapidly as that of "Go-Go" has much to commend it.

The tempestuous dancing and general speed and liveliness of the whole performance seem to assure it a run like that of its predecessors. After all "Go-Go" and "Shuffle Along" are probably sisters under the skin.

OPERA IS ALLURING

Any comment on current drama in New York should have mention of the German Opera Company and their Wagneman festival. Every performance they give is a dramatic performance with music, and it is interesting to note how the actors who are free throng to hear them.

Margaret Wycherly, whenever she can spare the time from her rehearsal for the forthcoming Guild production, attends all the notable productions, as does also Margalo Gillmore. The Germans are as impressive in their way as the Moscow Art Theater Company, so simple and vivifying are their effects, so inspired the quality of their drama.

They have had a good many financial difficulties, but have stuck pluckily to their guns nevertheless, and some nameless backers have been so impressed with their contribution to the operatic stage, that they have financed the rest of their stay.

New York has every reason to be proud of these anonymous benefactors and to congratulate itself on the fact that Wargner is able to establish a new tradition among us, that of an almost cosy grand opera, acted and presented as well as it is sung, and as simply.

Next week we are going to talk about the new Guitry plays and "the love habit," unless the Theater Guild's production of "The Adding Machines" absorbs us too utterly.

WANDERING DIRECTOR

James Cruze is rapidly winning the title of the "wandering director" around the Paramount studio as the result of his new production, "Hollywood." Judging from the amount of territory he has covered in the first week of shooting, there will not be a square inch of Hollywood that has not been photographed by the time he gets through. Jack Holt and May McAvoy were the first of the Paramount galaxy to work in this picture, which is an adaptation by Thomas Geraghty of Frank Condon's story. Walter Woods is production editor.

"HOT SANDS" WERE COLD

"When the sands of the desert grow cold" was the chorus which Ben Turpin struck up one night during the filming of Mack Sennett's five-reel satire, "The Shriek of Araby," in which Ben is the sheik (and shriek) and Kathryn McGuire the sheikess, and which starts its fifth and last week at the Symphony today.

Ben burst into song because he was nervous, exhausted—and cold. The scene represented a burning waste of desert land, but it was night, and a bitter wind was blowing, sweeping down through the setting about 9 o'clock in the evening, with Richard Jones and his company filming night scenes.

DESERT WAS COLD

Ben had always been taught at school that the Sahara was hot—as hot as a certain other place frequently referred to—but this Sahara was close to the freezing point, and the rest of the company, gathered 'round a fire, were slowly shivering themselves into a state of nervous exhaustion.

Good-naturedly, however, the cross-eyed comedian saved the occasion by bursting into song, the rest of the company laughingly joining in the chorus, and pretty soon these "sons and daughters of the burning sands" were getting away with a pot of hot coffee aid a steaming mulligan.

"The Shriek of Araby" is already well on its way toward setting up another attendance record to the Symphony list, and Mack Sennett has received hundreds of letters commending him for his unique method of supplying happiness to the world, letters in which "The Shriek" is cited as the proper medicine for all personal and mental ills.

REAL EGYPT SHOWN

The lure of Egypt breathes through "Bella Donna."

In this first American photoplay of Pola Negri's it is the colorful land of the Nile that forms the vivid background of the drama, and world travelers declare that one may find more of the real Egypt in this production than they were privileged to see during their actual visits.

According to Dudley Stuart Corlett, special technical adviser and a noted Egyptologist, real Egypt can only be found far from the points of contact with European civilization. Inasmuch as "Bella Donna" called for the land of the Egyptians, Corlett supplied the genuine and little-known scenic backgrounds.

One of the most beautiful and least-known is the temple of Abu Simbel, in upper or Southern Egypt, which was reconstructed for this picture. The temple, carved from living rock on the bank of the Nile, is so constructed that its interior is illuminated by the rising sun for only five minutes of the day.

It is in this temple that Bella Donna meets the Egyptian, Baroudi, in their clandestine love affair, which forms dramatic scenes in the photoplay "Bella Donna," now showing at Grauman's Rialto.

OUR COMPOSERS LEAD PROGRAM

American living composers will be the feature of the popular Sunday concert of the Philharmonic orchestra this afternoon at the Auditorium. Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor, will be ably assisted by guest conductors, Arthur Farwell Henry Schoenfield and Joseph Carl Breil, who will direct their own compositions.

The program will include Leo Sowerby's "Comes Autumn Time." Howard Hanson, dean of music of the College of the Pacific, has contributed a symphonic poem, "Before the Dawn," which will have its first Los Angeles hearing. Edgar Stillman Kelly, dean of American composers, will be represented with his song, "Israfel," sung by Estelle Heartt-Hreyfus, contralto, who will also introduce three episodes of local composers (Fanny Dillon,) "The Alps," a poem by Edward Howard Griggs (Rupert Hughes,) "Falling Leaves," poem by Amy Lowell. (Gertrude Ross) "Carmela," an early California Spanish folk song by Eleanor Hague.

COMPOSER TO SPEAK

Kate Beirne O'Rourke, Irish composer, will speak before members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians tomorrow evening. Her subject will be, "Ireland's Creative Part in Literature, Music and Art."

WHO ARE THE SAPHEADS?

and, as a general thing, is distinguished by the least brains of any conscious vertebrates that it would be possible to assemble, unless it were a convention of horned toads.

That any sane producer could submit his artistic product to the final arbitrament of a gang of ignorant ex-cigar drummers almost passes belief; but such is the fact.

The "New York office" is the great unapproachable god of the dump; the terrible "She Who Must Be Obeyed."

It is the "New York office" which hurls back telegrams ordering the titles of books changed to such feeble-minded names as "The Fires of Remorse."

It is the New York office which peremptorily orders the kind of happy endings where the heroine wakes up and finds it was only a dream. It is the New York office which deodorizes and denatures and dehumanizes the stories that go onto the screen.

If an author could sit, as I have, with this sacred circle as they pass out the edicts of high Olympus, they would perish and pass away.

At their best and in their finest flowering the New York officers sometimes rise to the mentality of a cheap burlesque actor.

For the most part they are soap salesmen, box office clerks, ham actors, advertising agents and former police reporters, perched perilously in the seats of the high gods and roaring raucously down to the mere authors and artists and actors and directors who have to do their bidding.

I once read a story where the king of a frightened people was a baboon, kept shut up in a hut, growling over his fleas, while his worshipping subjects prostrated themselves before his door.

Well . . .

GETS AWAY WITH IT

Last week Betty Blythe sang at a meeting of the King Cole Club at which Lionel Barrymore and other well-known stars were present. Her professional audience was a very discriminating one, but from all accounts, Miss Blythe acquitted herself nobly. Recently she refused an offer to appear on big time vaudeville circuit as a singing artist, because she has decided that she will devote herself entirely to screen work.

WANDERERS ARE FOUND BY CAMERA

Scores of Real Ones Are Appearing in Pictures at United Studios

No better proof of the hundreds of "wandering daughters" there are to be found in every city in the United States could be desired than the numbers of real wandering daughters—and sons—who appeared before the camera as "extras" in the country club scenes in the initial James Young production.

When the call was issued by the casting director at the United Studios for "Wandering Daughters," there was no thought of any real ones reporting for work, but much to the director's surprise, dozens assured him they were the real article.

Craig Biddle, Jr., scion of the very wealthy Philadelphia family and heir to millions, was the biggest surprise. He had quit Princeton in the middle of the semester to make a name as a motion-picture actor. So too, did the presence of Ellworth Gage, nephew of Henry T. Gage, former Governor of California. Likewise, the presence of the Princess Waldemar Valkonsky, orphaned daughter of a prince of the former Czar's household. The princess has adopted the film name of Thais Valdemar, and because of her beauty, dancing and acting talent, is making a place for herself in pictures.

The wandering sons and daughters come from every nook and corner of the world.

The second performance will be under the auspices of the Varsity Club, University of Southern California. The production has been hailed as one of the best the local university has offered in a number of years.

BACK HOME

Hedda Hopper will return to the States soon, to resume her motion-picture activities, probably in Hollywood. She sends word that she is bringing several new gowns from Paris. Her tour has included London, Paris, St. Moritz, Nice and the Riviera.

LAND OF LONG AGO IS "SHOT"

Director Takes Company to Darkest America for Filming "Driven"

Sitting in a comfortable theater seat, gazing on life as it is depicted in "Driven," the Charles Brabin production, which has its western premiere at the California Theater today, one wonders if such conditions really exist in this highly civilized and cultured country of ours. Yet, anyone who has been through the Blue Ridge Mountains of the South will tell you that the picture is absolutely true to life.

Director Brabin tells of some of the things that happened during the making of the picture. "When we arrived," stated Mr. Brabin, "we found that 'location' was forty miles from the hotel, which we decided was our base; the hotel itself was fifty miles from the railroad. Each morning and evening we made the long trip by auto, constantly getting stuck on the steep hills and in the mud.

"At the hotel there was but one bathtub, and the proprietor refused point-blank to heat water more than once a week. We used to have to boil water in shaving mugs and wash off the mud as best we could. We had a phonograph that we used to get the players in the proper frame of mind for certain scenes, and this was a never-ending source of wonder to the mountaineers. They had never before heard one. When we first turned it on they started to take flight; imagine that of people who fight like savages upon the slightest provocation.

"Both women and children chew tobacco and drink moonshine, and four families sometimes live in a one-room shack. In one scene Charles Mack as Tommy Tolliver had to plow up a field. The plow turned up thirty rattlesnakes, and Mack had a narrow escape from death. When a mountaineer marries he picks out the girl, and, if her father is agreeable, marries her in the middle of the road the next time the circuit rider comes that way. If the father objects the suitor has been known to calmly dispose of the objector with a gun. Yet, this strange part of civilized America is only a twenty-four hour ride from New York City by train."

THOUGHTS VISUALIZED ON SCREEN

Producer-Actor Tells How Hidden Beauties of Tale Are Brought Out

"It may be trite"—it was Charles Ray speaking as he sat under the sweeping branches of a giant sycamore tree which shaded the "Indiana" house in which lived the hero and heroine of James Whitcomb Riley's poem, "The Girl I Loved"—"It may be trite, but one of the most appealing things about our work for the screen is the scope that gives it such an advantage over any other mode of expression."

The scene was a California ranch which the star's technical staff had transformed into a perfect replica of an Indiana farm of the last century. Here for the most part Ray filmed the Riley poem for United Artists, which comes to the Mission Theater next Wednesday.

"We are sometimes criticized by punctilious people for 'liberties' we take with poems like this of Riley's," the star went on to explain.

"I am forced to take issue with them. The great power and charm of the screen lies in its ability to present its conception of what it has in hand.

"Take the case of this poem, 'The Girl I loved.' Like all poems, it is only suggestive. To tell all the details of his personal love affair, Mr. Riley would have had to expand his verses to a volume. A poet cannot be too literal, else he loses the charm that lies in suggestion—in the appeal to the reader's imagination.

"It would perhaps be most accurate to entitle the picture 'My Interpretation of "The Girl I Loved,"' but manifestly that wouldn't do for a title. It is self-evident that all picturized plays, poems and novels are interpretations.

"On their face the gentle lines of Mr. Riley's verses are undramatic. I bought the film rights to the piece three years ago, little sensing the wealth of beauty, character and tragic emotion that lay wrapped in them, out of sight—between the lines, as we say.

"So, to get back to what I started to say, we buy many things to film for what they contain between the lines and, except in rare cases, the privilege of making out of them something no other medium can do, shouldn't in fairness be denied us. The screen has no future if this use of its marvelous scope is to be withheld."

BROTHERS EARN SCREEN SUCCESS

Jack and Maurice Murphy

There is one way to earn success in the movies, and that is to start at the bottom and work up. That is the method Jack and Maurice Murphy, young sons of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Murphy of Seattle, are following. The boys have been in the land of the clicking cameras only six months, but have already worked in more than fifteen pictures.

Jack, who has just reached his eleventh birthday, expects to be a director. With that end in view, he is absorbing all the knowledge he can of the industry. His parents are training him for his life work with just as much seriousness as if he were planning on a law career. And, to prove that he is serious and industrious, Jack recently overlooked the possibility of having a birthday party, and instead went out and looked for a job. Thus it happened that he spent his eleventh birthday working for Jack Conway.

Maurice, the younger of the brothers, is 7 years old. He was recently considered for the part of Lincoln as a boy in "The Life of Abraham Lincoln," soon to be produced, but failed to get the part because he was too good looking. Maurice expects to be an actor. He is also musically inclined, and is quite a talented young pianist. He is soon to offer a program over KHJ, The Times' radiophone.

The boys were born in Seattle, and have traveled all over the world. They lived for a while in Honolulu. They like athletic parts best, both being swimmers of note and holding championship cups.

Miss Phillips at Studio on Her Vacation

What do screen stars do when they are having a vacation?

Dorothy Phillips has been on a vacation ever since she finished "Slander the Woman," her latest production, but she has only missed a few days being at the studio to see the cuts, revisions, title insertions and talk shop with Allen Holubar, her husband-director, in the executive offices of the Holubar productions at the United Studios.

"The World's a Stage" is Dorothy Phillips's latest released feature, which comes to Loew's State today, and the stage and screen mean much in the life of the popular star, for starting as a Henry W. Savage stage star in "Everywoman" she rose to cinema stardom under her husband's direction at Universal City.

But in days that Miss Phillips failed to visit the studio she found plenty of other diversions. She did a lot of spring shopping, and has a new vernal wardrobe, according to her maid. She caught up with her charity work, visiting several orphan asylums and bringing trinkets and toys for the interned youngsters, and her fan mail neglected during the last few days of rushing "Slander the Woman" to completion was given her personal attention for many hours. The garden in the beautiful Holubar home on Laurel Drive also received no small bit of her spare hours.

"The World's a Stage" was written by Elinor Glyn, and is said to be an ideal vehicle for the star's emotional talents. Kenneth Harlan is said to have a role ideally suited for his screen characteristics. The run of "The World's a Stage" ends the engagement of Max Fisher and his orchestra at Loew's State after one of the longest engagements any jazz orchestra has ever had in one theater.

MUSIC HATH POWER

"Speed" Hanson, well-known vaudeville performer, paid a visit to Marshall Neilan at Goldwyn studios and brought his guitar along. All work stopped on "The Eternal Three," Neilan's set and likewise all work on the "Red Lights" set next door. Mickey Neilan felt guilty about luring Clarence Badger and his "Red Lights" company away from work, but to make up for it turned in and shot twenty scenes of his own after "Speed" had gone.

Lloyd Whitlock, Harold Goodwin, Lydia Knott, Bert Roach, Edward Hearn, Dorothea Wolbert and William Welsh have the remaining roles.

Billed with this eight-reel feature is a Prizma color film of short length, entitled "The Chicken Reeler." Costantine Bakaleinikoff, conductor of the Kinema Symphonic Orchestra, promises a musical program of interest.

"Knighthood" Continues

Continuing another week at the Alhambra is the historic spectacle, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," dealing with that portion of early English chronicles wherein the vivacious Princess Mary Tudor, sister of bluff King Hal, better known as Henry VIII, defied the court in an effort to marry a commoner, Charles Brandon. Action, in the form of swordplay and exciting jousts, alternates acceptably with the pretty love story of the princess and the commoner. Joseph Urban designed settings and gowns, and Robert C. Vignola directed.

"Robin Hood" Still on

"Robin Hood" will begin the twenty-fourth week of his residence in Hollywood on Monday afternoon, and to date Capt. Cleveland Heath of the Hollywood police station has taken no steps toward banishing the notorious outlaw of Sherwood Forest from the usually peaceful foothill suburb. Although his antics have attracted crowds around Hollywood Boulevard and McCadden Place practically every afternoon and evening, and have sent many persons reeling homeI n a state of cinema intoxication, and thousands of schoolchildren have idealized him much more than a mere President or Governor of a State, so far no definite action has been taken. How much longer the Hollywood minions of the law will permit "Robin Hood" to build up admirers is a moot question and those persons who wish to see him invested with romance to the nth degree and encouraged in his lawbreaking and lovemaking by inspirational music of the Hollywood Egyptian Orchestra and Frederick B. Scholl at the mammoth organ, are urged not to delay this pilgrimage to the movie capital.

In Tender Romance

A tender romance of youthful love is delicately threaded in the pattern of a poignant drama of the pathos of old age in "The Ghost Patrol," which comes to Grauman's Million Dollar Theater, starting Monday, March 19.

George Nichols lends a rare depth of feeling to the role of the old patrolman who, devoted to duty and still efficient, is put into the discard to make way for youth. The manner in which he is reinstated to his former position is the basis for a drama of powerful moments and smashing climaxes. Ralph Graves, who became famous as a Griffith actor in such productions as "Dream Street," and Bessie Love, popular star of many features, have emotional roles, and form a youthful combination said to be ideal.

"Jazzmania" Moves

Mae Murray's peppy photoplay "Jazzmania" will be seen on the screen at the Miller Theater today. "Jazzmania" has been showing to big crowds at the California Theater for the last week and popular demand caused Fred Miller to move it to Miller's. "Jazzmania" is a gay burlesque of a certain queen of a tiny Balkan kingdom. She comes to America and falls under the lure of jazz music and dancing. She is recalled by her people and she returns to make the monarchy into a republic. Mae Murray is at her best as Queen Ninon, and the supporting cast is made up of Edward Burns, Rod La Rocque, Lionel Belmore and Jean Hersholt.

Three Features Shown

A monster fashion show, Jan Rubini, the popular violin virtuoso, and a brand new star of the screen firmament are the three big new features at Grauman's Metropolitan Theater for the week of Saturday, March 17.

Walter Hiers scintillates for the first time as a new Paramount star in "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," the feature picture, a rapid-fire comedy which presents Hiers at his best. A cast which might truly be termed "all star" is seen in the supporting roles. These players include Jacqueline Logan, George Fawcett, Robert McKim and Joseph Swickard.

"Girl I Loved" Here

A new picture, Charles Ray in the second of his elaborate United Artists productions, a visualization of James Whitcomb Riley's personal romance based upon his poem "The Girl I Loved," will be introduced to Mission Theater patrons this coming Wednesday, following the final day of D. W. Griffith's mystery romance "One Exciting Night."

The star, under the direction of Joseph de Grasse, has perpetuated on the screen a vivid and impassioned portrayal of the poet Riley tossed on the billows of stormy circumstances. It is a story of a hopeless ardor and love for a girl who falls in love with another youth, a drama of renunciation and of powerful triangular conflict.

Charles Ray is said to do the greatest acting of his career. An important factor is the girl in the piece, Patsy Ruth Miller, one of the most beautiful of the younger leading women, who runs, it is said, almost parallel in prominence with the star. Others in the cast are Ramsey Wallace, Edythe Chapman, Lon Poff and William Courtwright.

Pola Negri at Last

Venice, London and Egypt form the geographical backgrounds for "Bella Donna," the first American photoplay of Pola Negri, which is showing at Grauman's Rialto, and a greater contrast could hardly be imagined.

Every effort was made by Paramount to make Miss Negri's initial picture a triumph in every way. From the viewpoint of everyone who has seen "Bella Donna," they have succeeded admirably. George Fitzmaurice brought the best of his technical skill and fine artistic sense into the direction and the cast, composed of such players as Conway Tearle, Conrad Nagel, Lois Wilson and Macey Harlam, add their finished acting to the perfection of the production.

"Irish Rose" Stays

"My Wild Irish Rose," will be held for a second week at Tally's Broadway. The picture is a strange coupling of two classics—a song and a story. It sips the sweetness from both Chauncy Olcott's song and Dion Boucicault's famous stage success, "The Shaughraun" with an innovation providing a role for the rising child player Richard (Mickey) Daniels, the freckledest faced boy in the world, and more Irish than Ireland itself. Pauline Starke and Pat O'Malley play the leading roles. "T. L. Tally's Trip to the Hawaiian Islands," will also continue as an added attraction for a second week. Laurence Lorraine, the Irish tenor will again be heard rendering his Irish song numbers that brought him back for encores after each number last week.

ANOTHER DRAMA SOLD BY DANCER

Miss Norma Gould

Norma Gould has sold another of her dance dramas to one of the leading instructors of the East. This time it is "A Desert Nocturne," an Arabian number for eight dancers. It is entirely original and includes a dance of the Dervishes with rare musical accompaniment.

Miss Gould has become recognized throughout the country as a composer of dance dramas, pageants and single dance numbers, and is enjoying a substantial sale of her descriptions, in addition to conducting her school of the dance in this city.

"Dianidra," Miss Gould's dance-drama for children, was sold to the same eastern instructor and produced with marked success.

Making Over Play Is Like Dressmaking

It was between scenes of the filming of "Jazzmania," the Tiffany production for Metro, which starts today at the Miller Theater after a very successful run of two weeks at the California.

Mae Murray was in her dressing-room, a dressing-room done in corn-colored silk, just the shade of her hair. She was arrayed in a long-draped, trailing black satin gown. A Russian wolfhound lay on the floor near a chaise lougue. count," said she. "Things are "I am doing it just on that acso difficult at the moment. The censor bill is a menace in so many ways to artistic production. But doing pictures of my own gives me greater scope.

"I feel that no time nor expense is too great if only in the end I turn out a good picture. We do scenes over and over again until we get what satisfies us. I use nothing that I feel is not up to the highest standard. We work on the same principal that one works with a dress until it is just right. One wouldn't be so foolish as to wear it unless it were perfectly suitable."

SOME BEGINNING

Erich von Stroheim sold his first scenario for $250. Then he directed it for $150 a week and acted in it for nothing. It was "Blind Husbands." Now he's reputed to receive $2000 a week.

ENGAGE PIANIST

HOMER SIMMONS TO MAKE TOUR OF EAST

Recognizing the merit of the work of Homer Simmons, a Los Angeles pianist, who has made quite a name for himself in local appearances, Havrah Hubbard, lecturer and musical critic, has engaged him for a tour of the East. Mr. Hubbard has become well known for his operalogues.

This engagement comes as a compliment to the work done locally by teachers of music, Mr. Simmons having received his training here. He has been under the direction of Homer Grunn for a number of years.

Spring Is Here

"The Year's at the Spring," and the Kinema Theater will show the picturization of Booth Tarkington's story, "The Flirt," so Constantine Bakeleinikoff, director of the Kinema Orchestra, has selected for his score to the feature picture only those themes which properly suggest the capriciousness of the film's titular character and also the sudden and varied whims of a spring day. Chief among these are excerpts from the light opera, "Maytime." Opening the program is Von Suppe's familiar, yet always welcome, "Beautiful Galatea" overture.

Ambassador Program

A program of beautiful numbers has been arranged by the Ambassador sextette to be played in the Ambassador Hotel lobby this evening, under the direction of Josef Rosenfeld.

Following is the program:

"Badener Beauties"	Komzak
"Why?"	Schumann
"What Flowers Are Dreaming"	Translateur
"Faust"	Gounod

Singer Returns

Miss Eleanor Hornby Woodward, a dramatic soprano of ability and charm, has returned to Los Angeles, having achieved success on the concert stage in New York City and throughout the East.

Miss Woodward possesses a voice of unusual artistry, interpretative insight and sweetness, a combination which is searching in its appeal and never fails to capture her audience. She is equally versatile in aria, oratorio and ballad. Her appearances were so successful in New York City that a concert engagement was given her for the season, and she was engaged as soloist in one of the most prominent churches, but on account of the illness of her 4-year-old daughter, she was obliged to cancel both positions and return to California. Miss Woodward is another Los Angeles girl to make good in the metropolis, thereby adding new laurels to the music achievements of our city.

Sunday Concert Program

The popularity of the Grauman Sunday-morning "discovery" concerts grows apace, and each concert sees some distinct innovation which lends an added interest to the program.

Today the concert will consist of a Naples band. This will include fifteen picked musicians under the conductorship of two Italian bandmasters A. Andreani and L. Castellucci. It will offer a superb program of favorite Italian compositions.

Following this, Jeannette Rogers will take the baton in response to the flood of special requests that have come from the audience.

Other special attractions will be Louise Martinez, dramatic soprano; Clemence Gifford, always a favorite, and a trumpet solo by V. Drucker.

Rehearsing Opera

Prominent in Melody Events

Jeannette Rogers, Flute Soloist

Gemma Cesaretto, Soloist Philharmonic

Z. Earl Meeker, Baritone, "La Favorita"

The final rehearsals for the opera, "La Favorita," to be presented by the De Lara Grand Opera Company on the evenings of the 22nd and 23rd inst., are progressing splendidly. Due to the fact that this opera has not been produced by the opera companies here in the West for a number of years, and also due to its lyric beauty, the company is presenting a performance on both Thursday and Friday evenings.

The cast is headed by Z. Earl Meeker, baritone, who will sing the role of the King of Castile, Alfonso XI. Vivian Clarke, mezzo soprano, sings the role of Leonora Di Gusman; Miguel Laris, tenor, the role of Fernando; Forest Bell, basso, the role of Baldassare; Henry Cantor, tenor, the role of Don Gaspare; Maureen Cantillon, soprano, who will make her debut on Thursday evening in the role of Inez, and Dorothy Kramer, soprano, who will make her debut as Inez on Friday evening.

Florence Easton Soloist

Next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening the Philharmonic orchestra will play its twelfth symphony concert, Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor, and Florence Easton, prima donna, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, as the soloist.

Music patrons well remember this noted artist from her last visit to Los Angeles with the Scotti Grand Opera, with which company she sang the leading soprano roles. Miss Easton will sing two compositions by Conductor Rothwell: (a) "Midsummer Night," (b) "Baachnale" and the Aria from Weber's Oberon, "Ocean Thou Mighty Monster."

The symphony will be the Glazunnon No. 4 in E flat Op. 43. The Liszt symphony poem, "Les Preludes" and Saint Saen's Marche du Couronnement, complete the orchestral program.

—o—

Bronson Artists Appear

A large audience attended the Gamut Club Theater Thursday evening for the third concert-recital to be presented by the Carl Bronson artists.

Miss Daisy Jean, a concert 'cellist of international fame, presented selections upon the harp and 'cello.

Barney Weber, tenor, presented three solos. A floral rhythmic, "The Crimson Poppy," the creation of Miss Marion Bronson, was performed by her in a charming manner. Harold Salisbury, presented a number of characteristic Kipling songs. Lucy Merz and Ruth Bronson, presented the dance of "Pierrot and Pierette."

Miss Lucille Stanley, was presented in violin solos, the numbers were: "Legend" (Wieniawski,) and "Canebrake" (Samuel Gardiner.) Miss Marion Bronson presented another of her creations, "The Incense Dance," which was carried out by her alone in beauty, grace and charm which held the audience without a move until the finish of the number.

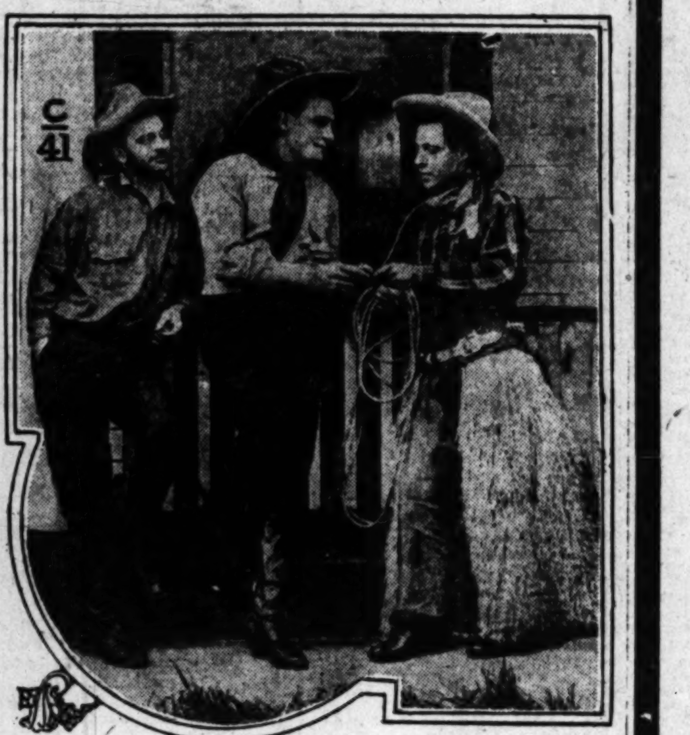
To Give Concert

W. S. Hooser, known to hundreds as "Daddy," has arranged to give a concert at the Gamut Club auditorium, 1044 South Hope street, on April 11. Although well advanced in years, "Daddy" has an excellent baritone voice as the result of several years of study under Carl Bronson. He will be assisted by four other artists.

GLIMPSE OF PIANIST AT PLAY

Artist Wore Chaps on Last Visit Here



Alfred Cortot

As a musician Alfred Cortot, the French pianist to be heard in recital at the Philharmonic Auditorium next Tuesday evening, has enjoyed a brilliant, colorful career. Graduate and first prize winner of the National Conservatory of Paris, where he was a pupil of Decombes (one of the last pupils of Chopin,) his first professional engagements were as soloist with the Colonne and Lamoureux orchestras. Then followed extensive European tours, where he gained immediate success in the established musical centers, Petrograd, Moscow, Madrid, Brussels, Manchester and London, Geneva, Amsterdam, Berlin, etc.

Between seasons he became a repetiteur at Bayreuth, making his debut as a conductor, theatrical director and stage manager, when only 24, by giving the first performance of "Gotterdammerung" and a brillian tproduction of "Tristan" in Paris."

He is unspoiled by his successes and is keenly interested in all democratic movements, an avid student of all things peculiarly of the country where he happens to be traveling. To travel with him necessitates a most systematic schedule, for every hour not devoted to his music is given over to sightseeing. He knows the products of every district, the principal industries, the sights to see, the places to go. In New Mexico his first request was to be shown the "jumping beans," in Arizona the copper mines, in Los Angeles he has already requested Manager Behymer to take him to two of the studios, where he thoroughly enjoyed himself last year.

The picture of Mr. Cortot in chaps was taken when in Los Angeles on a previous tour.

"the handsomest woman on the stage is a man." For Mr. Eltinge, though in proper person a fine, upstanding man, is, in feminine garb, a perfect woman. Years of acute study have enabled him so to define and depict the essential feminine characteristics, that his delineations have assumed the proportions of a fine art. Another hit on the new bill is sure to be scored by Jessie Busley, who, with her company, presents a satire on the mystery play, called "Batty." Miss Busley has taken the role of one who, steeped in a session of "The Bat," goes batty at night thereafter, and the resultant antics and hallucinations are laughable. Max and Moritz are chimpanzee comedians who prove the Darwinian theory and then some. Stepp and O'Neal in "Just a Debate," Carlisle and Lamal in "The Interview," Bert Howard, with his piano, and the Sensational Valentines, in the air, are also in the bill, while Allan Rogers and Leonora Allen, the delightful singers, will remain over another week with a complete change of repertoire.

Hillstreet Celebrates

The coming week is the first anniversary week for the Hillstreet Theater. Seven acts of all-star vaudeville is headed by Frisco, the most imitated jazz dancer in the world, who comes to the Pacific Coast for the first time in his career. He is accompanied by Loretta McDermott and Eddie Cox, both of whom are classy steppers themselves.

By special arrangement with Carl Laemmle, head of Universal productions, William Desmond, star of stage and screen, will appear in person in a monologue.

"Stars of Yesterday" is the title given a group of old-time players made up of Barney Fagan, Lizzie Wilson, Tony Williams, Joseph J. Sullivan and the original Carrine. Along with Little Mae Kennedy they will be seen in "A Breath of Old-Times."

For originality of entertainment Don Alfonso Zelaya is in a class by himself. He is an authority on psychology, new thought, unity and theosophy, a brilliant and witty speaker and an accomplished pianist. The Love Twins are two little singing love birds whose harmony singing is a delight to the ear. Arthur and Morton Havel will offer their latest success, "Suits," while Josephine Amoros, "That French Girl," assisted by Edna Nally completes the vaudeville program.

For the screen entertainment Katherine MacDonald will be seen in her latest picture, "The Woman Conquers." In her support will be such well-known players as Bryant Washburn, Mitchell Lewis, June Elvidge and others.

"Peaches" at Burbank

A bunch of peaches, of the clingstone variety, will adorn the stage of the Burbank Theater for the coming week, when the Hi Jinks Revues musical comedy company presents their latest girl entertainment, "Peaches," with Lee Bud Harrison, George Clark and all the other favorites in the cast.

Peaches numbering about thirty will be mostly in evidence during the special song numbers, and anyone who won't fall in love with the orchard on the Burbank stage is a hard customer to please. The principals, Lee Bud Harrison, George Clark, Ruby Darby, Jean Darby, William McKee, Grace Harrison, Dot Claire and Walter Van, have rehearsed an afterpiece bit, which comes as the tag-end of the show, and which is heralded as a rare bit of tomfoolery.

Kolb and Dill at Mason

With the thirst of Los Angeles theatergoers for god hearty laughter still unquenched, the announcement of a return engagement at the Mason Operahouse starting Monday, March 26, of that popular California pair, Kolb and Dill, will serve as wholesome news to both the "wets" and "drys."

With the same capable cast and the same tried and true laugh machinery in full action, their return engagement will serve as a "giggle" excursion of hilarious laughter and snappy and tuneful music.

Woman Director Back

Who says that women can't compete with men in the strenuous business of stage direction? Wilhamene Wilkes, who returns to the Majestic with "The Trouble Hound in this capacity, has proven conclusively by the standard of her past productions that the fairer sex can give the old-established order of masculine directors a run for their money.

During her absence from Los Angeles, she directed, among other plays "The Woman of Bronze," at the Wilkes Alcazar in San Francisco in which Mary Newcomb made her first appearance in a heavy emotional part.

"Red Bulldogs" at Egan's

Willard Mack in his latest contribution to the stage, "Red Bull Dogs," which had its American premiere locally a short time ago, returns to the Egan Theater starting tomorrow.

The actor-author-producer has, in his new play, written a story that holds intense interest throughout. It is convincingly dramatic and has enough of the comedy to keep a splendid balance. With the red-coated Mounted as a background the author has given the play an attractive series of stage settings with an abundance of action throughout.

Mr. Mack will be seen in the role of Murray O'Fallon, and in the supporting cast are, Miss Phyllis Connard, Beatrice Banyard (Mack,) Clark Marshall, George Sherwood, George Morrell, Guy Thomas, Claude Boardman, Sanford Dodge and Forrest Cornish.

Doubles for Self

Helen Jerome Eddy will be the stellar attraction on both stage and screen at Pantages for the coming wek. Making her debut in vaudeville under the direction of Ray Carroll, who has also had charge of the recent screen activities of the star, Miss Eddy will personally appear in "Case No. 29," written for her by Miss Carroll. "Case No. 29" is an eloquent plea for motherhood and the paramount rights of mother love. The playlet requires a supporting cast of six players.

It is by no means a coincidence that the picture "When Love Comes," in which Miss Eddy is announced for the same program, is also a story of mother love, as the little drama by Miss Carroll was written to supplement the picture. Both are of the highly emotional type, in which Miss Eddy has done her best work on the screen.

Comes also Ruth Budd, an added attraction, with emphasis on attraction. Miss Budd sings, dances, plays musical instruments and demonstrates a perfect physique in acrobatic stunts. Dolores Valecitas brings a troupe of trained leopards which besides their circus tricks, show unexpected degree of musical skill. The Lumars, acrobats, Uintah Masterman, whistler, and the comedy trio, Sherman, Dan and Hyman, in their latest song compositions, make up the list.

FOREIGN RECORDS WITH MANY HITS

Among the companies that are making records in Europe is the General Phonograph Corporation, makers of Okeh records. Believing that the best records of any country are best interpreted by the people of that country, they have made large numbers of Bohemian, Danish, German, Hebrew-Jewish, Mexican, Norwegian, Polish, Russian, Slovak and Swedish records. The records were recorded in the respective countries, the matrices imported and the actual records made in New York.

And so, although the names of the compositions are familiar to every ear, yet many of the Okeh records are made by musicians residing in the city in which the composition was actually composed. "Artists' Life" (Strauss,) and "Wine, Women and Song" (Strauss) are gay, carefree waltzes rendered by Marek Weber and his orchestra. The orchestra plays "Dreaming" (Joyce) and "Souvenir, de Marie" (Marien-Klange,) preserving the continental flavor in pleasingly evident fashion. The Royal Italian Marine Band plays four operatic numbers. The prelude to the second act of "Una Ballo in Maschera" (Aida,) with its terrible gallows scene, is a moving piece of splendid music. Another number from this opera is the "Finale to Act II," and still another the "Ballet and Sacred Dance." Eduard Morike and the orchestra of the German Operahouse in Berlin give two records from the "Tales of Hoffman." And the famous and bizarre "Introduction to the Third Act of Lohengrin" is given an impressive rendition by the European Symphony Orchestra.

Fritz Vogelstrom, tenor, sings in German for Odeon records two Siegfried numbers, "The Sword Song and "Thou Happy Warbler."

Nino Piccaluga is an Italian tenor who makes records for Fonotipia, an Italian company, with American Okeh releases. He sings the closing aria of the tragedy, "I Pagliacci," "No Punchinello, No More," with a clear and ringing tone. Also he records "Farewell, Sacred Memories" (Othello.) Both records are in Italian.

Stracciari is a world-famous baritone. His rendition of "I Vespri Siciliani" is a number which has brought forth the applause of the greatest critics the world over. This number is a Fonotipia record.

Two record made by Victor that are going over especially big are De Gorgoza's "The Blue Bells of Scotland" and Chaliapin's famous and dramatic "Song of the Volga Boatman."

STARTS AS EXTRA

Starting as an "extra" girl eighteen months ago, Dorothy Manners has already ascended to the position of leading lady in William Fox feature productions. As a result of her performances in support of Shirley Mason in two consecutive Fox films, Miss Manners was promoted to the position of leading lady by General Manager Charles A. Bird. She is now playing opposite Charles (Buck) Jones in "Snowdrift."

DOROTHY IN FLORIDA

First scenes in Dorothy Dalton's new Paramount picture, "Fog Bound," which is being directed by Irvin V. Willat, are being made near Palm Beach, Fla. The company includes David Powell, Maurice Costello, Martha Mansfield, William David, Warren Cook and Jack Richardson.

BUY COHEN STORY

Among the stories purchased by Universal for release in 1923 is Octavious Roy Cohen's story, "The Way of the Strong."

CARICATURE AND CRITICISM

Margaret Widdemer, Poet, Novelist and Critic, in "A Tree With a Bird in It," Writes a Series of Brilliant Parodies, Sagacious and Illuminating

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

A TREE WITH A BIRD IN IT. By Margaret Widdemer. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.

Margaret Widdemer's work is oddly varied in both kind and quality. When you see her name on the title page of a book you never know what to expect. Hence, she is a challenge to the reviewer.

She writes novels of the weak-tea variety—the kind we give to romantic young things to read on the train on their way "back East," or to the unsophisticated middle-aged woman reader whose empty life has left her hungry for romance, even though it has to be taken vicariously through the pages of a novel. Such novels are "A Rose Garden Husband" and "The Year of Delight."

She writes short stories like those included in "The Boardwalk," keen, penetrating pictures of life, free from glamour, illusion and the excess baggage of vapid romance.

She writes poetry that is not "simple and sensuous" for, although it throbs with feeling, it is also reflective and farsighted. "Omission," for instance, is analytic, outlining a character all too common, with startling clearness. At other times her poetry is purely subjective, but in any case it is richly human and so leaves a lasting impression upon the mind of the reader.

And now she stands forth as the author of one of the cleverest volumes of parodies that has appeared for many a day. "The Tree with a Bird in It" is a mock symposium in which our prominent poets of today warble, or chant, or philosophize, or rave, or rant on the subject of the Grackle, which is the name given by Miss Widdemer to a bird in a pear tree.

It is a brilliant performance, for the essence of each poet is here, each in his own most characteristic mood and form, each true to himself, and yet altogether ridiculous.

Forty-five poets are made the subject of Miss Widdemer's wit. Each of her shafts is a criticism, brief, pointed, pungent, of the author.

The list of these includes Jessie B. Rittenhouse, Edwin Markham, Witter Bynner, Amy Lowell, Edgar Lee Masters, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Robert Frost, Carl Sandburg, Edith M. Thomas, Charles Hanson Towne, Sara Teasdale, Ezra Pound, Margaret Widdemer, Richard Le Gallienne, Angela Morgan, Conrad Aiken, Mary Carolyn Davis, Marguerite Wilkinson, Aline Kilmer, William Rose and Stephen Vincent Benet, Lola Ridge, Edna St. Vincent Millay, John V. A. Weaver, David Morton, Elinor Wylie, Leonore Speyer, Corinne Roosevelt Robinson, Ridgeley Torrence, Henry Van Dyke, Cale Young Rice, Bliss Carman, Grace Hazard and Hilda Conkling, Theodosia Garrison, William Griffith, Edgar Guest, Don Marquis, Christopher Morley, Franklin Pierce Adams, Thomas Augustus Daly, Vachel Lindsay, Percy Mackaye, Josephine Preston Peabody, Isabel Fiske Conant and Arthur Guiterman.

Extracts serve best to give an idea of the flavor of the whole. Miss Widdemer prefaces each with an introduction, each as apt as the parody itself. For instance, she begins with Miss Rittenhouse, for long the secretary of the Poetry Society of America, who "steps brightly forward with an air of soprano introduction," and gives her poem:

"I look out from my window
Beloved, and I see
A bird upon a pear bough;
But what is that to me?

Because the thought comes icy;
That bird you never knew—
It's not your bird or pear tree,
And what is it to you?"

Amy Lowell, "fixing her glasses firmly on the rest of the Poetry Society, in a way which makes them with difficulty refrain from writhing," delivers herself as follows:

OISEAURIE

Glunk!
I toss my heels up to my head . . .
That was a bird I heard say glunk
As I walked statelily through my extensive, expensive estate
In a pink brocade with silver buttons, a purple passementerie cut with panners, a train, and faced with watered silk:

But it
Is dead now!
(The bird)
Probably putrescent
And green . . .

I scrabble my toes.
Glunk!

Edgar Guest, with "an air of absolute belief in the True, the Optimistic and the Checkbook," recites in his own best manner:

AIN'T NATURE WONDERFUL!

How dear to me are home and wife,
The dear old Tree I used to love.
The pear it shed on starting life,
And God's Outdoors so bright above!

For Virtue gets a high reward,
Noble is all good Scenery,
So I will root for Virtue hard,
For God, for Nature, and for me!

Benet brothers are there, arm in arm; Witter Bynner with his Celia and his Chinese motif; Carl Sandburg chanting a number of things; Lola Ridge beseeching God to take her away, because "There is no sex here.

And no smell!"

A masque in which Percy MacKaye, Isabel Fiske Conant and Josephine Preston Peabody collaborate, has the Spirit of the Rejection Slip on tragic soliloquy. And then from right and left of stage entrance enter semichoruses of magazine editors and book publishers, tearing their hair rhythmically. This is their wail:

"We have mailed their poems back
To every man and woman-jack
Who weigh the postman down
From country and from town;
But all in vain, in vain.
They mail them in again!"

The demand for this brilliant satiric offer of Miss Widdemer's should keep Harcourt, Brace & Co.'s presses hot for some time to come. The cover design and the other illustrations, by William Saphier, will undoubtedly help the book along, though, like good wine, it needs no bush.

Miss Widdemer, who in private life is the wife of Robert Haven Schauffler, is at present in Southern California. She delighted the members and guests of the Verse Writers' Club of Southern California recently by giving readings from "A Tree With a Bird In It," as well as from other of her poems in more serious vein.

George Jean Nathan

Mr. Nathan's latest book, "A World in Falseface" is reviewed on this page of The Times today.

LITERARY GOSSIP

Shaw Desmond has recently arrived in the United States and is making an extensive lecture tour. He has spent several years in Ireland gathering material for a book which Charles Scribner's Sons will publish in April. It is to be called "The Drama of Sinn Fein." Besides having access to private documents of both the Sinn Fein and Ulster leaders, Mr. Desmond, by reason of his birth, being a Southern Protestant Irishman, is peculiarly fitted to give us an accurate history of the dramatic events which have occurred in that troubled country.

In March, Bobbs-Merrill will publish "The Great Grandmother," by George A. Birmingham. The author, who in private life is Cannon Hannay of St. Patrick's, Dublin, is known to his readers chiefly as an Irish humorist, and his novel, "Spanish Gold," and his play, "General John Regan," are familiar to many Americans.

John Calder, M.E., author of "Capital's Duty to the Wage Earner," just published by Longman's, Green & Co., is one of the leading engineers and industrial managers in the United States.

He was born in Scotland and is an honor graduate of the Royal Technical College of Glasgow. Before coming to this country he had fifteen years' experience in Glasgow as apprentice, foreman, inspector, chief draftsman and assistant manager in industrial plants.

Among his various activities in this country, he has served as general manager of works for the Remington Typewriter Company, the Cadillac Motor Car Company and the Remington Arms Company. He has also been manager of the employees' relations department of Swift & Co., who have about 70,000 persons on their pay roll.

In the chaos of Europe, American literature is flourishing. Germany is reading a first edition of Walt Whitman's complete works and trying to apply the "cosmic" poet's philosophy to life, while Paris has oversubscribed to a de luxe edition of Gene Stratton-Porter.

Keen interest on the part of New England newspaper men who are "in the know" attends the publication on May 12 of a book of reminiscences by Solomon Bulkley Griffin, the man who for forty years conducted the destinies of the Springfield Republican of Springfield, Mass., as its managing editor. Its title is "People and Politics: Observed by a Massachusetts Editor." When it is realized that Mr. Griffith habitually attended the national and Massachusetts State conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties from 1880 to 1916, the interest aroused by the announcement as made by his publishers, Little, Brown & Co. of Boston, is in part explained.

The London Times, in a recent editorial, says that Channing Pollock's "The Fool," a play about the spiritual struggles of a young minister, is going to be a second "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on the stage. Seven companies have been formed to take "The Fool" throughout the United States while it is still the leading success on Broadway. Arrangements are being made for traveling companies to play it under tents in small towns which have no theaters. Brentano's, who published "The Fool" in book form, announce a wide tide of popular interest in it far beyond that ordinarily aroused by a printed play.

An important historical work has just been published by J. B. Lippincott Company entitled "Modern and Contemporary European Civilization," by H. G. Plum and G. G. Benjamin, professors of European history at the State University of Iowa, in collaboration with Bessie L. Price. The work presents the persisting factors of the great war and has been written to fill a vital need of an outline of the nineteenth-century history that will bear a direct relation to the great war and its outcome.

Leon Bakst, the Russian artist, has a diversified genius. He came to New York in February to lecture on the history and art of dress. Most people who see Bakst's work are astonished by its sheer color, its fantastic imagination and the weird spirituality and sublimation of grossness which he has given to the human form. A historian would recognize that for all the imaginistic quality of his work, he is exact in the smallest points of historical costumery. His fantastic Russian peasants, his Judith holding the head of Holofernes, his mad maenads, show knowledge and historical soundness as the basis of his wild art. A rare book of Bakst's work, limited to 250 copies, is being published by Brentano's at $60.

The Pioneer Writers Guild of America, 9 Charles street, New York City, N. Y., will award the year's prizes, amounting to $600, to writers and artists whose work has never been published. The division will be made as follows: $150 each for the best short story, play, poem and cartoon. For rules, address the guild. Contest closes June 30, 1923.

A new edition of the popular "Brass: a Novel of Marriage," by Charles G. Norris, soon to be issued by E. P. Dutton & Co., will feature illustrations from the screen version of this novel, now in process of production by Warner Brothers. The Duttons also published "Salt: or the Education of Griffith Adams," by the same author.

Ten years ago the censors who then operated made it so hot for the John Lane Company, who published Theodore Dreiser's novel, "The Genius," that the publishers withdrew the book from sale after only a few copies had been distributed. Now, the Metropolitan Magazine, recently purchased by the Macfadden publications and added to their string, begins the publication of "The Genius" in that magazine.

It will begin in the February-March issue—the first under the new management.

That all war books are not dead is evidenced by the fact that the Century Company announces a new printing, the tenth, of Herbert Adams Gibbons's "The New Map of Europe." This book had a phenomenal success in the autumn of 1914; went into new editions in 1915 and 1916, and has been a steady seller ever since. No later book seems to have been able to replace it as a comprehensive study of the diplomatic history of the years immediately preceding the World War.

Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University of Kentucky, has rewritten and enlarged his well-known volume, "Modern Industrialism," to so large an extent that it is practically a new book. New chapters deal with the Far East, the growth of democracy in industry, etc. The changes in the text have made necessary new plates for the entire work.

PROF. MATTHEWS ON LOG-ROLLING

THE TOCSIN OF REVOLT AND OTHER ESSAYS. By Brander Matthews. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

To dwell in the midst of alarms is the horrid fate which has overtaken the elder intelligentsia. In this harsh world they stuff their ears in vain against the clamorous clatter of wild individualists acting as each other's press agents, while summoning the servitors of beauty to witness and admire the giddy gyrations of those who are attempting to dance without having rightly learned the ordinary use of their clumsy legs. Or they shriekingly exhort men to turn outraged eyes upon those who are busily daubing atrocious combinations of color upon canvas while innocent of any knowledge of drawing or painting, or who attempt to write poetry while entirely ignorant of the elements of versification. Whether the hubbub created by their vigorous celebration in print of each other's work or the brazen exhibition of the work itself is most distasteful to Prof. Matthews is uncertain. For not only does he detest their system of mutual "boosting," but he also holds ever more firmly to the creed that the first step to be taken by those who believe themselves possessed of native talent in any branch of art is to thoroughly master the technique of that art, and so assure themselves "that they know all that has been done in this direction, and know how it has been done, that they may thus be prepared to do something that has never been done." An aspiring artistic tyro might reply to this author's argument with the assertion that long and strenuous experimentation will enable a votary of any art to develop a technique all his own. But if art is long, life says this authority, is none the less short, and to travel for a time over a well-trodden path is in reality a short-cut by which the individual creator can more quickly reach his destined goal.

Perhaps the most interesting of this eminently readable series of essays is that one entitled "The Duty of Intellectuals." "Intellectuals" are defined as influential men, pre-eminent in one or another branch of art or of science who have not "descended into the arena of practical politics," but whose duty is—as Pomona of Rudder Grange once remarked—"to set on a pinnacle, like the Injun in our old geography book, a-lookin' at a railroad train," and tell the masses how to conduct the world's affairs. But Prof. Matthews spoils his argument in favor of the ability of this class as reliable leaders, by admitting that the Intellectuals of Germany, for instance, were united in favor of the late war of aggression. The astute Bernard Shaw long ago pointed out that eminent specialists in any and every line are as certain to be warped by their medium as is a banker or a blacksmith. The unpalatable truth, that sound sense and right reasoning power can only be developed by steadfast adherence to the Golden Rule, and that only those who advocate this obsolete and unpleasant law of life are the fit leaders of their people, continues to unpolitely obtrude itself upon the attention of the Intellectual as well as the man in the street.

The biographical essays in this collection, referring, as they do, to such personal friends of the author as Mark Twain and Theodore Roosevelt, are more penetrating and less personal than might be expected.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN SPEAKS

THE WORLD IN FALSEFACE. By George Jean Nathan. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

In his highly entertaining foreword, which is of amoeba-like inconstancy, Mr. Nathan first tells us that, "What interests me in life is the surface of life, its music and color, its charm and ease, its humor and its loveliness." If the author had thus explained his life's interests and there abode his readers with one accord would have been filled with overflowing admiration and intelligent envy; would have hailed him with holy joy as twin brother to the poet's humble bee, which passes through this world "seeing only what is fair, and sipping only what is sweet." In such a case this author and the "yellow-breeched insect philosopher" might have been only the modern exemplars of the pure idyllic temperament, shining by bright contrast with the sour majority of created beings. But, sad to relate, in the very next paragraph Mr. Nathan descends from his former complete and delightful objectivity and alights in a narrow, subjective coop in which: "All that concerns me is myself and the interests of a few close friends." Again, a few lines farther along the author again flies into the infinite inane, and calls down to us that, "My sole interest lies in writing." It thus appears that in the first phase this Proteus enjoys a purely impersonal existence, passing his days in rapt contemplation of the beautiful. In the second, like an East Indian devotee, he employs himself in gazing upon his own umbilicus, with an occasional glance at those of "a few close friends." In the third metamorphosis the sole desire of this changeling, like that of a Greenwich Village gosling, lies in "free and full self-expression." But after having fascinated and bedazzled his reader's eyes by these varied poses, Mr. Nathan finally alights on his feet in the open, and harangues his readers in this common-sense way, "I am merely a man, gifted, as I see it, with an admirable practicability; one who believes that the highest happiness in life comes from doing his job in the world as thoroughly as one knows how." This, at last, is a creed to which every true worker in the round world can heartily subscribe. But it has no glamour and one finds the author's sudden swoop to earth "cruel 'ard."

In future, therefore, we are to consider Mr. Nathan as a competent and extremely worth-while dramatic critic, who plies his trade with one eye on the players and the other on the audience—else he could never have written those departments of his book entitled "Men and Women" and "The World We Live In." Aside from his undeniable ability as a critic of the drama and a commentator on things theatrical, this author, in spite of an intolerable deal of piffle and flubdub, designed to attract the attention of a class that demands constant titillation of its risibility, of its love for scandal and of its sexuality, yet, as one of his eastern critics has already remarked, he is nevertheless "a serious, well-informed and thoughtful man." This by no means predicates that his ideas and opinions always approximate reality. He is too detached, too thoroughly dried and too unemotional to be correct more than seven times out of a possible dozen. One must strive to look into one's fellow-creature's brain and heart and so to think and feel for a time as he does, in order to interpret his life with anything approximating verisimilitude. And only an author with a touch of genius has sufficient humility illumined by emotion to do this.

But, within his limits, and allowing for his absurd and irritating camouflage, Nathan has sound and solid merits which escape the brainless intellectual porcupines who "play the sedulous ape" to his faults and pretenses.

NATURE'S LIGHT AND SHADE

A HIND IN RICHMOND PARK. By W. H. Hudson. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

This posthumous publication of the author-naturalist is a series of reflective chapters covering such varied subjects as the mind of animals, wind and its psychological effect, the natural life, ears in man and other animals, the migration of birds, some odd superstitions, music and its evolution.

The title is taken from the first chapter, which gives a fascinating account of the reactions of a hind that is lying quietly chewing its cud but is alert and responsive to every least sound and movement. In it Hudson sets forth his belief in regard to the minds of animals. He says in part: "A lifelong intimacy with animals has got me out of the common notion that they are automata with a slight infusion of intelligence in their composition. The mind in beast and bird, as in man, is the main thing. Man has progressed mentally so far that, looking back at the other creatures, 'they appear practically mindless to him. How funny it is to find these hard and fast lines set down by some modern biologists . . . The simple truth of the matter is that our instincts have been more modified and obscured, as instinct, in us than in the lower animals. But though the instincts of animals are less modified and obscured, they are also interwoven and shot through or saturated with intelligence."

Edward Garnett in his introduction well expressed the peculiar charm of Hudson's writing: "Hudson," he says, "originated a new pattern of nature book, one that gets on to the printed page nature's light and shade, her variability, elusiveness and mutability: he catches, so to say, the very breath of changing wind and weather and cross hatches his diverse picture with a network of human associations."

Whose little book of phantasy, "Kai Lungs Golden Hours," has just been published by George H. Doran Company.

RECENT FICTION

THE GOOSE MAN. By Jacob Wasserman. Authorized translation by Allan W. Porterfield. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.

Any book by the author of "The World's Illusion" is bound to attract attention, for it is undoubtedly one of the great books of the decade.

"The Goose Man" is a lesser work, with fewer characters than "The World's Illusion" and with little of its panoramic effect. But it is far from being ordinary or mediocre. It was written several years before "The World's Illusion," but is now first translated into English.

The story is primarily a study of genius in its struggle with the conditions that would engulf and destroy it. The hero is a musician named Daniel Northafft, who from earliest boyhood refuses to conform to the rules laid down for him. With no one to understand or sympathize with him, he still keeps doggedly on his own way. He undergoes all sorts of hardships and suffering, only now and then consenting to earn his living by accepted and possible methods. Under the obsession of the creative urge, he becomes ruthless, hard, invulnerable to normal human sympathies and emotions.

He is not contented to go it alone, but takes on responsibilities as do other men, and then becomes indifferent to them. First Gertrude, the ascetic, timid girl who is awakened to life through Daniel's music, and then her lovely sister, Eleanore, comes under his sway. Each feeds for a time his all-devouring need, and each in turn suffers the neglect that his absorption in himself and his genius makes inevitable.

There are many characters in the book, each presented with an amazing distinctness and truth, so that we get from it a vivid, if somber picture of peasant and village life in Southern Germany during the second half of the nineteenth century. With all its somber quality there is no pessimism in the book, though there is a fatalistic cast. With two or three exceptions, the characters are all dour and disagreeable, given to morbidity and to bitterness. Among these Eleanore shines forth "like a good deed in a naughty world."

In the end Daniel, through suffering and sickness and bitter frustration, comes to a realization that no man lives to himself alone, not even though he be a genius.

THE CHAIN. By Charles Hanson Towne. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

It is disappointing that a man of Charles Hanson Towne's nimble wit, with the colorful material of wide journalistic experience, should make nothing more interesting of biographic material than this indifferent novel. The story of a young poet going to New York and fighting through to editorial success has possibilities of high order both for human interest and literary insight; but the author has recorded the history of his hero's career with a facile conventionality little better than stereotyped. Can it be that the activities which occupy editors of popular fiction magazines atrophy their own creative faculties, turning all life into the savorless blurr of paper-and-ink fiction?

THE MIRACLES OF CLARA VAN HAAG. By Johannes Buchholtz. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

A story of provincial life in Denmark written with gentle satire and touched with a freshness of local color. The psychology of the characters is, however, remote to the American reader, and the action is so sketchily developed as to defeat a sustained interest. Clara Van Haag, the neurotic wife of the local Director of Customs, after years of travel, joins the husband, whom she does not love at his sequestered post. She seeks diversion in the role of fairy godmother to favored villagers, chiefly the family of her girlhood sweetheart. But her selfish sentimentality makes ducks and drakes of her good intentions. She finds that even the first lady of the village is unable to cope with human nature. She does succeed in the end in bringing to happy mating two of her proteges, working in their lives the miracle which she failed to achieve in her own.

THE QUEST. By Pio Baroja. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

This is the first volume of a trilogy, "The Struggle for Life," announced by the publisher as being comparable with Nexo's "Pelle the Conqueror." There is in this first volume slight evidence for flattering a comparison. The chief character, Manuel, son of a serving woman in a miserable lodging-house, moves through a dusty fog of human dregs. There is a drabness and confusion of crowds in which the hero merges and becomes blurred. Manuel has nothing of the inward urge which thrust Pelle forth from the mire of social [illegible] character and [illegible] been lost in the [illegible] translation which [illegible] to be a [illegible] interest of even the [illegible] reader. A ROMANCE OF POLITICS

In "Hot Corn Ike," James L. Ford Faithfully [illegible] the Political Conditions Existing in New York in the Early Eighties

BY THOMAS F. FORD

HOT CORN IKE. By James L. Ford. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

A tale redolent of the atmosphere of the eighties, when the professional reformer first burst upon the ken of these United States. The action takes place in the old Eighth Assembly District, on Coney Island, in the days when that now famous resort was but a collection of fishermen's huts, with a few summer resort concessions and an occasional saloon or beer hall. But while the action is localized the story is one that had a wide application at the time, and for many years following. For the scenes described—the underground political intrigue, the building up of a political machine through the passing out of labor tickets, each of which entitled the holder to a job on some public work, the free use of money and booze to swing elections, and the almost supreme power of the saloon keeper as a political boss—were all part of the system by which unscrupulous politicians the country over maintained their sway.

While much of what Mr. Ford writes about is not new, though the slip cover claims this for it, it is nevertheless a very interesting and intriguing tale. A tale told with sympathy, in which we meet flashes of wit, gleams of humor and now and then a slantwise irony that gives the story vigor and verve.

That Mr. Ford has had a close intimacy with the events he pictures, it takes no seer to understand. For they [illegible] accurate, one of the [illegible] ing none other than [illegible] John Y. other ceremonious functions are usually enclosed in two envelopes, the inner one being left unsealed and bearing only the names of the persons invited, while the outer one is used for the name and mailing address.

In writing the guest's name on the cards and in addressing invitations it is well to remember that where the full name is written on the envelope addressed to the guest, it is not repeated on the card inside. In other words, the persons who are sending the invitation have their full name on the card inside, but not the guest's full name. In answering invitations the guest should use his full name on the answer but not that of his potential hosts.

The formal acceptance to any invitation, whether it be to dinner, wedding or dance, is the same.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton French

When accepting or refusing an invitation, do not simply write across the card, "Mr. and Mrs. John Frog accepts" or regrets, and never use the word "decline." The note of regret should be written thus:

engagement prevents their accepting
Mr. and Mrs. Brown's kind invitation for dinner on Tuesday the eighth of February

In accepting an invitation one should always repeat the hour, day and month so that in case of a mistake, it may be rectified and perhaps prevent one from arriving some time before or after the actual date set. But in declining an invitation it is not necessary to repeat the hour.

If a widowed father entertains for his daughter, his name alone appears for her wedding, but often for other occasions when his eldest daughter presides over his household, his and her name appear, as for dinners, receptions and at homes.

A young lady at the head of her father's house may, providing she has reached "the years of discretion," issue her own cards for a tea. However, it is never proper for a very young lady to invite gentlemen in her own name to visit her or to come to dinner. Such an invitation should come from the mother, the father or chaperone. But the young lady may write an invitation in her mother's name.

HINTS FOR MEN

When a man entertains his invitations should always read "requests the pleasure of" and never should he describe himself as "At home." There is a story told of a certain very wealthy bachelor, who sent out invitations reading "At home." He included Mrs. Asquith who was visiting here at the time, and she replied in a most characteristic manner:

"Mrs. Asquith is indeed glad to hear that Mr. —— is at home, and sincerely hopes he will stay there. But will he be good enough to explain of what possible consequence is that to Mrs. Asquith?"

Of course, I cannot vouch for the authenticity of the story, but I will confess that if it is true, I think it a piece of unnecessary though amusing rudeness.

TELEPHONE INVITATIONS

Many people are using telephones instead of cards now, but one must be very careful how the telephone message is received and relayed, particularly in the matter of giving one's message to stupid butlers or maids. Therefore it often becomes necessary to telephone twice to make certain that your message has been received and properly given.

The telephone has come more and more into use as a medium for giving invitations, even for elaborate entertainment. For a dinner-dance last winter, to which hundreds of guests were asked, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt gave most of the invitations by telephone. Also Mrs. Vincent Astor used the telephone for a smaller dance which was formal in all other respects.

One doesn't even crack a social observance by using the telephone for this purpose, but I have known of some very annoying mistakes which resulted from it. If you follow this method, I suggest that you insist on having the message carefully repeated at each end. Some of my acquaintances have been decidedly embarrassed when certain regrets turned out to have been intended to be acceptances, and the reverse.

OF INTEREST TO ARTISTS

dium shown for a week or two at Kanst's galleries. The name is new to us, and so are the pictures, for this artist handles aquarelle somewhat differently from those we already know—not better, perhaps, but certainly with a touch all her own, and therefore worthy of our careful regard.

Her "touch," indeed, often approaches the neatly punctilious one of the pointellist, with the result that her landscapes are generally vibrant with color and light. They are quietly and pleasingly alive. They are, moreover, very well drawn, though I understand from the artist's sister, who is in charge of the exhibition, that Mrs. Griffith has never taken formal lessons from anyone in art.

Grace Allison Griffith is a resident of Santa Rosa and she is therefore a close neighbor and friend of that wizard in nature, Luther Burbank. She has painted many charming vistas from Mr. Burbank's garden, foregrounds of massed flowers with low-lying hills in the far distance. Some of her most successful pictures are from this garden.

She also has painted the fine old oaks of Sonoma county, setting them on tawny sloping hillside against skies showing the pale gold of early afternoon. This gold, indeed, is perhaps used a little too often in the artist's pictures, for we are not prepared to believe that the skies of California hold a predominating note of lemon yellow.

Particularly attractive, to me at least, are the four studies made in Hawaii. Here there is no lemon yellow, and I was not surprised when informed that Mrs. Griffith's work around Hawaii was declared, by residents who "know," to be more truthful in coloring than that of most artists of European or American experience. She gives us, from Hawaii, "Japanese Flower Market," and "Fishermen and Nets;" from the Luther Burbank garden, "Molten Fire and Zinnias" and "Larkspurs and Molten Fire"—the molten fire, of course, being a brilliant flower, and one coming, if I remember right, from Japan.

A modest and enjoyabe little exhibition.

A Painter of the Subconscious

An unusual collection of paintings will be exhibited in April in Los Angeles Museum. These canvases are unusual because they are like nature plus—plus mind, thought feeling and life. This is art created by motion in color under subconscious direction.

The creator of this new art—for it is in reality a new art—is Charles M. Crocker, an American who has been called a painter of thought. He has also been called a "Dynamist" and when questioned why that term was used, he said:

"All qualities of art reside in the artist and not outside him. Art should use nature and form as a language through which to express the soul. One who copies nature is still learning his A B C's. One who uses nature and form as a means to an end, creates. Great art should be simple and true; even children should understand it.

"All I try to do in my art is to express nature, life and myself. It is said that I have found a way to do this in color that is dynamic and full of motion. That's why they call me a 'Dynamist.' People feel motion and life in my art, so I must have put it there."

Los Angeles will see these canvases before they go East from where they will be taken to European galleries. Those wishing to view a new angle of art—paintings of motion and light through which emotions and thought are conveyed—should see these canvases without fail.

Little Oil Paintings

Twenty-seven "little oil paintings" by Frank Coburn make up a very charming exhibition at the MacDowell Club. They occupy a room commensurate in size with the paintings themselves, and the whole effect is a pleasant intimacy that induces the art lover to linger and look, look and linger—exactly as a true lover should.

The artist was quite right in calling these tiny canvases "little pictures" instead of sketches, for though painted directly from nature, they have the compositional interest of pictures. Coburn always chose the advantageous point of view.

All these little paintings are from Los Angeles Harbor and its neighborhood, giving us sea, ships and shore with all their multitudinous accompaniments, and therefore we find no lack of variety in the exhibition. Coburn studied light and color, and their interplay on his subjects. The little oil paintings are alive with this iridescent play. You will enjoy them.

Wamsley's Sculptures

Some of the recent sculptures of Frank C. Wamsley will be shown at the studio of Finn Haakon Frolich, 1444½ Wilcox avenue, Hollywood, every day from 3 to 6. This evening a reception will be tendered the sculptor from 8:30 to 10.

Prizes for Prints

The prize-winning prints in the fourth annual exhibition of International Print Makers at Los Angeles Museum are as follows:

"The Sardine Barge," etching by Armin Hansen, gold medal of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. "The Wayfarers," drypoint by Alfred Bentley, Mrs. Henry E. Huntington purchase prize of $100, the print to go to the permanent collection of the Los Angeles Museum. "East Side Interior," Mr. and Mrs. Alanson Bryan prize of $25 for the best American print. "The High Mill," etching by Leonard R. Squirrel, silver medal offered by the Print Makers of California. "Ben Ami," soft ground etching by William Auerbach Levy, bronze medal.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY MYRA NYE

"Many times has the statement been made that wars will end when the women of the world band together and work for peace. Can we devote our energies to anything more important than preparing ourselves for intelligent participation with women throughout the world in this greatest of all crusades — mobilizing for world peace?"

These words of Mrs. William A. Fitzgerald at the beginning of the club season set the keynote for the theme for the year—world peace—when, with the State federation motto in mind, "Strength united is stronger," the women united to promote a sensible sentiment concerning this accomplishment.

So, at the twenty-second annual Los Angeles district convention, which begins April 2, next, in San Luis Obispo, the theme throughout the three-day session will be world peace, and woman's share in bringing it about.

Mrs. Seward A. Simons is chairman of international relations, and is now outlining a peace program.

The other departments, as far as it is practicable, will be related to this theme. They include American citizenship, Miss Mary Workman, chairman; community service, Mrs. M. H. Pehr; motion pictures, Mrs. A. A. Hummel; education, Miss Ida Iverson; California history and landmarks, Miss Edith McDivitt, Santa Paula; conservation, Mrs. J. B. Lorbeer; home economics Mrs. S. L. Page; country life, Mrs. L. B. Doan of Burbank; department of fine arts, Mrs. Randall Hutchinson; legislation, Miss Flora Belle Nelson; political science, Mrs. Helen Matthewson Laughlin; child welfare, Dr. L. B. Phelps; co-operation with ex-service men and women, Mrs. H. V. Wurdeman; Indian welfare, Mrs. Mabel L. Chilberg, Azusa; public health, Mrs. Elizabeth McManus; industrial and social relations, Mrs. W. D. Crocker; emblem, Mrs. George Salm; endowment, Mrs. Harold Dewey; extension, Mrs. Clayton R. Taylor—all of whom or their representatives will appear briefly before the convention body. All of them unless otherwise mentioned are from Los Angeles or the immediate vicinity.

The Los Angeles district includes Inyo, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and Ventura counties, each county president being a vice-president of the board, with Mrs. John C. Urquhart as president. There are listed 168 clubs with a membership of nearly 30,000 women, which is more than half of the membership of the entire State.

Mrs. Urquhart is closing her second term of office and is therefore not eligible for re-election. She is, however, a candidate for the State presidency with Dr. Mariana Bertola of San Francisco the only other candidate in the field. So far as can be learned Dr. Bertola, who is now vice-president of the State federation, has not received enough indorsements from clubs to make her an official candidate and there have come to the Southland conflicting rumors as to her having withdrawn from the race.

Mrs. Charles H. Toll, past president of the Ebell Club, is the only candidate now in the field for district president to be elecetd at San Luis Obispo. There are two strong candidates, each with strong indorsements, for the vice-presidency. They are Mrs. J B. Lorbeer of Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club, who is chairman of conservation of the district, and Mrs. J. M. Matthews, president of West Ebell Club. The latter has the greater number of club indorsements and was first in the field. Mrs. Lorbeer has the advantage of having been a member of the board of directors for the district. This promises to be the liveliest contest in the election.

Mrs. Warren Holden of Los Angeles is a candidate for auditor and Mrs. Daniel Baptiste of Somis for treasurer.

The four clubs which will be hostess club for the convention are: The Atascadero Woman's Club, Paso Robles Woman's Club, Home Culture Club and San Luis and Woman's Civic League of San Luis.

The Southern Pacific Shore Line limited No. 77, leaving Los Angeles at 8 a.m. Monday, April 2, will carry a special car for club women stopping at intermediate points. This train arrives in San Luis at 3:10 p.m. with the convention opening with an informal evening session. The program will close with an evening program Wednesday in time for all delegates to get the train leaving at 12:25 a.m. which will carry a sleeper reserved for the club women; berth $3.75 and fare each way $8.10 with a special rate offered if there is a total of 150 persons. Already more than that number have signified their intention of going in addition to may auto parties.

Mrs. Boesche has given this information for those who are planning to go and asks that as soon as delegates receive their credentrials at the convention for them to deposit their receipt certificates received from the ticket agent with her in the credentials room. If this is done each one may receive the benefit of the reduced fare which on the return journey will be only $4.05.

Weekly Preview List

The week's list of films previewed and indorsed by the motion-picture department of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, Los Angeles district, is as follows: "The Flirt," "Grumpy," "The Famous Mrs. Fair," "The Voice From the Minaret," "Minnie," "The Toll of the Sea" and "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

MacDowell Club

The MacDowell Club of Allied Arts announces a reception to artists and art lovers, Wednesday from 3 to 5 p.m. in the MacDowell Studio, Tajo Building, First and Broadway.

Neeta Marquis, the gifted Southern California poet, will read several of her original poems selecting some of her exquisite studies of nature as a ruling theme. This order will be specially appropriate for the occasion as the art exhibit, now on the walls of the studio, numbers magnificent landscapes from the brush of Charles Partridge Adams. The exhibition is one of the finest ever shown by the club. Mr. Adams brings with him the atmosphere of the snow-clad peaks, the sun-drenched hills and valleys, and the wind-swept plains. Most of his masterpieces are paintings done in the Rocky Mountains, among the noblest aspects of nature. He has been honored by receiving the gold medal of the State University of Colorado, the gold medal of the National Mining and Industrial Exposition, and the recognition of many other institutions. He presents a unique catalogue of his paintings wherein each subject is correlated with a couplet from the great poets which interprets the spirit of each separate picture. The exhibition is composed of oil paintings and water colors. The beauty of expression and coloring is unusually fine.

Musical numbers by prominent artists will vary the program, and a social season will be enjoyed by members and their guests.

The Adams exhibit will remain on the walls for a month, and visitors will have the opportunity to examine it every day from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The MacDowell Club is planning an active month for April. The president and her executive committee have decided to emphasize the work of women in the arts during the month, and speakers who specialize on the subjects involved will be provided, as well as attractive musical programs.

Ebell Club Programs

The Ebell program for the current week is of a decided musical quality. The regular meeting on Monday will be a musicale given by Alice Forsyth Mosher, soprano; Laura Reed Yaggy, violinist, and accompanied by Mrs. Guy Bush. Laura Reed Yaggy, a recent comer to Los Angeles, has appeared extensively in the East and in the Middle West. As one of the Philharmonic artists this season, Mrs. Mosher was enthusiastically received.

"Robert J. Burdette—His Message," which has just been published by his widow, a former Ebell Club president, will be introduced to Ebell at the books and current literature department on Wednesday in a discussion by Mrs. Chester C. Ashley. "Life and Letters of Walter Page," which has been for several months one of the best sellers, will be reviewed at the same time by Mrs. John Stearns Thayer. At this same meeting Mrs. Frances Taenzer will speak on current poetry and Mrs. George H. Reimers will discuss current magazines.

Mukerji, whose lectures at Ebell Club given under the auspices of the Ebell scholarship committee, have been widely attended by the general public, will give his last lecture on Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. In this lecture, on "The Ethical Changes in India," he will consider India's present outlook on temperance, marriage, political morals and international relations.

Dominant Club Luncheon

At the luncheon of the Dominant Club recently there were many honor guests including Titta Ruffo, Mischel Levitzki, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Karle, Miss May Peterson, Dean Lansberry of Oregon, Mrs. Bracken, contralto, a visiting artist from Chicago, Mrs. Thilo Becker, Mrs. Horace Day, Mme. Katherine Fisk and Homer Grunn, composer. It was a delightful affair with Mrs. Gertrude Parsons, presiding.

The Cosmos Club

Lovers of oriental rugs and students of art enjoyed a most interesting lecture on the "Paintings of the Orient," which was Mr. J. H. Minnassian's program Tuesday at the Cosmos Club at the Ebell Clubhouse. A display of his rare rug collection illustrated each subject. Mrs. Helen Chalmers Kingston gave a dramatic reading of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, in costume, which added color and realism to the afternoon. Mrs. Clarence Pease of Pasadena outlined a few humorous cartoons which embraced Turkey in her fifteen-minute current-events discussion which preceded the lecture and afforded considerable amusement.

Luncheon was served at noon with Mrs. W. W. Sherer, Mrs. George Simpson, Mrs. Nelson Bledsoe, Mrs. Katherine Moore, Mrs. J. C. Miles, Mrs. W. A. Burke, Mrs. Geroge Winsworth, Mrs. T. Edgar Harvey and Mrs. S. S. Northington serving as hostesses. Mrs. Pease entertained a table of eight, Mrs. J. C. Huggins of fourteen and Mrs. Mabel D. Greer of twenty guests for the occasion.

On Thursday Mrs. Hugh J. Crawford held a St. Patrick's celebration and luncheon at her home in Twenty-first street for the members of the philanthropy department.

Stories to be Criticized

Tuesday the Photoplaywrights' Club will meet in the Brack Shops at 7:30 p.m., room 805. A short story written by one of the members, will be read and criticised. Mrs. Catherine D. Lipman, a member, will give an informal talk on "The Man in the Editor's Chair." Mrs. Lipman is a writer of dramas having had a number produced, and also is a short story writer. She has been for a number of years a leading member of well-known Eastern dramatic companies.

Sigurd Russell will speak on the 27th inst. on "Moving Pictures in France and Egypt." Mr. Russell is a member of the high school faculty. These meetings are open to those interested.

Federation News

In her letter of the 15th inst. to all club presidents Mrs. H. F. Boesche, corresponding secretary for the Los Angeles District Federation asks that all clubs which are now holding their elections in April or early May, do so, so that the list of officers in all clubs, will be complete before the State Convention at Eureka. If this is done, the directory issued at that time will be correct.

Special directions for the District Convention at San Luis Obispo, have been sent to all club presidents, with both train and road directions, creating a feeling of anticipation as April 2 draws near.

There is a notice of the president's council which will be held at the Woman's Improvement Club, corner of Malabar and Clarendon streets, Huntington Park, Friday, the 23rd inst.

Club to Discuss Mexico

The Woman's City Club will meet in Philharmonic Auditorium, Monday at 1 p.m. "Why do we not recoginze Mexico" will be the subject of the discourse by Col. John J. Hawes.

The membership luncheon of Tuesday was well attended and the report given of 112 new members for the month of February.

Mrs. Urquhart to Speak

The Wednesday Morning Club will be entertained at an open meeting next Wednesday by Dudley Bernays, baritone, accompanied by Edwin Tinney. Mrs. John C. Urquhart will speak on "The Next Step." The hostess at the luncheon will be Mrs. Mattie Gooding.

Last Wednesday Mlle. Daisy Jean rendered several beautiful cello solos. E. C. Parmenter entertained with readings and impersonations.

The club gave an enjoyable dance and buffett-supper Saturday.

Head of School Speaks

Fred C. Nelles, superintendent of the Whittier State School, lectured Tuesday morning at Highland Park Ebell Club on "Whittier's Contribution to the Wealth of the State." Mr. Nelles brought with him some of his boys, including Boy Scout Troup, No. 2, who not only entertained with band music and songs, but also gave illustration of knot tying, bandaging and stretcher-making. Mr. Nelles's splendid ideals were unfolded, the present cottage plan being one of them. An important objective named was the transfer of Whittier to the State Department of Education.

Mr. James Anderson, baritone, gave a very pleasing recital of songs before the lecture, with Miss Mary Rose Clark as accompanist. At 1 o'clock the Bible section was addressed by Mrs. H. Norton Johnson on "The Tabernacle in the Wilderness." Next Tuesday is Public affairs day and at 10 a.m. Mrs. Clover E. Stith will give a selected group of songs. Rev. G. Bromley Oxnam, pastor of the Church of All Nations will lecture on "The American in the Changing World."

The English section meets at 12:45, and Miss Isabelle M. Hanbury will continue her lecture on "The Art of Cultured Speech and Voice." The art section at 2 p.m. will have as program Miss Frances Gearhart, who will present an "Exhibition of Block Prints." The art section of South Pasadena Woman's Club will be special guests.

Passion Play Discussion

The Catholic Woman's Club will hold its regular semimonthly meeting on the 21st inst., at 2:15 p.m.

Dr. Eugene Francis Storke will talk on the "Passion Play of Oberammergau" and will illustrate his lecture with many interesting pictures. There is also a musical program to follow the lecture as follows:

"Come Unto Him" (Messiah) (Handel) Mrs. Thomas J. Murphy; "There's a Green Hill Far Away"

People and Their Troubles

THE LAST WORD.

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Very Shelvy

Having lived a good deal of my blameless life in ship's cabins, in tents up-country, in convents with cubicle beds, two pegs, and three shelves for each girl, I confess to a passion for shelves, cupboards, lockers, pegs, drawers, pigeon-holes, pantries and bins. So when we bought our present home, obviously designed by a sympathetic female with a proper understanding of "a place for everything and everything in its place," I bought the shelves and cupboards, while father bought the view and the garden.

I had a perfectly scrumptuous time spreading us out all over the house, even the baby has a large fancy locker all to himself.

But there is always a fly in the ointment. Positively, nothing brings home to one one's paucity of this world's goods than too much space to keep them in. Our wardrobe began to look painfully meager. Somehow my stock of house linen did not begin to require that generous array of shelves provided for their housing. Our table silver, arranged neatly in those numerous sideboard drawers, seemed peculiarly inadequate.

And as for our books—those books which in a small house had been an eternal embarrassment, and which we had confidently felt would form a most imposing library with proper display—well, they just don't make any showing at all. So behold me the proud possessor of miles of enticing book-shelves, to say nothing of a couple of bookcases and numerous fancy book-ends, gaping at me at every turn, crying out for books.

Mournfully I recall my reckless generosity when the call came for books for the soldiers, my enthusiastic response when club libraries begged for books. If I had been living in this house then they would not have got one of them.

So for months now we have been bringing home little dollops of books, by no means exercising that collector's nice discrimination which we would wish to evince—but most any sort of literary effusion between decent covers that would not utterly impair our intellectual reputation. Even so, they don't seem to make any impression at all upon those gaping shelves.

Then came Christmas. Of course one doesn't for a moment expect that anyone is going to give one presents—certainly not—but we did rather hope that if they should just happen to—well, you know—why books would be very acceptable.

We were not neglected. No, indeed. One of the very first utterly adorable presents to arrive was a very stylish pair of book-ends. Then a friend who was leaving town sent along a dear little bookcase I had once admired—remembering my embarrassing lack of book room when she had last visited me in the small house. It has five shelves and can take care of 100 books.

Then came another well-packed box. After I had unwound five layers of wrappings—yes, quite right, more book-ends. Very lovely book-ends. I will pass over the rest of the details, but suffice it to say that one of my most delightful jobs after Christmas was writing to thank dear thoughtful generous friends for book-ends, bookcases, book shelves. And not one single solitary soul had sent us a book of any kind.

We have just had a jolly little burglary. Really, had the fellows been connoisseurs, they would surely have stolen some of those handsome book-ends. But they didn't. They took everything all around those empty appealing book receptacles, even ash trays and picture frames, but never a book-end can we list among our lost treasures.

But this morning I received a letter from a grateful soul who says he simply must do something for me, so he is making me a lovely pair of beaten metal book-ends, every beat a labor of love!

And a friend of mine who is going away wants to know whether I could find house room for a large handsome mahogany bookcase—she has stored all the books, so I needn't be bothered with them!

Oh, well.

This is what I feel I may call an embarrassment of wealth without being accused of violent exaggeration. I compute that I now have shelves and book-ends enough to comfortably take care of about 2000 books. It sort of looks as though we hadn't a book in the place. Yet the modest library we now possess once crowded us out of house and home, had to be tucked away in boxes under beds, overrun the dining-room sideboard, the mantelpieces, the window-sills, even the shoe shelves.

In a small house we seemed so bookish. Now we feel very much like that chorus girl who said no, she didn't want a book, she had one. So when a gentleman arrived on my door step a few minutes ago and asked audience of me, he was astonished to see my almost violent emotions, when he courteously explained that a neighbor had given him my name as a person to whom he could probably sell a wonderful line of convertible book-shelves . . . . Thank heaven, he escaped with his life. My maniacal laughter occasioned him to perform miraculous feats of dexterity—otherwise, who knows, I might now be languishing in the County Jail consulting anxiously with Drs. Hoag and Williamson with a view to gaining testimony that I am a moron with the intellect of an 8-year-old girl.

And to think that once I yearned for nothing so much as book-shelves. And clothes closets.

Ah, yes, clothes closets. Up to the time of the burglary, we managed to give these an impression of being reasonably well filled. But the burglars had a passion for clothes, our clothes. So now these too, stand grimly empty.

A house full of cupboards and shelves—and nothing to put in them.

Oh, well, anyway, the housekeeper is delighted. Dusting empty shelves is a much simpler matter. But if anyone else sends me a present of book-ends my capacity for fond gratitude will be disastrously strained.

Question: Why don't apples grow in Florida? N. O. E.

Answer: The apple is a fruit which demands a rest period. The warm Florida climate does not permit this.

Q.: What is the name of the stake driven into the ground to tie stock to? J. W. E.

A.: The dictionary says the tethering or picket pin, but the usual term applied out West is picket pin.

Q.: May a private citizen accept a title from a foreign government? W. J.

A.: There is nothing in the Constitution to prohibit a private citizen accepting a title of nobility, office, or present, from a foreign government. In order to receive a title of nobility, however, it would be necessary to swear allegiance to the country making such grant. This would make necessary a renunciation of American citizenship.

Q.: What is the estimated worth of the Russian crown jewels? R. C. E.

A.: Counting them merely as precious stones and metals they are said to be worth $400,000,000. Probably they would bring a much greater sum if sold, owing to their association with the royal family of Russia.

Q.: Which is proper—picnicing or picnicking? L. J. C.

A.: Originally the word picnic was spelled "picknick." When an additional syllable is added it is customary to retain the final "k" used in the early form.

Q.: I hear that there is an estate in chancery in England to which I am heir. What step should I take? M. K. W.

A.: A report by the American Consul-General in London, Mr. R. P. Skinner, issued March, 1920, stated that contrary to popular belief, there are no great estates belonging to Americans being held in the Court of Chancery at the present time. However, for definite information you may write to the High Court of Judicature, in London.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES"

Service Pleased Him

LOS ANGELES, March 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I do not quite agree with Mr. Dovoler's opinion in regard to bank tellers. I, too, had a small draft from the East, and upon opening an account with a local bank I was met by its tellers in a most courteous and businesslike manner. And what little transactions I have had with other banks lead me to believe that the personnel of the Los Angeles banks are nearly all hand-picked for conscientiousness, zeal and courtesy seem to be their characteristic.

And about filing up tax reports gratis, they may do so in Florida, where, not having much else to do, want to keep practicing in arithmetic.

If Mr. Dovoler would step in one of those iron cages in a downtown bank for a day, where a mastodontic volume of transaction takes place, I would be willing to bet a dollar against one of King "Tuthem Brand" cigars that his opinion would be changed to a considerable extent.

ALFONSO PEROZZI.

Is It the Same?

SANTA ANA, March 14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In a recent issue of The Times there was published a letter from Mr. Briggs, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, in which he very ably defends the league. I believe that there are thousands of readers of The Times who would like to know as to whether or not the Anti-Saloon League and the Prohibition party are one and the same. A great many people seem to think that the name Anti-Saloon League, is merely a smoke screen used by the Prohibitionists.

After looking over the returns of the votes cast for the various political parties at the last Presidential election I find that the Prohibitionists were last on the list with only 7 per cent of the vote cast. It seems from this that while the temperance people are not in favor of saloons neither are they in favor of Prohibition. Total vote cast for all Presidential parties at last election was 26,961,627. Prohibition vote cast, 192,433.

Corrects Our Reporter

Los Angeles, March 15.—[To the Editor of the Times:] Your valuable paper is noted for its correctness, especially in the local reports which are written in such purity of style and admirable diction that they may be termed classics. But, there is a story (with an emphasis on "story") which is unusually bright and shows the thoughtlessness of the able-bodied reporter; also that of the "copy butcher" who is supposed to think and correct the blunders of the reporters who have no time to think. It is this: In today's issue, part I, page 17, column 2, there is an interview with an old woman, headed "Here on a visit after fifty-three years," in which she is quoted as saying that at that time Los Angeles "consisted of a church and two stores." An "immigrant wagon" is hauled in to give effect to the story.

Had the reporter taken a first or even a second thought, he would have seen that fifty-three years ago the town of Los Angeles had a population of about 6000, according to the directory. Any of the several local histories would have shown that there were more than "one church and two stores."

Of all this I can testify. I first came to this pueblo in the summer of 1870. That is fifty-three years ago. At that time there were three hotels, the Bella Union, a two-story brick, built in the early "fifties;" the Lafayette, a two-story brick, built a few years later, and the Pico House, on the corner of the plaza, which had just been finished. It was the finest hotel in California, those of San Francisco not excepted. The Mexican quarter was liberally supplied with stores. The American "quarter" extended from the plaza to about Second street. There were business houses along Main, Spring, Los Angeles, and Commercial streets. Some of the buildings were of brick. There were two daily newspapers—the "News" and the "Star." Every Protestant denomination had a church building. This in addition to the Catholic church on the plaza. A fine church building stood on or near the present site of the county Courthouse.

Ordinarily, no one gives any attention to an interview with a woman, especially those of the reminiscence nature. But, it seems that a reporter should sometimes use his thinking apparatus. And it is stranger still that the aforesaid "copy choppers" are equally deficient.

J. M. SCANLAND.

Looking for Notoriety

LOS ANGELES, March 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I was much interested in the critical article in your Sunday Times by Lillian C. Ford, entitled "Inspiration or Insanity," in reference to Sherwood Anderson's novel, "Many Marriages," as it so happens I had arrived at somewhat the same conclusions, having read part of the work in the magazine, the Dial; in fact, I was so incensed at the impertinence of the author that I wrote to the editor of the Dial a few weeks ago protesting against foisting such a negligible book upon the general public.

Now, I have no puritanical objection against the nude itself, but my criticism was a protest against the sheer crudity and lack of ordinary common sense on the part of Sherwood Anderson. No one but a man of addled mind could have been so obsessed by nudity and acted so wantonly foolishly as the hero of the story, John Webster. But are not most novels self-revelations?

I will enter into no further particulars, as to do so might tempt certain readers to purchase the book to satisfy their sensual inclinations. Possibly the little I have written may tempt them to do so, anyway.

Either Anderson must be qualifying for degeneracy or is coldly calculating to gain notoriety and thereby a larger sale for his book.

At the best there is nothing new in Anderson's ideas, as one can find them far better and more wisely expressed in the literature of the world.

I have no doubt that many critics will have nothing but praise and adulation for the work, and until the critics reveal a higher sense of values and moral balance, and condemn whole-heartedly such books, such will continue to be written in spite of the efforts of cleaner-thinking writers.

Pleads for Birds

TUJUNGA, March 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Is there no law protecting the sweet song birds of California? If not, why not? I have been writing back East, where the cold blizzards were raging, telling of the bright sunshine and the sweet songs of the mocking bird, but alas! I see boys with air rifles on our public streets shooting for mere fun our sweet singers and our birds sing no more.

Hermosa Beach Club

A fine program of music and drama was given at the club rooms by the Woman's Club of Hermosa Beach Monday afternoon.

It was arranged by Miss Miriam Meredith, chairman of the drama section. Miss Ellen Galpin of Los Angeles, opened the program with an interesting account of the various groups as related to her community theater work and closed with an amusing performance by one of the puppets brought from the theater.

The piano numbers of Margaret Rose Sheet of Los Angeles touched the heartstrings of her audience. Mrs. Sheet was enthusiastically encored.

Mrs. Ora Johnson of Los Angeles followed with a reading of the drama "Miss Mercy" and her contribution was a delight.

The programs given monthly are providing high class entertainment for the women of Hermosa Beach. Much of the success of the club is due to the president, Mrs. Francis E. Rice.

A movement is on foot now by the members of the club to provide a home of their own.

NEWSY NOTES

BY THE NEOPHYTE

Scandal! The criminal life of the artist's colony exposed! Last week at the Ebell Club, Miss Crowe, a representative of the California Society of Miniature Painters, declared that "nineteen out of forty-nine miniature painters were hung upon the walls!" Think of it! Or better—don't think of it—it's too dreadful. Ugh, can't you see them, the fatal nineteen?

We have always thought of artists and peace together. They seemed to stand for harmony and all that sort of thing! So many live down at Laguna where the soft waves lull gently in the sunlight. And now their reputation is gone. It will take more than a few lulling waves to make us believe in them again, these people who get hung upon the walls!

One wonders what the crime was for which they suffered! Was it their paintings! Miniatures are really such delicate, lovely, harmless things, that it seems hard to believe that they inspired such a wholesale hanging. Miss Crowe didn't even hang her head. The nineteen were enough to hang I suppose, but still you would imagine she would be a wee bid ashamed. You would have thought that they were martyrs from the proud way she stated the hideous fact! She seemed to pity the other thirty who escaped the "noosy" fate.

Girls, girls what are we coming to? We let Clara go racing around China, or Mexico or wherever, it is she is racing, and yet we hang nineteen miniature painters upon the walls!

Deep Breathing

Deep breathing is necessary to a presiding officer! The Neophyte realized that last Monday at the Ebell Club. No one was envying Mrs. Long as the meeting was called to order, and was wondering how she would survive the ordeal. Breathing did it.

The speaker of the afternoon was Dhan Gopal Mukerjil! That name makes fearful enough reading without pronouncing it. The whole club was waiting for the moment when Mrs. Long would have to do it for the first time. It came! Mrs. Long simply reached way down inside and drew out a big, deep breath and out the name came as pert as you please. Not a waver nor a mistake. It was intact and correct. She could never have done it without breath, lots of breath, breath well under control! There really should be an examination for correct breathing given each candidate for the office of club president! Think of the humiliation if someone else with a compressed diaphragm had had to introduce Mr. Dhan Gopal Mukerjil! It would then have had to be done in three jumps and that would be too dreadful!

Club Has Hard Time

What a life—what a life! It is rather abstruse, anyway, without making it worse. Heaven pity the members of the Friday Morning Club, it's hard life they live. The building of the clubhouse was hard enough work, but now Mrs. Lobingier has declared that "the members of this club are living the by-laws."

It's hard enough to have them without living them. The Neophyte has always thought of by-laws as someting which stayed in the club vault, along with the constitution and the list of members to be brought out at significant moments in the club's history, but to be ignored the rest of the time. But not the Friday Morning Club! They live them. So says Mrs. Lobingier, and she knows.

Unusual Speaker!

Mrs. Lobingier introduced the last speaker at the Friday Morning club as a combination of "sanity and enthusiasm!" What greater tribute could she pay? What more could be said? That combination is the rarest of rare. One might say that it is practically extinct except for the fact that it has seldom existed. Miss Drew really ought to be exhibited. We all thought so.

I doube if anyone knew the first few words she said, for we were all bent on looking at her and studying her, and envying her. The sane ones of us were envying her enthusiasm, and the enthusiastic of us were longing for her sanity. She was Siamese twins in perfect working order, looking so very attractive and healthy and normal, that it made one gasp.

Sanity these days seems to indicate a general slowing of the heart beats, and the footsteps, with the result that there is a hardening of the fun arteries, and absolutely no enthusiasm while those of us who are enthusiastic—well, I refuse to malign myself! The only time I strike normal is in the swinging from the heights to the depths and back again. I expect that others are like me, and so we all envied the lady who combined sanity with enthusiasm.

Russian Music

Russia in the music world is as spicy and full of variety as the salad course of a dinner. Though comparatively young in music annals it is being much discussed these days, and will be again on Thursday morning, the 22nd inst., at the Ebell Club music section meeting with Mrs. A. B. Cooke, presiding as curator.

Dr. Alexis Kall, founder and head for many years of the Petrograd People's Conservatoire, and during the last two years a resident here, where he has given such brilliant lectures on the symphony orchestra concerts, will give a talk on characteristics of Russian music.

Flora Myers Engel, who has been the delight of Los Angeles music audiences because of her beauty of singing, will give songs by Rachmaninoff and Bleichman and Mrs. W. A. Mabee will sing songs by Gretchaninoff and Rimsky-Korsakoff. A short talk on community music will be given by Mrs. J. J. Carter of Hollywood. Following the program there will be a luncheon with distinguished speakers on topics of interest to music lovers.

Whittier W.C.T.U.

The annual installation of officers and a reception to new members of the Whittier W.C.T.U. were held at the First Baptist Church, Whittier, Friday afternoon and was largely attended.

Mrs. A. H. Gregg, president, of the organization and a member of the State board, gave a most happy address looking forward hopefully and confidently to the coming year, and she also reviewed the year just passed. She has been interested in the Whittier W.C.T.U. for many years and is in close touch not only with local conditions, but with the world-wide status of the Union, having recently returned from the international held in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Wallace Trueblood, wife of Dr. Trueblood, pastor of the First Friends Church of Indianapolis, Ind., led the devotionals, which opened the brief business meeting. Mrs. W. H. Crook, chairman of music for the local organization, was in charge of the special music, and Mrs. D. C. Andrews, program chairman, presented an interesting entertainment. Following the meeting, at which the newly elected officers were introduced, an informal reception was held for the new members who have joined during the last few months. Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue, hospitality and social chairman, was in charge of the social hour, and with her committee served refreshments.

The officers for the coming year are Mrs. A. H. Gregg, president; Mrs. Albert Schutt, vice-president; Mrs. O. O. Young, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ada Adell, recording secretary; Mrs. Carrie Kemp, treasurer, and Mrs. Elizabeth Bogue, assistant treasurer.

East Whittier Woman's Club

Following a time-honored custom, the East Whittier Woman's Improvement Club celebrated its annual birthday luncheon at the clubhouse Wednesday afternoon. The affair was of unusual interest, owing to the fact that it was the first meeting held in the cozy clubhouse since its recent remodeling and refurnishing. The floral appointments were elaborate and lovely, and generous praise was bestowed upon Mrs. Sam Mendenhall, Mrs. O. W. Maulsby and Miss Gertrude Luttle, members of the luncheon committee.

Beach Club Activities

All taste should be pleased at Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club this week, beginning with the recital on Monday by Kathryn Prather, whose clever readings captivate all hearers, and John Westervelt of the golden tenor voice, both young artists, being residents of the city by the sea.

Wednesday, which is "section day" offers a variety of treats. In the morning the drama section will read two comedies, "The Case of Mrs. Kantsey Know," by Myra Williams Jarrell, being an excruciating take-off on a certain type of club woman, and "Trifles," by Susan Glaspell. Child-welfare and travel sections also meet and the literature section offers a spirited debate by some of its ablest public speakers on the age-old but until Wednesday unsettled question whether Bacon or Shakespeare wrote the plays attributed to the latter.

Thursday sees the opening of the two-day baby show under the auspices of the child-welfare section. Babies from one day to one year being examined the first day and, from one to three years the second. Physicians from Los Angeles and Santa Monica will be the judges of points, no prizes other than "honors" being given.

D.A.R. Meet

Miss Louis Wells, national president of the Woman's Overseas Club, spoke so instructively and delightfully before the last meeting of Cabrillo chapter D.A.R. that the chapter passed resolutions indorsing the work of the Woman's Overseas Club and recommending their recognition as a national organization by the Congress of the United States. These resolutions will be indorsed by the State officers of the D.A.R. and by them sent to Washington for indorsement by the national Congress D.A.R.

The next meeting of the chapter will be at the residence of Mrs. G. M. Adams, 6715 Yucca street, Hollywood, Wednesday, the 21st inst. Business meeting for members only at 2 o'clock, program at three when Miss Hill, president of the local organization of overseas women, will outine their work in Los Angeles.

Torrance Club

A Parliamentary law class of twenty members, which meets on the second and fourth Mondays of the month, has been formed by the Woman's Club of Torrance. The program for the meeting tomorrow will be one appropriate to St. Patrick's Day. Mrs. Helen Chalmers Kingston will give several readings and it is expected that there will be an out-of-town singers, who will give several Irish folk songs.

Election Board Members

At the last meeting of the Friday Morning Club Mrs. Andrew S. Lobingier, president, announced Miss Carolina M. Darnall, Mrs. Cleveland Hicks and Mrs. M. E. Jenkins as members of the election board. Nominating petitions are now being formed for the officers. A woman can be a candidate if she has twenty-five names on her petition, and fifty votes will put her on the ballot.

FAMOUS DANSEUSE AS INSTRUCTRESS

Marion Warde has secured the services of Dona Roma as teacher of the danse in the Marion Warde Dramatic School until her contract for appearance in European theaters commences in the early fall.

Dona Roma is internationally known as a dancer of note, and at an early age had the distinction of appearing several times before the kings of Spain and England. She specializes in personality dances and is especially renowned for her vivid dance creations.

An interesting program was given by entertainers from the Warde school on Friday evening of this week at the parish hall of the Church of Our Lady of Loretta. The occasion was the celebration of St. Patrick's Day, and the program consisted of a one-act play, songs, dances, and readings. Appearing on the program were Beatrice Marietta, Elvira Tanzi, Gladys Schatzkey, Mary Elizabeth Karr, Marion and Alma Garvin, Hilda Hess, Hugh Griffin and Walter Farnum, Jr.

VAN RAALTE Silk Stockings
for Springtime

"Because She Loves Nice Things"

The woman who buys Van Raalte Silk Stockings knows they are made of the finest silk, fashioned in the most expert ways, and designed to delight the most critical eye. All these facts she accepts, but the real reason she insists on "Van Raalte quality" is just because she loves nice things.

Van Raalte is pre-eminent in Silk Stockings for General Every-day Wear for Afternoon Wear for Evening Wear for Sports Wear

Say "Van Raalte Silk Stockings" to the saleswoman if you really want the best.

Plain but Smart

The wonderful quality of the silk in Van Raalte Stockings gives to even their plain styles an out-of-the-ordinary distinction. With lisle tops, $2.00 to $3.00; all silk, $3.50 to $5.50; out-sizes $3. to $3.50.

Paris Clocks have Charms

For the woman who likes just a small open insert Van Raalte makes Silk Stockings with Paris Clocks in many designs. $3.00 to $6.50.

Stripes are Smart

Glove Silk in two-toned stripes and a variety of other patterns is used for an interesting group of Van Raalte Silk Stockings priced from $2.50 to $4.00.

The Simple Clock

Van Raalte is a past-master in the addition of that little touch of embroidery that makes a silk stocking smart. Embroidered styles $3.50 to $5.00.

Which To Choose

The lady with many pairs of Van Raalte Silk Stockings enjoys the delicious difficulty of deciding which to wear first.

Of course, if she's going to the Country Club that simplifies matters a bit—she will choose a pair with embroidered clocks to match the plaid in her new Rodier skirt or, perhaps, a pair of those two-toned stripes that seem inspired with slenderness.

Should tea or bridge allure her, there are Paris clocks galore, or the daintiest of hand-embroidered motifs.

Possibly she plans a walk in tweeds and oxfords, in which case she may well choose a plain dark shade, leaving for the evening the sheerness of chiffon and the delicate lace designs which lend such old-time grace to ultra-modern ankles.

A Most Important Accessory

Stockings are a veritable index to tastes—an index that all may read. They may be as simple in design as one's purse or the occasion dictates, but they must be faultless in fit and even in weave.

If elaborate, their patterns must show the restraint of good taste, they must suit the costume and the hour to perfection.

Van Raalte Silk Stockings are designed for women who know and love nice things—ask for them wherever you shop.

N.B.—Look for the colored MATESTRIPE on all Van Raalte Thread Silk Stockings. Helps you mate pairs and identify qualities.

Just the Rug You Have Wanted
*at a price unbelievably low

Probably you have seen them, in the windows of all the stores, or in the homes of your friends. And you have thought them wonderfully attractive, with their lovely, soft colorings and fascinating designs. But, of course, you imagined that they were very expensive.

Instead, they are remarkably low in price—even the largest sizes. You can, in fact, get two Kimlark Rugs for about what you expect to pay for a single rug.

Can they really be, at such a price, as durable as they look? Indeed, yes. They are woven by a special new method, into a fabric of wonderful softness and pliability, but with a sturdy resistance to wear that is really amazing.

Moreover, they are finished on both sides, so that every Kimlark Rug gives double wear. Put them anywhere in the house—living room, dining room, hall, bedroom or sun parlor; they will wear for years under the hardest use. And they will keep the beauty of their design and coloring, the smoothness and softness of their weave, as long as they last.

You can see these finest low-priced floor coverings in any good store. Don't fail to price them before making a single rug purchase. You will find that for less money you can have prettier rugs than ever before.

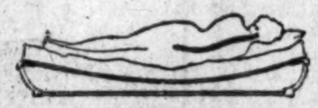
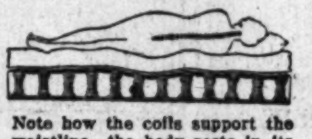
Illustrating the effects of correct and incorrect sleeping equipment

Hindered Relaxation



Note upper curve of the body—hip and shoulder almost together, ribs telescoped inside the hip. Then note lower line of the body—hips and ribs stretched apart. See the crescent-shaped spinal column through which all nerve sensation is transmitted to the brain. Imagine the tension on millions of nerves protesting to the brain! And the strain on the muscular system caused by the hammock-shaped surface of the bed. This posture is the greatest cause of unrefreshed sleep and the result of the wrong type of bed.

Perfect Relaxation



Note how the coils support the waistline—the body rests in its natural curve lines—the spinal column is held in proper alignment. The bed is correct because, no matter what the position of the sleeper the tension of the springs carries the body straight, never allowing it to sink beyond the natural curve lines. Springs are so tied that each coil acts independently of the other, insuring perfect-fitting qualities—and complete relaxation. The Mattress has the proper resilient filling and weight.

"Individualized" Sleeping Equipment

Of Barker Bros.' Own Make

Tired?

Most people are, this time of year—a result of the winter's wearisome activities and manner of living and the first balmy days which make us yield to the natural craving for rest, called "spring fever."

If you find yourself waking up these mornings feeling weary and discouraged, you don't need to resort to the old "sulphur 'n molasses" treatment or long for a spring vacation, for you can get the rest you need by purchasing modern, scientific sleeping equipment made to fill your individual requirements and conforming to the natural laws of sleep. Your "tired feeling" will vanish when you have the correct bed, which authorities say, is better for worn-out nerves than a month's vacation.

MR. JUST THE AVERAGE MAN.

Do you want to join a big friendly organization that will help build a fine permanent business of your own in 1923 and without other investment than your time?

We want a few salesmen. We cannot offer the large sums which some concerns promise; you won't be able to retire after you have been with us a few years. Ours is a hard business, and our men earn all they get, but if you are a real salesman and you can sell without samples and you are not afraid to meet the prospect, you can clear from $300 to $1000 every month you work with us.

This is strictly commission proposition and applicants therefore should have some funds to tide them over the initial period.

We will help you get in touch with the prospects who have answered our advertisements, and others.

To spare-time workers here is a clean-cut opportunity and a chance to increase your income considerably.

Call during the day, 9 to 5 or 7 to 8 any evening; ask for MR. McCRISTLE, Suite 631 Consolidated Realty Bldg.

THE FIELD MANAGER of old established international manufacturers of quality paints, varnishes and building repair specialties, will be in Los Angeles for several days this week to select three salesmen for high-grade traveling positions, Southern California territory. To call on corporations, factories, railroads, large property owners, etc.

Compensation plan includes salary (based on sliding sales quota), commission, bonus and traveling expenses.

Only real salesmen (experience our line not necessary) with a reputation that will bear investigation need apply.

Application by letter only, and to receive attention, must be complete as to age, lines sold and how you sold them, so that an immediate interview may be arranged. Also give you telephone number. Address R. J. FRANS, Hotel Clark. (No telephone calls answered.)

Trucks and Delivery Cars.

OPERATING EXPENSE

is often a serious drawback to the purchase of a used truck. A truck being purely a commercial proposition, the cost of operating must be paid for from the truck's earnings. GENERAL MOTORS are now selling at reasonable prices several used trucks whose operating expenses should be the lowest possible. These trucks have been thoroughly examined and have been put in first-class shape. Best consider your operating expense BEFORE you buy, then come to GENERAL MOTORS.
We are internationally known as a concern that always gives "The Best for the Least."

Fourth Century of Fruits

Works of reference show that last year was the fourth centenary in England of two of their most valued fruits, the apple and the plum. They were introduced to that country in 1522, and may be said to have kept close company ever since, the combination of plum and apple in preserved and culinary form being well known, particularly to those on the battle fronts, who sang of the glories of plum and apple jam in the early stages of the struggle, and gradually became less enamored of it. The apple came from Syria and the plum from Italy. Apples, of a kind, were indigenous to this country, but the fruit as we know it came in 1522. No doubt we owe the introduction to Richard Harris, fruiterer to Henry VIII, to whom we are indebted for so much in the way of fruit and vegetables. He planted a great part of the original orchards of Kent. In 1688 the number of varieties was placed by Ray at seventy-eight, and now there are over 2000. Experts in pomology might question, however, whether this could be demonstrated on distinct varieties.

Fourteenth Century Inn

One of the oldest and best-preserved fourteenth century inns in England is the George Inn at Norton St. Philip, a picturesque little village near Bath. It is a half-timbered house, with walls three feet thick, and was licensed as an alehouse in 1397. And it has historic interest, as the Duke of Monmouth and Oliver Cromwell slept beneath its roof—the Duke of Monmouth on the night of June 26, 1685, just before the battle of Sedgemoor. There is a small oak chair of the same period which was used in this bedroom, and the massive oak door is instact and shows the same strong iron bolt which used to secure it in those far-off days. Also may be seen some oak settles and several deep oak cupboards; and the rooms contain much fine old paneling.

Two Dates on This Ship's Deck

New Year's Day began on the other side of the world twelve hours before it began in London. It begins, as every day begins, at the 180th meridian of longitude, known as the date line. The line passes entirely through the sea, a little to the west of Wrangel Island and to the east of the Fiji Islands. A ship crossing the line as the new year dawns will have its bow in 1923 and its stern in 1922!

DR. SUN COMES DOWN TO EARTH

Chinese Leader Discards Utopian Ideas

Learns to Play Politics with Rivals

Disbanding of Army Price of Peace

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, 1923, Public Ledger.]

SHANGHAI, March 17.—Sun Yat-Sen presents a curious phenomenon of a completely changed personality; his intellectual processes seem to have undergone a revolution. This psychological phenomenon is, of course, usual with revolutionists when they achieve power. The "doctor," as he is called by the English-speaking Chinese, is no longer a rabid doctrinaire, the insister upon the fulfillment of abstract ideals, the rainbow chaser. He has become more opportunistic, if such an awkward word might be used to denote a closer adherence to realities, a more placable appreciation of conditions as they actually exist in this country. In the past Dr. Sun had a keener sense for potential possibilities; today he knows the actual situation.

The new Dr. Sun is in a measure the result of maturity and of a wider experience with his own people. In 1912 he was familiar with the world, but knew little of China. He had traveled largely in Europe and America, but nowhere in China. The Chinese people he idealized. He could see only their suffering under the oppressive and predatory foreigners. He was unfamiliar with economics and could deal only with politics. His political ideals and systems were the result of experience in foreign countries, not of practice in China. He was able to achieve inspirational leadership because he was permeated with the liberal spirit of the West, whereas Liang Chi-Chao failed because he was controlled by the stoical fatalism of the East. The Sun Yat-Sen whom foreigners met and knew and praised or ridiculed was a Westerner in everything but those racial characteristics which are prenatal and which cannot be obliterated by a generation outside of the country.

DEFEATED STRATEGISTS

The new Sun Yat-Sen has had a different experience. Since 1911 he has been in actual contact with political, economic and psychological conditions in China. Since 1919 he has had to play the keen game of Chinese politics with and against such masters at the game as Hsu Hsih-Chang, Tuan Chi-Jui, Little Hsu, Chi Hsi-Yuan, Tsao Kun, Sung Hung-Yi, and lesser lights who live and batten upon the political party which in China is so serious during these years. All of them planned to use him, and he has actually used all of them. He remains pre-eminent because in all his dealings he has remained morally unsullied and because his hands have not been soiled by dishonest money.

During this period he has been principally in China, and a large part was spent in this city, which is in reality the metropolis of the country. He has seen how things actually work and and he has come to know his own people and their capacity. It must have been a serious matter for Dr. Sun to discover that democracy may be an inherent human right, but that its exercise and success depend upon experience and capacity. For when Parliament actually began to function after the tremendous effort made by Dr. Sun to bring it into power, it proved incapable of legislating for China and developed into a garrulous tea party, and oscillated between one leader and another until it became the sport of militarists, whom it was hoped it would first check and eventually drive from power.

SEEK NEW SOLUTION

When, therefore, one talks to Dr. Sun about Parliament and the Constitution, he is unusually weary and evasive. One can see he is seeking another solution for China's problem, a solution fundamentally in consonance with the characteristics and ideals of the Chinese people.

In a recent interview, concerning the abolition of extraterritoriality, the remission of the Boxer indemnity, the rendition of the Mixed Court, and other specific issues, Dr. Sun declared:

"These questions deal with details which can be considered when China has a government. China can only have a government when the troops have been disbanded. What we have today is a makeshift which exists because the troops maintain it in power. We are being governed by soldiers and their leaders, not by a government. I, therefore, will not discuss these problems now. I can think only of the one question facing China, and that is the disbandment of troops."

What he says today inspires the deduction that the time of Sun Yat-Sen's recognized leadership is near at hand, for what has kept him out of Peking has been not his lack of support, but his insistence upon unrealizable ideals in existing conditions.

Delta Upsilon Club Planning Annual Dinner

Herbert Wheaton Congdon of New York City will be guest of honor and principal speaker Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at the City Club for the annual dinner of the Delta Upsilon Club of Southern California. He is national secretary of Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

Others on the program include Dr. Flavel S. Luther of Pasadena, former president of Trinity; Dr. Remsen Du Bois Bird, president of Occidental College; Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe, Rupert Hughes, Charles F. Stern and Art Fournier. Harry Carey will be toastmaster. Two hundred alumni of the fraternity are expected to be present. Harry Minor is president and Al R. Chandler secretary of the club.

GIVES BIRTH TO QUADRUPLETS

Three Sets of Twins Are Included in Twenty Children

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHARLESTON (W. Va.) March 17.—At 37 years of age, Mrs. Homer McMann of Belburn is the mother of twenty children. The latest, quadruplets, were born recently and now Mrs. McMann, though in a critical condition, is making a remarkable fight for life, her physician said. He added it was almost certain the four babies, each weighing five and one-fourth pounds, would live. Mrs. McMann has borne three sets of twins. Six children have died.

PET CAT IS FAITHFUL TO BABY FRIEND

Loses Life in Fire, but Child May Live Because of Animal's Action

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—Peddy, a pet cat, stuck to Max Lipschinisky, 6 months of age, and died in the flames which seared the scalp and body of Max so that Gouverneur Hospital surgeons say his chances of survival are slight. Max Sidney, 4, and Gussie, 6, were left in bed with the cat when Mrs. Jacob Lipschnisky left her fourth-floor home at 93 Ridge street to buy the family dinner. Gussie, half an hour later, ran screaming into the room of Mrs. Annie Rosen, a neighbor.

"Come quick!" she cried incoherently. "I have something awful to show you." Mrs. Rosen found the Lipschnisky bedroom full of flames. Her screams caused some one to call Hook and Ladder Company No. 18, and Capt. Valentine Rennselaer, with other firemen raced to the rescue.

They found Max in the flaming sheets. One snatched him up and patted out his burning night-gown. Another pulled away Sidney, who stood choking and helplessly beating on the bed.

"My cat!" shouted Gussie and Sidney. The firemen searched. Peddy was found dead, burned to death, under the bed. His body had rolled off when the firemen picked up the infant.

Maybe the cat, which stuck by Max to the last, kept the fire with its own body from the throat and mouth of the baby, and only part of his body not scorched. How the fire started was not learned.

OUR LAWS WORRYING JAPANESE

Journals Claim Growth of Anti-Nipponese Sentiment in Western States

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, Feb. 23. — Asking whether it is really true that America desires to be on terms of friendship with Japan, two of the largest Tokio newspapers, the Hochi and the Yorozu, have long editorial disserations expressing worry that the immigration policy of the United States is not an act that can be termed friendly.

The Hochi says that anti-Japanese movements continue to be as active as formerly, and that these movements which "two years ago were confined to the Pacific States are now gradually spreading to other Western States, and it is now reported that no less than eleven States have formed anti-Japanese legislation of one form or another."

The new immigration restrictions, it is alleged, are pointedly aimed at the Japanese, and the paper says it is worried, as, under these circumstances, it would be very difficult to say whether American sentiment has improved toward Japan.

The Yorozu, commenting on the immigration bill, states that "there is a consistent effort being made to legalize anti-Japanese measures," and that this cannot be regarded as a friendly act. It says action must be taken before matters become worse and expresses a hope that Mr. Hanrihara, Japan's new Ambassador to Washington, will take the matter up.

UNITED STATES GOAL OF JEW DEPORTEES

NEARLY THOUSAND DRIVEN FROM POLAND COMING TO THIS COUNTRY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—Between 800 and 900 Russian Jews of those ordered deported from Poland after April 14 will come to this country by way of the free port of Danzig, it was announced by Max Strauss, New York manager of the Baltic American Steamship Line.

Arrangements have been made, Mr. Strauss said, for friends and relatives to give the deportees $1 a day each while they are in Danzig. The immigrants will wait for the new quotas in this country to become effective July 1, and come here under the Russian quota of 21,613.

Agents of the Baltic-American Line have been authorized to accept money for maintenance and transportation of the immigrants from friends in this country and forward it to the immigrants.

POPPY SALE PLANNED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) March 17.—Seventy-five thousand cloth poppies were ordered from France by Frank Strickland, commander of Frank P. Adams Post, V.F.W. They will be sold on the streets of Kansas City, Kan., by workers from the post and the women's auxiliary Saturday, May 26. Profits from the sales will go to the aid of disabled veterans.

INVENTION WILL HUMANIZE WAR

Sleep to be Weapon Used in Next Conflict

Will Anaesthetize Armies in Mass Formation

Sneezing Soldier Cannot Shoot Enemy

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, March 17.—Killing is not the real need in war. It is only necessary to defeat the enemy, not to kill him. Don't try to destroy armies—just put them to sleep for a few hours each day and they will surely be defeated.

These bits of counsel are from "The Reformation of War," a book just published here by Col. J. F. C. Fuller, who won the Distinguished Service Order Cross in the last war. Fuller's argument is, briefly:

"War will never be abolished. The thing to do, then, is to humanize war. Make it more effective than ever, at a far smaller cost in life and money. The war of the future will be a war on morale, and the weapon which will be most useful in destroying the enemy's morale will be gas.

SURPRISE ENDED

"When a big-game hunter starts out to shoot lions, he does not equip himself with a bassoon and then, when a lion is met with, walk round the beast for a fortnight playing on his instrument. He does not thus comport himself, since all idea of surprise would vanish. The element of surprise is likewise counted out by prolonged artillery preparation before the infantry goes into action.

"There is no reason why gases as weapons should be of a lethal nature. In the last war they were frequently so because soldiers and the civil suppliers of soldiers had become so accustomed to think in terms of killing that when gas was proposed as a weapon, they at once looked upon gas in the form of miscroscopic bullets.

"Gas will eventually mean the abolition of infantry. It will be done by putting infantrymen to sleep or by reducing them to helplessness by paroxysms of sneezing.

SLEEP VS. DEATH

"Airplanes with machine guns can destroy infantry like vermin, but gas is better. Let us picture . . . . the infantry toiling up the road. The airplanes approach. They fly at an altitude safe from bullet range. They open their chemical tanks and a fine spray of fog envelops the column of men. Suppose this gas is only an anaesthetic; then the whole column will just go to sleep. What general on earth is going to win decisive battles if whole divisions and corps are going to be put to bed for several hours at a time?

"A depot drenched with a sneezing mixture would cease to function and a mile of roadway or railway drenched with a strong 'tear' gas would become impassable for days—much more so than were it smothered in barbed wire or the rails removed.

"If a future war can be won at the cost of two or three thousand of the enemy's men, women and children killed, in place of more than 1,000,000 men, and, incidentally, several thousand of women and children, as was the case in France during the last war, surely the aerial attack is a more humane method than the existing traditional type."

WILL OPEN NEW COURSE IN WRITING

Repertorial and Editorial Work to be Taught by Extension Division

Prospective newspaper writers are being offered an opportunity to acquire a technical as well as practical knowledge of this profession in a new study course in journalism to be opened this week by the State University Extension Division.

The class in news and editorial writing will be conducted by Hugh McIsaac, A. B., and it will feature instructions in the sources, gathering and writing of news under the following subdivisions: The reporter's beginning; sources of news; reporting; interviews; general assignments; writing the story; the writing of editorials. The course includes practical work to develop the newspaper style of writing.

This new course will be opened Tuesday evening, meeting on the tenth floor of the Metropolitan Building from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Other classes scheduled to begin this week include classes in scenario writing, French and Spanish, elementary electricity and geography.

The language courses are for people who have some knowledge of French and Spanish.

The special course in geography, under the direction of George McCutcheon McBride, Ph.D., will provide a valuable knowledge of Latin America; a study of climatic conditions, natural resources, present development and cultural characteristics as affected by geographical conditions.

Information relative to these and other study courses can be obtained at the State University Extension Division, Junior Orpheum Building, 815 South Hill street, or by telephoning 822-401.

SEARCH LAIR OF NEBRASKA MONSTER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

OMAHA, March 17.—In an effort to determine the truth of numerous reports in the past two years that the alkali lake near Hay Springs is inhabited by a hideous prehistoric monster, citizens of that place have begun preparations to drag the lake next May or June. Because of the publicity given the appearance of the animal many people have visited the lake.

INDIANS' WRONG ROUSES YOUTHS

Woodcrafters Pay Levy on Aged Squaw

Blackfeet in Extremity is Shown

Iniquities Are Charged to Bureau Head

BY JAMES WILLARD SCHULTZ,
Author of "My Life as an Indian"

The boys and girls of the Western Woodcraft Association of Los Angeles are keenly interested in the welfare of the Indians and very thankful to The Times for printing in full in Part I of its Sunday edition Representative M. Clyde Kelly's recent speech in Confress, in which he made a straightforward denunciation of the Indian Bureau, oppressor of the tribes and waster of millions of dollars of government funds.

The young people of this association are in particularly close touch with the Blackfeet Indians of Montana and are doing all that they can to alleviate the condition of the destitute, tubercular tribe. They received yesterday a letter from a member of the tribe, a woman of 60 years, in which she inclosed a notice that she had received from the superintendent—agent—in charge of the Blackfeet. It is as follows:

Department of the Interior,
United States Indian Service.
Browning, Mont.
Nov. 28, 1922.

WET-TEETH SPOTTED BEAR,
Heart Butte, Mont.

The Reclamation Service has just notified us regarding the amounts due on the various irrigable trust lands of the reservation for the 1922 construction repayment charges. We find that there is charged to your land, Allotment No. 58, the sum of $19. You should arrange to make settlement of this bill by December 1, or as soon as possible thereafter. Payment should be made through this office.

Very respectfully,
[Signed]
F. C. CAMPBELL,
Superintendent.

In her letter to the Western Woodcraft Association—written for the old woman by a resident of the reservation—she stated that $19 was more money than she had owned in all her lifetime, that she had received annually for some time notices similar to this one and would doubtless continue to receive them in years to come; that she never could pay the charges accumulating against her land, and the result would be that it would be sold by the superintendent to some white man who could pay the assessments on it.

PAY LAST ASSESSMENT

Yesterday the members of the Western Association sent Superintendent Campbell a bank draft for $19 and plainly written upon it was, "For payment of 1922 construction charges on Wet-teeth Spotted Bear's Allotment, No. 58." And now the association intends to learn what the back charges on the allotment are, with the hope that it can pay them. But this old woman is only one of a large number of the Blackfeet who will eventually lose their allotments because they can never pay the assessments that are piling up against them.

In his remarkable speech, Representive Kelly condemned this costly and useless irrigation system that has been foisted upon the Blackfeet, but he by no means told the whole story of it.

Although it was expressly stated in the last treaty that the Blackfee made with the government that theirs was a grazing country, and, therefore, their funds should be largely expended in aiding them to become independent stock raisers, the Indian Bureau spent the last of their tribal fund, more than $900,000, in constructing an arrigation system upon their reservation without their consent.

The bureau knew, and the members of the commission which made this treaty with them, knew that in their high country where summer frosts are frequent, farming, the raising of even the hardiest crops, could never be successfully carried on. And even this vast sum was not sufficient for the completion of the system, so the Indian Bureau is carrying on the work with "reimbursable funds," that is, the annual expenditures for the work are charged against the Indians' lands, and that places each allotee of the tribe hopelessly in debt.

The Blackfeet once had $3,000,000. With that vast sum a competent man could have long ago made of them successful stockmen. Their guardian, the Indian Bureau, has expended all of their money, pauperized them, placed them in debt, and so starved them that they are fast dying from tuberculosis. The one object that the Indian Bureau had in using the Blackfeet funds for irrigation work was to increase its number of employees, and so increase its power.

The fight that Representative Kelly, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, The Times, Sunset Magazine and various Indian Welfare leagues and associations are now waging against the Indian Bureau, with the hope of abolishing it and freeing the Indians, is by no means a fight against President Harding's administration, nor any administrtion preceding it, Democratic or Republican. Nor is it a reflection upon the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and his predecessors in that office. An Indian Commissioner is but a figurehead, absolutely powerless to abate the iniquities of his bureau.

No, the Indian Bureau is a thing apart from any department of the government. With its 5000 white employees and 6000 Indian employees, and its annual waste of from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 of public funds, it is, as Representative Kelly said in a former speech, "a nation within a nation." Those responsible for its activities are a few men who have managed it for many years, and chief of these is E. B. Merritt, Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs, as is proven by the reports of the Congressional Committees on Indian Affairs for years past.

When called before these committees, the various Commissioners of Indian Affairs have invariably been unable to answer most of the questions asked them, and have referred the committees to Mr. Merritt as the one man who could supply the desired information. Therefore, Mr. Merritt must be the Indian Bureau.

BUTTERFLY OF FASHION IS SCORED

British Judge Caustic in Comment on Woman Who Lived for Style Alone

BY JOHN STEELE
[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, 1923, by the Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 17.—"The dress of woman has ever been a mystery, and sometimes the calamity of the ages."

This is the text of a discourse on the verdict in favor of Capt. J. V. Nash, who was sued by Callot Soeurs of Paris for $3500 for dresses furnished his wife, whose ambition it was to be the best-dressed woman in London, although her husband's income was only $4750 a year.

Mrs. Nash is the daughter of an American woman who had been married twice before and divorced. The evidence showed that she was wildly extravagant on dress. She had fifty evening gowns and ordered shoes by a dozen pairs at one time and stockings at $6 a pair.

When her husband found this out he forbade her to pledge his credit. The judge today gave a verdict in his favor on the ground that a wife has no right to pledge his credit except for necessities.

Some of the judge's remarks were:

"She sought to shine in less intellectual sections of society, where a woman's worth is measured by the frequency with which she changes her dresses. Decoration was her being, her aim, her credit. Trying to be the best-dressed woman in London is much the same as a life of idleness, vanity and folly. I observe no record of an act of beneficence, no trace of unselfishness or aid to others. She computed her enjoyments of life by reckless indulgence and extravagance. Those who make dress the principal part of themselves will in general become of no more value than their dress."

Yaqui Indians Take War Trail to Seize Land

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MEXICO CITY, March 17.—It was reported from Vera Cruz yesterday that the Indians in the Tenampa and Huatusco district are on the warpath against land owners, their war cry being, "Land for the Indians." They fired upon the houses of Tenampa, threatening death to numerous small planters who refused to vacate their lands immediately. The terrified City Council telegraphed, imploring immediate aid, to the President of the republic, the commander of the Federal troops in the State of Vera Cruz, and the Mayor of Vera Cruz City.

The revolting Indians, styling themselves as true, original agrarians, refuse to recognize the agrarian grants by the government agrarian commission.

ALASKA RAILROAD HAS WATER TRAFFIC PLAN

BOATS WILL BE OPERATED ON TANANA AND LOWER YUKON RIVERS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, March 16. — The Alaskan Railroad will begin the operation of passenger and freight boats on the Tanana and lower Yukon Rivers in Alaska this spring, according to an announcement made today by the Department of the Interior.

The boat service will start about the middle of May with the breakup of the ice upon the river, and will continue until the winter freeze-up. Two sternwheelers will ply the river between Nenana and Holy Cross, connecting with the government railroad at Nenana, where both passengers and freight may be transferred.

Arrangements have also been made with the Postoffice Department for the carrying of the United States mails by the new boat service, the mail pouches to go by river steamer from Nenana to Holy Cross and then be transported by motor boat to St. Michael.

This is the first time that the Department of the Interior has attempted to operate river traffic in connection with the Alaskan Railroad.

AMERICA OBTAINS BRITISH LIBRARY

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, March 17.—The sale of the Britwell Court library ended yesterday, America having come into possession of a majority of its choicest volumes through Dr. Rosenbach's purchases, aggregating $267,000 out of a grand total of $316,000 realized from the sale.

The American paid $6500 for Turbervile's "Epigrams, Songs and Sonnets" dated 1567, and $2800 for Spencer's "Britain's Ida," dated 1597.

WIFE ASKS DIVORCE; DAMAGE SUIT FILED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER, March 17.—Suit for divorce from Douglas G. Logan, manager of the Ever Heat Chemical Company and the General Distributing Company for the Denver territory, was filed in District Court by Harriett Logan, who charges cruelty. Logan is said to earn $1000 a month, and Mrs. Logan has petitioned for alimony in the sum of $100 a month. They were married July 16, 1921, at San Bernardino, Cal.

PENNSYLVANIA PICKS POTATO GROWER KING

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

STATE COLLEGE (Pa.) March 17.—The champion potato grower of Pennsylvania is F. H. Dickrager of Tionesta, Forest county, according to an announcement by the agricultural extension service of Pennsylvania State College. He raised 497 bushels of potatoes to an acre last season, more than four times the State average of 120.

Long Beach Boy Imprisons Self in Locker; Taken Out Unconscious

[By a Times Staff Correspondent.]

LONG BEACH, March 17. When James Dinsmore, 8 years of age, 73 Riverside avenue, crawled into a locker during a game of hide and seek with his companions in a school building under construction in the harbor district it nearly cost him his life. The lad closed the door and locked himself in.

When Jimmy did not show up after a considerable interval, his companions renewed their search for him and discovered that he was in the locker. One of the children summoned help, and Jimmy, unconscious, was taken out. First-aid treatment by Dr. L. B. Smith saved his life.

DEATH TAKES RICH CHINESE IMPORTER

CHEW FO KIM DIES AT HOME AFTER ILLNESS OF FEW DAYS

Chew Fo Kim, wealthy Chinese importer of 306 1-2 Marchessault street, died suddenly last night, after an illness of a few days. He was 47 years of age. He leaves a widow and a son. His widow is now in China.

Chew Fo Kim was a nephew of Chew Pack, whose establishment, the Chew Pack Company, was known as one of the city's biggest importers of Chinese foodstuffs. Chew Fo Kim took over this business and maintained it.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed. The body is at the mortuary of Draper & Engemann, 1125 South Grand avenue.

PORT NOTES

The Capt. William, first full-Diesel tugboat to be built on the Pacific Coast, was launched yesterday morning at the Mormon Island ship yards of William Muller. She is the first of three ninety-foot sea-going Diesel tugs being built as additions to the fleet of the Wilmington Transportation Company.

The French liner Nevada, from Bordeaux, will arrive here tomorrow after stopping at Central American ports to load a large consignment of coffee for Los Angeles consignees. The Nevada is a unit of the fleet of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique and is the first French steamer to call here in months.

Late yesterday the giant new Luckenbach liner J. L. Luckenbach arrived from Philadelphia and New York with 5500 tons of east coast products for Los Angeles. She is in command of Capt. Tom Coonan, formerly commander of the liner K. I. Luckenbach.

With 75,000 barrels of California gasoline, the General Petroleum tanker Mojave sailed yesterday for New Orleans. She opens a new service being established to the Gulf ports from Los Angeles Harbor by the General Petroleum Corporation.

Plans to supplant the five 5000 deadweight-ton steamers of the General Steamship Corporation's fleet to the South American west coast, were announced yesterday by Capt. H. H. Birkholm, Seattle manager of the company. The company plans to put ships of 7500 to 8500 tons on the run to South America out of Los Angeles, steadily increasing cargo offerings demanding larger ships.

Eight thousand tons of California products and 125 passengers will depart for New York, via the canal tomorrow on the crack liner Ecuador of the Pacific Mail fleet. Many prominent Southland industrial and commercial figures will take passage here on the Ecuador.

FORM HAITI CHAMBER

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PORT AU PRINCE (Haiti) March 17.—An American Chamber of Commerce was formed here today with forty-two active, thirty-six associate and eighteen nonresident members. Walter F. Voorhies was elected president and H. P. Davis secretary

POLICEMEN AT HARBOR NEED BOAT

Rum Runners Are Able to Outdistance Officers in Fast Launches

Need of a police boat at Los Angeles Harbor was again manifest early yesterday when two police officers were forced to stand on the shore of Terminal Island and watch two rum-runners pull leisurely up the East Basin Channel with a skiff-load of whisky, unload the cargo into an automobile hidden in the shadows of an oil tanker at Mormon Island, and then return to their power schooner. The men were questioned and their boat searched for more liquor, but they were released finally for lack of sufficient evidence.

A watchman at a Terminal Island lumber yard notified the Port Police Station after watching the rum-runners load the liquor into the skiff. He fired on the skiff as it disappeared up the darkened channel after the occupants had refused to stop at his commands.

Patrolmen George C. Wilson and John Nelson reached the scene in time to watch the liquor being transferred to a waiting automobile across the channel, but were unable to notify the Wilmington police in time to capture the car, which proceeded in the direction of Los Angeles.

Wholesale quantities of liquor, taken off British rum-runners outside the three-mile limit, are being landed nightly at the port by small power craft, police say. The practice could be cut to a minimum if the authorities were provided with a fast launch, according to Capt. Clyde I. Plummer, commanding the harbor police division.

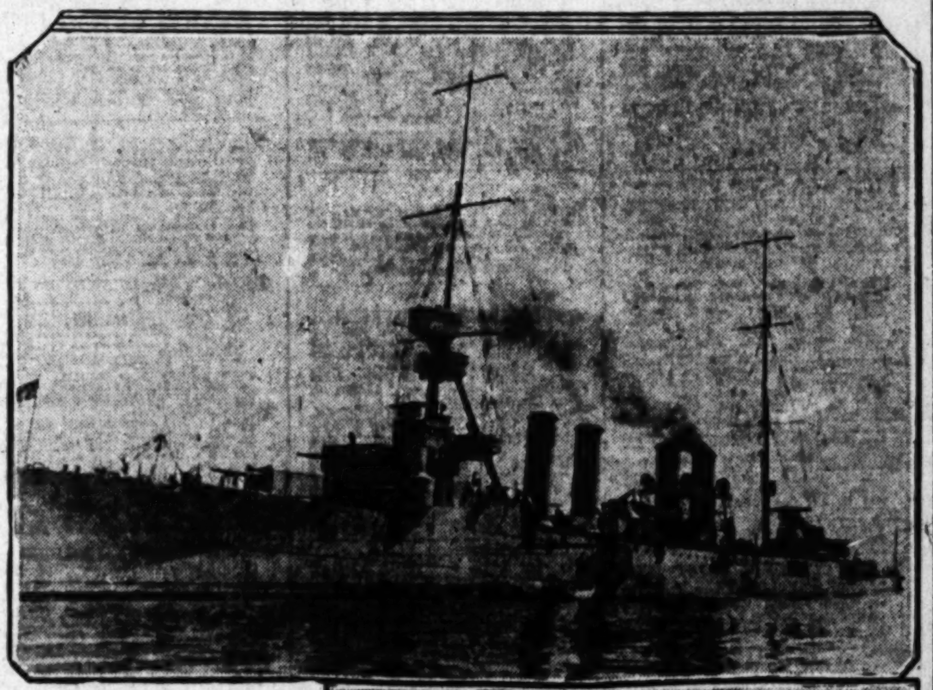
Omaha Fastest and Highest Powered Fighting Ship Afloat



"Finest Fighter" Anchored Here

AMERICA'S finest fighting craft is at Los Angeles Harbor today, her trim lines and lofty spars fairly embodying the spirit of the Navy. She is the scout cruiser Omaha, affectionately dubbed "The Irish Navy," by John Gob, and likewise the highest powered and fastest fighting ship afloat under any flag. The Omaha arrived at her home base late Friday, and despite the fact that she was commissioned at Puget Sound Navy Yard less than a fortnight ago, she has already established a reputation for speed, coming down from Bremerton to Los Angeles Harbor, 1170 miles, in fifty-eight hours.

The Omaha is regarded in Navy circles as the finest fighter under the Stars and Stripes. In general outline she ooks like a giant destroyer, but a closer examination brings out the beauty of her lines, typifying speed and efficiency. She has the loftiest masts of any ship in the Navy—they are 185 feet above water line, and is also the first American naval craft to have the famous tripod mast that give British fighting ships their rugged trimness.

Beneath the water line of the Omaha there are housed four Westinghouse-Parsons electric turbines that give her the enormous propulsion energy of 90,000 horsepower. The only ship afloat that equals her in power is the liner Majestic—the world's largest ship. She has four propellers, operating from reduction gears, that push her at a cruising speed of thirty-five knots.

Five hundred and fifty-five feet in length, the wonder ship has a beam of but fifty feet, her knife-like bow sweeping upward to give her a sixteen-foot freeboard forward. Despite her length, fourteen-foot draft and the enormous power that she develops, the Omaha has a displacement of but 8500 deadweight tons. That gives an idea of the remarkable precision and compactness with which she is built.

"She is a wonderful sea boat," said her executive officer, Commander Bruce L. Ganaga. "We struck some heavy weather coming down, but the Omaha took the seas like an ocean liner, and despite our speed of twenty knots, a man below deck could not tell that we were under way."

There are several reasons why she has been dubbed "the Irish Navy." First, her commander is Capt. David C. Hanrahan, known throughout the Navy as "the Irish grand duke." Capt. Hanrahan got his title by the characteristic Irish reception accorded him when he went ashore at Queenstown during the World War. Second, her crew of 410 men are real sons of Erin, picked from ships of the Asiatic destroyer squadrons in the China Sea. Every man on board the Omaha is a veteran and a real sailor. Lastly, she carries the greatest array of fighters, swimmers and all-round athletes of any ship her size in the United States fleet.

Next Tuesday morning the Omaha will sail for Magdalena Bay, Mex., on her six week's "shakedown cruise." Later on the vessel will return to Los Angeles Harbor, and will be stationed here while running her standardization trials off Point Vicente. Later she will go to the Puget Sound Navy Yard for overhaul, and then will return here for station.

The Omaha, built at the Tacoma plant of the Todd Dry Dock and Construction Company, is the first to be completed of ten sister ships being built for service as destroyer flagship and squadron leaders. She has a main battery of twelve six-inch guns, in turrets, and is equipped with batteries of three-inch anti-air-raft guns and four twin twenty-one-inch torpedo tubes.

CAPTAIN FIRED ON BY GUARD

Port Pilot Fails to Halt Machine at Command; Court of Inquiry Promised

Port authorities at Los Angeles Harbor are stirred over the action of a marine guard in firing on Capt. T. D. McFarland, port pilot, when he passed through the entrance gate between the inner and outer harbors. The captain failed to halt when commanded to do so.

It is said that the guard stationed at the entrance has orders to stop all civilian machines and to learn from the occupants their business before permitting them to proceed. This regulation has not been strictly enforced, as the entrance is on the main boulevard and several thousand machines pass through it each day.

Capt. McFarland has been in the habit of passing through the entrance several time daily in his machine and it is maintained by the guard that he was traveling at a rapid rate when he went through last night. The guard commanded him to halt and when the machine did not stop, sent two bullets after it, one of which, it is said, grazed the captain's ear.

Capt. McFarland made complaint to the officers of the Submarine Base, by which organization the guard is placed at the gate, and a court of inquiry is promised, it is reported.

News of Ships and Sailings at Pacific Ports

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—The first Diesel electric-driven tanker, the Standard Service, built here by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company, is expected to be delivered to the Standard Oil Company of California the latter part of this month, it was announced today.

All of the auxiliaries of the vessel are motor driven. It is fitted with two 300-horsepower engines, driving electric generators which supply electricity for a 600-horsepower reversible motor which is directly connected to the propeller shaft. Electric pumps are fitted for emptying out the cargo tanks, which can be discharged in five hours.

Net income of $277,166 is shown by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for 1922, in comparison with a deficit of $453,301 in 1921, according to the annual report of the company just made public.

Eastbound European rates on canned goods and dried fruits from Pacific Coast loading ports will not be advanced, according to an announcement by the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company. It was stated rates for the coming season will be the same as those now existing.

The Pacific Mail liner Ecuador sailed for New York today with a large passenger list and a heavy cargo.

SEATTLE, March 17.—With a large list of first-cabin passengers and a substantial cargo of freight, the Admiral Oriental liner President Jefferson will dock here tomorrow afternoon, [illegible]

PICTURE SCORES HIT IN ENGLAND

British Acclaim 'Robin Hood' Work of Art

Royalty Revamps Ideas of Screen Productions

South American Showing of Film Successful

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" is received abroad with even more enthusiasm than in the United States, according to Clarence Erickson, the personal representative of Douglas Fairbanks abroad, who has just returned from the London office. Mr. Erickson brought back with him splendid contracts from the leading cities of the British Isles. Contracts were not signed in Ireland, it being thought to be in a too turbulent state to show the picture at present. However, agents waited on Mr. Erickson at the London office with strong requests that the play be put on in Dublin, Belfast and Cork. He went to these centers personally but thought it best to postpone for the time being, the opening there.

With power of attorney from the president of the Fairbanks Company, Mr. Erickson sailed on the Majestic from New York November 25 last, at the time the vessel made its record trip of four days and twenty-two hours. He left the dock at New York at 11 a.m. Monday and sat in the London office at noon the next Friday, ready to do business with Charles B. Cochran, of the London Pavilion, where the picture has now been showing for five weeks.

DOUBTED RECEPTION

"There was some anxiety manifest, even with the manager of London Pavilion, after favorable contracts had been signed," Mr. Erickson said, "as the English audiences are very critical and the idea has been prevalent among the aristocratic class that the 'Cinema' pictures are but for the common people. The pictures have not yet become plays in the minds of many. It was only through the high esteem that Mr. Fairbanks is personally held that some of the dukes and other Royalty deigned to receive tickets for the de luxe presentation."

After the reception of "Robin Hood" by the press and public in London, the business agent of the play would not thereafter have been required to leave London for contracts, but he thought best to personally attend to the business at Paris. Here he placed the picture with Salle Marivaux, the largest picture house in that city. The premiere opening there was if anything on a more elegant scale than in London. An orchestra of more than a hundred pieces was in attendance. The opening night was for charity only, grand opera prices being charged for the first production.

London is the world's center for "Robin Hood," and through that office contracts were made with even South American cities. A cablegram was received today from the agent there as follows:

"BUENOS AIRES, March 16.—'Robin Hood' biggest success ever in Argentina. Four houses sold out first night."

Not only are reports coming in like tenor from all parts of the globe to the chief city of filmdom, but drafts in large amounts have also been received from abroad. "Robin Hood," it is said, has added strength to the motion-picture world, and its success both at home and abroad has placed Mr. Fairbanks well in the front ranks of the production business.

FILMS GET STAR TEAM OF FOLLIES

Gallagher and Shean to Make Motion Picture Comedy Features

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 17.—Gallagher and Shean, the former vaudeville team now starring in the Ziegfeld Follies and who recently worsted the Messrs. Shubert in a suit brought by the producers, asserting breach of contract, are going into motion pictures.

Tobias A. Keppler, attorney for the singing comedians, admitted today that negotiations probably will be closed tomorrow for the team's starring in a series of five two-reel comedies and one five-reel feature picture. The prospective producing company's identity was not disclosed. Keppler said one or more of the comedies would show Gallagher and Shean leading an orchestra in the rendition of their popular ditties, verses for which will be flashed on the screen as part of the pictures. Beyond that the lawyer could not say what the pair would be called upon to do. They, in the Shuberts' trial, contended they were mere "ham actors."

The filming will be done in the East, the work to begin in about a month. The pictures are to be strictly "clean comedies" according to Keppler.

FACT AND COMMENT

Little more than a week ago Gordon Whitnall, secretary-consultant of the City Planning Commission, issued a strong and unequivocal statement on the matter of where the new City Hall, a building the need of which is subject to no argument whatever, should be located, and Mr. Whitnall, in clear and logical fashion, pointed out that the site for such a building falls inevitably in the north end of the city, where so many city, county and Federal administrative buildings and offices are already located.

That the new civic center should surround the Plaza, the heart of old Los Angeles, is more than a bit of sentimentalism; it is based on sound business sense. Already the county has made heavy investments in the great Hall of Records Building, and it is spending $2,000,000 for a new County Jail at Temple and Broadway. The Federal building at Temple and Spring streets stands a monument to the faith of the Federal government in the ability of Los Angeles to carry through an adequate civic center plan.

These buildings cannot be abandoned; they must be kept permanently for the use for which they were designed and built, and to build a new City Hall on a site removed from the administrative center now established would involve not only extra expense for the acquisition of a site, but considerable inconvenience and loss of time for the public in traveling between widely separated city and county buildings.

Civic Center the Issue

As Mr. Whitnall points out, the issue is not so much the location of the City Hall, but whether or not Los Angeles is to have a civic center. Los Angeles, which has become famous for her progress and unflagging prosperity during a period when the rest of the nation was struggling through the slough of despond of a financial depression, is sadly lacking in one important essential, a civic center. If she is to keep pace with other progressive cities, she must have such a center, one that will be commensurate with her position as a rapidly growing industrial and residential city.

The opening of the Second-street tunnel, an event of the not distant future, removes any objection of inaccessibility that might be advanced against the use of the present civic center district, and with the Fifth-street cut completed, the Plaza district will lie at the very crossroads of a tremendous area of population, extending from the heavily populated foothill districts of Pasadena, Glendale and Burbank, to the newer section to the west, south and southwest of the city.

There is no question about the suitability of the site selected and approved by the City Planning

Which will replace the present two-story brick structure at the northeast corner of Fifth and Broadway. The entire building, together with the ground, has been leased for ninety-nine years by the Sun Drug Company. The building will cost about $2,500,000, and the lease involves a total rental of $7,000,000. Aleck Curlett and Claude Beelman are the architects.

MASONS EXPECT TO BUILD HERE

A $60,000 Masonic Temple is to be erected on the northeast corner of Figueroa and Forty-first streets for the Palestine Lodge, F. and A. M. No. 351.

The building will be two stories in height. On the first floor will be space for the accommodation of six stores. The second floor will provide space for lodge rooms, a kitchen, dining and banquet rooms.

It will be of brick construction, with hardwood and cement flooring, compound roof, plate glass windows, copper store fronts and will be exteriorly finished in tapestry brick and art stone.

Plans for the structure are being prepared by architects Corwin and Merril. Together with the site the building will represent an investment of more than $70,000.

WILL ADD TO SKYLINE

Corner at Broadway and Fifth Street Will be Improved With Height Limit Office Structure

Plans for what is probably the largest building project in the central business district of the city inaugurated so far this year were made public during the past week when I. Elsner, president of the Sun Drug Company, announced that arrangements have been completed for the erection of a twelve-story class A office building on the property owned by Chester Williams at the northeast corner of Fifth and Broadway.

The new structure, which, Mr. Elsner stated, will be one of the finest office buildings in the West, is to be erected by Mr. Williams, but the building and ground have been leased for a period of ninety-nine years to the Sun Drug Company, which will occupy the corner store of the ground floor with one of its own drug stores.

The deal involves a rental, for the full term of the lease, of approximately $7,000,000, Mr. Elsner stated, and the new building will represent an investment on the part of Mr. Williams of about $2,500,000.

Architects Aleck Curlett and Claude Beelman have been retained by Mr. Williams to prepare plans for the structure, and the preliminary plans are rapidly nearing completion. Construction work is to be started as soon as the present leases on the building which now occupies the site have expired.

The new structure will be of steel frame fireproof construction, and in its exterior and interior finish will be one of the finest buildings of its kind in the city. The site has a frontage of eighty-one feet on Broadway and extends back 150 feet on Fifth street to a paved alley. The main entrance to the offices, of which there will be about 400, will be had through a large lobby on the Fifth-street side of the building. The upper floors will be served by four high-speed elevators.

While the structure will be erected by Mr. Williams, the designing and construction of the building has been intrusted to Mr. Elsner, who will personally supervise the work. It will be known as the Chester Williams Building.

The site, now improved with an old two-story brick building, has been in the possession of Mr. Williams, a resident of San Francisco, for about fifteen years. The corner storeroom is now occupied by one of the Sun drug stores. In the new building the same location will be reserved for the Sun Drug Company, while the remainder of the first floor, which will contain seven stores, will be leased to other tenants. Negotiations in the deal were carried on by Stuart M. Salisbury, local attorney, who represented both parties in the transaction.

Curlett & Beelman are also completing plans, and work is to be started in the near future, on an attractive two-story office and store building to be erected at the corner of Sixth street and Western avenue for the Sun Drug Company at a cost of about $200,000.

The site was recently acquired by the Sun Drug Company for this purpose. The building will be two stories in height, with offices on the upper floor, and six stores on the ground floor. At the rear of the building there will be a large garage. The exterior finish of the building will be of terra cotta, with tile roof.

The same architectural firm is completing plans for a thirteen-story own-your-own office building to be erected at the corner of Third street and American avenue. The new building, which will be one of the largest and finest in Long Beach, will be known as the Oil Exchange Building.

KNOB HILL TO BE IMPROVED

Provision for street improvements in the Knob Hill section of the city have been responsible for much of the current real estate activity, according to the Gillette Realty Company, one of the firms that have been active in this section.

The following is a list of the contemplated street improvements:

From Ocean View avenue, Alvarado street will be paved to Sunset and Glendale boulevards in the near future, affording a badly needed outlet to and from Hollywood, Glendale, Eagle Rock and Pasadena and surrounding sections to the north and northwest. First street will be paved to connect with Beverly Boulevard and with the opening of the Second-street tunnel a great deal of traffic which is now forced out of the city on Sixth, Wilshire, Seventh and Eighth streets, will either go north from Sixth on Alvarado or through the Second-street tunnel travel north on Alvarado and west on First street and Temple street.

LONG TERM LEASES AT HOLLYWOOD

Ninety-nine-Year Contracts on Two Valuable Boulevard Business Corners

Two important Hollywood realty transfers were announced during the past week. Through the W. Ross Campbell Company the northeast corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Western avenue was leased for a period of ninety-nine years by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Nadeau, of Butte, Mont., at a total rental reported to be in excess of $3,000,000. The average yearly rental for the property will be about $33,000.

The lessee is an eastern investor, who, under the terms of the lease, will erect a building to cost not less than $100,000 on the property within the next year. The site was acquired by Mr. Nadeau about four years ago. Mr. Nadeau is a business man of Butte, where he is active in many commercial enterprises, being president of the Nadeau Investment Company as well as the president of the Butte and White Creek Mining Company.

In the transaction negotiations for the lessors were conducted by F. B. Nellums and G. A. Whitney of the Campbell company, while E. G. Irwin of the Irwin realty represented the lessee.

The southeast corner of Santa Monica Boulevard and Vine street as was leased for ninety-nine years by Thomas L. Hill to Gilbert H. Beesemeyer, president of the Central Savings and Commercial Bank at a total rental of nearly $1,000,000, according to the agents, B. E. Harrison and F. A. Powell, Hollywood realty brokers.

The property, which is to be improved by Mr. Beesemeyer with a modern eight-story office building, according to pesnt plans, has a frontage of ninety feet on Santa Monica Boulevard and 120 feet on Vine street. Mr. Hill acquired the corner about twenty years ago for $1000.

AVERAGE FOR CITY LOW

Last Year's Building Activity Characterized by Cheap Construction, Says Bank Review

Volume of construction at the expense of quality and durability characterized the building activity of Los Angeles during 1922, according to a recent survey by C. C. Lincoln of the department of Research and service, Security Trust and Savings Bank, which Mr. Lincoln points out, indicates that the low average value of the various types of dwellings built during the past year must mean flimsy construction out of cheap-grade materials.

Taking the monthly reports of the city building department as a basis, the survey shows that there were 19,057 residential buildings constructed (or at least approved for construction) in the city of Los Angeles last year. Of these 15,373 were single dwellings, 2824 double dwellings, 554 flat buildings and 300 "apartment-houses." The average cost of each type of building, according to the permits granted, was as follows:

Type—	Average cost.
Single dwellings	$ 2,488
Double dwellings	4,088
Flat buildings	11,368
Apartment-houses	39,760

These figures, it is stated, are

TALL BUILDINGS BECOME HABIT

Long Beach Makes Huge Forward Strides

Small Structures Give Way to Skyscrapers

Huge Building Total for Year Already Presaged

BY ARTHUR PANGBURN,
"Times" Staff Correspondent
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONG BEACH, March 17.—With nearly a dozen twelve-story office and apartment structures under course of construction or contracted for and with a score more of giant structures being planned by local architects, Long Beach has entered into a period of building activity that can best be described as remarkable. Nowhere in the Southland, and in very few other places in the United States, according to statistics available so far this year, has a city planned such an extensive building campaign.

Long Beach has shaken off its swaddling clothes, and is rapidly realizing its ambition to be known as a city of tall buildings. From a town of five and six-story "skyscrapers" it is suddenly emerging into the twelve and fifteen-story class, and everywhere in the downtown section towering structures of steel, brick and terra cotta are rising to attest to the amazing growth of the city and its ever-increasing need for office buildings and apartment houses.

The present pace set by builders is a strenuous one and is not equaled anywhere else in the West, figures show. Building permits issued by the city show more clearly perhaps this phenomenal growth than any other single agency. And February stands out as the banner month of all the months and years of the city's history.

Permits for buildings to cost $3,784,461 were issued in that month alone, and although half of the third month of 1923 has just been reached, permits have been issued so far for buildings of a total value of $5,218,261. Comparisons are distasteful things sometimes, but a comparison is necessary in this case in order to indicate just what this means.

TWENTY MILLIONS FOR YEAR

Five million dollars in building permits exceeded the total for any complete year in building activities in Long Beach by from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 up to 1919. In 1919 the total for the year reached $7,217,949, and there was a celebration by the folks when they realized just what the city had accomplished that year in the matter of new structures.

The 1919 figures were almost doubled in 1922, however, and if the pace set by property owners for 1923 is held, $20,000,000 will be a fair estimate of the total for the present year.

Business organizations which a few years ago became established in what was then regarded as commodious quarters, with room enough left over to care for normal growth of many years, have suddenly found themselves cramped to a point where they face business strangulation. This has been particularly true of banking institutions, always the first to reflect the growth of their community.

That is why the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank moved last Monday from a two-story brick structure at Third street and Pine avenue to its new $600,000 twelve-story home directly across the street. That is why, also, the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank is now waiting with justifiable impatience for the day when it may move into its handsome twelve-story structure at First street and American avenue. This magnificent building of steel, con-

JANSS IS HEAD OF COMMITTEE

Expect Large Delegation to National Meeting

Los Angeles Realtors to Take Prominent Part

Former President Will Submit New Code of Ethics

Herman Janss has been appointed general chairman of the Los Angeles Realty Board's "On to Cleveland" committee by President Edwin G. Hart and plans are already under headway to recruit a record delegation to represent this city at the national conclave of retaltors to be held the last of June in Ohio.

According to word received by Secretary Tom Ingersoll of the local board the program for the national convention is taking form. It will be different from any other national convention in that forenoon sessions will be devoted to the discussion of great general problems which affect the real estate business as a whole. The afternoon sessions will be filled with meetings of the divisions and it is expected that these will be highly intensive and definite in their character.

Rapid progress is being made by the divisions in the preparations of their programs. Los Angeles is well represented among the officers in these divisions, for Herman Janss is secretary of the Farm Lands Division and W. Ross Campbell is a director in the Business Properties Division.

W. I. Hollingsworth, past president of the Los Angeles Realty Board and a director of the National Association of Real Estate Boards will be one of the outstanding figures in the Los Angeles delegation. He recently returned from the midwinter business meeting of the organization's executives held at Jacksonville, Fla.

According to advance notices it is predicted that "Every realtor will find in the Cleveland Convention, new, up-to-date, and precise information about the special phases of the real estate business in which he is interested. The gathering will be a post-graduate course in real estate."

One of the special features of the convention program from the Los Angeles standpoint will be the report of the "Code of Ethics" committee of the national organization of which Frank Ryan, a former president of the local board is chairman.

The other members of the "On to Cleveland" committee to assist Mr. Janss in generating enthusiasm over the trip will be announced in the near future.

TALL BUILDINGS BECOME HABIT

crete and terra cotta is now being completed at a cost of $850,000.

Other financial institutions in Long Beach have either taken up new and larger quarters of their own in modern office buildings during the past twelve months or are now in consultation with architects and builders with that aim in view.

FOR EDISON COMPANY

Rapid expansion of the city from every point of view is the reason behind the recently announced determination of the Southern California Edison Company to erect an eight-story office building at Fifth street and American avenue, and a new power plant that, it is hoped, will take care of the city's expansion for years to come.

Another proposed skyscraper is the Long Beach Press Building, and the plans call for a twelve-story structure, the ten upper floors of which are to be devoted to office suites. The two lower floors of the proposed building, to be erected in the heart of the downtown section on Broadway between Pine and Locust avenues, will be occupied by the Long Beach Press and the roof will be given over to club rooms and recreation spots for the Press employees. It will be the city's first million dollar office structure.

Still another office structure that promises soon to rear its lofty top over the city is the proposed Oil Exchange Building, to be erected at Third street and American avenue. This structure, a portion of which will be occupied by the Oil Men's Club, will cost close to a million dollars, it is said. The Realty Exchange Building, still on paper, but quite sure to become a reality, will be another addition to the city's skyline before the close of the year, it is promised.

In the matter of office buildings, as in apartment structures, Long Beach has gone over to the "own-your-own" camp completely. In practically every large structure now nearing completion or authorized, office suites and apartments are being disposed of on that basis and rentals so far as these particular types of buildings is concerned, will soon be a thing of the past in this city.

DWELLINGS IN DEMAND

The demand for places to live is keeping pace with the demand for places in which to do business in Long Beach. And this is particularly true among the class that has money and wants the very best in living quarters. Hence the success of such pretentious and imposing structures as the Blackstone, now completed and filled to capacity, the Artaban Apartments, completed several months ago, the Sovereign, the Cooper Arms and El Bolivar, to enumerate just a few of the largest and most centrally located apartment buildings.

BIG APARTMENT-HOUSE

Ground has been broken and work has begun on the Cooper Arms, a twelve-story apartment-house, at Linden avenue and Ocean Boulevard. The building permit for this structure, issued February 13, shows its valuation to be $1,160,000. Directly across the boulevard and overlooking the ocean, workmen are now preparing the way for El Bolivar, an apartment-hotel that will outrival in magnitude anything of its kind in Southern California.

The cost of this structure will approximate $1,500,000, and the building will cover practically an entire city block, with frontages on the boulevard and the ocean. Its interior finish and its appointments, according to the plans, will make it a point of interest for sightseers in Long Beach for many years, it is predicted.

These are the high spots in the city's building program, the structures that, because of their size and their cost, stand out for the most casual visitor to see. But in every section of Long Beach, bungalows, apartment-houses, flats, business blocks, garages and school buildings are going up at such a rapid rate that the entire appearance of various neighborhoods is being changed almost overnight.

So marked has the activity become that available business and residential sites are difficult to find.

Nor will private interests have a monopoly this year on the Long Beach building program. The municipality itself, having just completed one of the largest and most magnificent city halls in the Southwest, is preparing an ambitious program all its own. A new municipal auditorium, the tentative plans for which provide for a structure that will compare favorably with any municipal convention hall or auditorium in the country, is one of the city fathers' pet projects just now, and soon the voters will be asked to authorize bonds for this structure.

NEW RAILROAD STATION

A new railroad passenger terminal for Long Beach, to replace the old depot of earlier Long Beach days, is being planned by the Union Pacific system. The site for this is soon to be determined upon.

And now for some more figures that one may grasp easily just what the growth of Long Beach has been during the past few years. It has been said that if the splendid start the city made in building activities in January holds up through the present month, Long Beach will exceed such metropolitan centers as Detroit, Baltimore and Pittsburg in the value of new structures. And even the most enthusiastic of Long Beach boosters claim only a population of 80,000 here.

Here is the story of building progress in Long Beach since 1903:

1903	$ 102,043	1914	$ 1,904,810
1904	727,394	1915	1,117,258

LETTING CONTRACTS FOR FLAT BUILDING

Architect Francis J. Norton, has completed plans and is now letting contracts for a four-flat building to be erected at Twenty-first and Toberman streets, for H. Selbe of St. Paul. Work will be started at once.

The building will be two stories high, and will have modern, sanitary and electrical improvements. Mr. Norton is also completing plans for two residences to be erected at Pico and Kingsley Drive for Mrs. L. Green; and for a residence at Sixty-sixth and Estrella for Mrs. Alta Boatman.

22 Acres At Palms To Be Sold At Once

This is all in one piece, bounded on all sides by city streets and fronts on National Boulevard.

Known as the VISTA DEL MAR PLACE, situated between Washington and Pico Boulevards in the very heart of Palms. The improvements alone on this fine property are worth the price asked. The elevation is ideal, giving an unobstructed view of the entire surrounding country.

Improvements consist of approximately 7 acres of citrus and 1 acre of deciduous fruit trees, a deep water well with first class pumping plant and storage tanks, with orchards piped for irrigating. There are a number of small out buildings which could be easily converted into dwellings. There is a fine commodious 10 room house finished in quarter sawed oak with parquet floors, complete with basement and furnace, a miscellaneous assortment of farm tools and implements, a team of horses and farm wagon, etc., etc. This property is a big snap at $80,000.00 and terms can be arranged to suit. Open for inspection. For further information 'phone 767208.

Note: The attention of the Medical Profession is called to this property for the reason it is particularly well suited for sanatorium and other similar purposes.

The ELUSIVE ESTIMAT

WHEN you approach the proposition of building a hotel or apartment-house, be wary of the bait held out to you in the form of a low estimate.

Do not be trapped into believing that a low estimate represents the most economical buy—it never does. Quality materials—quality workmanship and a prompt delivery of the finished building, all call for a price to be paid. Therefore, if you get a worth-while building you must pay a fair price for it, which means the low estimate will have vanished by the time the final payments are called for.

The one big problem before you is to exercise due care and sound judgment in the selecting of your building contractor. Then let him search the markets for the best prices it can offer.

Such a contractor has a reputation to protect—and does it thru protecting your interests. His estimate may seem high in a competitive field, but his final cost will be lower.

The Mayo organization has a long and enviable record of proof behind it, which bears out this statement.

We should like to present this evidence to you. May we therefore, without obligation to you, have the pleasure of a call?

however, sup- of all the people are the first to change of lo- larger and higher catering to the more classes are continually striving to retain their close contact and accessibility to the residential district.

The location of this residential section is largely determined by the established means of transportation, particularly in years past. First, people lived within walking, or at least easy driving distance. Horse cars and then electric cars each expanded this radius until with the coming of the automobiles, there developed another phase which we will consider later.

As the population increases, the aggregate demands of a city are tremendously increased, bringing in their train need for more mercantile establishments. These in compliance with the natural law begin to encroach on the home area, in turn pushing it farther out.

At the same time that new enterprises are being opened, older establishments are increasing thier buildings, until finally it becomes necessary for them to completely abandon their original locations and establish themselves in new structures in a new retail district.

GROWTH USUALLY SLOW

Ordinarily, the growth in the woman's shopping sections of large cities is gradual, sometimes scarcely noticeable from year to year; but always the primary cause is the lack of sufficient room and the lack of adequate buildings of modern type, for it is almost an axiom that owners of old property will not rebuild to meet the requirements of their tenants, and by their failure to improve the old buildings or supply new ones before it is too late, cause the best business firms to move to new locations.

However, there are ample cases of cities' ever changing growth that cannot be stayed, no matter what concessions landlords make, for once a merchant feels that his business is "slipping," and people are not coming his way as they once did, it is only logical for him to look for a location in the newer district.

Here then is a situation found in many cities—business actually crowded to suffocation in existing quarters. Which way will it go for room? There are riches to be had by correctly defining that area.

Mistakes in selecting their new locations, particularly if they cater to women shoppers, have proven so disastrous that smaller firms are chary about getting ahead of the procession. They cannot pioneer, for with their limited capital it is to easy for them to "go broke." For them to be five years ahead of the times in location, might be a more serious matter than to be five years behind the times. Therefore it is only the large and more strongly financed concers that can afford to pioneer a location and take their profits later.

RELUCTANT TO MOVE

The coming street or the coming shopping center may be all right as a real estate investment. The investor can wait and be fully justified in doing so until the street "arrives," but the merchant who must live and pay his expenses out of the daily revenues might easily be ruined in such a location.

Hence there is an invariable reluctance on the part of the smaller merchant to move from the congested areas, or to remove himself from the easy access by the existing passing throng. The necessity of the present crowd at the very door of the retail merchant is of the utmost importance, and when you consider that the great retail chain stores with their highly trained specialists in the selection of locations, according to their own statements, often err, you will begin to realize how difficult it is for the ordinary merchant, taking a few hours from his business, to exercise accurate judgment in such choice. There are too many factors to be taken into consideration.

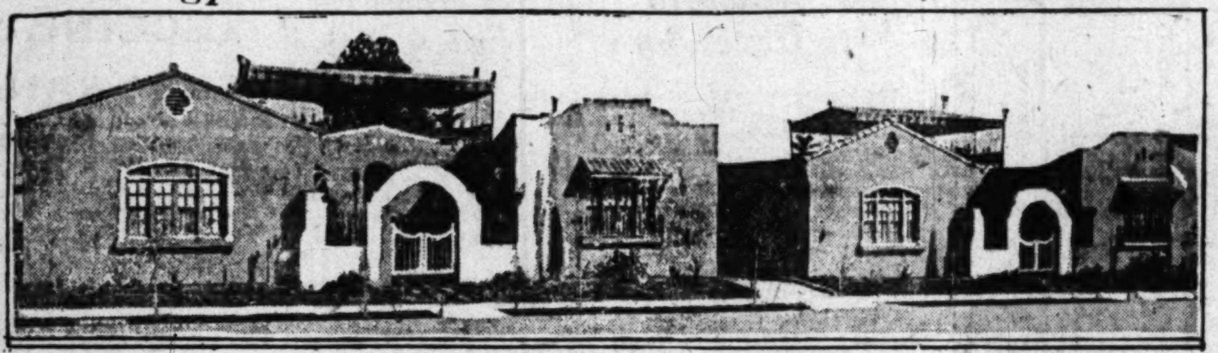
Therefore, at this point we may pause to sum up our basis, as, first, geographical location of the city; second, topography of the land, present retail facilities, location of residential districts and means of transportation.

In the next article we shall consider in detail the expansion of Los Angeles, the growth and movement of its retail area.

SELL PROPERTY AT LONG BEACH

The sale of the property at 309-311 Pine street, Long Beach, by a syndicate of Los Angeles men to Bert F. Mull and associates was announced yesterday by the Charles G. Andrews Company, through D. Parker Bryon, who handled the transaction. The property, 25 by 100 feet, and improved with a two-story brick mercantile building, was sold for $80,000. It is located in the heart of the retail business district, and was acquired by Mr. Mull as an investment.

De Longpre Avenue Court Possesses Unique Features



New Multiple Family Dwelling

This structure on the southeast corner of De Longpre avenue and Harvard Boulevard has been finished by H. K. Allen. It has two double units, which are separated by a driveway, each with an individua l patio and outside stairway to a roof garden. The structure represents an investment of approximately $45,000.

HERMOSA BAPTIST CHURCH

A new building is to be erected at Hermosa Beach for the Baptist Church of that city. The structure will be two stories in height with a full basement. It will be 100 feet square. The auditorium is to have a seating capacity of 1000 persons. Construction will be of frame and plaster, with a tile and compound roof. Approximately $60,000 will be expended in the construction of the edifice. Norman F. Marsh, Los Angeles architect has been commissioned to prepare plans for the structure.

NEW DEPARTMENT HEAD

P. M. Ruthfield of the Ruthfield Investment Company yesterday announced his association with the Lind-De Haven Company, realtors, who have recently opened offices in the new Bank of Italy Building.

Mr. Ruthfield will supervise the departments handling business property and leases, and hotel and apartment sales and leases. Twenty-five years in Pacific Northwest real estate business, and four and a half years in Los Angeles, are Mr. Ruthfield's record.

Builders Will be Guests at Exhibit Rooms

Wednesday evening, the 21st inst., 300 architects, building material dealers and contractors will be the guests of the Metropolitan Exhibit to be held in the exhibit rooms in the Metropolitan Building. Arrangements for the dinner, which is an annual event, are being made under the supervision of Miss Louise Schmidt, manager of the exhibit.

The principal speaker of the evening will be H. Z. Osborne, president of the Engineers' and Architects' Association, and candidate to Congress to succeed his father, the late H. Z. Osborne, Sr. The program will also include a number of other prominent speakers, each of whom will be limited to four minutes. R. F. Hammatt of San Francisco, an authority on redwood, will also be present, and will speak on the subject of redwood.

Others who will appear on the program are: J. J. Backus, Chief Inspector of Buildings; W. J. Dodd, architect; John C. Austin, architect; George L. Eastman, president George L. Easman Company; G. H. Emery of the Pacific Clay Products Company; W. L. Underwood of the Hill Chemical Company, A. C. Carlson of the Pioneer Paper Company, W. M. Moore of the Celite Products Company, F. W. Plane of the Hammond Lumber Company and H. W. Swofford, who will talk on hardwood.

The "Scenic Unit"

In 1888 the location of Unit 8 was selected as the site of a great university; its owner selected it from hundreds of acres he owned as being the most scenic of all the hills of the southwest of the city. Because from Unit 8 can be seen to the west Point Duma, nearly 75 miles distant; to the south the Bay cities, the ocean and the Santa Catalina Islands; to the north and east a view of the City of Los Angeles, the Sierra Madre and San Bernardino ranges of mountains; for this reason it was selected as the site of the University of Southern California in 1888; the cornerstone and foundation were laid but abandoned on account of financial conditions, and in 1921 it was from this site a resident of Unit 1 witnessed the scenes mentioned above and wrote the management of this company of what he had seen and suggested the name "Fairview Heights," which was adopted as the name of our entire holdings here.

New Model Home of 6 Rooms—Below $5000

A few months ago we designed and built a 5-room model home to sell below $4,000 that has been the talk of all Los Angeles. We have built hundreds of these homes and it continues to be a wonderful seller because the individual knows he cannot possibly duplicate it for the price even if he should pay all cash for the house and lot—it is modern and complete in every detail.

Now we take pride in offering a modern 6-room house on improved lot at a price below $5,000—the biggest and best home being offered any place for the price and on terms that will permit ambitious men and women to own a home in keeping with their position in life. Our wholesale methods of buying materials through our own lumber yard and mill and our wonderful organization of specialty workmen enable us to build and sell this home at the price and pay-like-rent terms

REPORT MANY ANAHEIM SALES

Corner Lots Sold in Orange County City

Building Improvements Are Planned by Purchasers

Old Landmark Razed; Site to be Used for Court

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ANAHEIM, March 17.—That Anaheim's rapid growth will warrant the building of several new business blocks here, was indicated today when it was announced that the fourth recent real estate transaction in which a corner site changed hands, had been completed, representing total investments of $154,000. The sale of the Ruhman property on the northwest corner of Chartres and Los Angeles streets was reported following the announcement that the Anaheim Daily Herald had purchased the property on the northwest corner of Los Angeles and Adele streets, and that the site on which the Christian Church formerly stood had been sold to William Sperber. The first corner site which was sold in the four recent transactions was purchased by O. A. Mullinix and is located on the northwest corner of Los Angeles and Broadway, with a frontage of 137 feet. The sale price was $40,000.

TO IMPROVE PURCHASE

E. E. Beasley, Fullerton rancher, bought the Ruhman property, which has a frontage of 242 feet on Los Angeles street, for $70,000. Although plans are not complete for the improvements which are to be made, it was indicated that a modern business building would be erected on the site. W. J. Elliott of the Elliott-Anderson Realty Company handled the transaction. Plans are in the hands of the architect for the improvement of the Mullinix property and no definite information on the proposed type of building was available.

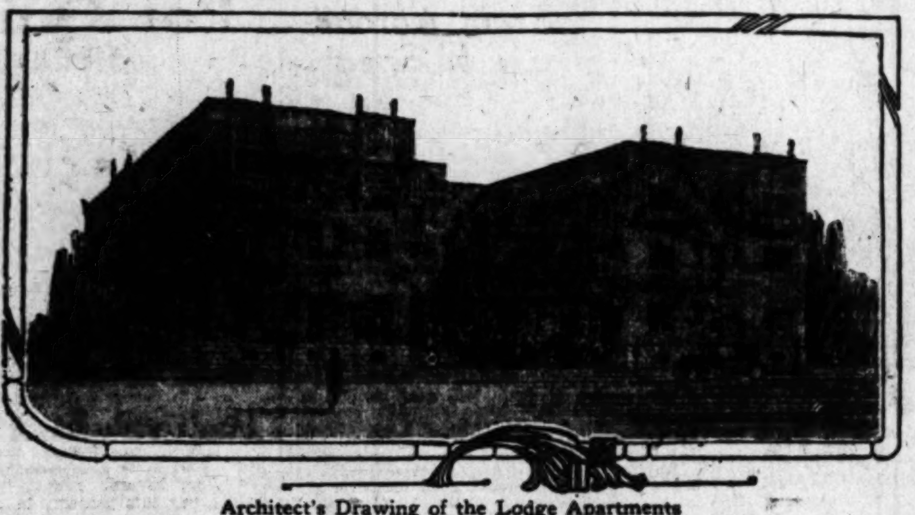
The Sperber service station is being moved to another corner at the intersection of Center and Helena streets. The property on which the station has been located for several years has been purchased by L. E. Snow of Los Angeles, who will build a two-story store and apartment building on the site.

Work on the new newspaper plant of the Anaheim Daily Herald will be started within a few weeks. The building probably will be of the mission style of architecture and will cover the entire lot, which is 62x130 feet.

One of the city's oldest landmarks, the residence of the Rev. A. B. Markle, former pastor of the Christian Church here, will be razed to permit the erection of a modern bungalow court, according to an announcement made today by Wilson & Bever, local contractors. The house is located at Citron and Chestnut streets and the lot is 60x148 feet. The announcement was made recently that the contractors would build a bungalow court on the property adjoining this site, but now with the purchase of this lot, the court will be extended on the property and fourteen bungalows, instead of eight as formerly planned, will be erected. This will increase the cost from $25,000 to approximately $45,000, it was said.

Work on the bungalow court will be started within three weeks, and it is expected that the court will be ready for occupancy before May 1. The bungalows will be constructed of stucco and will contain four rooms each.

Construction of San Marino Apartment Planned



Architect's Drawing of the Lodge Apartments

Construction work on this building will be started as soon as the working drawings are completed by the designers, Allen & Hillier. I. A. Allen is to supervise the construction. The building will have forty-three apartments, each of which will have a number of novel features.

THIRTIETH MAYWOOD UNIT TO BE OPENED

The thirtieth subdivision of Maywood property is being offered for reservation today, according to S. C. Graham, president of the Laguna Land & Water Co., owners and subdividers of Maywood property.

F. L. S. Harmon, manager of the industrial department of the Central Manufacturing district is reported as saying that within thirty days about one hundred acres of the factory property will be opened for development.

It is understood that the first unit of construction will be an eight-story, fireproof warehouse to be located on Loma Vista.

ADVOCATE PERSONAL LIABILITY FOR FIRES

NINETY PER CENT OF FIRES IN UNITED STATES PREVENTABLE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, March 17.—According to the brochure on personal liability for preventable fires, published this week by the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, Canada leads the world with an annual per capita fire loss of $2.73, closely followed by the United States, with such a loss of $2.26. Spain comes next, with $1.86 and the Netherlands foot—or more properly head—the list with an annual per capita fire loss of only 11 cents.

The brochure takes the ground that the United States and Canada should follow Europe's example and establish by specific statute personal liability for damage resulting from preventable fires. It is said that 90 per cent of the fires which destroy $350,000,000 worth of property annually in the United States, are preventable and that a personal liability law would "by one forceful stroke materially reduce" this enormous loss.

The brochure, adequately illustrated, deals at length with the causes of fires, preventive methods and devices, and what to do when a fire is discovered. It includes reprints of the Pennsylvania personal liability law and the ordinance on this subject of the city of Cleveland, as well as much other pertinent information. This publication is the second chapter to be issued in the series on "Lumber and its Utilization," now being published by the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. Three other chapters on the subject of fire prevention will follow.

Realtors Act as Advisers to Uncle Sam

The biggest owner of real estate in the world, the United States Government, is holding a series of conferences at Washington with the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in order to determine the best and most economical methods of handling Federal properties. In these conferences the association is being represented by W. E. Shannon, chairman of the Federal Real Estate Board Committee. Mr. Shannon is being assisted by R. T. Cragin, Cleveland; W. H. Ball, Philadelphia; Charles G. Edwards, New York City, and H. P. Haas, Pittsburg.

In commenting on the conferences already held with the Federal Real Estate Board, Mr. Shannon says:

"The officials with whom we have already conferred are earnestly looking to us for assistance, and it is very possible that this desire for our co-operation may ultimately lead to the government seeking our advice and help in practically every sale, purchase or leasing of real estate which the government negotiates or enters into.

"As you realize the government is the biggest property owner in the world and bringing its real-estate business up to a high standard of efficiency will mean the saving of huge sums of money for the government, and if your organization is instrumental in achieving this end, you can readily appreciate how both our organization and individual realtors as a class will increase their prestige and strengthen their position in the real-estate field of the country."

OLD RAILROAD LINE TO BE ELECTRIFIED

Actual work will start within thirty days on the improvements for the Glendale Montrose Railway. The total improvements will total $131,500. A bonus of $35,000 was raised by the property owners, last year for the electrifying of the old Salt Lake route of the Union Pacific along Glendale avenue. Plans are now being drawn for a station and office building to cost approximately $12,000, and to be located on Glendale avenue, between Broadway and Wilson avenue.

Four new one-man cars are to be purchased for this service at a cost of $10,500 each. The Montrose cars will run through on Glendale avenue, and the Eagle Rock cars will continue to handle the Broadway traffic. The Glendale-avenue line will be single track until traffic demands a double line.

GARDEN GROVE SCHOOL

Plans have been completed for an elementary school building which is to be constructed at Garden Grove. The building will be two stories in height, with two one-story wings, each containing eight class rooms. The auditorium will be of sufficient size to seat 700 pupils. Arthur G. Lindley and Charles Selkirk drafted the plans for the structure.

Film Actress Buys Home in Los Angeles

Pauline Garon, who recently returned to Los Angeles from New York City to star in a new picture for Arthur H. Jacobs Corporation, under the direction of Frank Borzage, has just closed a deal for an attractive Wilshire home and will move in as soon as the decorators and furnishers complete their work.

Miss Garon is living in a hotel with her sister, and when the new place is ready for occupancy she is to wire her parents in Montreal. The family will join the young star and be recorded as an addition to the already large film fraternity of Los Angeles.

Little Miss Garon won fame for herself by playing the flapper lead in C. B. De Mille's recent production called "Adam's Rib." She is to play the only feminine role in the new Borzage film.

PREPARING SCHOOL PLANS

Architect Herbert Howard has completed plans for a new elementary-school building, to be erected on Fletcher Drive, near Estara avenue. It will contain twelve rooms, will have a frontage of sixty-seven feet by 156 feet, and will cost in the neighborhood of $84,000.

LEASE STORE ROOM

Robert Baker, realtor, has leased for G. A. Hart of the Rosslyn Hotel, the storeroom at 811 West Sixth street for a period of three years to Torrance Five Well Syndicate, which will occupy the room as an office. The storeroom is a part of the new building recently erected by Mr. Hart.

HOLD CONFERENCE ON REALTY EDUCATION

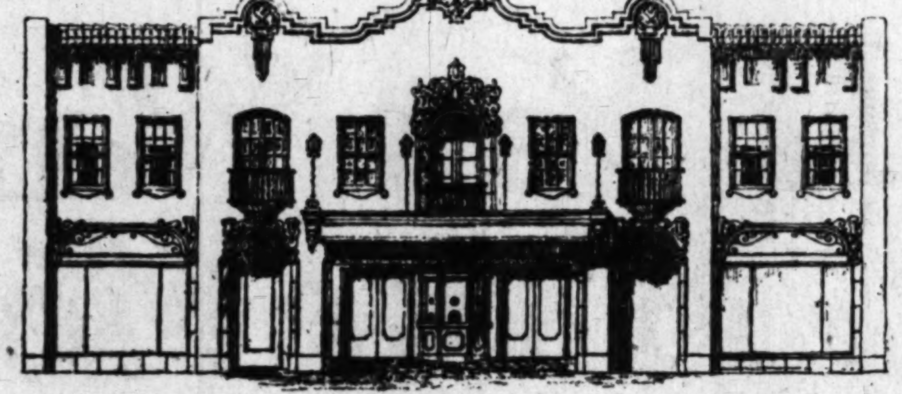
A conference on the development of a standardized real estate educational course will be held early this spring between the Real Estate Commission of the Y.M.C.A., the Institute of Land Economics of the University of Wisconsin, and the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The purpose of the conference will be to determine the type of real estate text book which is most in demand at the present time and to discuss in detail the text book already in process of preparation for the national association by the Institute of Land Economics. Paul E. Stark of Madison, Wis., chairman of the committee on educational courses, will represent the national association in this matter.

NEW BLAST FURNACE

On December 6, 1922, the Tata Iron and Steel Works, Jamshedpur, India, tapped for the first time a blast furnace which will produce from 500 to 600 tons of pig iron a day, says Trade Commissioner C. C. Batchelder, Calcutta, in a report to the Department of Commerce.

Egyptian Architecture to Feature New Theater



Architect's Drawing of the Bard Hollywood Playhouse

Construction work on this building will be started tomorrow, the contract has been let to J. H. Woodhouse & Son, Pasadena builders. The site for the structure is on Sunset Boulevard near Hillhurst avenue. The second floor will be used for offices.

THEATER CONTRACT AWARDED

Pasadena Contractor to Erect Fine Film Playhouse in Hollywood

The Community Building Corporation of Hollywood has awarded to J. H. Woodworth & Son of Pasadena the contract for its new $100,000 theater on Sunset Boulevard near Hillhurst avenue. Construction on the building will begin tomorrow.

The auditorium will have a seating capacity of 900, and will be designed in the Egyptian style. An expensive organ is expected to be installed in the theater.

The design of the exterior of the building will be Spanish renaissance. Construction will be of brick and concrete, with stucco facade. Balconies of ornamental ironwork will be a feature of the front.

The second story of the building will be used for offices. There will be a shop on either side of the lobby. The theater will be operated as one of the Bard chain.

The Woodworth Company has also drawn plans and is building a $30,000, two-story apartment-house at 1516 Virgil avenue, Hollywood, for Mrs. C. Marie McLeod. It will contain nine two and three room apartments. The architecture will be in the Italian renaissance style.

The same company has a $15,000 contract for extensive alteration work on the E. L. Doheny residence in Chester Place, Los Angeles. Other important contracts of similar nature are expected to be signed up by the company soon.

AVERAGE COST DECLARED LOW

probably somewhat under what the buildings actually cost, since for one reason or another building permits are usually taken out at the lowest figure possible. Experienced builders estimate that the actual cost of a building exceeds the permit value by about 25 per cent on the average. Making this allowance, the actual average cost of the buildings constructed, according to the survey, was approximately as follows:

Type—	Average cost.
Single dwellings	$ 3,100
Double dwellings	5,850
Flat buildings	14,200
Apartment-houses	38,375

With building costs at the high levels which were maintained during the year, it is apparent, says the bank research department, that our average building in 1922 could not have been of the highest type of construction. If building costs in 1922 were 77 per cent above prewar prices (as a calculation by the department for that year has indicated,) then the $3100 bungalow of last year was about equal to the $1750 bungalow constructed before the war.

THE MIDDLE POINT

The statistics, it is stated, should not be interpreted to mean, of course, that the cost of most of the single dwellings erected here last year was $3100, simply because that was the mathematical average. This average is more or less of a middle point about which different buildings fluctuated in cost, sometimes very widely. Many single dwellings actually cost in the neighborhood of $10,000, but for every $10,000 building there must nevertheless have been six $2000 buildings or sixty-nine $3000 buildings to produce an average of $3100.

With respect to the numerous so-called "apartment-houses" for which permits were issued last year, the survey shows that 245 of them, or 82 per cent of the total number, were two-story buildings. The highest for which permits were granted were four-story buildings, and there were only nine of these. The average cost of all taken together was $30,700 each, or $38,375 if raised 25 per cent, as above suggested. Considering that the cost of construction of a first-class apartment-house is generally conceded to be at least $3000 per single apartment, it would appear that most of those erected last year were small and not of first-class construction.

BETTER BUILDING URGED

The survey points out that for the man who expects to live in the house he builds, it is as short-sighted to put a flimsy building as it is to buy a second-rate tire for his automobile. Obviously a $3000 house which depreciates at the rate of 10 per cent per annum is practically as expensive as a $6000 building which will last twice as long, therefore, depreciating at a rate of 5 per cent per annum. And for the investor who builds for income purposes, it should be considered that in a few years most of the new buildings now on the market for rent will be old, and when that time arrives only the well-built houses will be rentable, especially under the competitive conditions which are likely to be experienced as soon as the building shortage is cut down.

The banks, the report concludes, are exerting their influence to maintain high building standards and to counteract the conditions which characterize the present building development in Los Angeles. Most of the banks employ building experts who pass on all real estate loans, and they usually refuse to grant loans on cheap structures. The primary reason is protection of the funds which are intrusted to banks by their depositors, but a secondary and very beneficial effect is the discouraging of flimsy structures.

APARTMENT FOR CAHUENGA

The contract to construct the three-story apartment house, to be erected on Cahuenga avenue near Wilcox street for John Green, has been awarded to L. T. Mayo. The building will contain ninety rooms divided in such manner as to form forty-five apartments. It will cost $115,000.

PLAN NURSES' HOME FOR SANTA BARBARA

Carlton M. Winslow, Los Angeles architect, is preparing plans for a nurses' home which is to be constructed at the Cottage Hospital, Santa Barbara. Funds for the undertaking have been provided by Mrs. George Owen Knapp of Montecito.

The structure will be L shaped, designed in the Spanish style of architecture. It will contain living rooms, reception rooms, and sixty sleeping rooms. The building is to be surrounded by landscaped gardens. It will cost approximately $100,000.

Realtor Back From Abroad to be Speaker

Harry H. Culver, who has just returned from an extended trip abroad, will speak before the next regular luncheon of the Los Angeles Realty Board Tuesday noon at the Elite Cafe on Flower street. His subject will be "Real Estate Values the World Around."

Observations made by Mr. Culver during his recent investigations of realty conditions in foreign countries, will be given to the local realtors. Special attention was paid by the traveler to the effects on realty values of the reconstruction period following the war.

In the bulletin sent out by Secretary Tom Ingersoll of the board to the membership it is also stated, "A brief announcement will be made regarding the plans for a big delegation of Los Angeles realtors to attend the national association convention at Cleveland June 25 to 30. Much interest is already being taken in the national convention, and these tentative plans will be interesting."

INDIAN MARKET FOR YARNS

Trade Commissioner Spofford, Calcutta, reports a steady demand in India for a certain amount of yarns under "40s" for the handloom. The domestic output is extensively sold for this purpose. The market for gray yarns over "40s" will probably be strictly competitive between the products of the Indian mills, Lancashire mills and those of the United States, France, Belgium and Germany, wiht price the deciding factor. Operatives in Indian weaving mills prefer Lancashire yarns to the Indian on account of their quality.

Amanda Chapel
Carthay Center
Wilshire Blvd., at Fairfax Ave.
Saturday, March 24, at 2 P.M.

IN KEEPING with their plans to perpetuate the memory of the famous pioneer men and women who laid the foundations of California, the Founders of Carthay Center are building a community chapel, the cornerstone of which will be laid on Saturday, March 24, at 2 P.M. At this ceremony the public of Los Angeles is cordially invited to be present.

This chapel, which is intended for use by worshipers of all faiths, is to be dedicated to the memory of one of these noble women whose lives have given luster to the history of the Golden State.

The ceremony will be conducted by the Native Sons of the Golden West, and will be participated in by the Church Federation and other religious bodies. Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe of the U. S. District Court will preside, and addresses will be made by

Hon. George E. Cryer,
Mayor of Los Angeles, representing the city.

Former Senator R. F. Del Valle,
Representing the Native Sons.

William J. Hunsaker, and, if his engagements permit,

Hon. William G. McAdoo,
Former Secretary of the Treasury.

There will be a program of instrumental and vocal music with solo singing by Mrs. Monnie Hayes Hastings, soloist of the First Christian Science Church, and Earl Houck, the famous blind singer of the Elks.

Among the founders of Carthay Center who have promised to be present are: Irving H. Hellman, Harold Lloyd and Mrs. Lloyd (Mildred Davis,) Joseph Scott, C. R. Bell, Joseph F. Murphy, A. R. Kilgore, Lester Robinson, J. L. Keyes, Aleck E. Corlett, Otis W. Berry, Dr. Wm. E. Dobson, E. R. Sroupe, Ben O. Badgley, A. R. Walker, the Hon. William Gibbs McAdoo, Mrs. Lida A. Webber, G. H. Kinsey and others.

To reach Amanda Chapel, take P. E. car (Santa Monica via Sawtelle and Beverly) at Hill Street Station, direct to Carthay Center; or drive out Wilshire Boulevard to Mission Bungalow just west of Fairfax Ave. Arrows point way to chapel.

TO START WORK ON NEW BANK

Fine Structure to be Erected at Santa Ana

Event Celebrated by Banquet at St. Ann's Inn

Main Room to Have Largest Clear Span on Coast

SANTA ANA, March 17.—Details preliminary to the commencement of actual construction work work upon a six-story bank and office building for the First National Bank on a lot 75 by 100 feet at the southwest corner of Fourth and Main streets, were discussed at a banquet at St. Ann's Inn attended by officers of the bank, several prominent business men of the city and officials of the Baker Iron Works at Los Angeles, who are supplying the steel for the building.

Reflecting the marked growth of this city and indeed of the entire Santa Ana Valley, A. J. Crookshank, president of the First National Bank, recalled the fact that the steel work for the bank's new home is being ordered at a cost of $75,000 from the same firm which filled the modest order for steel at a cost of $600 which was placed by his father and himself in the bank's present home thirty-six years ago, just a year after they had organized the bank.

"I would say, moreover," said Mr. Crookshank, "that my father and I considered that order for $600 of steel which we gave to Mr. Milo A. Baker's firm shortly after we had organized this bank a matter calling for deeper consideration on our part than the order which we are now giving them for $75,000."

The new bank and office building, of which John Parkinson of Los Angeles is architect, will be the biggest building in the city. Moreover, it was stated by Mr. Baker that it will have the largest clear-span banking room, with offices above, of any banking institution on the Pacific Coast. The construction calls for five huge steel trusses, each 60 feet long, 8 feet deep and weighing thirty tons, to span the main banking room and support the floors above.

The site for the new First National Bank Building is now occupied by the building used by the Farmers' and Merchants' Savings Bank, an institution allied with the First National. As soon as the contractors are prepared to commence the razing of this building, the savings bank will move to a temporary banking room one block west on Main street. When the new bank building is completed, the First National will occupy the first floor and will have the most modern of safety deposit vaults in the basement. The Farmers' and Merchants' Savings Bank will then move into the old building of the First National.

PAST RECALLED

Among those present at the dinner were several who recalled other instances in which they had been associated in the past with the same steel concern in the development of the city. G. A. Edgar, who thirty years ago was a director in the street car company which operated with horsepower between Santa Ana, Tustin and Orange, and also ran the car to El Modena, reminded the officials of the iron works that they had supplied for his company several of the street cars then in use, among others the one which was used on the run to El Modena, which was hauled up hill by a mule, the mule riding on the rear platform of the car on its return journey down the hill. Crookshank and Edgar were also concerned with the same Los Angeles firm in the purchase from them of the first cast iron pipe ever used by any Southern California city for what was then considered an extensive water works. This order was filled in 1890. The work was paid for by the issue of bonds through the First National Bank and which at first, finding no local buyers, were handled through the First National Bank of San Francisco until about three years after they were issued, when they sold at a very satisfactory premium.

Among the guests at the dinner, which was given by Milo A. Baker, general manager of the Baker Iron Works, were A. J. Crookshank, G. A. Edgar, W. B. Williams, cashier of the First National Bank, W. A. Huff, president of the Farmers' and Merchants' Savings Bank, T. E. Stephenson, managing editor of the Santa Ana Register, and Harry S. Hitchcock, vice-president and treasurer of the Baker Iron Works, with Lawrence Baker of the same concern.

ISLANDS PURCHASE OIL PRODUCTS HERE

The petroleum market of the Philippines has felt severely the unfavorable business stagnation of the last few years, but there was some revival in the last few months of 1922, according to advice received by the Department of Commerce, owing to increased demand for local products and lowering of prices for imported articles. These developments have returned a fair amount of buying power to the population, so that the present year should inaugurate a period of better economic conditions.

No quantity returns for imports of petroleum products for 1922 are available to date, but from the published value of these through November and known quantities exported to these islands from the United States, quantities can be arrived at that are sufficiently accurate to show the trend of this market for the past year. An estimate based on these totals gives the import of gasoline, benzine, naphtha and other light products as 7,000,000 gallons; kerosene or illuminating oil, 12,400,000 gallons; and lubricating oils, 1,100,000 gallons. These figures show a decided falling off when compared with the known quantities received during 1921, but this is rather to be expected when the lack of demand for most commodities during that period is considered.

PERSIAN SILK INDUSTRY

Persia's formerly flourishing silk industry has been virtually annihilated as a result of the World War and the collapse of Russia, according to dispatches to the Department of Commerce from Consul Gotlieb, Teheran.

TELLS OF PROGRESS ON HOTEL

Head of Biltmore Gives Out Interview on Los Angeles Project in Chicago

[The following interview with John McE. Bowman, who heads the Biltmore system of hotels, and who will manage the new Los Angeles Biltmore Hotel, was published in a recent issue of the Daily National Hotel Reporter.]

Mr. John McE. Bowman of New York, spent two days in Chicago last week, while en route from California. Mr. Bowman is greatly pleased, and also greatly surprised, at the wonderful rapidity with which his new Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles is being constructed. Said he: "Everything would appear to be 'different' on 'the Coast,' and in this fact perhaps lies the charm of Southern California. The way they put up their buildings is different from eastern methods, and I must say that the rapidity as well as the solidity with which the Los Angeles Biltmore is being constructed, commands my greatest admiration. While we do not expect to open the hotel until early fall, I honestly believe it could be opened in two months from the present time if it was necessary to do so. For instance, when a hotel is built in the East, about the last thing to be finished is the lobby and generally the scaffolding comes down about an hour before the 'formal opening' takes place. Not so in Los Angeles. The ceiling of the lobby of the new Biltmore in that city is already completed and the same is true of the ballroom. They are wonderful people 'on the Coast' and I intend to give them a wonderful hotel. Prior to going to California I visited Atlanta, where the new Biltmore already has a good start, and I spent a few days at Belleair, Fla., and Havana, Cuba, where system are doing a capacity business. My reports from New York City, received daily, are entirely are very good indeed, all along the line."—[Daily National Hotel Reporter, Feb. 12.

TO REVIVE MEXICAN HIDE EXPORT TRADE

AMERICAN FIRM AT MAZATLAN TO RE-ESTABLISH BUSINESS LOST DURING 1918

An American firm in Mazatlan is anxious to resume shipments of cattle hides, deer skins, and related merchandise, according to a report to the Department of Commerce by Consul W. E. Chapman, however, as far as cattle hides are concerned it is not believed, says Consul Chapman, that exportations in the near future will be of much importance. Even if good prices were offered in the United States and the Mexican export tariff were reduced the scarcity of hides and the increased demand for the locally would materially limit a rise in this business to its former proportions.

The hide and leather business in the Mazatlan district underwent a radical change at the end of the calendar year 1918. For some years prior to that time cattle hides had been collected by American hide buyers and shipped to markets in the United States, both by land and water routes. These American business men had representatives in every town of importance collecting cattle hides as fast as they became available. These hides were then shipped to transportation centers, where carload and ocean lots could be handled to the best economic advantage.

Since the end of 1918, however, practically no hides have been exported from this section to the United States. This has been due to the following reasons: First, the hide market in the United States dropped to a level so low that it became unprofitable to export Mexican hides to American purchasers; second, the Mexican export tariff on hides has been materially increased; third, the promiscuous killing of cattle for their hides alone when the price was at the highest mark has so seriously reduced the number of cattle in this section that there is almost a scarcity of cattle for food purposes.

ARGENTINE'S WOOL EXPORTS INCREASE

PRICES HOLD FIRM FOR CLIP; BUYERS INCLUDE LARGER EUROPEAN NATIONS

Sustained European interest and the return of the United States to the Argentine market resulted in wool exports for 1922 reaching the unprecedented figures of 452,192 bales, says Assistant Trade Commissioner C. C. Brooks in a report to the Department of Commerce. Not only was the entire new clip disposed of, but firm prices and continued demand for all grades permitted producers to liquidate large quantities of wool that they had been holding because of the unfavorable marketing conditions that existed in the two preceding years.

Germany drew very heavily on the Argentine market and her purchases, largely of the inferior grades, which commenced during the last quarter of 1921 and continued with vigor throughout 1922. Exports to the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, and Italy showed substantial increases over the year before. The prospects of an augmented duty on wool in the United States did not accelerate purchases by American consumers and shipments from January to Sept. 30, 1922, totaled 26,011 bales less than the same period for the preceding year.

With the arrival of the new clip on the market in October considerable interest was manifested in the better grades and the exports to the United States for the calendar year showed a decrease of only 2945 bales under 1921. During the last quarter of 1922, Germany had to surrender first place to the United States as the leading buyer of Argentine wool, a position which America has held during the war.

Alaska was first settled in 1784 by Russians who established on Kodiac Island.

If You Want to Make Money

"LOOK EASTWARD"

East Los Angeles Industrial District
Where the Allied Industries Are Spending Millions

THE Real Estate Section of the Examiner, March 11th, 1923, says in the leading editorial:

"ONE OF THE REALLY GREAT CITIES WHICH IS GROWING UP AS A PART OF LOS ANGELES IS THE INDUSTRIAL CITY CRYSTALLIZING EAST OF THE RIVER."

The editorial proceeds, as in the following excerpts;
"Into this area the big industries are coming. The great shops of the Union Pacific and the stock yards, with the appurtenant industries. Development is working with astounding speed.

"There is no business enterprise so solid as that which is based on PAYROLLS.

"That MEANS something. A business lot past which men walk with money in their pockets is worth more—for a business firm—than a lot where people are sometimes flush—and sometimes not; or a lot where sometimes there are tourists, and sometimes not.

"Industry runs the year around and it is paid at least twice a month. So there are lots TODAY which are vacant with hardly a business enterprise now in sight, which will be, before you know it, good business lots on a busy street in a thriving industrial city.

"Don't lose sight of Mr. Garland's advice—"RECONNOITER." You do not reconnoiter in an overstuffed chair, in front of a fire, with your slippers off—you get out among the vacant lots, where business is going to come, and OWN YOUR LOT before it arrives."

Union Pacific Manor is located directly between the two mighty industrial operations of the Central Manufacturing District and the Union Pacific developments. It is the only property available for business between these two great activities. It fronts Downey Boulevard, the direct traffic artery between them.

Union Pacific Manor is the inevitable business center of this great industrial district EASTWARD, to which authorities estimate 250,000 new people will come, with a weekly payroll of well over a million dollars a week to be spent, within a limited business area that is today green fields.

Lots From $995 Up

You can buy 50 feet in Union Pacific Manor TODAY with $1000 cash; balance in very easy payments! The same size business lots in scores of industrial cities with only half the population expected here, sell for $50,000.

Lots similarly located with regard to the Chicago Central Mfg. District are worth $50,000 and more, as a result of PAYROLLS!

When the stores, hotels and apartments begin to spring up in the East Los Angeles Industrial District everybody will realize what an extraordinary investment this is.

TODAY'S buyers will then be demanding their own prices — taking a profit of thousands for keeping an open ear to good advice right now!

Opportunity stares you in the face. It is your move. Come to the property at once. If this is not convenient, call, phone or write.

AMERICAN MACHINES PREFERRED IN JAPAN

German competition in heavy electrical machinery sold in Japan has entirely disappeared, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Trade Commissioner H. A. Butts. Public statements made some time ago to the effect that Japanese buyers were inclined to place orders for this class of machinery with German manufacturers appear to have been only partly true, and Mr. Butts now states that no reliable Japanese company of which he knows is either quoting or endeavoring to secure the business for this sort of equipment of German manufacturers.

Japanese consumers prefer the American product with its dependability as to deliveries and quality. In this connection a representative in Japan of one of the leading American manufacturers states that he has no difficulty in securing orders for American products with a 10 per cent premium over the cost of the same article manufactured in Japan.

At present about 80 per cent of the imports of heavy electrical machinery into Japan are from the United States.

BRAZIL EXPORTING LUMBER TO NORTH

Brazil has become a lumber exporting country instead of a lumber importing country as was the case in 1913 and Parana pine constitutes the greatest part of the lumber exports, Clerk Rudolph Kahn of the consulate in Rio de Janeiro reports to the Department of Commerce. In 1913 only 8,949,000 board feet were exported, in 1913, 114,016,000 board feet, and in 1921, 54,0[illegible],000 board feet. Argentina and Uruguary are the chief customers for Parana pine.

Exports of Brazil cedar increased from less than 1000 feet in 1913 to 7,864,500 feet in 1921. There were no exports of Brazil-wood in 1913, whereas 205 metric tons were exported in 1921. Exports of Jacaranda amounted to 2463 metric tons in 1913 and in 1921 to 1168 metric tons. The United States takes most of the exports of the last three named woods.

The Brazilian government has been encouraging the planting of eucalyptus for railway ties. It has been estimated that 5,000,000 of these trees have been planted.

ELECTRIC PLANT IN INDIA

Advices from the Calcutta office of the Department of Commerce state that the Itarsi (India) Industrial Corporation, which has an authorized capital of 100,000 Rs. will require a plant to generate electricity to supply the town of Itarsi and to furnish power for driving saws.

RENOVATE BUILDINGS

Extensive Improvements Being Made At Redlands

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, March 17.—Improvements in the business section of the city continue and the physical aspects of Orange street, the oldest business street in the city, will be completely changed when these improvements are all complete. The old red brick buildings will have disappeared almost entirely, when work now under way is completed.

The building recently purchased by the Russell Electric Company and the Hubbard Block, known as the old Academy of Music and the first theater building in Redlands, are both being remodeled. Some years ago the stage and auditorium of the academy were torn out and modern office rooms built. Now the second floor, of red brick exterior, is being plastered to conform with the improvements made when the First National Bank in Redlands was installed in the building. The Russell Electric Company has remodeled and painted the building between State and Central.

The building at State and Fifth, vacated recently by the Russell Company, is being entirely remodeled for Gowland Brothers, who are making it into a home for their big sporting goods and bicycle establishment.

The Edison Company has just announced that it will spend about $10,000 for a new garage in the downtown section.

CHILE TO SUBSIDIZE PLANT

A law has been introduced in the Argentine Chamber of Deputies providing for the granting of subsidies for the establishment of packing-houses by certain co-operative associations in the province of Entre Rios, Commercial Attache Edward F. The Proposed Wilshire-Boulevard Congregational Church and Frank C. Rolon of Cleveland, the former representing the Congregational churches of the United States as superintendent of city extension work. The campaign will continue through a period of nine days, closing March 26. A corps of 120 prominent men and women are enlisted in the campaign activities under the leadership of W. H. Daum, Mrs. W. A. Moses and Charles G. Andrews.

Funds for the erection of this $500,000 structure will be raised in a drive which is to be commenced today. The site for the church is at the corner of Wilshire and Plymouth Boulevards. Carleton M. Winslow is the architect.

MEXICAN GOODS TO BE MARKED

The Department of Hacienda of the Mexican government has issued a decree, as yet unpublished in the Diaro Oficial, required all products of Mexican manufacture placed on sale after May 15, 1922, to bear a Spanish trade mark or other identification that they are products of domestic manufacture.

Such statements as "Made in America," and "Made in St. Louis," applied falsely to mislead the public into believing that the goods are imported, are forbidden. The degree further provides that any goods being passed off as imported merchandise will be subject to the appropriate import duties, as if they were actually of foreign manufacture.

With the frequent sharp increases in Mexican import duties, made in the interest of domestic industries, and the corresponding decline in the volume of manufactured imports, some Mexican manufacturers have resorted to deceptive marking to meet the demand for popular foreign goods. It was mainly for the purpose of opposing this practice and, in this way, assisting the development of Mexican industries, that this decree was passed. At the same time, it should prove of advantage to American manufacturers of good quality, whose sale in Mexico is suffering due to inferior imitation.

MEXICAN TRADE CONTINUES DULL

General business in Mexico during February remained slow, according to a cable to the Department of Commerce from Assistant Trade Commissioner H. B. McKenzie, Mexico City stocks in some lines are running low and are being gradually replenished. This is noted in dyestuffs, silks, office appliances and steel products of certain descriptions. Reports from the central, southern and western portions of the republic show considerable depression in the commercial and productive industries of those districts.

Raw cotton prices are rising in the local market on account of the scarcity due to shortage in domestic production and to the imposition of import duties on the Lower California crop.

Mining developments in the southern part of the republic, especially the States of Oaxaca and Guerrero, are attracting increased interest and some properties have been purchased by American and local corporations. Good-sized orders for German dynamite are being placed in the districts adjacent to Mexico City.

Petroleum production for the year 1922 is now officially reported as 182,276,457 barrels, against 193,397,587 barrels for the previous year.

INDIAN JUTE MILLS

There are now about 200 looms in operation in Calcutta on jute cloth, used for cotton bales, Assistant Trade Commissioner C. B. Spoffard, Calcutta, reports. The mills operating these looms are American owned, and were initiated as an experiment. It remains a question as to whether the new tariff on imports of this cloth into the United States will permit the expansion of this line of manufacture in India.

AMERICAN ENGINES BOUGHT FOR SIAM

A French company has obtained the contract for ten new locomotives for the Siamese State railways on the basis of the lowest tender in competition with American, British, Belgian and German concerns, according to a report from Consul E. E. Brodie, Bangkok, to the Department of Commerce. The total amount budgeted being considerably in excess of the lowest tender, a portion of the surplus over and above the price quoted for the ten locomotives was diverted to the purchase of four additional locomotives from an American company and two from a British concern.

At present only British and German locomotives are in use on the Siamese State Railways, and the new contracts mark the introduction into Siam of the first American railway equipment of this character. American exporters are at some disadvantage in obtaining orders for heavy railway equipment in Siam in competition with British and Continental European firms.

The greater distance involved necessitates a heavier freight charge on American-made products. As there is no direct steamer service between United States ports and Bangkok, freight originating in the United States and consigned to Bangkok must be trans-shipped either at Hongkong or Singapore, both British ports.

COTTON IN EUROPEAN PORTS

Stocks of cotton in European ports on February 2 totaled 886,330 bales in Great Britain, 196,470 in Havre, 43,750 in Genoa, 107,130 in Barcelona and 119,080 at other continental ports. Of this quantity, stocks of American totaled 515,880 bales in Great Britain, 132,010 at Havre, 33,000 at Genoa, 88,000 at Barcelona and 116,590 at other continental ports.

Builders' Questions Answered

By Southern California Chapter, Associated General Contractors of America.

[With the view of rendering assistance to prospective builders and for the purpose of giving sound advice on problems arising in connection with building projects The Times has instituted this department, which will be conducted as a weekly feature. All questions should be sent to the Real Estate and Building Department, Los Angeles Times.]

Question: In estimating the cost of building small houses, what class of work would be furnished at $3 per square foot? Would it include hardwood floors, built-in fixtures and garage?

Answer: This is an obsolete method of figuring the cost of a building job although it gives a rough idea of the cost based on size of building. Three dollars per square foot would probably be the ordinary cheap bungalow class of work and would include some hardwood flooring, built-in fixtures, plain plumbing and hardware but would not include garage and cement walks and drive.

Q.: I contracted with a man who appeared to be a reputable contractor for the construction of a double bungalow and the contract called for the house to be complete January 1. The work has dragged from the beginning and often had only one carpenter at work on it. The lumber used was the cheapest grade and the hardware was picked up at random sales by my 'contractor.' He has skinned the job and violated his contract and ignored the plans and specifications.

I have told the builder that I cannot pay him the full amount of the contract price for the job he is giving me so he closed down the job. My architect advised me to consult an attorney, who took $50 I could ill afford to pay and he got me nothing. He said if I would give him $200 more he would prosecute the man.

I have paid over half of the contract price to the contractor, and he says that there are oustanding bills against the job for much more than that amount, to become liens against the place if I close down on him.

Not only has my plan for some much-needed income gone all wrong, but I am in the hands of a high-handed pirate who has a heart of stone. Even if the job were acceptable, the deliberate delay has cost me several hundred dollars in lost rent. The fellow is carrying on several other jobs in the same way and a real estate business as well. Can you help or advise me?

A.: You are in a very difficult position as you probably realize, and it will not help you to tell you of the ordinary precautions you should have taken to protect yourself in a contract which can, under certain conditions, go as far wrong as this one. Just because a man seems "nice" is no proper proof that you are safe in intrusting him to watch your interest in a transaction where he can do so nearly as he pleases, if he turns ou to be entirely irresponsible. In the absence of a law to reach such men, the owner should place under bond every contractor who could not be trusted with the full amount of the contract in cash without security.

This is practically the condition in a contract such as yours, and these are not at all unusual. You would have no problem if the contractor had been under a real bond to properly fulfill his part of the contract. As it is, there seems small chance for a satisfactory settlement of your case, but you should go to an honorable attorney, specializing in lien law cases, and follow his advice. This is entirely a question of law, as it seems inevitable that the matter must go to trial.

It is hoped that your experience may be a warning to others who contemplate building and might sign up with just anybody who gives them a low bid. It usually pays to demand good work and methods from someone able to make good on the reputable contractors' slogan of skill, integrity and responsibility.

BOOK ON HEIGHT OF BUILDINGS PUBLISHED

A book called "Studies on Building Height Limitations in Large Cities," has recently been published by the Chicago Real Estate Board. This book summarizes an extensive investigation undertaken in the fall of 1922 to determine what limitations, if any, should be placed upon the heights of buildings in cities. The best informed men throughout the country were called to Chicago in connection with this investigation which was conducted by the zoning committee of the Chicago Real Estate Board, of which Charles M. Nichols is chairman. Proponents of restricted and unrestricted building heights were given a fair hearing. The book has been carefully edited and is the most interesting publication presenting both sides of this mooted question which has as yet been issued. Copies of the book may be had by applying to the Chicago Real Estate Board.

BUILDING NATION WIDE

February Returns for Principal Cities Show Marked Gain Over Last Year; Steel Prices Advance

February figures for the principal cities of the country indicate that a building boom of unprecedented proportions exists over the greater part of the country, outstripping some of the most sanguine predictions made during the opening weeks of the year.

The monthly building survey of S. W. Straus & Co. for February shows an approximate total of building permits for the whole country of $340,000,000.

Detailed official reports submitted to S. W. Straus & Co. by the building departments of 179 principal cities, show a total for February of $226,123,290. The same cities in February, 1922, had a total of $153,675,445, an increase of $72,447,845 or 47 per cent.

One of the outstanding features of the survey is the gain of 96 per cent shown in the Central West. In the Pacific West, the gain was 52 per cent; in the East 33½ per cent and in the South 10 per cent.

Cities showing the largest gains over February, 1922, in the Eastern section were: New York, $26,501,429 and Philadelphia $1,418,525. In the South, Nashville led with $1,227,554.

Leading gains in the Central West were: Chicago, $14,218,600; Cincinnati, $1,134,205; Cleveland, $2,773,560; Detroit, $4,005,744; Omaha, $1,093,640; St. Louis, $1,279,165.

In the Pacific West, Los Angeles led with an increase over last February of $4,500,512 and Long Beach, Cal., showed a gain of $1,881,201.

Cities showing gains of more than $500,000 over February, 1922, included, in the East: Albany, $620,000; Baltimore, $780,000; in the South, Louisville, $691,000; Memphis, $522,000; in the Central West, Canton, $895,000; Columbus, $512,000; Evanston, Ill., $662,000; Milwaukee, $945,000 and Toledo, $615,000.

EASTERN CITIES

Among the cities in the East with large building totals for February was Baltimore, $4,000,000; Buffalo, $1,60?,000; Montclair, N. J., $503,000; Newark, $2,219,000; New York, $79,730,000; including $15,495,000 for Manhattan, $27,159,000 for Brooklyn, $19,227,000 for Queens and $16,980,000 for the Bronx. Philadelphia had a total of $6,799,000; Pittsburg, $1,798,000; Washington, D. C., $4,960,000 and Wilmington $545,000.

In the South some of the large February totals included Atlanta, $2,000,000; Birmingham, $567,000; Chattanooga, $654,000; Dallas, $1,850,000; Fort Worth, $550,000; Houston, $1,685,000; Jacksonville, $803,000; Knoxville, $648,000; Louisville, $1,151,000; Memphis, $2,051,000; Nashville, $1,511,000; New Orleans, $680,000; Richmond, $1,211,000; San Antonio, $624,000 and Winston Salem, $577,000.

CENTRAL WEST

In the Central West the cities with substantial February totals included Akron, $575,000; Canton, $1,029,000; Chicago, $27,712,000; Cincinnati, $2,174,000; Cleveland, $4,257,000; Columbus, $1,256,000; Denver, $1,024,000; Detroit, $7,287,000; Evanston, Ill., $923,000; Grand Rapids, $555,000; Kansas City, $1,676,000; Lima, O., $1,752,000; Milwaukee, $1,298,000; Minneapolis, $1,206,000; Oak Park, Ill., $566,000; Oklahoma City, $565,000, Omaha, $1,564,000; St. Louis, $2,?64,000; St. Paul, $900,000; Toledo, $918,000, and Wichita, $505,000.

In the Pacific West, the cities with large February totals included Berkeley, Cal., $503,000; Long Beach, $3,045,000; Los Angeles, $12,080,000; Oakland, $2,041,000; Pasadena, $759,000; Portland, $1,674,000; Sacramento, $595,000; San Diego, $673,000; San Francisco, $3,478,000, and Seattle, $2,091,000.

STEEL HIGHER

During the month structural steel has shown a marked advance in price, while other important building materials practically all show indications of rapid approaching advances. The market, as in January, remained firm with many materials, according to stocks in the hands of dealers, activity of local building operations and the outlook as regards production and transportation facilities.

The demand for lumber as well as for many other basic building materials now exceeds production, a condition which exists in spite of increased schedules of production of 1922. If building operations continue at the present rate and the demand for material increases proportionately, an advance of prices generally is regarded as inevitable.

The labor situation is not alarming in any particular, but in certain localities it is growing more and more acute as the demand for workman holds strong or increases. The tendency of wages for the country at large is upward. Builders in numerous cities are figuring on a probable increase of wages in nearly all trades. From no quarter is an abundance of either skilled or common labor reported. Wage agreements are pretty well signed up in the important centers.

PROSPERITY ON SOLID BASIS

structures. In the newer sections of the city I saw many buildings under construction. The condition, however, is only temporary, I believe, and the city will catch up with its building in time, although not for a year or so.

"There is a great deal of building under way in St. Louis, but there the people are taking it more slowly, and the city is not likely to suffer any serious setback.

DIFFERENT SITUATION

"Getting out here on the Coast we have a different situation. The fact that Los Angeles shows bright prospects of developing into a big manufacturing center is the thing that will be the salvation of the city. In the last twenty years Los Angeles has grown from a small town to its present size. Thousands of persons have come here because of the climate, and because of its reputation as a playground.

"This feature will continue to attract people to Los Angeles, but the city has grown so large that it has lost some of its attractions in this respect. Los Angeles City has now reached the point where its industrial and commercial future is assured. If this industrial activity continues, there can be no slump.

"The salvation of Los Angeles lies in the fact that it is getting the influx of population, and that the city is not dependent upon any one commercial or industrial activity. Detroit suffered with the slump in the automobile industry, and Kansas City, essentially an agricultural community, was depressed by the unfavorable farming conditions in the Middle West.

"Here, when the time comes for a reaction, as for instance in the construction industry, the reaction will probably be nothing more than a period of dullness, a waiting period, until the slack is taken up.

"Such a condition as prevails over the county as a whole at the present time always invites speculation. It is possible that realty values in Los Angeles are higher than circumstances warrant, but that is always the case in times of great prosperity and activity, and in my experience realty values never get to a point where there are real bargains in houses and lots to be picked up except in times of severe panic. Prices have advanced here a great deal, but the same is true around New York City, where realty prices have more than doubled since 1915."

The labor situation in the East, Mr. Moody pointed out, is the most serious danger to continued building activity. Bricklayers in New York, he said, are getting $20 per day, and plasterers recently demanded $22 per day, and expect to get $25 to $30 per day later in the year. "If this occurs," said Mr. Moody, "I don't see how a large part of the building activity now contemplated can be carried out. Such a labor situation will put an effective stop to building."

Commission, and divergence from that selection would have the effect of throwing any consistent plan for a civic center into the discard, for it is certain that the county and Federal governments will not sacrifice the heavy investments which they have made for the purpose of moving into a new district, perhaps far removed from the present center.

A laudable spirit.

There should be some cheer for the prospective builder in the fact that building material dealers show an inclination to check any advance of material prices during the coming months; months which promise to be record breakers throughout the country. Recently lumber went up for several essential items, but lumbermen believe that a price reaction will follow increased production this spring. Hardware dealers freely admit that there is likely to be advances during the coming months, but dealers in other lines, chiefly the cement, brick and rock and gravel industries, indicate a disposition to hold prices down to the present level.

It will be an excellent idea, if carried out. If it is not done, there will be a recurrence of what happened in 1921. In April, 1920, the peak of building prices in the United States was reached, and, incidentally, it might be noted, the low point in building activity for the country was also reached about that time. The building public, realizing that prices were disproportionately high, declined to build, and settled back to wait for lower prices, which were not long in coming when the attitude of the public mind was sensed by the building material dealers.

By fall of the following year, building prices had dropped to nearly half the peak prices, and building was resumed on a scale that was decidedly encouraging for business in general, and which, in January, 1922, promised to become a boom in fact.

With the knowledge of what happened in 1920 in mind, and with the knowledge that what happened then can easily recur, manufacturers and far-sighted building dealers are anxious, apparently, to hold prices down to a reasonable level; they are not anxious to kill the goose that lays the golden egg, and they know that they can reap greater profits on volume of business than on an unnecessarily wide margin of profit.

If this lesson has been borne home upon those who have more or less control of the price situation, no blight will be caused upon a flourishing building outlook; if the lesson has not yet been learned, another period of inactivity may follow, despite the great and general need throughout the nation for new buildings of all types.

NEW NAME IS GIVEN TO OFFICE BUILDING

A. C. Blumenthal & Co., Inc., announce that the building located at the southwest corner of Sixth and Hill streets, will be known in the future as the Consolidated Building, and will be under the management of A. C. Blumenthal & Co., Inc. This building was formerly known as the Consolidated Realty Building.

C. J. Pearce, for two years manager of Alpine Tavern, Mt. Lowe, for the Pacific Electric Railway, former manager of the business property department for Shore Brothers Company, and acting secretary of the Los Angeles Realty Board, pending the arrival of Tom Ingersoll, has been appointed manager of the Consolidated Building by the Blumenthal Company.

EXPECT TO ESTABLISH BIG TOTAL

Three Hundred Millions Predicted for Chicago Building This Year

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, March 17.—Upward of $300,000,000 building construction in Chicago during 1923 was predicted today by the Citizens' Committee to Enforce the Landis Award, which based its estimate on the $55,000,000 worth of permits taken out between January 1 and March 10.

"Our estimate of a $300,000,000 total is based on a pro rata of the January, February and early March figures over the entire year," declared General Manager F. W. Armstrong. "The peak of the building months is yet to come and the total for the year should exceed the $300,000,000 estimate. May, June and July are normally the big building months for building in Chicago, and the year's total depends on the activity in these months."

Two branches of the citizens' committee are making unusual preparations to meet the demand for skilled building trades workers which is bound to ensue from this record-breaking program. Carpenters are extremely scarce, a bonus is being offered this class of workers in addition to the regular union scale of $1.25 an hour. Lathers who are paid by the foot are averaging $15 to $21 a day, with plasterers receiving an average of $15 a day. The above wage estimate is computed on the eight-hour day.

CONTRACTS LET FOR EXCHANGE BUILDING

The contract for the construction of a three-story telephone exchange building to be erected at the southeast corner of Sixty-ninth street and Vermont avenue for the Southern California Telephone Company, was awarded to the Weymouth Crowell Company, contractors.

The building will be steel frame construction with brick walls, pressed brick and terra cotta facing, fire escapes and fire doors, and reinforced concrete flooring. It is to have a frontage of 81 feet by 114 feet. The cost is estimated at $250,000.

REALTORS OPPOSING NEW LAW

Duplication of Records Unnecessary, in Opinion of Local Board

The governing committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board has gone on record as unalterably opposed to the bill introduced in the Legislature providing that documents filed in the County Recorder's office be prepared in duplicate.

Letters expressing this attitude will be sent by Secretary Tom Ingersoll to the entire legislative delegation representing Los Angeles county at Sacramento.

It is contended that many of the documents are written with lead pencil, while others are almost illegible. It is argued that documents when written by hand on printed forms could be easily altered by adding material in the same handwriting, while under the present system it is impossible to tamper with the records.

It is reported that the title companies and lawyers agree that the passage of the bill would be a serious mistake, while it is asserted that the District Attorney's office regards the proposed legislation as dangerous. The trustees of the bar association are said to have passed a resolution asking that this bill be defeated because "it is impracticable."

County Recorder C. L. Logan, who has held the office for sixteen years, reported to the members of the governing committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board that thousands of compliments have been paid his office because of the manner in which the records are kept by writing them in bound books with typewriting machines.

TO FORMALLY OPEN SUBDIVISION TODAY

Formal opening of a new tract which has been in course of development for ninety days, of fifty-one lots, is to take place today. According to the owners of the tract, no vacant lots are to be offered for sale. Each lot is to be improved with a home produced by Pacific Ready-Cut Homes, Inc. Several of these structures are now practically completed. When the entire tract is fully developed an investment of more than 400,000 will be represented, according to the subdividers. A tract office has been erected at the corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Carson Road.

Capitalists Buy Site for Modern Hotel

Lodge Making Plans for New Building

CORRESPONDENCE.]
ALHAMBRA, March 17.—This is entering upon a period of prosperity which exceeds the hopes of even the most optimistic of Alhambra's loyal citizens and prospects for the coming year in every line of activity are indeed bright. The present progress is due in great measure to the efforts of the Alhambra Club, supported by the Chamber of Commerce, the Business Men's Association and other organizations, in calling the attention of the country to the opportunities here through the medium of publicity. The results obtained during the few weeks of the publicity campaign have been gratifying and letters of inquiry are being received in great numbers from all sections of the country.

Property values, both business and residence, have shown an increase, but as land prices here have not been inflated, present values are considered both reasonable and sound. Further advances are certain to come, say experienced real estate men. It is estimated that realty transfers during the past few weeks in Alhambra have increased in volume to over $2,-

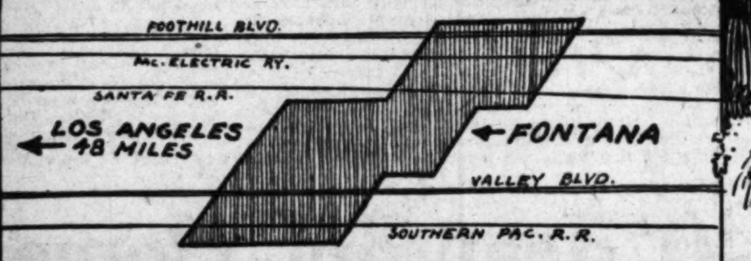
A BUSINESS YOU OWN A HOME THAT PAYS FOR ITSELF

Steps to your Success



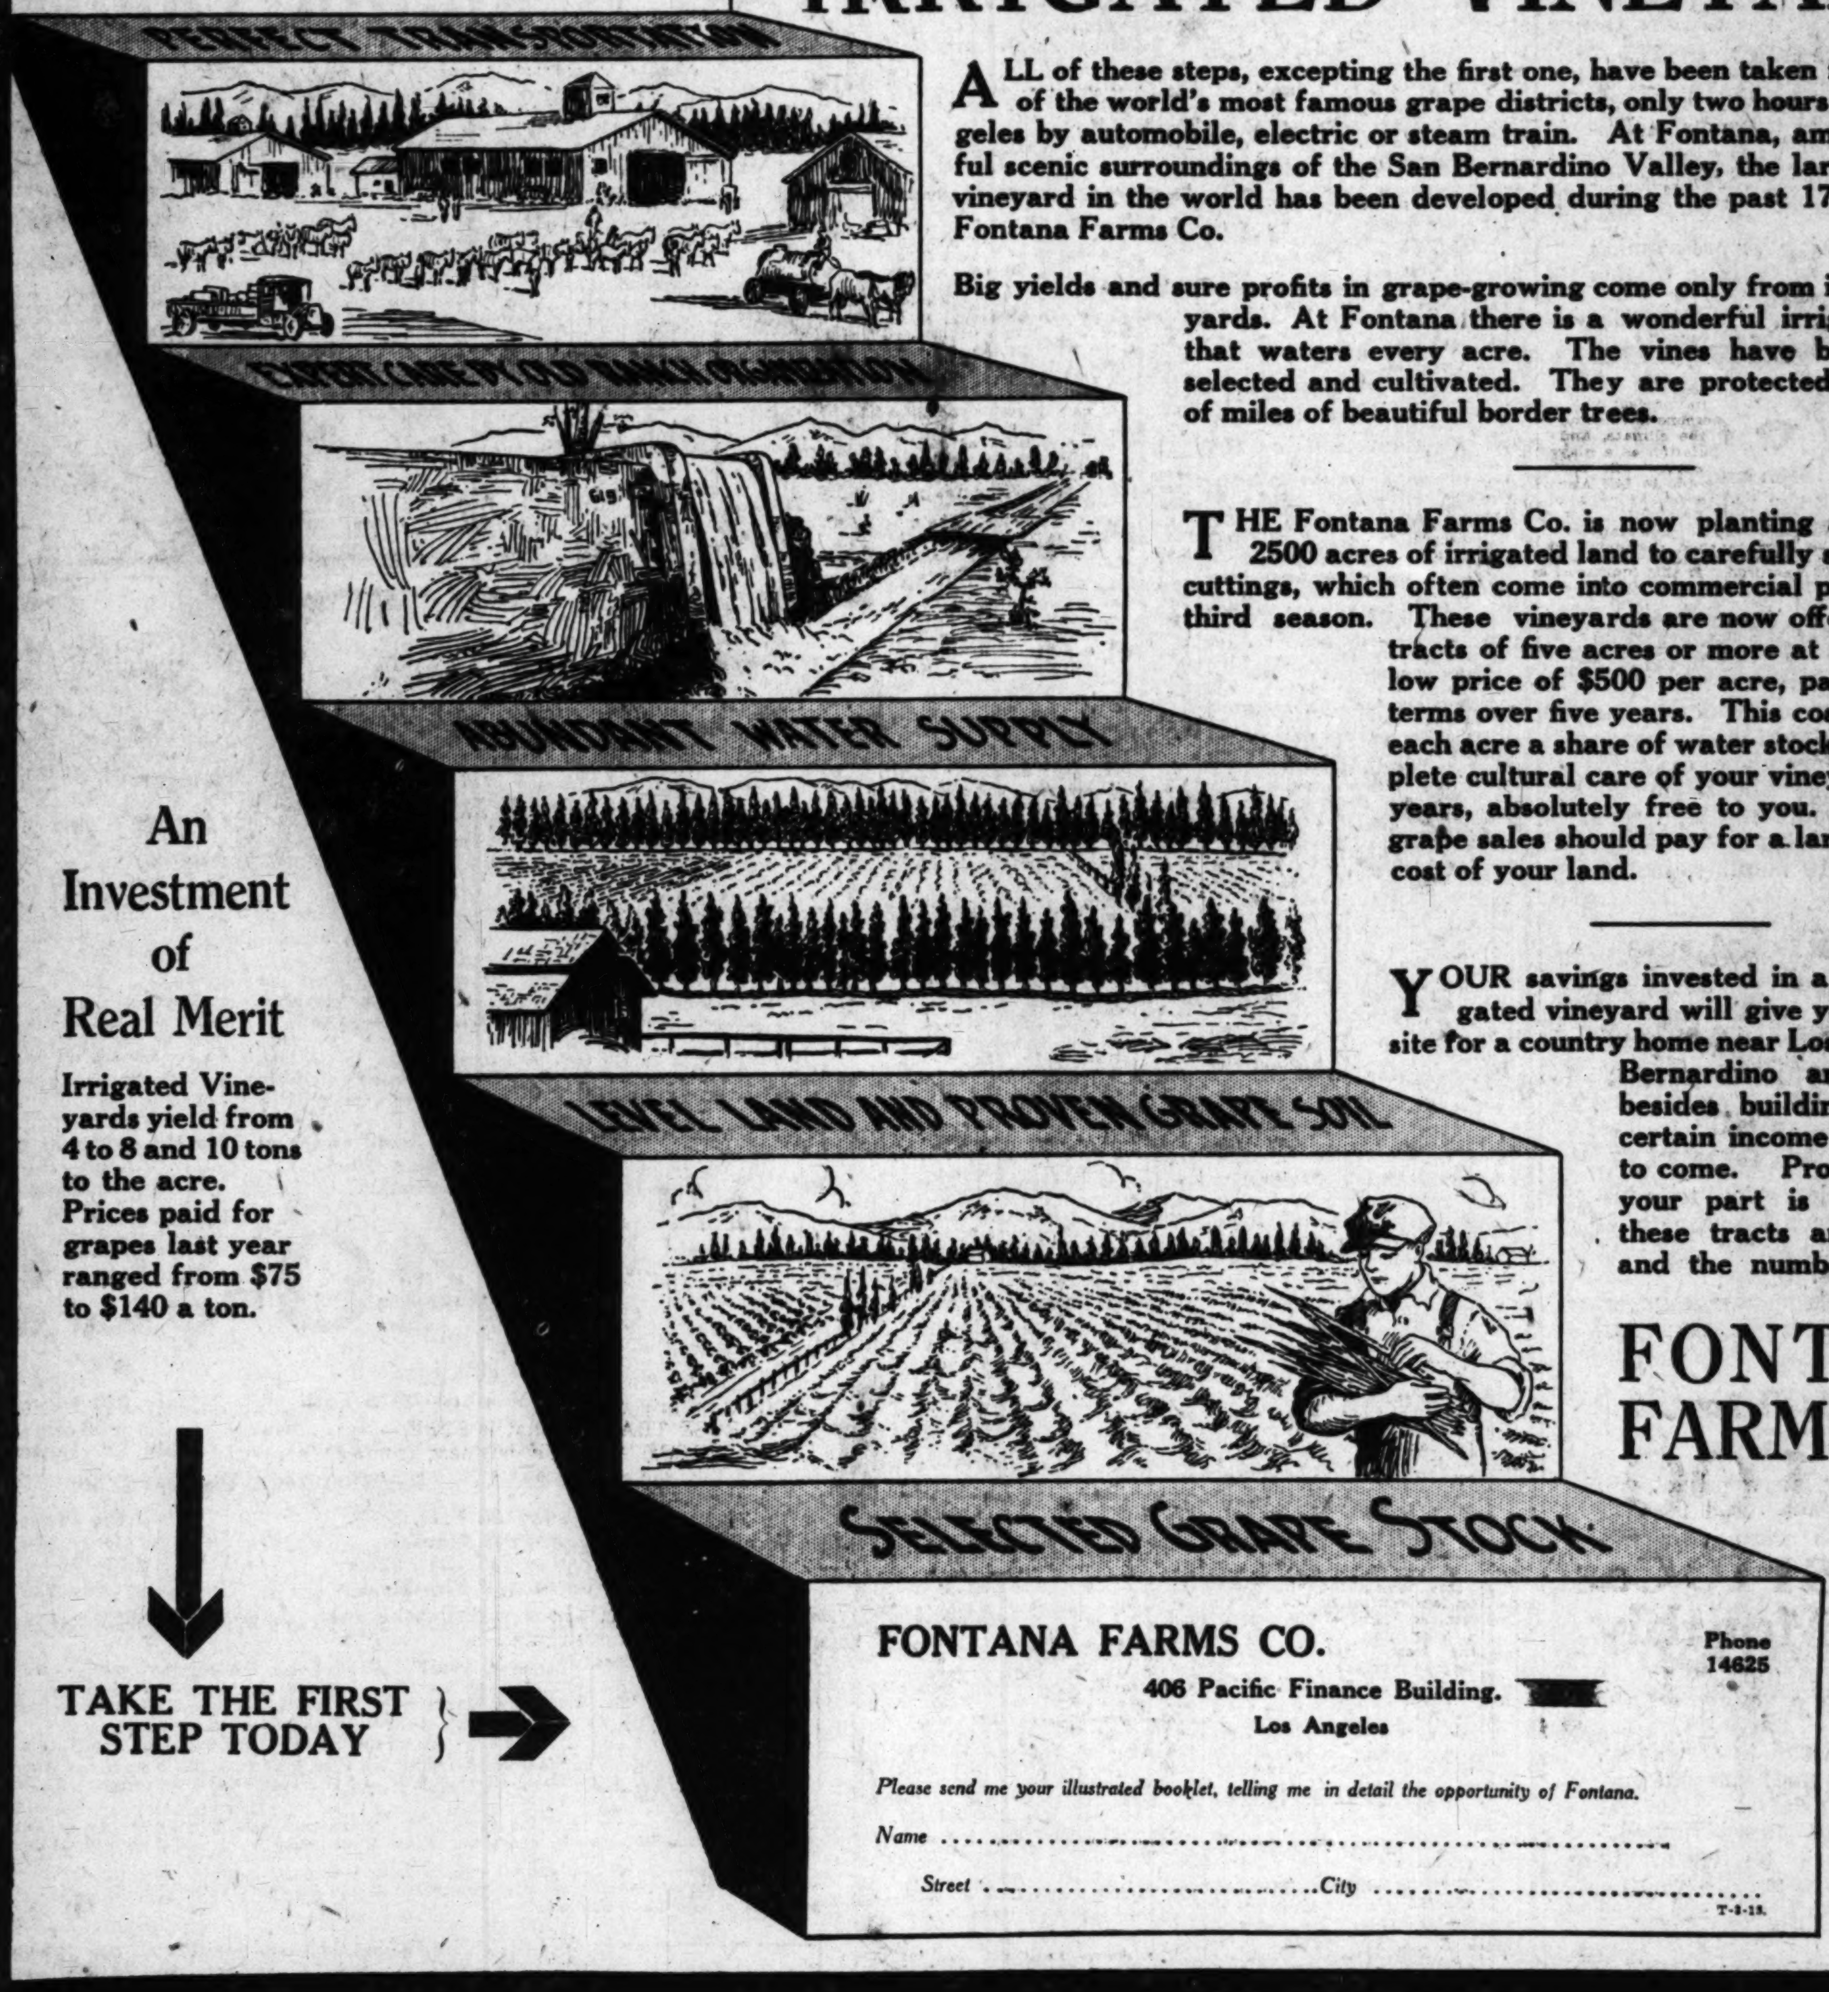
IRRIGATED VINEYARDS

ALL of these steps, excepting the first one, have been taken for you in one of the world's most famous grape districts, only two hours from Los Angeles by automobile, electric or steam train. At Fontana, amid the beautiful scenic surroundings of the San Bernardino Valley, the largest irrigated vineyard in the world has been developed during the past 17 years by the Fontana Farms Co.

Big yields and sure profits in grape-growing come only from irrigated vineyards. At Fontana there is a wonderful irrigation system that waters every acre. The vines have been carefully selected and cultivated. They are protected by hundreds of miles of beautiful border trees.

THE Fontana Farms Co. is now planting an additional 2500 acres of irrigated land to carefully selected grape cuttings, which often come into commercial production the third season. These vineyards are now offered to you in tracts of five acres or more at the extremely low price of $500 per acre, payable in easy terms over five years. This cost includes for each acre a share of water stock and the complete cultural care of your vineyard for three years, absolutely free to you. Profits from grape sales should pay for a large part of the cost of your land.

YOUR savings invested in a Fontana irrigated vineyard will give you a beautiful site for a country home near Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Riverside, besides building for you a certain income for the years to come. Prompt action on your part is advisable, as these tracts are going fast and the number is limited.



An Investment of Real Merit

Irrigated Vineyards yield from 4 to 8 and 10 tons to the acre. Prices paid for grapes last year ranged from $75 to $140 a ton.

RICHES FROM CITY'S REALTY

Status of Conditions Here to Bring Wealth

Advent of New Settlers to Effect Change

Intensive Settlement Over Entire West is Planned

[Additional information and data regarding the industrial future of Los Angeles are contained in the following article prepared by Willis Owen, eminent industrial specialist, for The Times. In previous articles Mr. Owen has written of other observations which he made while on a trip to the East. Among the noteworthy predictions made by Mr. Owen is that this city will be a second Chicago industrially.—Ed.]

BY WILLIS OWEN

Two hundred million dollars was the amount of the fortune of the late Marshall Field, built upon his sound judgment in buying Chicago real estate.

In an interview with him some years ago, he said, "Real estate is the greatest business in the world, for it is the source of all wealth."

This has a direct bearing upon the present situation in Los Angeles, for clear thinkers everywhere are coming to realize that Marshall Field was not only correct in his statements, but highly successful as the result of his judgment. I have written this special article at this time because the condition of the real estate buyer and Los Angeles today, is comparable to that of Marshall Field and Chicago, except that the comparison is all in favor of the buyer and Los Angeles.

When the Union Stockyards, the great grain markets, meat and food packing-houses, the Junction Railway and the central manufacturing district were being established in Chicago, Marshall Field watched the development, step by step, of these great industries, and, as they continued to grow he continued to buy real estate in the path of their growth until he became nationally known as one of the greatest real estate merchants in the United States, in addition to his more commonly known title of the "merchant prince" of Chicago.

BRING HUGE SUMS

These great Chicago enterprises which I have designated as the allied industries, were the cause of bringing to that city fully 1,500,000 of its population, and they disburse, today, nearly $7,000,000 a week in wages, salaries and profits, exclusive of interest and dividends. Nearly 1,000,000 of Chicago's people, together with many of its great banks, stores, hotels and railroads, derive their support and income largely from them.

The foregoing I have written before. I am repeating it because The Times seems to be acquiring so many new readers and because of the numerous queries that have resulted from these articles, not only locally but from people throughout California, the East and even Europe, who want to know more about the industrial future of this city, what the allied industries are, where the East Los Angeles industrial district is located, why we expect another million people added to our present population in a comparatively few years, what will support them, where is the best place to buy real estate and what will insure reasonable profits and safety for the investor—surely plenty of questions to answer—and it may be necessary to repeat the statements in the foregoing paragraph again and again.

What Marshall Field did in Chicago can be done in greater measure here in Los Angeles, because the allied industries were then new and untried ventures and years were required to prove their worth. They succeeded, however, and made Chicago the leading and most widely known industrial city in the world, and Marshall Field bought on his vision, faith, good judgment and courage. The growth of Chicago was not then nearly so well defined or assured as is now the growth of Los Angeles.

These giant allied industries are no longer an industrial uncertainty, and they are not only now being duplicated here but they will undoubtedly assume greater proportions than in Chicago because they will have more resources to back them and the same experienced men who were so successful there are the men who are doing this work here.

LARGE MARKET AVAILABLE

Chicago has not yet been able to open the way down the Mississippi to the Gulf and the ocean, while Los Angeles has become a great world seaport on the open road to Australia, the islands, the Orient, and the Americas and, because of the canal, it can successfully compete with Omaha, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and Denver in shipping to New York and Boston, giving it a market equal to any city in the world. We have more back country to develop, more raw material to draw from, cheaper and better fuel, and the most efficient and profit-producing workmen in the United States, made so because of our wonderful climate, in which a man can work in comfort and safety every day in the year.

Smile if you will at my continual claim of the money value of our climate, but I have had many occasions to investigate and prove the enormous climatic losses of the East and I know, from an economic standpoint, what our advantages mean in annual dividends and my statistics and arguments are producing direct responses from every part of the United States.

I personally visited the lake front in Chicago during the recent blizzard and saw shippers losing $100,000 an hour, and I know of the almost prohibitive insurance rates exacted to protect them against these losses. We don't do these things at the Los Angeles harbor.

TO BRING MILLIONS

Independent of the hundreds of other causes that will continue to bring thousands of people and industries to the city, the allied industries will, in my judgment, and within the ensuing five years, bring to the East Los Angeles Industrial district alone, much more than 250,000 new people.

Railroads make their profits from hauling freight; therefore, all of the transcontinental and local railroads are aligned squarely behind the development of these freight producing industries.

Nearly two years ago Mr. Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific System, told the Chamber of Commerce and the bankers of this city that his road would spend nearly $20,000,000 in developing its facilities at the harbor and in building a great Los Angeles terminal, embracing an extensive system of shops and yards and a manufacturing and industrial district east of the river in the city. In furtherance of these enterprises it has spent millions in the purchase of lands and two construction camps are now in active operation on them. The cost of this work will be many millions of dollars, resulting ultimately in employing thousands of workers and disbursing millions annually in the payroll.

This was first announced in The Times of July 11, 1921, and in later issues. Subsequently it became known that the allied industries of Chicago were to be duplicated here and I was asked by interested parties who knew of my railroad industrial work for the late E. H. Harriman, and others, to make an exhaustive investigation of every phase of this subject, which I did, and I feel that this city should know, as far as I am privileged at this time to divulge this information, just what is being done.

DISTRICT MAPPED

One of my first steps was to have competent surveyors, engineers and map makers prepare a map of what I have designated as the East Los Angeles Industrial District, showing the industrial lands of the Union Pacific and other railroads and of the Central Manufacturing District, which latter district embraces within its confines all of the allied industries. I found this map necessary, as almost no one seemed to know where these great industries were to be located.

Twenty years ago the property at Seventh and Broadway had but little value. Today the startling statement is made that it has the highest rental value of any retail business location in the United States. Population is the cause of this value, and as the population increases, its value will increase.

Here is another equally startling statement—please note its significance—California lands are rapidly being divided into one, five and ten-acre intensive home farms and it has enough of these lands to provide more than 10,000,000 of these wonderful wealth producers.

REMARKABLE STORY

In a wonderfully instructive article about the San Fernando Valley, written by Edward G. Leaf, real estate editor of The Times, entitled: "The Story of a Fertile Valley," and appearing in the Los Angeles Realtor for February, this process of growth is graphically portrayed, and the pessimist who warns you to "look out" should memorize it and every one should read it and then mail it to some suffering, snow-bound eastern friend. The history of the growth of this marvelous valley will be linked with the history of the growth of the southland. The article also contains valuable and unusual statistics which I shall present in a subsequent story.

The history of the Imperial Valley is equally as inspiring, but even this is only a small part of the remarkable story—look at this—lying between Los Angeles and Omaha is more than 600,000,000 acres of desert and unused land. The great transcontinental railroads entering Los Angeles are at work on plans, right at this moment, to sink wells for irrigation, build plants to furnish electricity for pumping and lighting, and to build and maintain colleges to teach scientific, intensive farming, fruit growing, hog, cattle, sheep and poultry raising.

TO CUT UP DESERT

The desert will be cut into small farms, houses will be built, everything put in working order and sold on easy terms to home builders. You have read statistics in The Times showing the almost unbelievable millions in value of the products of the Imperial Valley, but here is a plan of development so colossal that the mind can hardly grasp its import.

Hauling trains through a thousand miles of dead country is not the tonnage handled by the Los Angeles Harbor increased more rapidly serving the port have to add to their facilities it will be necessary for department to construct tracks to provide more cars during years, is the essence which has been issued by the Associated Jobbers of statements regarding the increase in harbor contained in a letter Gregson, secretary of association, by D. W. general manager of the the railroad that the municipally owned demonstrates that facilities will be necessary only for the steam and serving the harbor the municipal belt increase in the tonnage the city railroad is the following figures by Mr. Pontius: carloads; 1920, 13,-; 1922, 47,886.

setting forth the tonnage which has at the harbor Mr. describes the means which taken to provide greater. He writes, in part: January, 1921, the Pacific has provided 24,591 feet for the storage and loads and empties, care of 480 cars, while Pacific Company has 16,000 feet of track, care of 200 cars, and feet, which takes cars. None of these industry of storage by either the city companies."

to these statements of the increase in which has been made on lines, the studies which made by a yard specialist employment of a new freight master.

also sets forth the the city has done on which includes the construction of twenty-seven miles of track.

Regarding this work the circular has the following:

The harbor department has completed and in operation at the present time twenty-seven miles of track. They have just completed at Pier 1, one track, 2400 feet long; two tracks, 1000 feet, each. At Pier A they have just completed and turned over: Two tracks of a total of 2800 feet. (This is the limit of the space available at this pier.) There has been authorized and now under construction between the south end of McFarland street and Water street on the east side of the present main line, 4 tracks of 1400 feet each. They are arranging for, upon the west side of the main line, 8 tracks of 1400 feet each. (This hinges upon an exchange of lands with the Southern Pacific Company, but we do not anticipate any difficulty of delay in this transaction.) They have practically twelve miles of track in covering the Blinn and McCormick lumber yards. They have under contemplation an extension of some 3000 feet into the San Pedro district around the south side of Smith Island, which will relieve the present grade crossings as well as the general situation, but no funds are at present available for this extension.

TO OPEN NEW TRACTS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SOUTH PASADENA, March 17. That South Pasadena is fast nearing the end of its unsubdivided acreage became known this week with the filing of maps for new subdivisions by J. B. Coulston of Pasadena and E. H. Crippen of Milan avenue.

The two new subdivisions are small, one of sixteen lots, the other of thirty. The Coulston property is at Fremont avenue and Buena Vista Lane. The Crippen "L Senda Tract" is at Garfield avenue and Huntington Drive. The two subdivisions are at the extreme northern and extreme western limits of the city, respectively. Practically everything else has been cut up into city lots.

This condition has come about largely in the last few months. Building permits since last September have jumped about seventy-five per cent each month with a corresponding demand for unimproved property.

Permits so far this month have gone over the $100,000 mark which indicates that March is to duplicate February which, though only a twenty-eight-day month, beat all existing records with permits well over a quarter of a million dollars.

A rumored pending reduction of water rates is said to have been responsible for largely increased queries from out-of-town sources recently.

START FUND FOR REALTY RESEARCH

Contributions of the Endowment Fund of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the income of which is to be devoted to the "assembling of pertinent real estate facts for displays to realtors, public spending authorities and others," are coming in. A letter has been sent to all real estate boards asking that they present the matter of subscriptions to the endowment fund to their membership. The committee on facts and problems, which has charge of the campaign for raising a million dollar fund, and which will also direct the studies that are to be made on behalf of real estate interests, appreciates the enthusiastic response which its program has evoked.

Starting with an initial sum of $55,000 subscribed at Jacksonville in January, the committee anticipates that it will soon be able to reach the goal that has been set. While subscriptions and gifts may be unconditional, and while endowments may be forever should donors so desire, subscriptions are also being asked for in accordance with a plan which requires the payment of the endowment pledge in ten annual instalments, all money paid in to be refunded at the end of the ten-year period. The endowment fund is to be invested in real estate mortgages and the income is to be used for the study of real estate problems. Members of the committee on facts and problems are: Charles G. Edwards of New York City, Chairman; C. T. Moffett of Minneapolis, treasurer; W. E. Shannon of Washington; S. S. Thorpe of Minneapolis; A. J. Kelly, Jr., of Pittsburg; H. U. Nelson of Chicago.

UNION TOOL FIRM TO BUILD ADDITIONS

Contracts have been let by the Union Tool Company of Torrance for new buildings which will double the capacity of the firm's plant. According to the announcement made by the firm; the improvements will represent an expenditure of $1,000,000 and will be completed in the next ninety days. It is also stated that a bonus has been given for the speeding up of this work.

In addition to the building improvements the firm is installing an additional electric furnace to insure an abundant supply of steel for future demand.

PROGRESS IN YEAR IS RAPID

Huntington Beach Shows Great Gain in Building; Postal Receipts Increase

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HUNTINGTON BEACH, March 17.—According to the report of Building Inspector Louis F. Gates there were fifty-two building permits issued during the month of February. Out of these permits thirty were for homes to cost on an average of over $2000 each, or $60,300 for the thirty homes. The slogan adopted by the merchants of this city and which has been featured on the full-page ad, which has appeared regularly for the last six months in the local paper, "A Home of Your Own in 1923," is being lived in reality for one might easily add this slogan to it now: "A Home a Day in 1923," which is a fact. In January there were thirty-six homes built and February there thirty permits issued.

There are plans under way for building several business blocks, both on Main street and Ocean avenue. The Obarr block on Ocean avenue, near Main street, is about 50 per cent finished, having passed the first floor in construction.

Mr. Gates reports one derrick within the city limits in February, and ten garages to cost $1710. Additions and alterations to other homes were $2280, eight home-owners making these improvements. Business blocks are to cost $9500. The total for January was $145,655, and for February $104,-965.

That the population of the city has passed the 6000 mark is evidenced by the receipts of the Postoffice, which were $1745.40 for January, 1923, and $2506.09 for January of this year. February 1922 showed receipts of $2013.21. In 1920 the population was 1780 and it is estimated that there are about 6000 persons who actually reside here.

There are fourteen square miles inside the city limits. The paved streets are eighteen miles long and there are twenty-seven miles of unpaved streets. Nearly 1600 gas meters are working in the city. Also 1500 water meters and 1950 electric light connections. Building permits issued since January, 1920, represent $1,156,212.

Property valuation for the last fiscal year was $5,502,987, against $2,207,635 two years ago, which represents an increase of 150 per cent.

RICHES FROM CITY'S REALTY

especially profitable and in self-defense this development will be fathered until there will be millions of these small farms where now there is sand, sage brush and jackrabbits.

Much of the products of these millions of scientific farmers will be sold in and through Los Angeles markets and much of their supplies will be bought here.

This unique combination of scores of elements of growth, solidity and permanency is without a parallel even in this country of marvelous and diversified possibilities, and I feel justified in my belief that there will be 2,000,000 people in Los Angeles by the close of 1928.

If there was anyone left in the East who did not want to come to Los Angeles, the experience of the past winter will have made converts of them.

THOUSANDS ON WAY

As they come, in thousands and thousands, even these small farms near Los Angeles will, one by one, be cut into acres, half acres and then lots, until, eventually, all of Southern California will practically be one vast city.

This is not a futurist dream — it is rapidly taking place right now, but in the absence of brass bands and box car letters to emblazon the fact, we do not realize it.

I say, unhesitatingly, buy Los Angeles real estate. And, why? Because Los Angeles, whose growth has been the marvel of the world, is just entering the period of its really greatest development —a development based on the most solid foundation any community can possess—industry.

John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, during a recent visit to Los Angeles, states: "Located as you are with the commerce of the world at your door, your industrial future is not only assured, but destined to develop into international importance."

L. F. Stern, vice-president of the S. W. Straus & Co., during the past month, stated: "The next four years will see an industrial development of Los Angeles few are able to comprehend. It can be assumed by 1928 her population will exceed 1,500,000."

This great bonding house is prepared to invest $20,000,000 or more in Los Angeles buildings and to quote the great Napoleon: "Success is the most convincing talker in the world."

Practically every great man who visits Los Angeles corroborates their statements. Los Angeles has always grown and it always will. Know the truth of success and act on it.

Porterville Man Buys Auto Business; Cleaning Plant Sold

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, March 17.—Welde Brothers, well-known Porterville automobile dealers, recently sold their interest in the automobile business to R. E. Lowery of Porterville, who has taken possession of the garage building on South Main street, formerly occupied by Welde Brothers. Mr. Lowery, who has been in the repair business here for several years, is well known in auto circles.

O. S. Welde has accepted a position as Tulare-Kings counties manager for an insurance company, maintaining an office in the F.F.F. Building, at Main and Olive, Porterville. I. E. Welde, the elder brother, who has been seriously ill for some months, will take a long rest.

Wayne Phillips, well-known young man of this city, has purchased the dry cleaning plant at 126 Main street, formerly operated and owned by Mark Jones. The establishment will now be known as the Porterville Cleaning and Dyeing Company.

Mr. Phillips is a man of considerable experience in the various phases of cleaning, as well as office routine and soliciting. He states that a number of improvements will be the order of the near future. A recent addition to equipment is a new auto delivery wagon, the body of which is almost entirely of glass, arranged with special hangers so that clothing can be carried without wrinkling and with protection from dust.

PASADENA WAREHOUSE

Plans for a one-story, class A warehouse, to be on North Santa Anita avenue, Pasadena, for Frank Pickard, have been completed by Walter Putnam, Pasadena architect. The building will be fifty-nine feet in width and ninety-four feet in length. It will represent an investment of more than $30,000.

DOMINGUEZ TRACT GOES ON MARKET

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TORRANCE, March 17.—Four hundred acres of unleased land east of the Torrance oil field, formerly part of the great Dominguez estate, will be placed on the market Monday in parcels ranging from ten to eighty acres, M. R. Osburn, president of the Dominguez Land Corporation, announced yesterday. A portion of this acreage lies within the industrial district of Torrance and has been divided up into parcels suitable for factory sites.

Three hundred and thirty-six acres of the big tract lie between Normandie avenue and Harbor Boulevard, with several hundred feet frontage on both these important streets.

MONROVIA TRACTS

Seven New Subdivisions Being Prepared For Market

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, March 17.—In response to the steadily growing demand for homesites in and around Monrovia, seven new tracts are being subdivided and will be placed on the market in the near future, according to Gierlich and Gierlich, engineers, who are entrusted with the surveys of the subdivisions.

Lewis Bradbury is dividing fifteen acres east of town, A. P. Evans is opening up a tract of villa sites north of Highland Place and Mrs. Cabell of Sierra Madre is plotting an eleven-acre tract on North Main street. Preliminary surveys have been completed on the new Offield subdivision.

CONTRACT IS LET

The contract for the construction of a three-story, brick store and hotel building in Burbank for A. Sence, has been awarded to the Randall Building Company. The building is to be seventy-five feet in width and ninety feet in length. The ground floor will house two stores and the lobby of the hotel. The upper two stories will be devoted to guest rooms. The building will represent the expenditure of approximately $45,000.

Huntington Beach Theater

The Long Beach Investment Company is planning the construction of a modern theater building in Huntington Beach, according to general report. The building contemplated will be capable of seating 1000 persons, and will cost in the neighborhood of $85,000. According to Mr. Obarr, president of the investment company, plans are now under way, and construction work is to be started in the course of the next ninety days.

CAMPAIGN SUCCESSFUL

Ground Soon to be Broken for New Church Edifice to be Erected at Alhambra

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, March 17.—With more than $48,000 already subscribed and with the cash in hand mounting toward the $30,000 mark, Margeno-avenue Methodist Church, under the pastorate of Rev. John M. Barnhart, D. D., is planning for the breaking of ground for a new edifice which should be completed by late summer.

The new building, without furnishings, will cost not less than $35,000 and upon its completion the old church, now being used for Sunday-school and social purposes, will be razed and a modern plant, thoroughly equipped for the work of religious education, will take its place. This will cost $40,000, making the total property valuation above $95,000.

The Marengo-avenue Church was organized fifteen years ago with a charter membership of twenty-five, and has enjoyed a healthy growth from the first. Rev. Luther A. Rice was the first pastor and with an abundance of faith and hope led his people through the early stages of uncertainty, and with the aid of the membership built the first house of worship that has from time to time been enlarged to meet the needs of the growing congregation.

The pastorate of Dr. Arthur E. Johnson, who followed Rev. Rice, saw the completion of a beautiful parsonage for the use of the pastor and his family. This has recently been moved from the church tract to make room for the larger proposed building.

The rapid growth of Alhambra, especially in the western district, may make necessary some enlargement of the church plans, as this will become the religious home of many of the hundreds of new residents in this locality.

The vision and enthusiasm of the present pastor, Dr. Barnhart, are largely responsible for the activity of this congregation, and an evangelistic campaign, under his direction, is to begin on the 18th inst., and will continue until Easter Sunday.

WILL SUBDIVIDE WILSHIRE TRACT

A new subdivision, representing a purchase price of $2,125,000 and known as Beverly Vista, is just announced by the McCarty-Vaughan-Evans Corporation. This property lies just east of the Beverly Speedway, between Wilshire Boulevard, Preuss Road and Pico Boulevard.

In addition to a number of prominent local bankers, Mrs. Wallace Reid is also one of the owners, the active ownership being represented by the McCarty-Vaughan-Evans Corporation.

Walter G. McCarty is widely known as a subdivider, having put thirty-six tracts on the market here, and being one of the orginal subdividers of Western avenue property.

John A. Vaughn is also well known as a realtor, having been actively interested in Western Avenue Park, Belle Mead, Melrose and Fairfax subdivisions.

Jack Evans, as sales manager, has been associated with a number of the most successful tracts in the city.

INTENSIVE FARMING IS DESCRIBED

Local Realtor Tells of Opportunities on the Small Ranches in Southwest

"Southern California is the finest field in the United States for the small farm development," said Louis B. Joralmon of the Los Angeles Realty Board in a lecture on "Farm Lands," delivered before the general real estate class of the University of Southern California's extension division. "The man operating on a small scale has his best chance here.

"More money crops can be raised on a small piece of ground because of the possible rotations. This great diversity of produce coupled with the transportation facilities and advantages form a most attractive proposition for the so-called 'little man.' "

Mr. Joralmon said that the ideal farmer was a combination of surveyor, water man and salesman. He also stated that the real estate broker selling farm lands to a prospect should make a most intensive study of the wants of that prospect and should analyze his requirements most thoroughly.

Many questions were asked by members of the class when Mason Case of the educational committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board as chairman opened the discussion. Mr. Joralmon answered the queries from his seventeen years experience. The citrus industry and walnuts came in for the biggest share of attention.

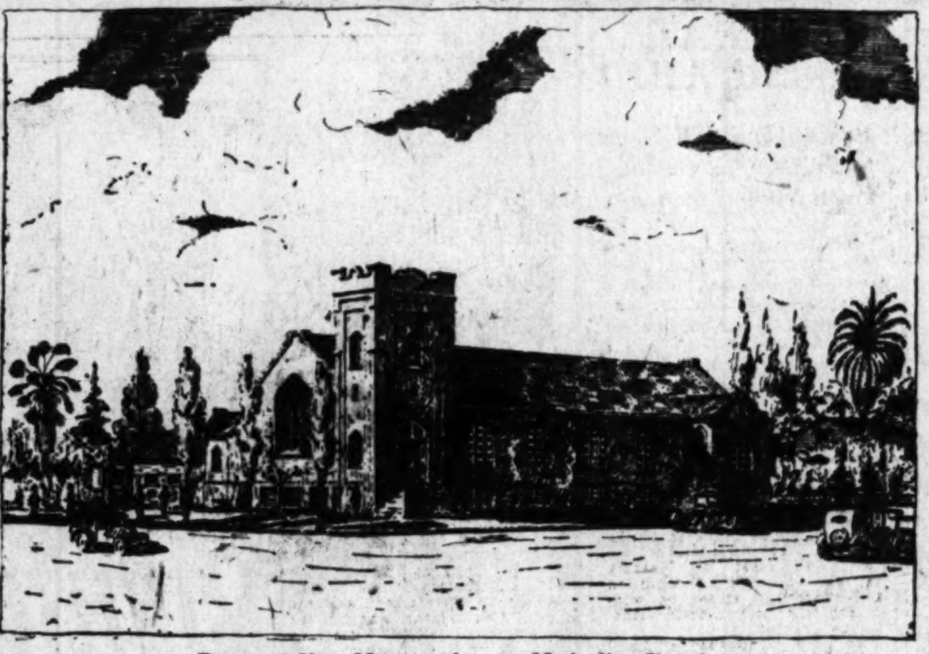
W. H. Daum, a former member of the governing committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board will speak at the next meeting of the class on "Industrial Real Estate."

COMPLETE PLANS FOR BUILDINGS AT VERNON

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HUNTINGTON PARK, March 17.—James Barr, architect and designer of Huntington Park, has just completed the plans for the new buildings to be erected by the Mark-Lilly Company, at Vernon, and the new buildings for the Federal Box Company, in the same city. The dimensions of the former company's building will be 80 by 150 feet, and for the latter, the building will have a floor space of 120,000 square feet. Both structures will cost approximately $30,000. Mr. Barr is also completing a residence court in this city which shows an approximate cost of $16,500.

Nearing Goal in Drive for Building Fund



Proposed New Marengo-Avenue Methodist Church

To be erected at Alhambra when sufficient money has been subscribed by the congregation. The building, it is estimated, will cost not less than $35,000.

FACTORIES FLOCK HERE

Forty-seven Firms Locate in City During February, According to Chamber of Commerce Figures

There were forty-seven new industrial concerns established in Los Angeles during the month of February, according to the report just issued by A. G. Arnoll, manager of the industrial department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. This remarkable record for the shortest month in the year lends great impetus toward industrial expansion, which is becoming very marked.

The largest plant of its kind ever located on the Pacific Coast, the California Cyanide Company, was announced during the month. This is a combination of capital interested in the Air Reduction Company of America and local interests, headed by F. W. Braun, and the plant will turn out a huge volume of product for both domestic and export trade. The first unit will be located near Cudahy and is estimated to cost $1,000,000. The "Sassy Jane" garment Company was taken over by the M. G. Cooper Dry Goods Company, while the originator of the company and garment, June Rand, has united with the Joseph Zukin Company, waist manufacturers. The Tarkio Molasses Feed Company of Kansas City will build a feed mill in Los Angeles to supply all of their Western trade.

A group of mid-western men's clothing manufacturers are planning a large plant in this city, attracted here by the large market for this class of goods and also by the location in this country of the Long Beach Woolen Mills and a coming worsted mill. Another concern whose operation here has much significance in industry is the establishment of Edward Mueller & Company.

Other developments are Pacific Coast Borax Company, factory at San Pedro costing $100,000; Quality Electric Company, factory building at 812 San Pedro street, cost $100,000; Corona By-products Exchange Company, new factory at Corona; Santa Fe railway, two new shop buildings at San Bernardino; California Paint Remover Company, factory on Fourteenth street; Los Angeles Furniture Manufacturing Company will erect a factory at 1838 East Jefferson street; Buttress & McClennan, factory at Fifty-second and Santa Fe avenue.

The following is a list of the firms which located in Los Angeles during February:

Robert McCord, composition stone; R. & W. Co., leather goods; Royal Plating Works, plating and enameling; Goldenola Talking Machine Company, talking machines; Titania Cream Separator, cream separators; Wright & Kennedy, furniture; Prominent Manufacturing Company, furniture; R. Moulle Floral Perfumery Company, perfumery; National Food Products Company, soft drink powders; Olive Leaf Press, printers; West Coast Garment Company, ladies' wearing apparel; Hanawalt-Spaulding Company, shingle staining; Standard Frame Manufacturing Company, door and window frames; Merit Manufacturing Company, water heaters; Superior Paint Company, paint; William Gravery Company, nurses' uniforms; French Products Manufacturing Company, disinfectant, deodorizers; June Rand Company, dresses, aprons; Golden West Knitting Mills, sweaters, knit goods; Marvel Manufacturing Company, cold solder; Mission Orange Punch Company, fruit juice; Coast Fixture and Showcase Manufacturing Company, fixtures; Golden State Brass Manufacturing Company, brass goods; A. A. A. Pattern Manufacturing Company, patterns; Everready Auto and Furniture Polish Company, polish; Blundell & Son, pump control; Barney Oldfield Manufacturing Company, die cutting machines; Acme Stamp and Stencil Works, stamps, stencils; Western Bifocal Lens Company, bifocal lens; [illegible] Metal Products Company, metal products; Washington Furniture Manufacturing Company, furniture; Hodges & Son Box Manufacturing Company, boxes; Glick Manufacturing Company, boxes; Western Pacific Paper Company, boxes; Chapman Ice Cream Company, ice cream; Pacific Die Casting and Manufacturing Company, die casting; Standard Toy Company, toys; Dodge Coin Desk Company, coin racks; Fire Retardent Products Company, paints; Smart & Final Co., coffee roasters; Farley Packing Company, preserves, etc.; American Radiator, Fender and Body Company, radiators, etc.; Mission Cabinet and Mill Works, candy and cigar boxes; Argo Vines Manufacturing Company, auto specialties; Coast Concrete Products Company, concrete products; Art Craft Tile and Mantel Company, art tile; Pacific Skirt Company, skirts.

LUBBOCK (Tex.) March 17.—Construction of a cotton-seed oil mill here will be started soon by the Lubbock Cotton Oil Company. It will be the furthest west cotton-seed oil mill in Texas.

CONVENTION PLANS ARE MATURING

New Features Promised for Realtors' Annual Meet at Cleveland

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, March 17.—Plans for the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at Cleveland on June 27th to 30th are maturing rapidly and the program is taking form. At a conference held in Cleveland on March 3rd, between the program committee of the National Association consisting of President L. F. Eppich, Executive Secretary H. U. Nelson and President A. B. Smythe of the Cleveland Board, and the convention committee of the Cleveland Board, of which E. C. McKay is chairman, the general features of this great gathering were agreed upon and the subjects for discussion were selected.

The program will be different from any other national convention in that forenoon sessions will be devoted to the discussion of great general problems which affect the real estate business as a whole. The afternoon sessions will be devoted entirely to meetings of the divisions and will be highly intensive in their character.

Rapid progress is being made by the divisions in the preparation of their programs. The Mortgage and Finance Division, of which H. S. Cody of Chicago is chairman, the Industrial Division, of which B. L. Lambuth of Seattle is chairman, and the Property Management Division, of which J. W. Balanger of Chicago is chairman, have completed tentative outlines of their programs and are now engaged in securing their speakers. The Home Builders' and Subdividers' Division, under the leadership of I. Shuler of Omaha, the Farm Lands Division with B. F. Faast of Eau Claire as chairman, and the Brokers' Division with H. Whitcomb of Boston as chairman, will also soon have their programs ready. The program of the Realtor-Secretaries' Division is being planned by W. S. Bigelow, secretary of the Cleveland Board.

Every realtor will find in the Cleveland convention new, up-to-date and precise information about the special phases of the real estate business in which he is interested. The gathering, it is said, will be a post-graduate course in real estate.

ZONING KANSAS CITY

Tentative maps of zoning regulations worked out in Kansas City were published for the first time last week by newspapers in the eastern city. Consideration of the maps and regulations to be enforced in connection with them have been considered in a number of public hearings.

A review of the maps shows that more than half of the area covered by the maps has been zoned for single-family residences. Industrial and light manufacturing zones make up the next largest area, while the third largest class is that termed "nuisance" and "semi-nuisance." Business and apartment zones run a poor fourth.

The preliminary usage map makes the following seven classifications, retail manufacturing nuisance.

THE CITY OF
HEALTH AND HOMES
INGLEWOOD
HIGHEST POINT BETWEEN LOS ANGELES AND THE SEA

Ideal for the City Man's Home. 5c fare by Commutation Book to and from Los Angeles.

IN what does INGLEWOOD excel? The answer would require many pages, and every page would be full of the truth. This message deals with three notable features of INGLEWOOD'S supremacy as a City of Homes and Health:

INGLEWOOD is admirably located climatically. It is the highest point between Los Angeles and the sea. Its summers are made delightful by cooling breezes from the ocean, only five miles away. Its winters are tempered from the same source. The year around is made ideal in INGLEWOOD.

INGLEWOOD'S homes are supplied with wonderfully pure, healthful water that flows from everlasting springs on lands owned by the city. The celebrated spring of perpetual youth could have contained no greater elixir of life than the water from INGLEWOOD'S great artesian wells. "Absolutely without impurities of any kind," says the Los Angeles County Health Department.

INGLEWOOD has 5c car fare to and from Los Angeles by commutation book. That means that a home amid the wholesome, healthful, comfortable surroundings of INGLEWOOD is available to the man who works in the city. Traveling expense reduced to a minimum. Few, very few, localities enjoy this advantage. Consider it when considering INGLEWOOD.

Visit INGLEWOOD. Call at the Chamber of Commerce. Friendly assistance awaits you there. Opportunity awaits you in INGLEWOOD, where property values have never been inflated. A nice home awaits you there at a price you can afford. Builders of income property are sure of good profit here. Come and see, or at least fill out and mail the coupon.

NEW SUBDIVISIONS APPROVED

Six Tracts Disapproved by City Planning Commission; Fourteen Approvals from Twenty-one Presented

The subdivisions committee of the City Planning Commission disapproved of the maps presented for six new tracts of the twenty-one that were presented at the last meeting of the body; four of the number were unconditionally approved, ten conditionally approved and one held over for further investigation.

The following subdivisions were disapproved:

Two tracts, one south and one north of Parva avenue, east of Commonwealth avenue, were rejected because the plans provided were not in keeping with the general character of the neighborhood. Both maps involved the division of lots in Zone A into smaller holdings. Tract 6377, outside of the city, south of Washington street and east of Clarke avenue, was disapproved because lots in the property were too small and because the extension of Washington and Adams streets through the property did not come up to the width required by the commission. Tract 6131, Sec. 2, T. 1, R. 17 W., adjoining the old Topango Road, was disapproved because the map presented made future subdivision of the tract and adjoining property practically impossible. The lots provided had a comparatively small frontage, but extended across the entire tract. Tract 6204 was disapproved because of the low character of the land. Tract 6295 north of Roxbury Road at Lincoln Terrace, was disapproved because lots in the property did not meet the area requirements of the commission.

Tract 6072, located at Melrose avenue and Olive Drive, was held over until additional investigation could be made by the city engineers working with the committee.

The property located east of Commonwealth avenue and north of Dundee Drive was approved. This is in the same neighborhood with the two Parva-avenue tracts that were disapproved. Members of the committee, after going over the land, decided that a division of this property would not injure surrounding lots that have been improved.

The following tracts were approved unconditionally:

The subdivision southeast of San Fernando Road and northwest of Oro Grande avenue; the tract south of San Fernando Road at Roxford avenue and Tract 4678, north of Third street at Kenmore avenue.

Tract 6142, east of Sherman Way and south of Oxnard street was passed on condition that lots fronting on Sherman Way be rearranged and restricted against business. Tract 6101, north of Lookout Mountain Road and west of Laurel Canyon Road, was approved with the provision that storm-drain easements be granted, and that minor changes be made in roads. Tract 3687, sheet six, south of Isabel street and east of Keating Drive, was approved on condition that Scarborough street be widened and that storm-drain easements be granted.

Tract 6136, southwest of Lankershim Boulevard and south of First street, was approved, with the provision that the river channel along one boundary of the property be determined by the engineers and made the fixed limit of the tract. Tract 6159, north of Tracy street and east of Talmadge avenue, was approved, with the provision that a slight change be made in the corner of Talmadge avenue and Price street. Tract 6385, northeast of Isabel street and southeast of Division street, was approved subject to the condition that storm-drain easements be granted.

Tract 6292, south of Ninety-second street and west of San Pedro street, was approved providing that the latter highway be made eighty feet in width and that a twenty-foot alley be extended back of business property fronting on it. The same conditions were placed on the approval of Tract 6242, south of Ninety-third street and east of Main street. Tract 6291, south of Ninety-fourth street and east of San Pedro street, was approved on similar conditions.

HEATING NEEDS TOLD

Properly Designed Furnaces Are Necessary Even in Southern California, Says Engineer

(This is the first of two articles prepared for The Times by Everett S. Ruck, consulting engineer, on the subject of heating apparatus, particularly for residences.)

When the subject of warming a home is being discussed, it brings to mind the old argument at the Zoo. The lizard was shivering crouched in a corner—"Isn't this cold clammy weather?" he chattered. "You're crazy," panted the polar bear with his tongue hanging out, "This heat is terrible. I'm simply dripping with sweat." Just then the keeper sauntered by with a contented expression: "Well, boys, the poet was certainly right. These June days are wonderful."

In the polar bear class are the people who tell you "Oh, we don't need heat here in California—just a little night and morning." Many of them really believe it too, and if they are of rugged virile constitution, really enjoy the nervous shock that attends, jumping out of a warm comfortable bed into a damp cheerless room, punching a button or lighting a match and then reveling in the flood of overheated scorched air that pours out into their faces.

It is notable, however, that athletes of this type, apparently in the prime of life, suddenly snuff out with some pulmonary or heart disease and if we may believe scientific men, it is due merely to sudden overloads on a machine not designed to handle them.

The mucous membrane and skin functions, the blood circulations, all are suddenly stimulated or on the other hand, constricted, and while the first effect may be agreeable to some, its ill effects are cumulative.

Surprising, though, how these fellows luxuriate in the clean-washed even-tempered air of the club lounging-room or the first-class hotel restaurant. As a matter of fact, the human body is extremely sensible to slight temperature changes, and unless protected by clothing sufficiently thick to allow the body heat to pass off slowly, a matter of only about 4 deg. temperature change means discomfort unless it is accompanied by a corresponding increase or decrease in humidity.

HUMIDITY IMPORTANT

Humidity means simply the water, in vapor form, contained in the air, and is an important factor to be considered when we must either warm air from temperatures below the freezing point, or supply large quantities of fresh air to a number of people confined in a relatively small room.

But our wonderful Los Angeles climate usually varies its humidity in perfect proportion with its temperature, hence we can usually disregard it in home heating, for the reason that when we require heat, let us say, when it is 50 deg. outside, the air contains so much moisture (say 90 relative humidity) that when it is expanded by heating to 70 deg. it contains nearly the right amount for ideal conditions without adding moisture, lacking only 1.1 grains per cubic foot of the 56 relative humidity which was determined to be perfection by the Chicago Commission of Ventilation. This commission was headed by Dr. E. Vernon Hill, a famous practical scientist who has devoted his life to air conditioning and its relation to health, and whose "Synthetic Air Chart" is a world standard today.

Now, since there are roughly 7000 grains in a pound, it will easily be seen that the slight deficiency in moisture is readily absorbed from various surrounding surfaces and bodies which have drunk it in at higher humidities, from plants, from water taps and fixtures, various cooking operations, as well as from the human occupants, this last factor sometimes exceeding 2500 grains per hour per person.

This quality of ready absorption has frequently been overlooked by men who were otherwise well posted on heating and ventilating design, with disastrous results to interior furnishings and decorations. Too, the subject of air conditioning has often been treated without proper consideration of this quality, and various people with axes to grind have seized upon excerpts and partial quotations from these articles and either knowingly or unwittingly, broadcasted a great many "conclusions obtained from false premises."

It is astonishing how really few homes may be called perfectly appointed in the matter of heat and air. You see men who will not tolerate anything but the finest in automobiles, food, anything else, hunting a comfortable spot in an over or under-heated home, or breathing air that is heavily laden with fumes of combustion. In their club lounging rooms, they revel in clean fresh smelling air, far better than the air in the downtown district, but most of them apparently never imagine that their homes could and should have equally good health and comfort conditions.

The reason for this becomes more apparent when we realize that the consulting engineer cannot afford to design these small residence systems at the rate of commission usually allowed the architect, so the owner gets what fortune dictates, too often a well meant, but ignorantly designed system. On the other hand he may be lucky enough to have one of the houses that fits his particular contractor's methods. One way or the other though he usually becomes an intense partisan or critic of the system used, and judges all others by his own.

The independent engineer, however, cannot condemn any of the various heating methods in such a summary fashion. All or nearly all have their merits and particular uses, which will be indicated in a later article.

First Quarter to Pass Half Million Mark

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HUNTINGTON PARK, March 17.—Building operations in Huntington Park continue to climb skyward and judging from the record being made from the first of this year, a total valuation of $500,000 will be shown in the office of Housing Inspector E. R. Allen by the close of March.

During the past week, there were twenty-nine permits issued, showing the total valuation to be $69,144. The two largest permits during the past few days were issued to William Todd for the erection of a business block on South Pacific Boulevard, at an aggregate cost of $15,000, and another for C. C. Burritt, for a two-story, sixteen-room four-family flat for $11,000. There were two permits issued for business blocks which aggregate $16,914; fourteen permits for residences and flats which totaled $49,030; nine permits for garages with a total of $1475, and four permits for improvements with a valuation of $1725.

START WORK ON NEW BUSINESS BUILDING

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HUNTINGTON PARK, March 17.—Taking out a building permit for $12,000 early last Monday morning, A. J. Wilson an hour later, started work on his new business block, which he is erecting at Slauson avenue, just off of Santa Fe, in Huntington Park. The new building, which will be of brick, one story high, will have a frontage of 100 feet, with a depth of sixty feet. There will be seven storerooms in the new structure, which it is expected, will be completed in about five weeks.

RIVERSIDE CITY HALL

The City Council of Riverside has adopted a resolution of necessity calling for a $100,000 bond election to vote on an issue of $100,000 worth of bonds for the proposed City Hall. The amount will cover the purchase of the approved site at the corner of Seventh and Orange streets.

BUILDING SOLD FOR LARGE SUM

Ontario Property Acquired by Investor; Construction Activity Increasing

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ONTARIO, March 17.—Prominent among a large number of important realty transactions in Ontario in recent weeks was that just announced in which Fred G. Fallis bought from E. P. Williamson his handsome two-story reinforced concrete business block at 109-111 South Euclid avenue for a reported consideration of $70,000. The deal was made through the agency of J. S. Ingalls.

The building has a frontage of 72 feet on Euclid avenue and is 125 feet deep. It is occupied by the Southside Furniture Company, conducted by Mr. Williamson and his son, H. C. Williamson, and by two other stores. H. C. Williamson is to continue in the furniture business, having taken a lease from Mr. Fallis, but the elder Williamson will devote the majority of his time to mining matters.

The new purchase makes Mr. Fallis one of the largest holders of business property in Ontario, since he already owned the building occupied by the Volk Department Store and the Central Pharmacy at 121-123-125 North Euclid avenue, and that occupied by the Ostran Department Store at Euclid avenue and B street.

It was also announced yesterday that H. C. Williamson has sold to Joseph Pichiecipta a ten-acre peach orchard at Hellman avenue and Sixth street, for a consideration of $8500. Mr. Williamson recently purchased this property from S. C. Whitson.

Ontario's 1923 building record pass the $250,000-mark this week an dthe total for the first half of the month of March exceeded the $40,000-mark, according to announcement of City Building Inspector O. S. Roen. With many new structures in prospect there was every indication that 1922's record of $1,125,000 would be eclipsed by the present year.

PASADENA SCIENCE CHURCH TO BUILD

A new church building is to be erected in Pasadena for the Second Church of Christ, Scientist. The main auditorium will have a seating capacity of about 500 persons. The building will contain recreation rooms, reading rooms and rest rooms. It will be brick construction, and will be exteriorly finished in plaster. The roof will be of tile, the floors of hardwood, and the windows of stained glass.

Plans for the structure, which will represent an investment in the neighborhood of $45,000, were drafted by G. A. Howard, Los Angeles architect. Bids are to be taken soon for the construction contract.

GLENDALE SETS SPEED RECORD

Fastest Growing City in the Whole United States

Figures Show Progress Still Going Swiftly Ahead

Stands on Land Granted by Spain to Verdugos

Glendale, famed far as the fastest growing city in the United States, is ten miles north of Los Angeles. From a small village founded in 1887, it has grown to an area of more than eleven square miles, with more than sixty miles of paved streets.

The founders of Glendale were B. F. Patterson, E. T. Byram, L. C. Miller, C. E. Thom and H. J. Crow. The town is on land that is a part of the original land grant to the Verdugo family from the Spanish Governor.

Ideally located in a valley richly endowed by nature, with the Verdugo Hills at the north and the Sierras standing sentinel along the eastern skyline, Glendale is the gateway city between Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley.

It is a city of beautiful homes, broad, clean, well-lighted streets. Primarily a home city, it was in former years a farming community and later a residing place for those employed in Los Angeles. Now there are excellent stores of all kinds, specialty shops and department stores. The restaurants and cafes are of the best. There are first-class hospitals and a school system unequaled. A $600,000 high school plant is now under construction, and bonds in the sum of $500,000 were voted Thursday for additions to buildings and equipment for the grammar schools.

A zoning ordinance protects its residential districts, so that one may be assured of a home, without the proximity of a store or industry.

There is a beautiful and modern library located near the center of town, and two branches in the northwest and southern sections of the city

Approximately 2000 acres have been set aside by the City Council for manufacturing sites. This property is adjacent to the Southern Pacific tracks, and has excellent electrical power, ample water supply and petroleum available.

INDUSTRIES SELECTED

The selection of industries has been made with care by the Chamber of Commerce, with the result that none of the sixty or more concerns employ foreign labor.

The Chamber of Commerce was organized more than two years ago and is one of the most efficient organizations of its kind in the State. At the beginning of the year a publicity committee and publicity director was appointed. The civic committee is now considering the establishment of a municipal auto camp. It is expected to have this camp a distinct asset to the city, to have it properly policed and a small revenue would be realized by the city.

The population of Glendale in 1910 was 2742, and the census report for 1920 was 13,356, an increase of 393 per cent. In 1920 the assessed valuation of Glendale property was $9,384,525, now it is more than $21,000,000.

In 1919 the valuation of building was only $587,015, in 1920 the total was more than $3,000,000, in 1921 it was over $5,000,000 and last year, with an average of six homes started a day, the total valuation was $6,305,971.

BEAUTIFUL CHURCHES

Two beautiful churches were completed last year, the Central Christian Church at the corner of Louise and Colorado and the Holy Family Catholic Church at Elk and Louise streets. Construction of a parochial school is now under way on Louise street. The Congregational Church dedicated a new building last month, and a new Presbyterian church is under construction. The members of the Baptist Church expect to build this year.

The Glendale postoffice was made an independent office in December, 1921, having been up to that time under the supervision of the Los Angeles office. The increase in receipts has been 61.4 per cent since then. Receipts for 1921 were $81,544.27, and for 1922 they were $151,339.69.

In 1904 the Pacific Electric completed a line to Glendale, laying only one track most of the way. Two tracks have been in service for many years, however, with the completion of the lowering of the tracks to the street level and the pavement of Brand Boulevard. Glendale will have one of the most beautiful and widest avenues of commerce of any city of equal size. The Pacific Electric station which was built in 1906 at the corner of Brand and Broadway was demolished last month to make way for the new six-story building to be rected by the Security Trust and Savings Bank.

There are six organizations of the Masonic Lodge in Glendale with a total membership of 1274. These organizations expect to construct a larger home at their present site on South Brand, as the building erected in 1914 is not nearly large enough for their needs.

There are eight patriotic organizations here, including the auxiliary chapters. The Boy Scouts boast of the oldest troop in the State and have pledged more than $6000 toward the budget for the expenses for the ensuing year.

The Elks' Lodge has a $70,000 building, one of the most beautiful lodge homes in the Southland. The members have recently purchased two adjoining lots and will enlarge their club home in the near future.

The Knights of Columbus purchased a home in January, near the Catholic Church, after remodeling and additions were built. It is considered a model home for their needs. Formal dedication was recently made of this building.

The I.O.O.F. has recently moved into larger quarters, handsomely furnished, on East Broadway.

GROWTH CONTINUOUS

The growth of Glendale is continuous, as there is a constant demand for water and light meters. The city owns and operates its own water and light plants. Forty-four miles of water pipe were laid in 1922.

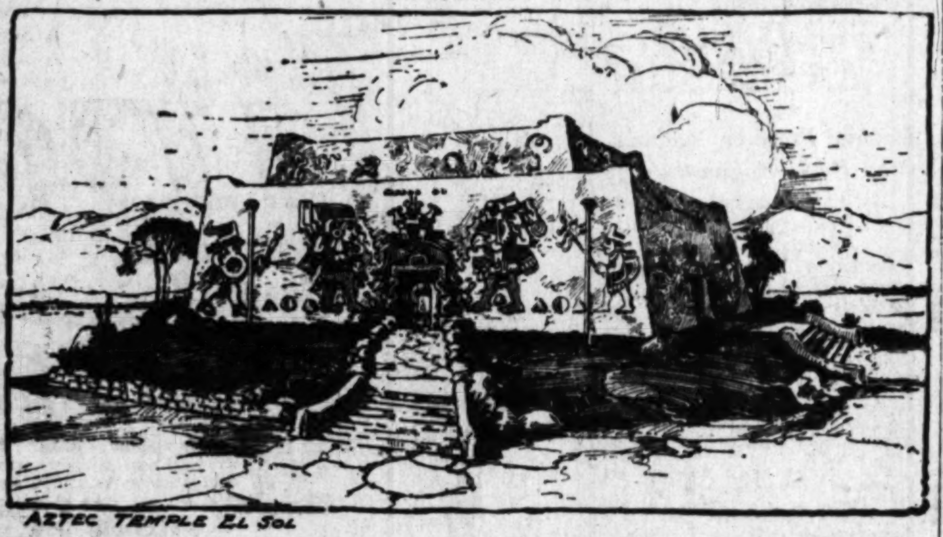
In 1917, the Southern California Telephone Company estimated that there were 4200 families in Glendale. As a result of a thorough investigation by the company it has been estimated that the population of Glendale is now more than 35,000.

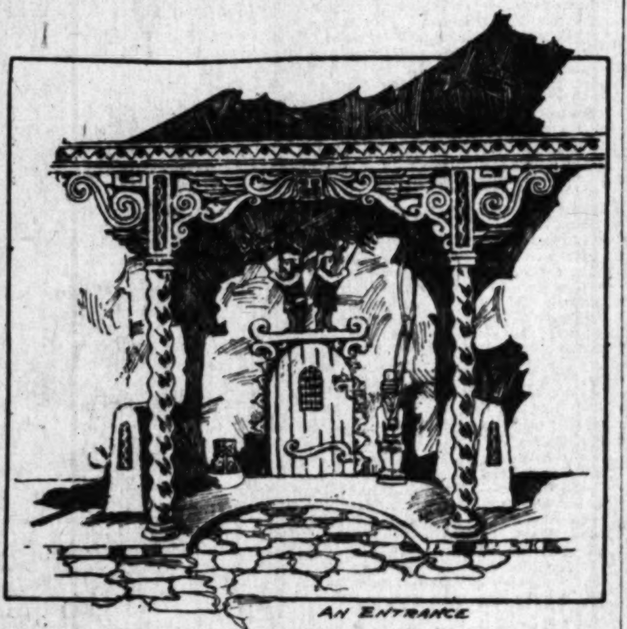
The telephone company spend $10,000 in January, and a further expenditure of $15,000 in the central office is contemplated during this year. The local exchange has an operative capacity of 5000 telephones. The rapid growth of commercial and mercantile activity has made an additional problem for the company, and it is planning a project involving an expenditure of $25,000 in two years for additional switchboards. The total expenditure for 1923 will be in the neighborhood of $80,000.

One of the any things accomplished by the Chamber of Commerce was that of persuading the Southern Pacific officials to stop eighteen trains a day here. Plans are now being made for a new station to be erected a block west of the present one. The new site will be more accessible to Brand Boulevard and the electric car. Tickets for any points east can be bought now in Glendale. Over $19,000 in passenger business was done here last year.

Added service is promised Glendale by the American Express, by the addition of two extra cars on the Pacific Electric. Last year the freight handled by the Pacific Electric totaled $50,000.

Unique Architecture Adapted to Proposed Restaurant





The Aztec Temple El Sol

This is the architect's representation of the structure which is to be built at Glendale. It will be 100 feet square and forty feet high. Claude G. Putnam is the designer of the structure.

Newspaper at Glendale Will Have New Home

Ground was broken on Tuesday morning for a one-story building to cost $55,000 at 329 North Brand Boulevard. The building will be occupied by the Glendale Daily Press. The structure is to be of Spanish design, and will be furnished with all modern equipment. It will have a frontage of 100 feet and a depth of 150 feet. It is expected to be completed within ninety days.

The firm of Roberts & Echols, druggists, have bought the building and lot at the southeast corner of Brand and Broadway. This firm, which now occupies the building adjoining the one just purchased, will connect the new building with its present quarters, making a floor space of 50 by 200 feet. The sale of this building will have no effect upon the lease of the two upper floors. Mr. Roberts and Mr. Echols have been in their present location for fifteen years.

Alterations are being made on the building at 109 South Brand, additional window display space will be added and A. Ferber Company, Inc., of Los Angeles will open a general department-store there.

HILL STREET STRUCTURE

Bids are being taken for a class A, reinforced concrete loft building, thirteen stories in height, which is to be erected on the east side of Hill street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, for W. W. Paden. The structure will have a Hill-street frontage of 50 feet and a depth of 150 feet. It will cost in the neighborhood of $500,000. E. L. Mayberry is the architect.

TO BUILD AZTEC TEMPLE

Restaurant Will be Patterned After Edifices of Lost Race; Appointments to Conform

Southern California's newest and most unique restaurant is to be located on a hillside in Glendale. It will be known as the Aztec Temple El Sol, and is a replica of one of the famous old ruins in Lower Mexico.

The building will be 100 feet square, with slanting walls forty feet high and four feet thick. The exterior is to be of rough plaster and stone. Great Aztec figures twenty feet in height will be carved on the exterior walls. A mystic light will be thrown on the temple after sunset, so it can be seen from the main boulevards of the San Fernando Valley.

There will be three entrances, carved in stone, with low, heavy doors hung with hammered-brass hinges. The interior will be rough finish and posters depicting the history of the race will be painted on the walls. The only visible lights will be tall wax tapers in wrought-iron holders. In the center of the main dining-room will be hung a circular charcoal broiler, where pigs, sheep and fowl will be roasted. The dining tables will be low and, and great, easy lounges, covered with skins, will serve for seats.

The dancing floor will be above the main dining-room, a crooked stone stairway leading up to it. A promenade deck will be provided and a cosy nook for guests. From this deck one may be able to see far across the valley. The orchestra, while it will be located on this upper floor, will fill the great dining-room below with harmony.

There will be an underground passage leading to the shrine of Tlamacasqui the high priest, where surprises will be in store for the guests. Admission will be by card only, which can be obtained at leading hotels and clubs of the county.

A well-known restaurant man and entertainer of Los Angeles will have charge of this unique house.

Claude G. Putnam, a local artist, is the designer of the building. He has spent much time in research and study of the Aztec race. He will personally direct the art and sculpture of the temple. Duplicates of the calendar, pottery, weaving and weapons of war and implements of agriculture will be a feature of the furnishings. Carvings and rare statuary of this lost race will also be on display. These objects will attract art lovers and research students from all parts of the country.

SEVENTH-STREET HOTEL

Bushnell & Palmer, contractors, have the contract to construct a four-story hotel and store building on Seventh street between Wall and San Julian streets for the Sherman Investment Company. The building will contain 176 rooms, each equipped with bath. It will be of reinforced concrete construction, exteriorly finished in plaster, and will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

BUILDING CONTRACT LET

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HUNTINGTON PARK, March 17.—C. C. Burritt has just let the contract for the erection of a two-story, sixteen-room flat on South Rugby street, the structure to be erected at a cost of approximately $15,000, and U. S. Grant Hinton will begin the erection of four additional units to his bungalow court on North Malabar street, which already has six units.

Hospital Site Will be Sold for Business

It is rare, indeed, that in the center of a thriving growing city there exists intact a large block of business lots standing as the impediment to the development of the district in which they are located, but that is exactly the condition that has existed in Glendale for the last five years on Broadway, where the Glendale Sanatorium has maintained its institution. But this obstacle is now to be removed and the tract subdivided for business purposes.

The Glendale Sanatorium Company, owners of the property, has acquired a site farther removed from the center of Glendale and is now erecting fireproof buildings on that site.

Inquiries regarding portions of the property have been received by the sanatorium during the past three months, and it has been seriously considered as the new civic center for Glendale.

Many efforts were made by local brokers and successful operators to secure the property. The directors for the sanatorium company have placed the property in the agency of the Guy M. Rush Company.

Wall Street Building Now Being Erected

Ground was broken last week for a one-story brick store building which will be erected on the southeast corner of Fourth and Wall streets, in accordance with plans prepared by W. Douglas Lee, architect. The property has a frontage of sixty-six feet on Fourth street and 102 feet on Wall street and was recently acquired by the present owner, a local investor, from Walter A. Bonynge, Sr., and Frank N. Flint, all parties to the transaction being represented by Max Elsner of the J. W. Lewis Company.

The building will contain five storerooms, three facing on Fourth street and two facing on Wall street, especially designed to meet the requirements of wholesalers and jobbers. It will have an attractive exterior faced with pressed brick with terra cotta and enamel brick trim, and the store fronts will be of plate glass and marble. The Lewis Company will have the management of the property.

NORMANDIE COURT

Plans are being prepared for a twenty-four unit bungalow court which is to be constructed at 1615 North Normandie avenue for R. Montelenoe. Each unit of the court will contain three rooms. It will be of frame and plaster construction and will cost in the neighborhood of $50,000.

High School to be Among Best in Southwest

The Glendale Union High School now under construction will be one of the most modern educational plants in buildings and equipment, in the southern section of the State.

This structure was designed by A. C. Austin and George Lindsay of Los Angeles, and will represent an expenditure, when completed and furnished, of $600,000. Classrooms for 2500 students and an auditorium seating 1800 are included in the initial unit of this new plant.

The main building will surround a courtyard. The even roof line will be broken by a Spanish tower. The building has been so designed that additions and enlargements can be made without interfering with its architectural beauty. The North Pacific Construction Company is the builder.

Trade Orchards for Acreage at Richgrove

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TERRA BELLA, March 17.—W. E. Simpson has traded his two Terra Bella orchards for an eighty-acre tract near Richgrove. The new owners of the Simpson properties are Richard and William Scott. The Simpson properties comprise two well developed orchards, including a forty-acre olive grove, a mile south of Terra Bella, and a twenty-acre tract two and a half miles southwest of Terra Bella. This tract is planted to peaches and pears of bearing age. The former place is improved with a nine-room house, and both places are equipped with up-to-date pumping plants, operated by electricity. The olive grove, however, is watered from the irrigation district's pipes.

Mr. Simpson's new acquisition is improved with house, pumping plant, etc., while twenty acres is set to vines. The two Scott families will move to their new possessions within a few days.

LONG BEACH APARTMENT

Preliminary plans have been prepared for a $1,500,000 own-your-own apartment hotel to be erected on the corner of Eighteenth Place and East Ocean Boulevard, Long Beach, for E. J. Del Porte and T. J. Sten. The building is to be of class A construction and will be 110 feet in width by 270 feet in length. It will be twelve stories in height fronting the boulevard and sixteen stories in height on the ocean side. The plans are being prepared by Hugh R. Davies and E. J. Baume, Long Beach architects.

MOVES TO TORRANCE

Grimm & Noland, real estate brokers of 1148 South Western avenue, have moved to Torrance, where they have leased offices in the Castle Apartment Building. Both are heavily interested in business and residence property in Torrance, as well as acreage in and near the oil field. Mr. Noland, having sold his property on Western avenue, will either build or buy a home in Torrance immediately.

OPEN BELLEHURST PARK

Last Portion Remaining Unsubdivided Will be Placed on Market Soon

This week's announcement by the Walter H. Leimert Company of the opening sale of Bellehurst Park has attracted wide attention. Telegrams have been received by Mr. Leimert wishing him success in this, his first community building enterprise in Southern California, signed by prominent men in business and financial circles in the San Francisco Bay region.

These men are familiar with the subdivider's past work in developing the residence sections of the East Bay cities such as Berkeley, Piedmont, and the Lake District of Oakland.

ABOUT BILLEHURST PARK

The value of enterprise in planning residence communities is attested by the following quotation from the telegram sent to Mr. Leimert by W. W. Garthwaite, president of an Oakland bank.

"Your development in Oakland of the Piedmont and Lake Districts was a revelation of what artistic and intelligent subdivision can accomplish. You have placed the stamp of permanent beauty upon many sections, setting an example which is influencing most favorably the style of development of the entire city. An influence for good which through the years to come can not be measured."

Victor H. Metcalf, who was Secretary of the Navy under Roosevelt, also wired good luck and included this significant statement: "Your development work in Piedmont and Oakland has been of the highest class and while we your friends here are willing that you should devote a portion of your time to development work and home building in Los Angeles, we are not willing to lose from our midst one whom we esteem so highly and one who has done so much for this community."

Offices have been opened in the Merchants' National Bank Building by the Walter H. Leimert Co. and an organization has been formed to proceed with the development of Bellehurst Park.

Bellehurst Park is named for the Bellehurst Ranch of which it is the only remaining portion not included in the City of Glendale. It is covered with orchards of oranges, lemons, olives and many shade trees are planted along the avenues which were laid out over forty years ago by the late C. E. Thom who secured this property direct from the Verdugo family.

This property has been retained intact for many years in spite of Glendale's growth, so that it is now practically surrounded by blocks of homes. An indication of the attitude of Glendale toward Bellehurst Park is the fact that already over $200,000 has been invested in Bellehurst Park lots by Glendale people in the last two weeks.

City improvements including macadamized streets, curbs, sidewalks, water, gas, electricity and telephones are to be made on the tract. Restrictions prohibit the erection of double houses, bungalow courts, apartments and temporary buildings. A limited area however has been set aside for business purposes.

Street work is being rushed by Bates & Borland, Inc., a street contracting firm, that has done this work for the Walter H. Leimert Company on other subdivisions in the Northern sections of the State.

space for exhibits was at and because of the for space by exhibitors booths were as a small to properly display of the various Long industries. But they were all there, some 200 of them, from the companies who can fish and other table delicacies, to the ones who build automobile bodies and motor trucks.

And in between the two extremes of that range came everything imaginable. Radio equipment, carpet manufacturing, woolen weaving, oil-well machinery, building hardware, products of the dairies, automobile accessories, built-in equipment for homes, ornamental ironwork, every one of the industries established within the corporate limits of Long Beach was represented.

And these exhibits told a wonderful story of an industrial growth that has been comparatively short. Slowly at first, and in the past two years by leaps and bounds, the industrial side of the city has pushed itself forward into the front rank of activities in this former resort and health-seekers' paradise. Recognition of the fact that circumstances here are ideal from a manufacturer's point of view and that the city's future greatness is linked inseparably with productive enterprises, has become general as a result of the exposition.

OPPORTUNITY PROVIDED

To the 45,000 or more visitors it taught many lessons, but none so important as the lesson of a well-developed harbor. It revealed to thousands of Southern Californians that, not next door to, but actually linked by waterways with the splendidly developed Los Angeles Harbor, is another seaport that may readily be developed into a world harbor for ships of the seven seas.

The lesson taught is that nothing more than proper dredging, additional breakwalls and an awakened interest among ship operators are all that is required to place Long Beach on the map as one of the important seaports of the Pacific Coast. And the lesson won more converts because it taught them that all this can be accomplished without detracting one iota from the glory and enterprise of its sister harbor to the west. So closely are they related that the development of one means the development of the other, and their interests are identical.

A giant relief map of Long Beach and Los Angeles Harbor, showing the relationship of the pair, the development of the latter and the possibilities that development of the former will bring greeted visitors at the very entrance to the big auditorium and attracted more genuine interest perhaps than any other single exhibit at the exposition.

The big exposition is now history and one may escape the charge of being a publicity agent in summing up the results that have been derived from it. It is not stretching the truth to say that because of the past six days Long Beach has forged ahead materially. Thousands of Southern Californians, not necessarily strangers to Long Beach, but persons who come here occasionally for a week-end outing, have gained a new conception of the relationship of the city to the rest of the Southland.

They have become awakened to the fact that, aside from its streets of beautiful homes, its magnificent apartment-houses and its wonderful bathing beaches, Long Beach is an industrial center that promises to outdistance every other similar community in the State, either north or south.

That, probably, is why officers of the Long Beach Manufacturers' Association and the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, under whose direction the exposition was planned and carried out so successfully, are being congratulated so warmly by other communities throughout the southern portion of the State.

ENVIABLE MONTH'S RECORD

Closing one of the most successful months in the history of its twenty-one years' subdivision business, the Janss Investment Company announces that statistics from their auditing department show a total of approximately $700,000 in sales for the month of February, notwithstanding the fact that February was a short month.

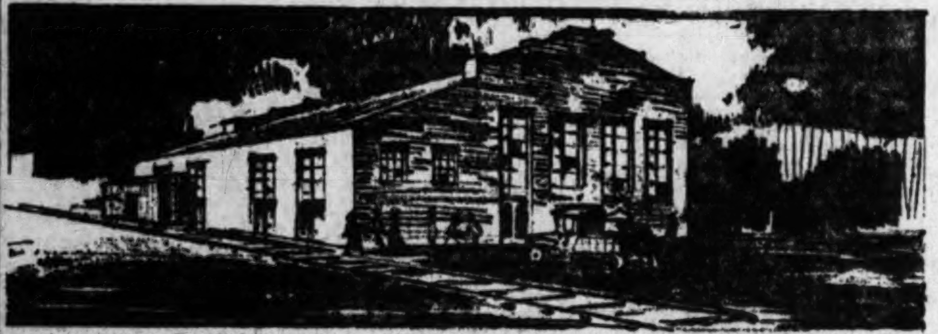
OPENS RESALE OFFICE

Victor Girard, subdivider of Walnut Park, West Adams Place and Girard, announced yesterday that he has opened a resale department to handle transactions affecting property which has been sold in the three subdivisions. In addition to this department, Mr. Girard stated that it is his intention to form a building-loan department in the near future.

BRITISH WOOL EXPORTS

A quantitative gain of 149 per cent over 1921 in the British exports of wool hose, says Trade Commissioner Butler in a report to the Department of Commerce, is the outstanding feature in the foreign trade in knit goods in 1922 which also saw increases of 135 per cent in wool underwear and fancy hosiery, 95 per cent in cotton underwear and fancy hosiery, and 73 per cent in cotton stockings and hose.

Factory of Basic Industry Will be Completed Soon



Plant of the California Flaxseed Products Company

Construction work on this building is now in progress. It is being erected on a site at 3129 East Twenty-ninth street. The Austin Construction Company is the designer and builder.

RUSH WORK ON LINSEED PLANT HERE

Factory for Manufacture of Oil is Foundation for More New Industries

The Austin Company of California, industrial engineers and builders, announce that construction work is proceeding in the building for the California Flaxseed Company on its tract of land located at 3129 East Twenty-sixth street in Vernon, to be used for the manufacture of linseed oil and by-products. Machinery for the plant is now on the way, some of this equipment being purchased in foreign countries to ensure obtaining the best possible results in the extraction of the oil. By-products will consist mainly of flaxseed meal, which will be sold as stock feed.

The building will be of the latest type Austin steel frame and brick construction, 75 feet wide, with a present length of 100 feet, divided into manufacturing and warehouse sections for the proper handling of materials. It will be served by Santa Fe spur, which extends the full length of the building, which will ensure the economical handling of the raw material which will originate both in United States and abroad.

This industry will depend on the Los Angeles Harbor, and the selection of a site in this locality was due to the facilities offered for water shipment of both raw material and finished product, although it is expected that local industries will absorb the greater part of their finished product. A basic industry such as that to be housed in the new structure opens a new field in Southern California for the manufacture of products containing a large percentage of linseed oil, such as paints, linoleums and shade cloths.

The Austin Company reports that the building will be completed within thirty days and that machinery will be immediately thereafter installed, and it is expected to start actual production within the next sixty to ninety days.

FIFTY NEW HOMESITES AT ANAHEIM

Dominican Sisters to Sell Land to Anaheim Realtors for Subdivision

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ANAHEIM, March 17. — Fifty new homesites in one of the most attractive sections of the city will be provided by the subdivision of property known as the St. Catherine's tract, if permission to sell the land is granted by the Superior Court of Orange county. Petitions on file with the court's clerk today ask the right to sell the land at approximately $7500 an acre. It is located on Palm street, between Cypress and Sycamore streets, and is said to be one of the finest Valencia groves in the Anaheim district.

Ten and two-tenths acres of land are included in the tract, which is owned by the Dominican Sisters, who conduct the St. Catherine's School for Boys here. The total consideration in the proposed property sale is given as $75,000. Stephen Kistler and Elmer E. Brus of this city and A. H. Rothaermel of Fullerton have agreed to purchase the tract, it was said, and will handle the sale of the lots after the land has been subdivided.

Since the property is located directly opposite the new city park, it is expected that homeseekers will be anxious to secure a lot in this tract, since it will be made more attractive by this latest municipal improvement. The transaction, if completed, will be among the largest citrus grove sales in the county and one of the most important of the recent property transfers in the city.

CITY INSURED FOR CERTAIN

Oil Production, Crops and Factory Products Tell Important Story

Insurance against depression in Southern California is provided by the extent of oil, agricultural, horticultural and industrial production of this section of the State. During 1922 Los Angeles and Orange counties produced 70,718,820 barrels of oil, which represented half of California's output, which was one-fourth of the total production of the United States.

The field and orchard crops of California were valued last year at approximately $1,000,000,000 and will be worth at least that much this year. Los Angeles motion-picture studios produced films which were valued at $150,000,000; this year the production of this commodity will be greater. In addition to these products Los Angeles will again turn out, as in 1922, industrial supplies valued at $1,000,000,000.

Depression seems a long way off, for certain.

CITY HAS OWN LANDING FIELD

Glendale First to Establish Municipal Airport

Airplane Company to Make Small Machines

Council to Fight Injunction Proceedings to End

In December of last year the City Council of Glendale bought forty-seven acres of ground on San Fernando Road in the northwest section of the city, and has established the only municipal airport in California. This property is so situated that the slope of the surrounding hills bring an unlimited supply of subterranean streams to merge beneath the tract. As the property adjoins the pumping plant from which the city derives its water supply, it was purchased with a twofold purpose. The Council expects to tap the underground streams and to place additional wells on the property.

As a landing field for airplanes, it is particularly suitable. Cross currents and air pockets are few, the protecting hills guarding against this danger.

Government experts claim that it is unequalled as a landing field for the postal planes. And when a postal route is established it will be the southern terminal, it is said.

The Kinner Airplane Company has begun operations on the field, and will manufacture small planes, then manufacturers, it is expected, will locate here, as ground will be leased by the City for building purposes. A spur track will be laid from the Southern Pacific Railroad, which is adjacent. Ground will also be leased to individuals who own their pleasure machines. Dr. T. C. Young's hangar has just been completed, and L. C. Brand expects to keep some of his machines here also.

This port is the only natural terminal for greater Los Angeles and the county. Passengers from the north and south will find ample taxi, street car and bus service to Glendale and Los Angeles from the field. The Pacific Electric line to Burbank is near, and a bus line will be established from Glendale.

City Manager Reeves states that the injunction against the city for the purchase of this land, filed by George A. Montgomery will be fought through to the Supreme Court. The Council and many prominent business men feel that as a natural landing field it is unequalled, and they are backed by judgment of experienced men in their belief. The purchase of the property was a step forward in the progress of the city, and for the progress of air travelers.

Orange Grove Gives Way to City's Growth

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ORANGE, March 17.—Homes will soon rise from another citrus grove in this city as subdividers continue to ply their home-building operations with ever-increasing zealousness.

With a plat of the tract accepted and official sanction given by the City Council to the project, selling of homesites will soon get under way in Orange's newest subdivision, North Orange Tract, where a ten-acre orange grove will soon give way to scores of modern homes.

The subdivision is located at the corner of Glassell street and Collins avenue. The tract originally belonged to O. M. Rodieck, but was recently purchased by Dr. F. H. Houck and B. Hartwick, of Anaheim. Extensive improvements are planned by the new owners in connection with the subdivision.

FINANCIAL FIRM UNDER WAY

A new financial organization was formed last week in Glendale, and it will be known as the People's Finance and Thrift Company of Gendale. The firms offices for the present will be located in the offices of the Glendale State Bank, 104 East Broadway. Many prominent citizens are affiliated with this organization. Among the stockholders are: C. D. Lusby, W. E. Lusby, W. A. Howe, Owen C. Emery, J. L. Home, J. M. Slaughter, D. R. Bold, W. F. Macpherson, J. J. Nesom, L. A. Hart, W. F. Tower, George B. Karr, Paul Carson, A. B. Warner, Roy. L. Kent, Miss Ida M. Waite, Jesse E. Smith, James M. Rhoades, T. M. Furl, Francis J. Henry, Richardson D. White, Alfred Perry, J. F. McClish, William H. Hooper, J. C. Sherer and A. R. Eastman.

The General Construction Company, Inc., of East Harvard street, have just completed a two-story brick and terra cotta store building at 115 South Orange street Mrs. Mary E. Carpenter is the owner, and the approximate cost was $20,000. A. M. Yale of the company states that work has begun on a duplicate building located at 121 South Orange street for Mrs. M. H. Hunter, a sister of Mrs. Carpenter.

Members of the Glendale Realty Board have been asked to investigate and assist in locating a site for the building of a military academy in Glendale. A Los Angeles syndicate are in readiness to underwrite the project.

Multiple listing which was adopted by the Glendale Realty Board in December of last year is gaining in favor. Figures compiled by the secretary show that the values of sales are increasing each month. In December the total was $45,000; January's value was $143,500 and in February the total value was $168,325.

ITALIAN INDUSTRIAL STATUS UNCHANGED

The industrial situation in Italy is little changed, says Commercial Attache H. O. MacLean, in a cable to the Department of Commerce. The activity in automobiles continues, and the Consul at Turin reports that the Lancia Company has orders until October. Textiles are quiet, with prices high and demand limited. The weather has been favorable for agriculture, and crop conditions are normal.

The production of iron ore, pig iron and steel in 1922 was about 50 per cent greater than in 1921. Mercury production amounted to 1530 tons in 1922 compared with 1010 tons in 1921. Sulphur production, however, declined to 191,600 tons, compared with 313,400 tons in 1921.

The exemption of interest on foreign investments from the Italian income tax has been extended to apply to government, provincial and municipal loans in addition to private investments.

CIENEGA-AVENUE SCHOOL

Plans are being prepared for a twelve-unit elementary school building to be erected on the Cienega school site for the Los Angeles Board of Education. It will be of brick construction, two stories in height, with a frontage of 60 feet and a depth of 160 feet. The exterior walls of the building will be finished in plaster. It will represent the investment of approximately $84,000. The plans are being drafted by Architect Ross Montgomery.

For a hundred years it remained unchanged, unspoiled—the great remain area where the land profits accruing from the growth population have not been taken.

And, now awakened from its century-old quiet the superb property is teeming with activity. Surveyors are in the field. Road crews are at work. Dirt is flying. Water wells will soon be drilling. Steel-mouthed shovels, tractors and giant powder will transform the happy-go-lucky roads into boulevards. A new period has come upon the old place. Progress and development are the keynotes. Palos Verdes is building!

In the first development area are included more than three thousand acres, free and clear of all incumbrance, the property of the underwriters of the Palos Verdes Project. The Selection Maps, from which Convertible Note-holders may choose their home or business lots, are now being printed. As soon as the ink is dry they will be mailed, and after the time alloted for land selection is over the property will be offered to the public. Holders of Convertible Notes, who do not plan homes themselves, should make very fine profits for they may buy land at cost plus improvements. And, remember that the profit which pressing population brings to this land has never been taken.

Look to the Future

The big point to consider in selecting roofing is how long will it last—what will the upkeep expense be?

Almost any type of roofing will give you good service for awhile, but you don't want to buy roofing troubles—you don't want to be put to the expense of constant repairs and frequent replacement.

"Weaver" Roofing is the ideal, the practical type of roofing for residential, industrial and commercial buildings. It is absolutely leak proof. There is nothing about it to get out of order, for when laid it becomes one complete, solid sheet of roofing—defiant to the heat of the sun and to the beating of the torrential rain.

Any Qualified Roofing Contractor Can Lay Weaver Roofing.

BUILDING HABIT AT GLENDALE

Permits Exceed Two and Half Millions to Date

New Business Structures and Churches Planned

Adventists Erecting Modern Sanatorium

Building in Glendale is a habit. Last year the building permits were $6,305,971, and to date this year there is more than $2,500,000 in permits issued. Along Brand Boulevard there are now a six-story concrete and steel building for the Security Trust and Savings Bank; a four-story and basement office building and a two-story department store building under construction, in the first block north of Broadway. South of Broadway there are a one-story market building, costing $30,000, and a specialty shop under way.

In 1922 the construction of business blocks was not confined to any particular section of the city, and business structures are being erected in all localities now.

Jensen's Palace Grand Shops, one of the buildings erected on Brand Boulevard last year, is one of the most beautiful in Glendale. The shops are grouped around a center arcade. An Egyptian billiard room in the basement is one of the features. The facade is of elaborate French renaissance.

The Winter Construction Company is completing a beautiful theater building on San Fernando Road. A bank building was completed in the southern section early this year, as was an office building and the Gateway Market Building.

NEW CHURCHES

Hundreds of beautiful homes and apartment-houses have been constructed. The new home for the Tuesday Afternoon Club has just been completed. The expenditure for buildings and furnishings was $100,000.

The Congregational Church held its first services in a new $100,000 edifice two weeks ago, and the members of the congregation of the Presbyterian Church are having a beautiful building erected at the corner of Louise and Harvard streets. It is of Gothic design, will be of brick and stone construction, with beautiful art windows and chimes in its high tower, which will rise to a height of 132 feet.

The Baptist Church is planning to erect a new building this year at the corner of Louise street and Wilson avenue. Lots adjoining the property at the corner, now owned by the members, will be bought and a modern building erected.

Plans are being drawn for a new two-story business block to be built for a firm of Glendale men at the corner of Maryland avenue and Broadway. There will be a frontage of fifty feet on Broadway and 133 feet on Maryland. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $50,000. The exterior finish will be of brick and terra cotta. There will be twelve single apartments on the second floor. The owners of the building are: H. S. Burn, S. P. Davis and J. W. Meefessel.

TO BUILD APARTMENTS

Dr. Arthur G. Morton of 354 West Lorraine street, bought the northwest corner at Chestnut and Brand last week. The purchase price was $22,000. A two-story apartment and store building will probably be built there.

A $500,000 sanatorium and hospital building is now under construction in the eastern part of Glendale. A beautiful site, the highest point of twenty-eight acres covered with oak and walnut trees, has been selected for the main building. This sanatorium is owned by the Seventh-Day Adventists. There will be most modern equipment of X-Ray and electrical treatment rooms and the operating rooms will be complete in every detail. Two floors will be devoted to baths and treatment rooms similar to the Battle Creek institution. There [illegible] 128 private rooms [illegible] baths for patients.

Ground was broken Monday for a twenty-unit apartment-house to be erected by Frederick Reinecke at 121 South Kenwood street. Each apartment will consist of living-room, kitchen, breakfast nook and large dressing-room and bath with showers. There will be disappearing beds, and built-in features including ice boxes. Half of the apartments will be finished in French gray and the others in cream. Each apartment will have furnishings and appointments to harmonize with the woodwork. There will be hardwood floors throughout. The Smith Building Company is the builder, though the plans were prepared by the General Construction Company. The total cost will be approximately $50,000 including the furnishings.

JAPAN WILL SPEND VAST SUM ON PORTS

A habor and port construction program calling for an appropriation of Yen 57,050,000 ($27,945,-975,) under the terms of which most of the more important ports of Japan will be improved, is to be introduced into the present session of the Diet. The principal ports that will benefit by the bill if it is approved are Yokohama, Kobe, Nagasaki, Moji, Tsuruga and Shimonoseki.

Under the terms of the bill as originally written the port of Kobe will receive the greatest part of the appropriation and it is reported that approximately Yen 29,850,000 ($14,489,975) will be allotted for improvement at this port. The proposed outlay for the other ports are: Yokohama, Yen 13,450,000 ($6,145,775;) Moji, Yen 5,250,000 ($2,569,875;) Tsuruga, Yen 4,000,-000 ($1,958,000;) Nagasaki, Yen 2,400,000 ($1,174,800,) according to a report to the Commerce Department from Consul M. D. Kirjassoff, Yokohama.

TO OPEN FRONTAGE

The Santa Monica Land and Water Company, selling agents for Hollywood Crescent Rose tract No. 2 announces that the Melrose-avenue frontage for a distance of four blocks is to be opened. This will make sixteen business corners available, as well as some inside frontage.

Modern Hotel Being Planned for Glendale

Plans are being drawn for a hotel to be erected at the corner of Glendale avenue and Broadway, by a hotel company composed of Glendale business men and women, of which C. W. Ingledue is president. The building site was purchased last Saturday from A. Ambrosini, the purchase price was $75,000. The building is to have five or six stories, and will be constructed of concrete and steel. It will be designed as an apartment-hotel and will cost about $400,000.

Large Rental Involved in Hotel Lease

The Murray-Gerber Company, realtors, announces through W. B. Johnson of its sales and leasing department, a fifteen-year lease on the Albert Hotel and store building at 720-22 West Third street for Charles N. Post of Pasadena to W. A. Jacobson and associates. The building is a three-story and basement structure with stores on the ground floor. The lease involves a total rental of $116,000.

The Murray-Gerber Company also announces a three-year lease on the storeroom at 806 East Ninth street in the Brown Building, being completed at the southeast corner of Ninth and Santee streets for which they are agents, to B. C. Miller and C. H. Burton for Emil Brown. The lessees will operate a first-class restaurant.

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS IN BRIEF

Business Situation Remains Favorable With Building Activity Pronounced in America; Europe's Status Affected by Ruhr Situation

Domestic conditions—Business conditions in the United States continue favorable, according to information received by the Department of Commerce. The record of production for January was by far the best for any month since the boom period of 1920. Figures so far available for February indicate continuation of this activity. Exceptionally heavy sales by retailers show a continued demand for goods by consumers. This heavy demand for commodities has resulted in some price increase, especially in raw materials.

Cotton has passed the 30 cent mark and is 3 cents a pound higher than a month ago. A weighted average of iron and steel prices now stands $43.81 per ton, compared with $41.41 a month ago. Copper is selling at just under 17 cents. Coal production is remaining steady at about 10,400,000 tons of bituminous a week.

Building activity and the production of building materials continues at exceptionally high levels for this time of the year. An increasing shortage in the supply of labor, both skilled and unskilled, seems to be one of the limiting factors in the production situation and is resulting in increased wages at some points. Activity in both stocks and bonds on the New York market in the week ending March 3 showed significant increases, although average prices declined slightly. Interest rates increased, giving an average of 5 1-8 per cent on sixty to ninety-day paper, compared with 4¾ per cent in the middle of last January.

Foreign conditions—Industrial and trade conditions in Great Britain have been influenced largely by developments on the Continent. Prices of coal, iron and steel have moved sharply upward. General industrial expansion continued during February, but the improvement has been slower than was expected at the beginning of the year. Industrial activity in Italy continues. Figures for 1922 just received from Commercial Attache MacLean show that production of iron ore, pig iron steel and mercury exceeded that of 1921. Bank clearings were greater in December than in any previous month and so were net increases in capital investments, the improvement continuing into January. Automotive activity is marked, and the Lancia works are reported to have enough orders to keep them busy until October. The labor situation is better than at this time last year, and the government's financial and political position has been strengthened.

Business developments in Czecho-Slovakia were better in February, with prospects of continued improvement. The Ruhr occupation has had a favorable effect in Czecho-Slovakia, in that it is causing large orders for coal, iron and steel from Germany and Austria. An important order for locomotives has been received from Rumania.

German imports have increased and exports decreased. Business is quiet in India, but the situation is much better than it was a year ago. Money is temporarily tighter, jute prices are easier, and the piecegoods market remains depressed. The demand for silver in exchanges is strong.

Cement Mills Capacity Will Be Increased

The business of the Monolith Portland Cement Company has developed to such an extent, that it has decided to further increase the capacity of the firm's present plant. Within a few days, new machinery, already installed, will be in operation, bringing the capacity to 3000 barrels, or 12,000 sacks per day.

The Monolith Company has just contracted for further additional machinery, to bring its capacity up to 4500 barrels, or 18,000 sacks per day output. It is expected to have this additional machinery installed and the plant on a basis of 4500 barrels or 18,000 sacks per day about the first of July, 1923.

The Monolith Company is also now making layouts for further additional capacity, and contracts for the machinery will be shortly executed to further increase its capacity up to 6000 barrels, or 24,-000 sacks, per day, so that the full 6000-barrel capacity plant may be in operation about the first of the year.

The Monolith Company has its general offices in Los Angeles, with branch offices in San Francisco and Portland.

SANTA BARBARA SCHOOL

The contract to install direct system of heating and ventilating in the new Santa Barbara High School has been awarded to F. J. Donnelly of Los Angeles. The work will cost in the neighborhood of $54,000. Plans for the high school building were drafted by Architects Roland F. Sauter and Keith Lockard of Santa Barbara and Architect W. H. Weeks of San Francisco.

Prosperity Can Now Flow Through Glendale's Principal Business Artery

Men of vision who have studied realty conditions in Southern California foresaw in Broadway the logical business street of Glendale. They knew that investments in property there would mount to untold valuations. Many have sought to purchase the site of the Glendale Sanitarium for a business subdivision, but their entreaties fell upon deaf ears. Meanwhile business buildings have been erected all around it.

Like a dam stemming the fall of a surging stream, the Glendale Sanitarium has held back the full flow of prosperity through Broadway, the one great east and west business artery of Glendale for the past five years.

During its many years in Glendale, that institution has served the community well. Established when Glendale was undeveloped, the Directors thought that they were secure in their location amid the quiet of the residence section, but the stupendous growth of the thriving city far outstripped the hopes of the greatest optimist and the Sanitarium found itself in the midst of intense business activity.

When this condition was fully recognized, the Directors secured a desirable site removed from the city's center and planned the erection of a group of fine buildings. They were ambitious in their planning. Instead of a modest building, their plans grew to proud proportions and in their desire to give Glendale an institution that would rank with the West's finest, they faced the necessity of disposing of their Broadway location immediately in order to carry out the financing of their new home.

That's the reason we have been able to persuade them to dispose of this wonderful business frontage, NOW. There are just 38 lots in the site, known as the Broadway Central Business Tract, and many of these will be offered at from $50 to $100 a front foot less than surrounding frontage.

Realizing that such opportunities for so attractive an investment are rare, we anticipate that all the lots will sell within 48 hours after the opening of the Sale, which only waits the filing of the final maps. It is our advice that you make an immediate inspection of the property and prepare to make reservations, as we believe it will be necessary to consider them only in the order they are received.

PUEBLO TO CITY, STORY OF POMONA'S PROGRESS

All Qualifications Essential to Rapid Growth Possessed by Thriving Community

BY ALFRED A. SCHWICHTENBERG
"Times" Correspondent,

Between the snow-covered mountains on the north and rolling foothills on the south, in a gently sloping valley, thirty-three miles east of Los Angeles, lies the beautiful city of Pomona, "the place were you would like to live," and the center of the citrus and deciduous fruit industry of Pomona Valley. It is one of the cities through which passes the famous El Camino highway, the much-traveled road used by the Franciscan fathers in the early history of California, and is situated in the very heart of the famous citrus belt of Southern California.

It was on the fifteenth day of April, 1837, that Don Ricardo Vejar and Ygnacio de Palomares, two Mexican soldiers, first stopped at what is now know as Ganesha Park, then called the San Jose foothills, and, becoming enamored with the beauty of the surrounding country, decided to locate here. In due course of time they persuaded the Mexican Governor of California to grant them a large tract of land, which embraced the present city of Pomona, and engaged in grazing and grain raising. It was thus that a settlement was started.

EARLY GROWTH

The growth of the settlement was slow for many years until in 1882 the population numbered only some 200 souls. At that time a boom was launched and in 1885 the city contained over 2500 inhabitants. It was on December 31, 1887, that the town was incorporated and named Pomona, which signifies in the Greek, "Goddess of Fruits."

It was about this time that citrus culture began on a progressive scale, and during the intervening years that have elapsed, the city has become a great citrus-growing center, from which millions of dollars worth of the golden fruit finds its way to eastern markets yearly.

Citrus acreage takes up the greater portion of the 12.5 square miles area of Pomona, but there are other important contributing factors to its growth.

Dairying, poultry raising, hay, grain and alfalfa growing are other important industries, while the raising of vegetables is also becoming a large part of the growing community. Over seventy-five carloads of cauliflower alone were shipped to near-by markets during the past year.

MANUFACTURING CENTER

Pomona is just beginning to become a manufacturing center. It has been noted for many years as the home of the Pomona Deep Well Pump, manufactured by the Pomona Manufacturing Company, and located here also are the Tutor Adding Machine Company, which is constructing a large $60,000 factory at the west city limits; the Norman Baker Skirt factory, the Vortox Manufacturing Company, Pomona Brick Company, two planing mills, Pomona Valley Ice Company, Pomona Sheet Metal Works, B. F. Caldwell Visible Gas Furnace, A. M. Fowkes Sweater Factory, Milner Bottling Works, and the Golden State and Sunset Fruit canneries which ship over 10,000,000 cans of fruit annually. Pomona is also the home of the Southern Service Company, operating eighteen laundries in Southern California cities; and of McClintock's Extrafine Bread bakery, which supplies bread to cities nearby.

The deciduous fruit industry is second to none, peaches, plums, apricots, grapes, sugar beets, walnuts and other fruits being raised in abundance.

The raising of table grapes, strawberries and blackberries, has become a large industry during the last few years, and with ideal climatic conditions prevailing throughout the year, bids fair to become a potent factor in the city's income.

The estimated returns from agricultural products exceeds $37,000,000 every year and this total is growing steadily as the population increases.

No community in the State is more advantageously located regarding evenness of climate, fertility, of soil, mountain scenery, railroad facilities, church and school privileges and easy access to markets.

ADEQUATE TRANSPORTATION

Three transcontinental railroads, the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Santa Fe main lines pass through Pomona, and in addition to these, the Pacific Railway and the Motor Transit Company furnish adequate interurban transportation facilities. A wonderful network of paved highways add to the easy access and egress of automobile traffic to and from the city.

In the city alone there are a total of 141 miles of roads, thirty-five of which are paved.

These various factors have added materially to the acreage prices in the community which range from $600 to $5000 per acre from unimproved to improved land. Residential and business property is also valuable, the former ranging from $350 to $3000 for a fifty-foot lot, while the latter is priced as high as $250 a front foot.

New subdivisions of residence property are being put on the market in keeping with the city's needs, Lincoln Park Manor, Sierra Vista Tract, and Randolph street extension being opened up during the past year, due to increasing demand for desirable home building property.

Pomona is noted for its wonderful churches and unexcelled school system, neither of which is surpassed by any city of like size and population.

Thirty-three distinct religious creeds are represented twenty-two of which own their own structures representing a total value of over $2,000,000.

A total of six kindergartens, seven grammar schools, three high schools, one junior college, and one special school supply the educational needs of the city. In addition to these, a new $450,000 high school is in process of construction in the north-east section of the city.

A Carnegie Library housing over 100,000 volumes, shows an increasing number being added each year as the growth of the town demands.

Pomona's new Young Men's Christian Association Building completed in April, 1922, is a model of architecture and a plant of efficiency and service. In addition to the work of the Y. M. C. A., among 2000 men and boy members, Pomona is headquarters of a First Class Council of Boy Scouts of America, in which there are 1800 boys enrolled.

NEW BUILDINGS

Plans for a $200,000 Elk's home, $100,000 tourist hotel, and other buildings will culminate in 1923, while a $200,000 theater and $250,000 bank building are already under way.

It is a remarkable fact that 80 per cent of the people in Pomona own their own homes, and many thousands of dollars will be spent for new residence construction during the coming year.

Four fraternal organizations own their own buildings—the Elks, Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows and Masons. The Loyal Order of Moose are contemplating a new building. The G. A. R., W. R. C., Sons and Daughters of Veterans, American Legion, Spanish American War Veterans, and other fraternal and patroitic organizations are well established and lend much assistance in their respective channels.

The more prominent community welfare organizations are, the Pomona Valley Merchant's Credit Association, Chamber of Commerce, Welfare League, Lions, Rotary, and Kiwanis clubs, and the local chapter of the American Red Cross. The Salvation Army also aids materially in relief work.

Pomona has an estimated population of 17,500 and is the trading center for a population of 40,000. The elevation is 861 feet, situated forty-five miles inland from the Pacific.

The city's assessed valuation is $15,000,000 and is served by four strong banks and two building and loan associations, having assets of over $13,000,000.

Two daily newspapers are published here, one morning and one evening.

MANY ATTRACTIVE PARKS

Pomona has four beautiful parks, the most prominent of which is Ganesha Park, located about one mile north from the center of the city. It has a wonderful open air Greek Theater which when fully equipped will seat 10,000 people, a large open air plunge where thousands frolic during the summer months, and has tables and chairs for picnic parties that will seat over a thousand persons at one time. Here also is located an automobile camping ground to accomodate tourists traveling through the city.

Just north of Ganesha Park is located the property of the Mountain Meadows Country Club. A new clubhouse has recently been built and an eighteen-hole golf course is in operation and has become the playground for both old and young. Adjoining the park is located the Los Angeles County Fair grounds, an innovation last year, which bids fair to eclipse all fairs of the Southland; it possesses one of the fastest one mile dirt tracks for horse racing on the Coast. It covers an area of forty acres.

Pomona has an ample supply of pure mountain water gathered from the mountain rivers, artesian and other wells and tunnels. No city in the country has such an abundance of pure water for irrigating and drinking purposes, and from a source which will never fail.

Natural gas is supplied in sufficient quantities by the Southern Counties Gas Company, electricity by the Southern California Edison Company, and telephone service is provided by the Pomona Valley Telephone and Telegraph Union.

Pomona is the home of the Southern California egg laying contest, conducted by the State Farm Bureau under the supervision of the State University, and from this institution information is given to poultrymen throughout the southern half of the State.

Pomona has a modified charter form of government, with a Mayor and four Councilmen each of which is a Commissioner of streets, police, fire, finance and revenue, respectively.

Pomona is the possessor of a fine group of city buildings which includes the City Hall, fire station, police station and jail.

REAL CITY SPIRIT

The progressive spirit of the community is manifest at all times, and as proof of this, various issues that are to come before the voters of the city at the next city election on April 2, can be enumerated. The following bond issues will be up for consideration on that date: Los Angeles Fair appropriation bonds for new buildings and financing, $75,000; Commission of Public Charities, $10,000; new northside fire station, $25,000; a complete new outfall sewer system to make the present system more adequate, $100,000; and an advertising apropriation for $15,000. These issues will be met with the same response that has characterized the city's consistent growth since its inception and will not materially increase the taxes which are at the present time, and always have been, unusually low.

Pomona's business section is one of the fastest growing units in the city, and has made rapid strides during the past year. Many new business blocks have been erected and several more are being contemplated. Chain store projects are making their apearance in rapid succession and the community is rapidly becoming the trading hub of the entire valley.

During the coming year, the Southern Counties Gas Company will build a new office building at the northeast corner of Second and Gordon streets, C. R. May will build a $50,000 garage at the corner of Holt and Garey streets; A. S. Kraker and C. O. Bowen will construct a new building at the northwest corner of Second and Locust streets; the new California Theater Building will be completed by June 1, the new home of the First National Bank is just being started, and numerous other smaller buildings are being contemplated.

PROSPERITY AHEAD

Experts predict that Pomona will see even a greater era of prosperity as indicated by building and home construction than in 1922, which was the largest in the history of the city. The month of November 1922 marked the record for building permits when it reached the amazing total of $459,000, and so far this year indications point favorably towards 1923 being the banner year in all time. In all branches of industry prosperity has been marked, with the unemployment problem a nonentity, and more residence property being improved with fine homes than any previous years heretofore.

A new-twenty-unit bungalow court will be completed within the year, while extensive improvements and the beautification of East Holt avenue are being planned. Ornamental lights will be installed upon this street and other improvements are to be added which will make it the show place of the city, and will give tourists going through the community in automobiles an idea of the progressive spirit of its citizens.

Pomona's slogan "Inland City Beautiful" is about to be realized and is a culmination of the dreams of its citizens who are determined to make it "The Place Where You Would Like to Live."

Grimes' Orchard Acres

Bearing Trees Mean an Immediate Income

Every lot in Grimes' Orchard Acres has bearing peach and apricot trees which produced $600 per lot last year and 25 Eureka Walnut Trees nearing maturity. The earnings from the walnut trees when they mature should be $100 per tree.

There are only a few lots left. Act now.

Big development is going on in and around Grimes' Orchard Acres. Many new homes and stores projected and under construction. City improvements including gas, water, electricity and streets are being installed. All this enhances the value of the lots.

Grimes' Orchard Acres, only 1½ miles from Van Nuys and seven miles from Hollywood offers you all the convenience of the city with all the freedom and beauty of the country, plus an immediate income which will pay for your home.

Realtors Will Have Booth at Business Show

The Los Angeles Realty Board is to have a booth at the second annual Business Show which is to be held at Exposition Pavilion in Praeger Park, April 23 to 28.

Copies of the board's official magazine, the Realtor, will be presented to visitors interested in Los Angeles real property, and there will be exhibits which will portray the rapidity of realty development in the Southland, and also the soundness and the stability of the progress made.

A leaflet explaining the use of the word "Realtor" will also be distributed.

CLOSE-UP OF CLAREMONT

College Town With Abundance of Homes, Orchards, Schools, Culture and Scenery

Picture, if you will, a city of culture, homes and orange blossoms, and schools and colleges, nestled close to the snow-capped Sierra Madre Mountains with their numerous enticing canyons, mountain trails and beauty spots; place it thirty-six miles east of Los Angeles, a short automobile drive over paved highways, and you have before you for your admiration, the city of Claremont, which exists in reality. Let us look deeper into the panorama we have before us.

Here is a community of 2100 acres consisting for the most part of citrus acreage gently sloping upward toward the great mountains to the north, but we also note that about 300 acres are dotted with many beautiful homes, tree-lined streets, and man-made gardens.

It is in this setting that we discover that great educational institution, Pomona College, and upon further investigation, we decide that Claremont is primarily a college town, for the atmosphere fairly breathes of it, although we also catch a faint odor of orange blossoms to remind us that there is also another industry here.

Pomona College, founded in 1888, by F. P. Brackett and C. B. Sumner (father of Pomona College,) covers an area of some sixty acres where are found appropriately scattered, the following buildings of the institution: The Carnegie library, containing over 100,000 books, Smiley Hall, F. P. Brackett Observatory, Claremont Inn (the college commons,) Rembrandt Hall, Art Building, Renwick gymnasium, Mabel Bridges Hall of Music, Holmes Hall, Pearson's Hall, Harwood Court, and Harwood Hall—all representing a worth of some $3,500,000. In addition to this we note some new construction and are told that an additional $1,500,000 is being spent in the building of the following: The chemistry, administration, biology, boys' training, and other buildings, which when completed, will give Claremont one of the best equipped colleges in the West, and which has a total registraless than two Manufacturing purchased and started 400 acres of similar to those development of a in Chicago. Approxi- of this tract are or being made ready for the use of the Los Angeles Stockyards, which have been in operation for several months. This tract is just east of Vernon, south of Fruitland Road, and west of the Union Pacific-San Pedro line. The north part of this property adjoining the Los Angeles is that which is being used as the location for the stockyards. With the development of this section it has been announced from time to time that it would be but a short time before large eastern concerns purchased locations and settled factories there.

Some months ago the Union Pacific Railroad announced the purchase of 516 acres to be divided into industrial sites and into sites for railway maintenance buildings. This property was a part of the Carrol W. Gates estate and is just east of the city limits near Montebello. The first contracts for the railway buildings have been let and construction work is now in progress. The development of the remainder of this property is yet to come.

Of a different character is the property which has been and is being developed as the Central Industrial and Warehouse Tract. This property is situated east of the Los Angeles River, just west of the Stephenson avenue bluff and extends from Fourth to Seventh streets. The land in this subdivision was sold for $115,000 and is being improved with a block of buildings which will cost $200,000. The eight structures, according to the preliminary announcement, will each be 100 by 120 feet, class C construction. From time to time architect's drawings of the several structures have appeared in the industrial section of The Times.

In recent weeks a number of new tracts have been placed on the market or the plans for their opening announced. One of the largest is that which W. H. Daum, local industrial realtor, has subdivided and is now improving.

Since the opening of this property three firms have purchased sites for new plants. At the time that the property was subdivided it was announced that fifteen firms had spoken for locations, some of these are to be announced in the near future. This property adjoins that of the large Goodyear plant along Central avenue. It extends west to South Park. The official name of the tract is the Southwest Industrial Gateway Terminal. Contracts for the improvements to be made on the property have been let.

The Western-Avenue Industrial Center is a smaller tract of land which was placed on the market some weeks ago by Blue and Mason and Hugh Evans. It is located at the northwest corner of Slauson and Western avenues. In this property a number of firms had located or purchased sites for plants prior to the subdivision. Agents for the property report that a number of new firms are expected to build on the property in the near future.

Within the past weeks two tracts of first magnitude have been announced. Both of the properties will have textile mills as a nucelus for their development. The Pioneer-Pacific Worsted Company will locate its mills on a tract which has been named Coburn after the president of the woolen firm. Additional information regarding this property is contained in another article in this issue.

The second tract to be given impetus this past week was that which is to have as its center the buildings of the Los Angeles Cotton Mills. This property is locatel near the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway, its south boundary being Chicago avenue and its west boundary Indiana avenue. The property has been termed the Eastlake Industrial District and it is backed by a syndicate made up mostly of local men. An extensive improvement program is said to be contemplated.

This brief account of what is being done in Los Angeles does not take into account the great amount of activity that is taking place in surrounding cities which are virtually a part of the Greater Los Angeles. Torrance, Glendale, Burbank, Alhambra, Huntington Park and Inglewood are taking rapid strides in industrial growth.

A characteristic achievement on the part of one of these communities is furnished by Alhambra. In this place a large tract of land has been purchased by business men of the community and is being placed on the market, according to announcement, as an industrial subdivision at the actual cost of the land and improvements. This property, which is near the scene for the yards and shops of the Southern California Edison Company, seems destined to make rapid strides of development.

All of the evidence that is presented, though just a bit from the surface, tends to convince that the industrial growth of Los Angeles is rivalling that of any city of the nation.

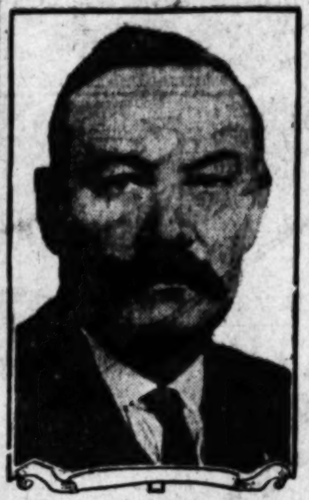
Revised Plan of Pioneer Pacific Worsted Company's Mill

This is the revised plan of the structure which Hamm & Grant, Inc., local industrial engineers, have prepared for the buildings of the enterprise which is to be located at the community of Coburn. Below are shown some of the men interested in the undertaking.

WILL BUILD WOOLEN MILL

Engineers Preparing Drawings for Buildings to House Southwest's Newest Industry

With the conclusion of the negotiations for the purchase of a site for the Pioneer-Pacific Worsted Mills, the new $2,000,000 enterprise which has been formed here by Lemuel J. Coburn, Hamm & Grant, Inc., local industrial engineers and builders, have started intensive work on the drawings for the new mill. This structure will be 550 feet long and 225 feet wide. Construction will be structural steel, hollow tile and brick, the type of building being saw tooth. In addition to the mill the plans include the erection of an office building which will be 100 by 40 feet, two stories in height.



Lemuel J Coburn

The site of the building is located on a tract of land which has been purchased by Othar Jensen, president of the First National Bank of Watts, and William Diller. The site consists of twenty-five acres and is in the industrial portion of the tract which has been named Coburn, after the founder of the mill. The tract is between Central and South Park avenues and north of Sexton street; its north line is just a mile south of the Goodyear rubber plant property. The propetry is crossed by the Redondo Beach-Watts Pacific Electric line. It is along the right-of-way of this railroad that the industrial property is situated. The remaining portion will be subdivided for residential and business usage.

TO SUBDIVIDE LAND

The subdivision will be sold under the direction of a selling syndicate composed of Lemuel J. Coburn, the W. Ross Campbell Company and Mr. Jensen. The local realty company is to be represented by Robert L. McCourt, Frank R. Dolbee and J. I. Sullivan. The latter with Mr. Dolbee were instrumental in securing the location for the worsted company. Plans for the improvement of the property include street paving, sidewalks, curbings and the installation of public utilities. The members of the syndicate say that $250,000 is to be spent for this work.

All of the property of the South Park Land Company between Central and South Park avenues was included in the purchase of Messrs. Diller and Jensen. In addition to this, 120 acres owned by Mr. Diller is included in Coburn.

WORSTED AND YARN OUTPUT

It is the intention of the Pioneer-Pacific Worsted Company to buy raw wool from western markets and to manufacture it into finished materials ready for clothing concerns. This involves the installation of spinning, weaving, scouring and cleaning machinery. The plans for the buildings make provision for the installation of 100 looms with a capacity of 1,000,000 yards of material annually. In addition to the yarn needed for this cloth 2,000,000 pounds of yarn will be manufactured for distribution in the Pacific Coast territory.

Construction work on the mill will be started as soon as the working drawings have been completed by the engineers for the company. The mill and office building is to be erected by Hamm and Grant, Inc.

ARNOLD TO SPEAK HERE

Industrial Los Angeles will again greet Julean Arnold, the silver-tongued American Commercial Attache at Peking, China, when he arrives in the city tomorrow. A program of speeches has been arranged under his permission, sponsored by the foreign trade department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, many dates made by request of schools and commercial bodies.

Clarence Matson, representing the Chamber of Commerce has "booked" Mr. Arnold for a special address before the City Club at a luncheon next Tuesday and another, which will include an important message to business men, will be a chamber dinner Thursday evening. Special subjects will be chosen for his university addresses.

CLAREMONT HAS ATTRACTIONS

er industry that was supported here, in fact, it is really the only big one that can be found, and it is the orange and lemon culture, which furnishes the bulk of the income of the citizens of this college town.

CITRUS FRUITS

Citrus fruits are handled on a big scale and the acreage sells from $300 to $6000 per acre for unimproved to highly improved, while the quality and quantity of the fruit is unsurpassed, for there are no disagreeable and damaging winds here and the temperature is fairly even.

Three orange and lemon packing-houses, the Claremont Citrus, College Heights and El Camino, handle the product of 7000 acres of citrus fruit in and surrounding Claremont, and are all provided with modern machinery, buildings and precooling plants.

Two railroads haul the fruit to eastern markets and run through the heart of the town, namely the Santa Fe main line, and the Pacific Electric Railway.

Besides the citrus industry, poultry raising is just beginning, but is not handled on a large scale as yet.

All is not work in the best of communities, neither is it in Claremont, for on holidays, college student, rancher and business man find abundant recreation in nearby mountain canyons, of which there are seven, or seek pleasure on the nine-hole course of the Indian Hill Golf Club, which is known as one of the best links in the valley.

The picture is complete and must be seen to be appreciated.

Will Move Into Modern Factory in Near Future

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HUNTINGTON PARK, March 1 The new Made Well Furniture Company's buildings are nearing completion and the work of removing the machinery from the present plant in Huntington Park will be commenced in a day or two, it being expected to have the new plant in operation by the first week in April.

The new plant, which is a one-story structure located on South Boyle avenue, is well equipped with railroad facilities. About $10,000 worth of new machinery has been purchased and is being installed, and besides manufacturing bedroom furniture, other lines will be added. A twenty-five year lease has been secured on the building and grounds and when the plant is put in operation it will show an investment of more than $30,000, according to N. E. Tingeley, president of the plant.

Lumber
For Your Building
The durability and appearance of a building depends to a great extent on the kind and quality of lumber used in its construction. When you buy Whiting-Mead lumber you have the assurance of the satisfaction that accompanies the purchase of any reliable merchandise.
Remember, we buy in large quantities and ship in direct; have our own mills and dry kilns, and are in a position to furnish you the very best in finish lumber.

Buy Roofing for Its Long Life
After all is said and done, you should buy roofing for its durability and that's why we have for many years specialized on the two brands we sell. In our opinion each one represents the maximum of value for its price. Greater length of service for the money you spend.
King Roofing, $1.75 for light weight, $2.25 for medium and $2.75 for heavy.
Santo Roofing, $1.25 for light weight, and $2.25 per roll for heavy.

Pedestal Lavatory $20
A limited amount of pedestal lavatories specially priced because they are factory damaged or seconds. No fittings included in the special price of $20.00 each.

Look Out!
Los Angeles!

or Glendale people will gobble up Bellehurst Park before you get a chance at it!

Never in all our experience in selling ten million dollars worth of high class property in the San Francisco Bay region have we seen such excitement as was created in that wonder-city of Glendale by our full page ads in all the Los Angeles papers yesterday.

In Glendale they know Bellehurst Park!

They know the marvelous beauty of this old 200 acre estate. In past days they have picnicked under its spreading oaks and magnolias, plucking oranges and grapefruit from its beautiful groves.

They know in Glendale that it is only 5 minutes away from Brand and Broadway where the Security Trust & Savings Bank of Los Angeles is erecting a $600,000.00 office building.

Thev know it is only two blocks from the main boulevard and car line.

They have learned in the past few weeks, something of the character of the Walter H. Leimert Co.; they have watched the big work going forward; they see the finest residential park of California in the making!

They know in Glendalt how this wild-fire growing city is built up absolutely solid to Bellehurst Park, just leaning over the edge ready to pour into it, sending values up, and up and UP!

So!

When Glendale read our full pages in the Los Angeles papers Friday, half the town it seems came trooping to our office.

What excitement!

Figures to date—$160,000.00 in sales in Bellehurst Park to Glendale only! The city manager bought one of the first lots! It's a race, Los Angeles for Bellehurst Park, with Glendale in the lead.

AT COST.
AND WHY.

We have a large new subdivision, one-quarter, one-half and acre sites, and to interest people in opening this property, we are building and have built houses that we will sell at very nearly cost. These houses are modern, up-to-date and well contracted.

We call them our advertising houses, and to responsible persons we will sell on very easy terms. There will be very few bargain houses built by us—fortunate will be the person who can say he owns one. Cars leave 517 Douglas Building every day except Sunday, 9, 10 and 12. Tract office is located at 100 San Gabriel Blvd. Drive through Alhambra on Main street, due east, or take San Gabriel-Alhambra car to end of line.

AN UNUSUAL HOME—
This is a beautiful place which has never been offered before. It is in the most exclusive part of the city, on a corner lot. Three of the rooms are the lightest, airiest bedrooms you ever saw—one has eleven windows, and each one is so large you don't have to be particular where you put this or that—and best of all, there is a fine closet for each. The kitchen is just as light and convenient as the bedrooms are large. A magnificent view of the mountains can be had from the sun room, overlooking a spacious lawn and beautiful flowers. The restful decorations of a quiet living room make this a place that anyone can be proud to call home. The price is $8500, and it can be bought with a reasonable down payment.

WHY NOT THE BEST
Kenneth Crest is the most beautiful residential spot in Glendale. Situated on Kenneth Road, at Pacific avenue, it is surrounded by the wonderful foothill houses that have made Glendale famous.
KENNETH CREST
The improvement work of Kenneth Crest is in keeping with its environment, and is of the most expensive nature; broad, winding, well paved streets, and big deep lots, some over 200 feet make real homesites.
KENNETH CREST
The preliminary prices of Kenneth Crest are remarkably low, from $2000 including al improvements. The property is having a phenomenal sale. Don't wait too long, but see it today if possible.
EDWARDS & WILDEY CO., The Glendale Office is open all week and Sunday, at Broadway and Central Ave.

OPENING SALE IS NOW UNDER WAY!

VENICE MANOR TRACT

This is the allotment that many have been waiting for—located at the junction of Washington and Lincoln Blvds., right at the entrance to Venice.

LOTS $795 AND UP ON UNUSUALLY EASY TERMS.

Lots for bungalows and double bungalows, flats and bungalow courts at sacrifice prices—just one-half what they will soon be selling for. There is no bunk about this. The improvements are now being installed, sewers, water, gas and electricity, sidewalks and curbs and well-surfaced streets. Look this unparalleled tract over, and try to find its equal in price and location.

THREE NEW HOUSES TO BE BUILT AT ONCE.

The demand for homes in this location is growing. We are building three splendid bungalows, which will be completed in 60 days, which will be for sale at low prices and easy terms. We are near the car line, within a few blocks of the famous Venice High School, where your children may enter kindergarten and go right on through high school without a change of schools. This is said to be the only complete school of this kind in the State.

You may also secure business frontage on Washington and Lincoln Blvds., at prices that will astound you. Approximately one-half what others are asking and getting. Come directly to the tract yourself. Drive out Washington Blvd. to the entrance of Venice. Remember the name, "VENICE MANOR" Tract. You can't miss it. Our representatives there all the time.

ROSCOE
A CITY SOON

Activity reigns supreme in the San Fernando Valley. Its wealth and proximity to the metropolis have brought it finally into the prominence it deserves.

Chief among the real estate opportunities of this great valley, ROSCOE affords the home buyer, the settler, the investor, a sure, safe and largely profitable place for purchase.

ROSCOE is a logical business point, located by natural topography; it is no whim of man or corporation, but the unescapable point where cross tides of actual commerce FORCE the establishment of a community center.

Look them all over; compare prices; compare locations; compare prospects, then invest in Roscoe according to your means, for the certainty of satisfaction and profit.

Every pocketbook can do it, whether for acreage or business lots, or residence lots, and the original plat prices, still available, are calculated to YOUR ultimate profit.

A RICH MAN'S COUNTRY ESTATE.
A RICH MAN'S COUNTRY ESTATE.

A rare combination Ranch for Pure-bred Stock, Fruits, Alfalfa, General Farming, Golf, Horseback Riding, Hunting and Social Entertaining.

A few miles south of Los Angeles, at an elevation of 1500 feet, surrounded by scenic mountains, in a valley, superb with nature's charms, lies this beautiful property. Yes, both beautiful and productive, yielding ample to nicely carry itself under its present efficient management. Contains 5000 acres.

The owner has been called away on business and reluctantly has instructed me to sacrifice the ranch for $150,000, about one-half its value.

The buildings are adequate and in fine shape, tools and equipment ample; a lot of choice cattle and hogs; excellent water, glorious climate; wonderful scenery, in fact, a perfect property for a man who can afford such an estate.

PALMER CANYON

LOTS, $300 AND UP.

VERY EASY TERMS.

Running streams of water all the year. Beautiful live oaks and pines. Perfect title to land and water. Paved blvds. to property. No dangerous roads. Just far enough away to get rid of the street-car crowds. This property is in a class by itself, as the city of Pasadena and water cos. are doing away with cabin owners. Just think this over. These lots will double in value—in fact, are worth twice what we are selling for. Why take a lease when you can get a deed to property?

This private canyon of 300 acres, 2¼ miles long, elevation 2500 feet to 3500. Open all the year. Will be closed to public after cabin sites are sold off. No dance halls, country clubs, but a quiet retreat for the tired business man and his family, only 35 miles out, Foothill Blvd. to Claremont, 3 miles north to property. On the property Sunday, or week days by appointment. Just think! Only 10 cents a square foot for real estate like this.

READER

This offering will prove of paramount importance to one or two individuals. Opportunity may knock many times, but each proffering is different. There is but one "Smiley Heights," one "Rubidoux," one Santa Monica Palisades, and equally as true and more important to you is the fact that the acreage offered below may be the setting which alone can fulfill your ideal of a mountain home site.

A 40-acre tract situated within the protecting west arm of Santa Monica Bay, its wooded slopes affording many attractive cabin sites with vistas of sea and mountain. A nature lover's paradise, a haven for the seeker of health and quiet. Within commuting distance of Los Angeles. Price $250 per acre.

I am also offering 80 acres north of Dome Point, adjoining the "Rindge" Ranch. From its heights can be seen six of the Santa Barbara Channel Islands and the entire shore line of Santa Monica Bay. There is no road to this land at present. Price $125 per acre. Will consider exchange for home or building site in Santa Monica.

The above is worthy of investigation. One-third interest in oil and mineral rights reserved.

THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL

Down-town apartment house of 110 rooms never before leased. We can get a 10-year transferable lease at about $9 a room. $20,000 cash will handle this and the balance is payable on reasonable terms. This apartment is a 5-story semi-fireproof building of concrete and brick construction, has a beautiful marble entrance, tile floor lobby, is very well furnished throughout, and we can turn the furniture to you for less than $150,000, $50,000 cash.

ANOTHER APARTMENT BARGAIN.

Westlake District house of 65 rooms can be bought for $18,000—some terms. New 10-year transferable lease on this.

We sold several houses during the past week because they were real bargains. We have a number of other special valued buys that would pay you to investigate.

HOTEL MEN TAKE NOTICE

235-ROOM modern downtown hotel, located in heart of city, clearing $3300 per month above all expenses. Just think of it, the rent is only twelve hundred per month, 7 year lease. Twenty-five thousand dollars will give you possession. You will have your money invested back in seven months. The lease alone on this hotel is worth more than twice the amount asked for this place, let alone the value of the furniture, which costs you practically nothing. It is hardly believable, nevertheless it is an absolute fact. Don't pass this up, because it seems too good to be true, as there is not and there may not be another opportunity like this in the hotel line in L. A. in a long time to come. Phone or better still, come to our office as soon as you read this ad as you will never regret it if you get this wonderful money-making hotel.

16-unit bungalow court clearing over $500 per mo. above all expenses at sacrifice price as owner must leave city. $5000 will handle. This must be seen to be appreciated as there is nothing nicer in the city.

We have complete listing of hotels, apartment-houses, bungalow courts, ranging from five to five hundred thousand dollars. It will pay you to consult with us before buying elsewhere.

Ask for Mr. Barnes.

THE CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE CO.
WANTS REPRESENTATIVES IN EVERY TOWN IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

The Canada Life is the oldest Life Insurance Company in Canada, with Branch Offices in many of the leading cities of the United States. It is the only Life Insurance Company of the British Empire doing business in Southern California. It writes the most liberal form of policies, and offers very attractive terms to its representatives. If you are a man of reputation and standing in your community, you can make a very profitable income, by writing Life Insurance for the Canada Life Assurance Company. Experience, while helpful, is not necessary. What we are looking for are serious minded men, who wish to make money by part time, or full time work, aided by a company which stands at the top for reliability, service to the policyholders, and a full measure of help to its representatives in getting business. We are not looking for men who want "advances," but the man who wishes to write insurance, and who appreciates backing by one of the best companies anywhere writing Life Insurance, and aided in every possible way in the getting of business, it will pay such a man to write or see us immediately.

The CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY has just commenced writing business in Southern California and there is much of the best, exclusive territory still available outside of Los Angeles.

SPINS MILLION MILES IN DORT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FLINT (Mich.) March 17. Teddy Hempstead is Flint's candidate for the distinction of having covered more territory in an automobile than any other motorist. He has traveled a million miles. Hempstead has been employed as a tester for Dort ever since the first Dort was built. He averages 200 miles a day, 365 days every year. He has toured every State in the Union. He has been in almost every town and city of importance in the United States. He has never been in a wreck or had an accident of any kind and only once has he ever been called before a judge. Here is a record for other motorists to shoot at.

Palm Canyon's Closed to All Picnic Parties

Tin cans, paper bags, cracker crumbs and soiled paper napkins are responsible for some bad news which affects every auto owner in the western part of the United States, but particularly in the southern counties of California, according to officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Official word has just been received by the auto club that motoring parties will no longer be allowed to camp in Palm, Andreas and Murray Canyons. This step has been made necessary according to the United States Indian Field Service report because of the rubbish, pollution of water and fire hazards occasioned by careless auto parties who have previously camped in these beautiful canyons of Southern California.

This indicates that strenuous measures are going to be taken by the government in forest reserve canyons to preserve the beauty of nature unadorned by festoons of sardine tins, orange peels and cast-off papers. Motorists who take their lunches in the canyons of Southern California and then throw the remains to the four winds, thus cluttering up the face of nature, are going to be responsible, says the Auto Club, for the restriction on camping in many places unless they are careful from now on. With the closing of Palm Canyon, which is one of the most beautiful spots in the West, an important step has been taken toward the preservation of the natural wonders in this part of America.

RETIRES ALL BONDS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, March 17.—Packard Motor Car Company announces the retirement of all its outstanding bonds, April 15, next, thus removing from its balance sheets the last remaining effect of the national business slump which started in 1920. The bonds which have been called for retirement are those outstanding from an issue of $10,000,000 due in 1931 and issued April 15, 1921.

The crankshaft of the good Maxwell engine literally floats on a film of oil because of the full pressure lubrication to main and connecting rod bearings which forces the oil through channels bored in the crankshaft. This is decidedly unusual in cars of this class.

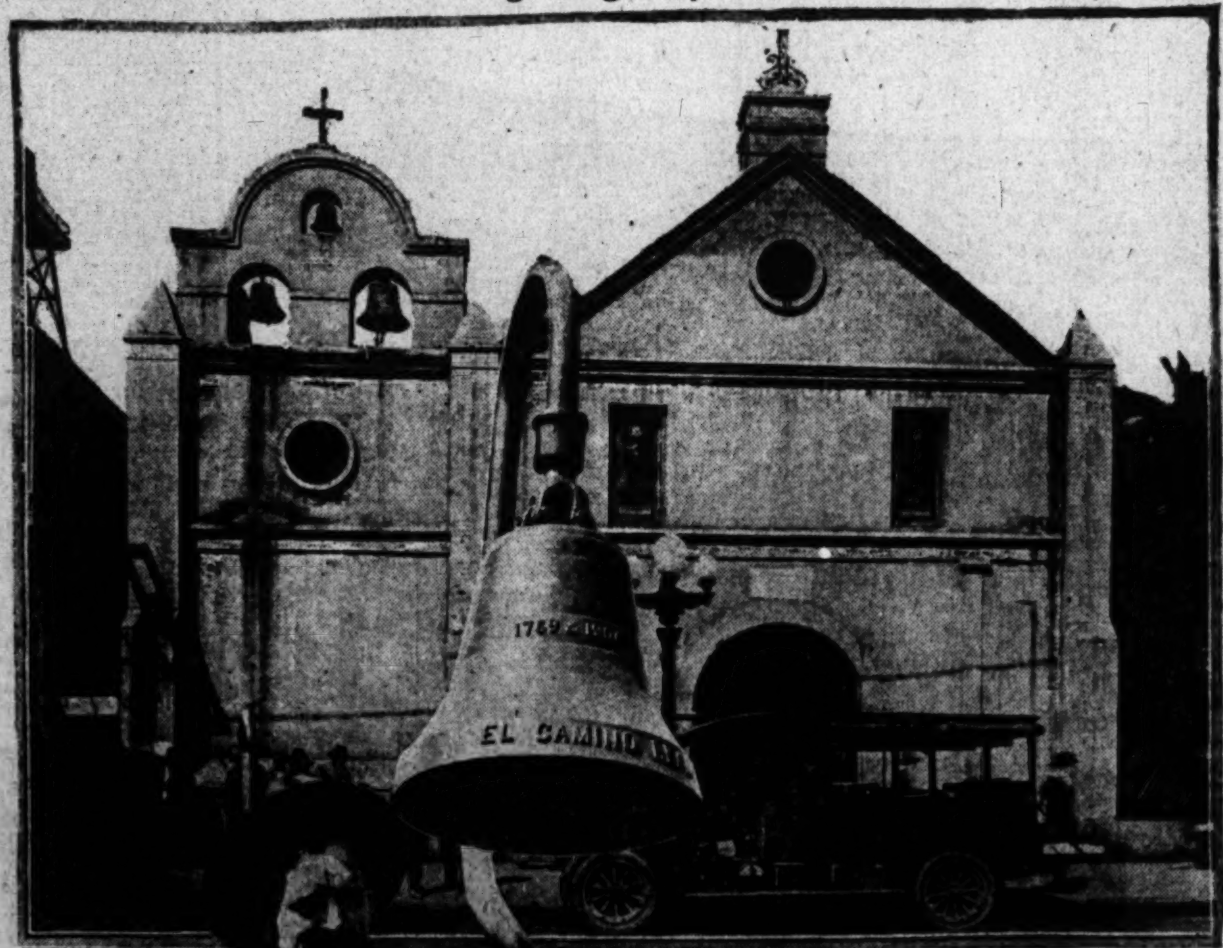
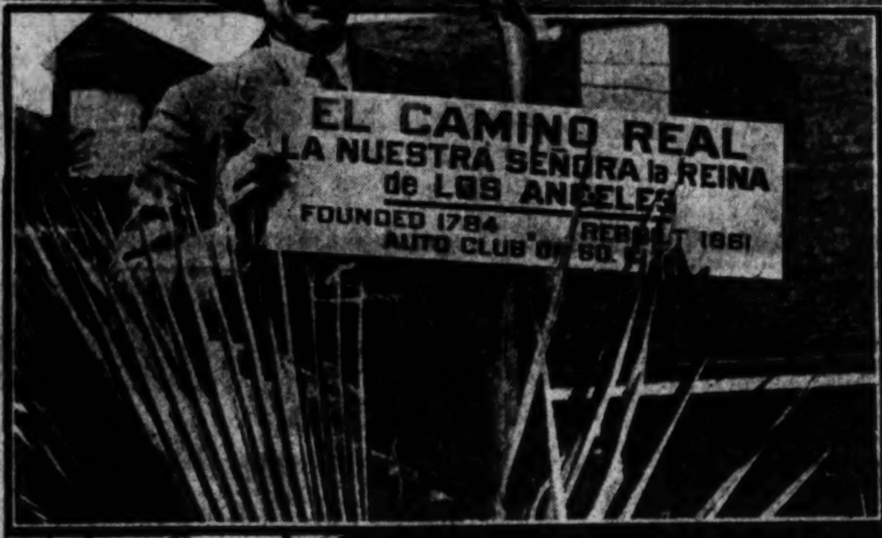
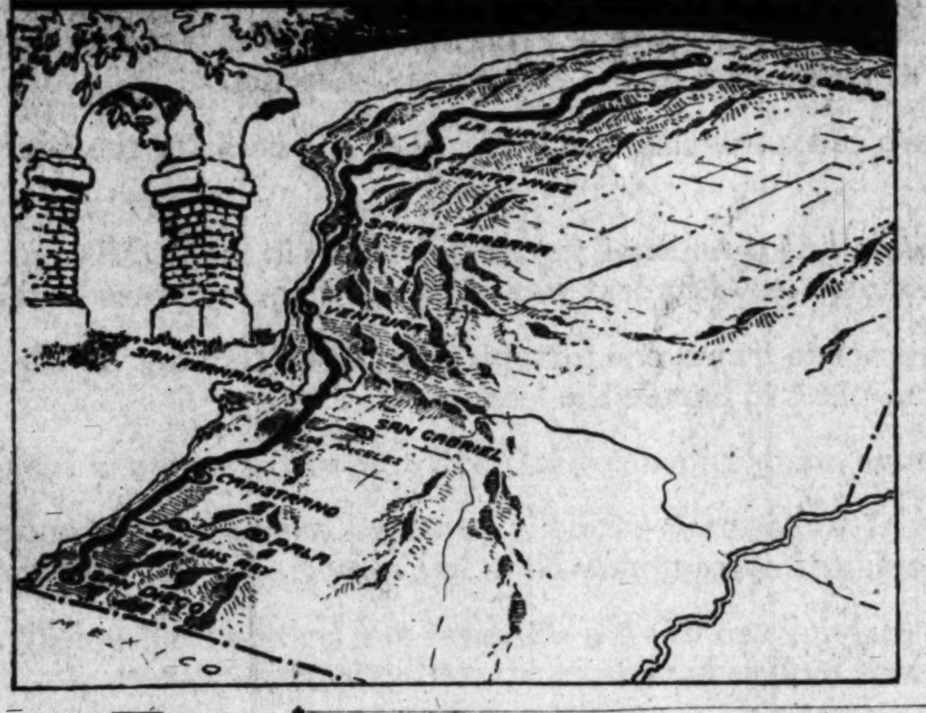
SIGN POSTING EL CAMINO REAL FOR MOTORISTS

Mission Bell Markers on King's Highway Decorated With New Symbols





EL CAMINO REAL
LA NUESTRA SEÑORA la REINA de LOS ANGELES
FOUNDED 1781
REBUILT 1861
AUTO CLUB OF SO. C



ACTUAL sign-posting of El Camino Real, the "King's Highway" of California, has just been started by the Automobile Club of Southern California, according to an announcement from the club road-marking department.

This is one of the most significant highway sign-posting projects ever undertaken in America, in view of the fact that it permanently establishes the historical mission road along the coast of California and sets the seal of modern road-signing methods on an age-old footpath of romance.

New signs to be erected by the Automobile Club will be placed on the famous "mission bell" road markers which have become familiar to hundreds of thousands of motorists who have toured in California during the past five years. Wherever there is a mission bell there will also be a brand new automobile sign linking the past of ox carts to the present of motor cars. The Southern California club will have the responsibility of sign-posting that portion of El Camino Real which extends from San Diego mission on the south to the San Luis Obispo mission on the north. In this territory will be found such famous missions as San Luis Rey, San Juan Capistrano, San Gabriel, Santa Barbara and Santa Ynez.

IN THE NORTH, TOO

From the San Luis Obispo line north, the marking of El Camino Real will be accomplished by another motoring organization of the State, so that the entire course of the old Royal Highway will be fairly marked for the use of motorists following this historical route, which is now paved for its entire distance where a little more than 100 years ago the mission fathers went plodding along on foot, little dreaming of the mad rush of motor cars to follow in their footsteps. The entire distance to be signed will be more than 500 miles and the signs will be uniform, with green letters on a white background, having the dates of the mission in the vicinity of a sign.

With the exception of the mission located at Monterey, the most romantic and historic structures of the mission era are located in the southern part of California, the section which will be sign-posted by the southern club. Beginning at San Diego, the first mission to be founded in this State, the motorist will find a crumbling ruin situated a few miles off the main coast highway from a point marked by the new signs as well as by the oldest palm trees in California. Sporadic attempts have been made to secure funds for the rehabilitation of this picturesque old ruin facing the sleeping Mission Valley, but no definite reconstruction work of note has been accomplished.

As the motorist moves northward, following the new mission trail signs he will find the bell tower of the Pala Mission, one of the most photographed landmarks in the West, slumbering in the little Indian village of Pala. This mission was founded in 1771, two years after the founding of the first mission in San Diego.

At San Juan Capistrano, near the sign of the mission bell, the auto traveler will be delighted to see the semi-ruins of the Mission San Juan Capistrano, founded in 1775, which was the scene of an earthquake disaster many years ago when the great tower fell during worship. This mission is one of the most picturesque in the entire

GAS PRICE FIXING IS DENOUNCED

A.A.A. Executive Committee Asks Attorney-General for Prosecutions

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, March 17.—A demand for a thorough investigation of gasoline price fixing in the United States and strong government support for the development of crude rubber plantations were the outstanding features of the American Automobile Association executive board meeting held in Detroit this week.

George C. Diehl of Buffalo, president of the A.A.A., presided at the session. M. O. Eldridge, executive chairman, reported on the recent investigation by the United States Senate committee which looked into gasoline price fixing.

There was strong evidence of collusion in the fixing of gasoline prices, the report said, despite the fact that oil companies denied any such attempts. The executive board adopted a resolution recommending the United States Attorney-General take steps to prosecute those responsible for the price fixing.

Plan to Move Gas Stations Over the Line

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 17.—The border towns of California and New Mexico are due for a boom when the new 3-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax goes into effect in Arizona, ninety days hense.

Concretely stated, there is expectation that all the gasoline stations in Yuma will be moved over to the California side of the Colorado River, where the traveler, or the Arizonan, may fill his tank and a few extra cans, thus securing economy and showing resentment over the enactment of the latest tax on travel.

Motor-trades men in Arizona have been figuring they already are taxed about $40 Federal war levy on each new car, at least $20 extra on freight, $25 a year property tax on the average car, $10 for a license plate and now about $15 a year more for their gasoline. They insist it is entirely too much of a burden on a single industry, and that it smacks of discrimination.

DETROIT STUDEBAKER SALES FORCE COCKY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, March 17.—The sales force of the Detroit Studebaker organization is going about its task with a jaunty air these days.

"Detroit topped New York in deliveries last week, and for the first time stood at the top in the Studebaker sales organization," said E. B. Wilson, retail branch manager for the Studebaker. "We delivered 103 cars last week, the New York branch delivered an even 100, and Cleveland stood third, with sixty-one deliveries."

As a result of the fine showing now being made by the Detroit agency, George W. Sweet, assistant general manager of the Studebaker Corporation, came to Detroit and authorized increased service facilities for the local organization.

LITTLE CAR SHOWS SPEED

Tommy Milton's 122-Cubic-Inch Buggy Getting Faster and Faster; Gossip Along the Rialto

BY PAUL LOWRY

Tommy Milton coaxed enough speed out of his little buzz cart last Thursday morning to convince him the 122-cubic-inch car is fast enough to enter in the Fresno motor race next month—if he cares to start it.

Starting out at a 100-mile per hour gait the 1921 speed champ gradually worked up to a speed of 40 79-100 seconds per lap, a rate of 110.33 miles per hour. Then in tow of Eddie Hearne in one of the Miller-motored 183 cubic inch cars Milton circled the tureen four times, each time making the loop under forty seconds. His best time was 39 30-100s., 114.3 miles per hour.

Milton's rapid laps provided evidence enough that his little car, in spite of its newness and possible susceptibility to "bugs," is quite speedy enough to tame the bigger 183 inch cars in the Fresno race.

The wise ones figure Milton's car because its lightness will not be half so hard on tires and that he can probably go through without a stop, whereas the leaders may have to visit the pits. It is admitted that at present Milton's car is not as fast as the 183's, but he can ride in tow of one of the leaders, as he followed Hearne's tow at Beverly, and go as fast as the slower Fresno track will permit.

In addition, Milton has not shown all the speed which the 122-inch car is capable of turning up. He has it shod now with 32x4 tires, which does not permit of the greatest speed with the motor geared as high as it is. When Milton shoes the car with 29x4 tires he can expect more speed, or he can obtain it with the same tires by changing the gears.

The new little cars are going to be harder on the driver. They bounce more and take the bumps in a more care-free fashion, but they're going to be a lot easier on tires, and that's a big item.

About Saturation

E. S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Company, said something about saturation at the local motor car dealers' meeting last week that ought to give Doubting Thomases a good idea of the possibilities of the automobile industry.

In Jordan's opinion the saturation point will be reached when everybody has a car and none wears out.

The foreign market hasn't even been touched, Jordan pointed out. Germany, for its 65,000,000 population, has in the neighborhood of 120,000 cars, while we have in the State of California alone over 900,000 cars.

Fred Wagner Honored

Fred Wagner, the talented race starter with the checkered panties, was the celebrated guest of honor at a home banquet tendered him by Amerigo Bozzani last Tuesday night. Jimmy Murphy, Bennett Hill and Ralph DePalma represented the driving fraternity and several more or less distinguished newspaper men were there to help in subduing the artful spaghetti. Bozzani's hospitality was as enjoyable as it was generous, and all the boys expressed hopes of an early repetition of the gathering.

Oakland Bubble Bursts

Reports from the north indicate that the Oakland bug of a speedway is still in the making. The boys up there are looking for a "Moses" Young to put the thing over, but so far haven't found a man, who combines show ability with a thorough knowledge of the racing game, to more than guess about how it's going to be done.

Earnings of Tire Companies Decrease; Reverse Proportion to Size of Companies

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

AKRON (O.) March 17.—Earnings of the five large rubber companies in Akron decreased in reverse proportion to the size of the companies according to tabulations including complete annual figures of the five companies.

The General Tire and Rubber Company, the smallest of the "big five," showed net earnings of $100 a share on the common for the year. The Miller Rubber Company during the week reported earnings at $35.50 a share on the common.

Firestone Tire and Rubber Company showed net of $16.60 a share, as previously reported; the B. F. Goodrich Company reported 72 cents a share on the common and the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company because of its reorganization was unable to report anything earned on the common stock.

It is admitted in Akron that it would be dangerous to draw from these figures the inference that the smaller rubber companies would have a better chance normally than the large companies to make good showings, although it is safe to say that the efforts on the part of the large companies to drive smaller makers out of business is pretty well answered by the figures.

Not all the small companies can make the showings of the General because all are not financed as soundly, in fact few are, but it shows that if the small company is soundly financed and follows

ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE

THERE is only one way accurately to characterize a Single Six.

To say it is a Packard immediately places it in that exclusive class of cars from which the superlative kind of motoring is expected as a matter of course. The Single Six is entitled to this classification because it directly inherits all those qualities that make the name Packard the accepted measure of character in the fine car field.

CELEBRATE A BIRTHDAY

Antoine de la Mothe's Natal Day Remembered by Cadillac Dealers All Over Country

The two hundred and sixty-fifth anniversary of Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac was celebrated throughout the country last week by the Cadillac distributors and many historical societies. In California the celebration was in the nature of a banquet to Lynn McNaughton, vice-president and general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, who was in California at that time.

The most elaborate celebration took place in Detroit, the home of the Cadillac, which was founded by the famous Frenchman in 1701.

Detroit marked the date this year by the unveiling of a bronze tablet erected to his memory on the site of the original Fort Pontchartrain, which the pioneer built at this strategic point in 1701 as a barrier against the passage of British troops and their Indian allies.

EVERYBODY THERE

Guests at the unveiling ceremonies included city officials, members of the Detroit Historical Society, the Detroit Board of Commerce, a platoon of mounted police, troops from Fort Wayne, officials of the Michigan Mutual Life Insurance Company, upon whose property the tablet was erected, and officials of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, which derives its name and coat-of-arms from the intrepid leader and bold explorer.

The soldier, who founded the City of the Straits and built it into a bustling colony in spite of rebellion and treason from within, and against the opposition of the Governor of New France, and the colony's trading company, was born in a little town in Gascony, France, March 5, 1658. His father was a man of affairs of ancient family, and of sufficient influence to place the fiery boy Antonio, as a cadet in a leading French regiment.

His military career was determined from that moment. At 19 he was a lieutenant. Six years later he took service with one of the boldest of French-American privateers, Francois Guyon, and became successively a resident of Arcadia, "Sieur" of Mount Desert Island and a 20,000-acre tract in Maine, in charge of a French fleet, commander of Fort Mackinac, founder and afterwards Governor of Detroit, Governor of Louisiana, founder of posts in the Mississippi Valley, and, in his later years, Governor of Castelsarrasin, in France.

ARE SIGNIFICANT

Cadillac's name and coat-of-arms were adopted by the Cadillac Motor Car Company both because of the historic rank and enterprise associated with the name and because of the significance of the French nobleman's own interpretation of the family emblem: "To attain prowess, virtrue and plenty; to look to the wings of leadership for merit; to be in readiness to undergo the business of the public weal."

His name and life have been further commemorated in the city he founded. In 1902 the French government presented to the city of Detroit a painting of Cadillac receiving his commission at the court of Louis XIV. The arrival of Madame Cadillac in 1702, after what was then a perilous trip from Quebec, is recorded by a large oil painting in the public library. "Cadillac's Chair," a stone monument of mammoth proportions, stands in Cadillac Square opposite the City Hall, in the walls of which is a niche containing a life-size figure of the city's heroic founder.

MISSION BELLS ARE DECORATED

State and visitors are cheerfully admitted at the present time.

In Los Angeles the parish church of Neustra Senora la Reina de los Angeles is located at a point facing the Plaza on the edge of Chinatown. This church was founded in 1781 and stands in a good state of preservation today. The mission at San Gabriel Archangel, which was founded simultaneously with the Pala Mission, is historically interesting because of its early history of the ecclesiastic court there and its present perfect state of preservation.

Los Angeles is particularly rich in missions, as only a short distance away the motorist also has an opportunity to visit the mission San Fernando Rey de Espana, which was founded in 1797 and is located at San Fernando in the San Fernando Valley. At Ventura on the coast road to San Francisco is found the mission San Buenaventura, which is in a good state of preservation and services are held there regularly as of old. The building was modernized in 1812.

At Santa Barbara can be seen one of the best constructed missions in Southern California, and its structures are in very excellent condition today and are surrounded by beautiful gardens. Religious services are held there regularly. The motorist will be interested to know that the walls of this mission are six feet thick and the towers are of stone.

Thirty miles northwest of Santa Barbara sleeps the ruins of the mission la Purisima Concepcion, founded in 1787.

Father Junipero Serra himself founded the mission at San Luis Obispo de Tolosa in 1772, now in the center of San Luis Obispo. It is in a good state of preservation and services are conducted there daily.

LITTLE MOTOR SHOWS SPEED

Murphy, Harry Hartz, Eddie Hearne and Durant at the tillers of the 122-inch cars being manufactured here by Harry Miller, according to Al G. Waddell, the well-known herald and race expert.

The six 122-inch cars now racing under the Durant colors are to be cut down and all will be raced in the May classic. Earle Cooper may drive one, if he doesn't land at the wheel of a Mercedes. Frank Elliott, who will take Dario Resta's place on the Durant team at Fresno, will drive another, and the other possibilities are Art Klein, Bennett Hill and Harlan Fengler, now Hartz's mechanic. The sixth car may be disposed of to the Kansas City Speedway Association, to be raced under the Kansas City colors.

TENDENCY TOWARD THE LIGHTER CAR

That the tendency toward lighter cars is general throughout Europe, with designers bending every effort to reduce sizes of stock models the same as they have done with racing cars, is the word brought back from European motor capitals by Americans who have been abroad within the last two months.

"Here in America, though we have no such thing as dollar-a-gallon or higher fuel, one may observe the same tendency," said Mr. Thomason. "The average American, having learned some real economy lessons from the war and post-war period, sees no reason why he should spend his good money in hauling around a lot of extra weight in motor vehicle equipment. Hence the demand for smaller cars—cars which will give the maximum of comfort at a minimum of expense, both in original purchase price and in upkeep costs."

This record-breaking shipment consists of two trains, one with 60 and one with 50 fifty-foot automobile cars, carrying a total of 515 Nash cars, valued at nearly three-quarters of a million dollars. Train No. 1 traveled from Kenosha, Wisconsin, via C. & N. W., U. P. and S. P. Train No. 2 was routed from Kenosha over the C. N. W., C., R. I. & P., E. P. & S. W. and Southern Pacific.

California's Greatest Single Shipment of Motor Cars Has Arrived!

110 CARLOADS

All this week conjecture has run high as to who was making the greatest single shipment of motor cars in the history of California.

Now we can announce it is here. And the cars are the new model Nash Fours and Sixes.

California has a habit of breaking records in many different lines and now she shatters a motor car shipment record to satisfy her unprecedented demand for Nash cars.

Two complete trains, one totaling 60 and one totaling 50 50-foot automobile cars, were required to handle the load.

Today we inaugurate a special exhibition of these cars in honor of the broken record.

A special invitation is cordially extended to you to come and view the important and far-reaching improvements Nash has embodied in this new line.

Come early. Even this big shipment will be taken up quickly. All over the country these new models have been attracting intense interest.

Common Borax Once Scarce

One of the first chemicals that entered into commerce was borax, one of thre thre eor four "industrial chemicals" of ancient times. Central Asia was its only source during four thousand years; its mining was dangerous and expensive and in that time the whole world used only about twelve thousand tons, an average of not more than six tons a year. Now the United States alone produces forty thousand tons a year and borax enters into the making of scores of the most common necessities of everyday life.

A New and Distinctive Body Style

Again Kissel leadership in the development of distinctive body styles has been demonstrated—in the new model "Fifty-five" Brougham Sedan.

Only where years have been devoted to the designing of chassis, motor and body as a unit under one factory roof can such complete harmony of line be attained.

And only where mechanical construction and coach work are judged by the same standards of precise hand craftsmanship can beauty be matched by superior performance and exceptional durability.

The many exclusive engineering features developed by Kissel; the unusual speed and power of the custom-built motor; the utter dependability of the car—are the product of this skill and experience.

The prices of the 1923 Kissel are the product of popularity, which has placed the Custom-Built Six in quantity production.

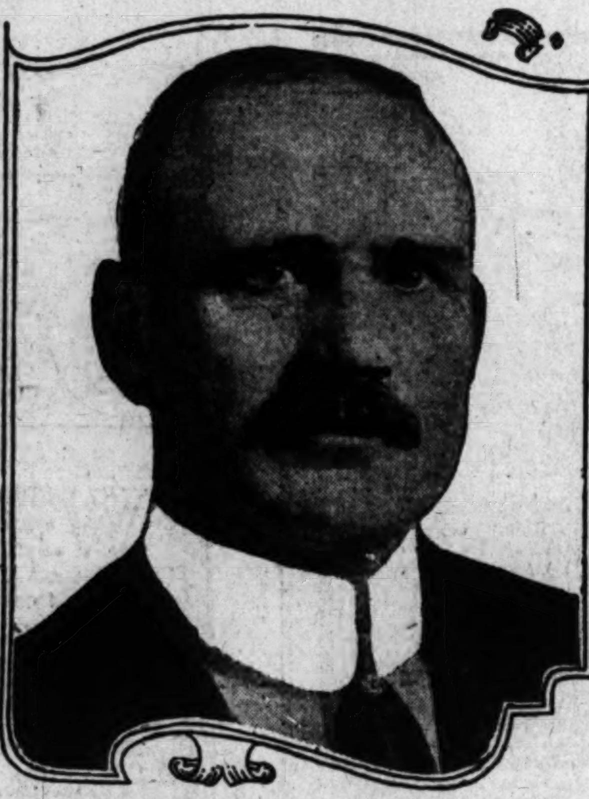
In Los Angeles on Annual Visit



Charles W. Nash, head of the Nash Motor Company, arrived in this city yesterday on one of the legs of his yearly jog westward. He will speak to Nash dealers at a get-together banquet this week.

PUTS EAST BEHIND HIM

Charles W. Nash, head of the Nash Motors Company of Kenosha and Milwaukee, and of the LaFayette Motors Company of Kenosha, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday from the East on his annual visit to the Coast. Mr. Nash will remain here only two or three days, and will then continue on up the Coast, visiting San Francisco and the cities of the Northwest.

In accordance with a custom which has been observed almost from the organization of the Troy Motor Sales Company here, and its assumption of distributing rights on the Nash line some six or more years ago, representatives of the Nash dealer firms throughout Southern California and Arizona will be the guests of the Troy company at a banquet in honor of Mr. Nash.

This annual banquet is the real get-together gathering of the year for the Nash dealers. They listen to practical talks by John J. Troy, president of the local firm; by Robert S. Breyer, vice-president and general manager, and by Mr. Nash himself. Mr. Nash brings with him on his present visit a message of prosperity and enthusiasm from the Middle West and East such as they have never sent out since the hysterical wave of the months following the close of the war. Today, according to Mr. Nash, this wave of prosperity is based upon solid foundations, and will result in the ensuing year producing bigger and better business than ever before in the history of the automotive industry.

LATE ENTRANTS SHOWING FINE

addition, Chalmers is scheduled to turn out 13,000 cars.

Dodge Brothers, with a daily production of 725 cars, the greatest in its history, is unable to keep pace with orders.

Studebaker, Buick, Cadillac, Moon and Dort are also hard put to meet the demand for their products.

That the volume of automobile business should improve during 1923, both for the British manufacturer and for the importer of motor cars, is the opinion of Walter S. Tower, American commercial attache in London. "Competition, however," says Mr. Tower, "will be keener than ever. Some makers started the new year with a fair volume of business booked, but the outlook is best summarized by the recent statement that the chief difficulty of the industry is 'under-consumption,' not 'over-production.'

"The domestic difficulties of the industry were reflected in export trade. Total exports during 1922 numbered 1335 passenger cars, 596 motor trucks, 1515 chassis and parts.

"Imports on the other hand increased substantially, notably after the first quarter. The total number of imported automotive vehicles were made up of 13,388 passenger cars, 973 trucks and 8537 chassis parts. The United States and Canada supplied the major portion of the imports."

Legal formalities are almost completed for National motors to take over one of the big Detroit plants. When taken over the Detroit plant will constitute a ninth unit of the corporation and will give it three factories in Michigan. Executive headquarters, as predicted originally in the Times, will shortly be moved from Chicago to Detroit. National Motors Corporation was announced last summer as the merger of eight automobile manufacturing plants situated in seven different States. The corporation was called the Associated Motor Industries, for the purpose of organization, but the name was announced as National Motor Corporation just before the New York automobile show. Clarence A. Earl, formerly of the Earl Motors, Inc., and Willys Overland was recently made president and general manager.

"Certain writers seem to delight in dividing population statistics by automobile registration totals and solemnly drawing the conclusion that there is an automobile for each ten or eleven persons in the United States" said E. T. Strong, sales manager for the Buick Motor Company. "There is nothing more misleading than half a truth.

"Hundreds of professional men who use cars constantly in the pursuit of their vocations, buy second and often third cars for use of their families.

"Fleets of passenger cars, aggregating a liberal percentage of all automobiles, are employed by business houses in equipping their salesmen to conserve time and meet competition.

"Many thousands of individuals own more than one car. Subtract the motor cars devoted wholly to business use, and you reduce by one-half at least the number you may fairly apportion to strictly private use.

While production of Star cars in Durant factories has been speeded up to 500 daily, possibility of the Durant organization catching up with sales requirements is remote and Star officials are working feverishly to expand present facilities and build and equip new plants in the hope of supplying the steadily increasing demand. With Durant factories in "high gear" on Star production by the end of 1923, the output will be doubled, officials state, and even then, if orders now piled up in the factory and with dealers are a criterion, the several plants devoted to Star production will be unable to meet the demand from motorists throughout the country.

The first year has demonstrated the wisdom and farsightedness of W. C. Durant, in producing a car built of well known standard units and equipped with a starter and demountable rims, at a price within the reach of anyone who could buy any car.

Much interest locally is being centered on the new Columbia six special touring car, being shown here for the first time. This new model, mounted on the standard light six chassis carries a new type of all steel body which has a double baked enamel finish. This is the longest body that has ever been mounted on a 115-inch wheelbase chassis. The rear seat is sixty inches wide, thus providing capacity for three full grown persons To insure riding comfort ample leg room has been provided in this new body. No change has been made in the Columbia specialized six chassis.

Olds Motor Works production for February was 149 per cent greater than for the same month a year ago according to G. H. Peasley, general sales manager.

If this proposed production schedule of March is maintained, said Mr. Peasley, an increase of 66 per cent over February should be realized and a gain of more than 200 per cent over March of last year.

FORD STEPS UP THE PRODUCTION POINT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, March 17.—Daily production of passenger cars and trucks at the Ford plant this month is rapidly nearing the 6000-car-a-day goal set for April. Herculean efforts are being exerted to bring production up to this point before the end of March. Steadily the demand for Ford cars has exceeded all previous records for this time of year.

In January, 100,118 Ford cars were sold at retail, as against 39,630 for last year. In February, sales went to 116,080, as against 48,615 for a year ago, and for March, dealer requirements have reached 201,911, compared with 80,256 for the corresponding month a year ago.

Three eight-hour shifts are being operated six days a week, and the number of men employed at Highland Park is now 60,000, while 38,000 are employed at the River Rouge plants.

ARIZONA CAN SUPPLY ALL COPPER NEEDED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 17.—Copper equivalent to one-fourth of Arizona's output of the metal for the year was used in 1922 in the automobile manufacturing industry. The Arizona output was 418,000,000 pounds. The motor-car factories, in copper, brass and bronze parts and fittings, used about thirty pounds of the metal to the car, or a total weight of 108,280,000 pounds. Many substitutes for copper were found by the manufacturers during the war period, when the metal was high in price and held for war needs, but now, with ample available supply and with relatively low cost, there is expectation that copper will be used to a much greater extent in motor-car manufacture.

FORTY CARLOADS OF PEERLESSES ON WAY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, March 17.—Freight trains devoted exclusively to automobile shipments are becoming the order of the spring season. This time it is the Peerless Motor Car Company, with a huge shipment to its Los Angeles distributor. On its way West at the present time is a solid trainload of forty modern freight cars filled with various Peerless models. The Peerless shipment, because of its size and destination, has been routed as through fast freight over the Union Pacific. It is the company's prompt answer to a telegraphic order from Stanley White, Inc., Peerless distributor at Los Angeles. The order, it may be remarked in passing, is another evidence of the car demand existing on the West Coast.

Possibilities of a Tea "Toot"

In his recent book of reminiscences, Lord Dunraven tells of a curious tale of how he once became drunk on tea. "I had come out of the woods in Nova Scotia one very cold winter's day," he says, "and had a long stage journey to make to Annapolis. . . . A huge pot of strong green tea had been simmering on the hob for an hour or more, and I drank cups of it. When I got up I could not walk straight—I was as drunk as drunk could be, but funnily drunk: I could not manage my legs at all; but my brain was quite clear, only I could not get my tongue round the right word."

Boats Shaped Like Tubs

Mesopotamia, land of the Garden of Eden and Mount Ararat, is just as much a picturesque spot as when Cain and Abel were boys. Along the Tigris River are boats which look more like tubs. They are made of wicker, from six to ten feet in diameter, and are tarred to make them waterproof. They are called "goofas."

STUDEBAKER

Hidden Qualities Count

Hidden qualities largely determine the value and life of a closed car.

Beauty of line and finish and refinements are surface indications and important ones. But your satisfaction with a closed car depends to a great degree upon factors that are unseen—the in-built qualities that come from correct design, use of highest grade materials and careful workmanship.

It is impossible to get more out of a car than the maker has built into it.

The 23 series Studebaker Light-Six Sedan is a quality car. It is built to endure—to give lasting satisfaction. Both body and chassis are produced in Studebaker plants where painstaking craftsmanship has always been the rule and the practice. And Studebaker has been building quality vehicles for seventy-one years.

The Sedan body is substantially built. It will last for years and retain its beauty and comfort. Evidence of its hidden goodness lies in the fact that down under the paint and varnish, the pillars, roof rails and supporting members are made from specially selected ash. Good ash is expensive but Studebaker uses it because it best combines the proper strength and weight.

Four wide-opening doors make it easy for all passengers to get in or out without inconvenience to each other. A high grade heater affords summer warmth on cold, damp days. The wide windows give broad vision in every direction.

When you buy a Light-Six Sedan you are really accepting the judgment of 100,000 owners who have found the Light-Six chassis so satisfactory.

Studebaker quality is traditional.

NASH SHIPMENT BREAKS RECORD

Three Hundred Automobiles for the South

Equal Number Goes to San Francisco Territory

Largest Trainload Ever Sent Across Continent

As part of the largest single shipment of automobiles ever sent across the continent to one State at one time, a trainload of Nash automobiles arrived in Los Angeles Monday over the Southern Pacific lines, according to announcement made by J. T. Saunders, general freight agent.

The train consisted of sixty freight cars, each laden with five automobiles. A second train, shipped from the Nash factory at Kenosha, Wis., at the same time, went to San Francisco.

Each train carried 300 automobiles, making a total of 600 machines delivered for California motorists in the one big transcontinental shipment.

The train for Los Angeles came by way of El Paso, and now is being unloaded in the local Southern Pacific yards. The other train came west by way of Ogden, and was made up of entirely new automobile freight cars, part of the order of 2000 placed by the Southern Pacific Company last year.

These new automobile freight cars, ordered by the Southern Pacific to take care of the rapidly increasing shipments to the Pacific Coast, are of the latest design and cost $2,500,000. With the additional cars soon to be delivered, the Southern Pacific will have more than 3800 automobile cars in service on its Pacific system.

MOTOR BUSSES WIN PLACE IN THE SUN

NATION DEPENDENT ON THEM AS THE CARRIER PROBLEM INCREASES

Each year finds the motor bus becoming a more definite and integral part of the nation's transportation system says O. R. Fuller, president of the White Auto Company, White Truck distributors in this territory.

"With the ever-increasing demand for quicker and better communication between neighboring communities and for interurban travel the motor bus has arrived as a distinct adjunct to public carriers.

"The motor bus has won its way to a place of usefulness and profit wherever railroad and electric traction is inadequate, opening virgin territory, establishing new routes, feeding existing lines, always improving service, and increasing revenues."

NEW STAGE SERVICE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 17.—Under permission granted by the Arizona Corporation Commission R. H. and J. S. Hatchell of this city promise to start automobile stage service between Phoenix and Yuma and through to San Diego within thirty days. Leaving Phoenix at 8 a.m., the stages are to be at Yuma at 4 p.m. and at the Coast city at 11 p.m. The through fare will be $18.

Watt Moreland Off to East on High-Gear Run

Watt L. Moreland, vice-president and general manager of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, left this week for a typical Moreland high-gear trip to the East in an effort to inject some speed into the Eastern material and supply industries, which seems necessary if they are to keep pace with the rapid growth of Californian industrial prosperity.

The addition of the popular new all-steel, "flivver proof," low drop-frame, safety school and street railway busses to the company's regular line of truck products, has resulted in an increase in demand that is making the big Burbank plant hustle to keep up. Mr. Moreland will endeavor to speed up the shipment of the large quantities of material ordered in anticipation of this demand and which is now needed.

Before leaving Mr. Moreland stated that the months of January and February were the two biggest months in the history of the company and March will be considerably larger still. The entire force at the manufacturing plant is on its toes in a race to turn out more trucks in March than ever rolled away from the factory in any previous month. Present indications are that they will be successful.

The definite production schedule for this year is an ambitious one and calls for the completion of 100 trucks every month of the year. Materials are ordered and all factory plans laid upon this basis and unless there should be a slip in shipments it is expected that this high figure will be reached, which will place this California plant as one of the few leaders in truck manufacture in the entire country.

NEW STEPHENS SEDAN HAS CLEVER FEATURES

SEATS TILT FORWARD AND THE BACK FOLDS DOWN; EASY OF ENTRANCE

A beautiful two-door, five-passenger sedan that is really easy of entrance and exit is one of the latest creations in the new Stephens Six line, according to O. R. Fuller, president of the White Auto Company, local distributors.

He describes it as a masterly all-season enclosed car for business and professional men and for women who prefer the greater intimacy and economy of a close coupled body type.

Design and installation of both front seats in this new touring sedan is one of the outstanding features. The backs fold down and the seats tilt forward at right angles with the floor, which combined with exceptionally broad doors makes the rear, extremely accessible from either side of the car.

GAS BAGS FINISHED

Goodyear has just completed an important piece of construction work in connection with the national defense—by finishing the manufacture of the gas bags for the ZR-1 at Akron. The ZR-1 is a companion ship to the R-34, which flew across the Atlantic Ocean and back a few years ago, and is about the same size as the two or three very largest Zeppeline built during the war.

DEATH TRAP ON ROAD NEAR SANTA BARBARA REPORTED

SANTA BARBARA, Cal.
Auto Club of Southern California.

Dear Sir: I am taking the liberty of writing to you in regard to what I consider one of the worse death traps on the highway between Mexico and Canada. And my object in writing to the Auto Club is that it may bring pressure to bear on somebody and get them to have rails placed along side of the traps thereby warning strange motorists of the danger of a drop of anywhere from twenty-five to forty feet.

Now I am not a member of the Auto Club for the reason that you will not allow me membership on account of the make of the machine that I drive. For it is not a regulation make. It consist of two horse power and it is of the model of 1849 and has a rope drive, and it never goes over thirty miles a day on high and yet it is capable of sixty miles an hour, that is if I would put it in a baggage car. In order to get the machine to go it is necessary for the chauffeur to speak three of four languages, English, French, Mexican and profane and mostly profane.

RUNS WITHOUT GAS

I never use gas or oil on this machine and I do not know what tire troubles are for they tire themselves and me to. Now this machine has several names and some of them are not fit for publication. Now U will probably want to know what kind of a machine it it, as your time is probably more valued than mine, so I will not keep you in suspence any longer, the Mexican Ford limousine has a radio set on the front end of it.

And a peculiar feature about the machine is that it is against the law to sell it for the prohibition inforcement agents would arrest me for selling "jackass."

The motor power of the machine is two burros and I travel on a highway between Carpenteria, and Santa Barbara, and on about a dozen occasions I have damned near seen several wrecks caused by this above-mentioned traps that are about one mile out of Sumerland, and more than once after having witnessed narrow escapes of motorists, I have come to the conclusion to write to you people about it and see if you would not take the matter up with the State engineering department.

FREE INFORMATION

For two of the cars that had narrow escapes had Southern California Auto Club insignias on them, and it sure looked as if your outfit was going to pay insurance. For any further information about these "murder traps" have your Santa Barbara agent see me and I will gladly give him the location.

Thanking you in advance for any thing that you will do in this matter, I am yours most sincerely and seriously,

JIMMY JERRY DORAN,
P.O. box 515, Santa Barbara, Cal.

P.S. I drive two Colorado canaries better than I typewrite, as I am learning the touch system. I am a disabled war veteran and if I get oil on my land I will buy a real auto and become a member of the Auto Club if you get action on this matter. Hope that you will have as many new members in one day as I have mistakes in this letter.

P.S.S. The machine has three speeds: Slow—Slower—Slowest.

"Grand Axle" Starts Raid in the South

The raid of the "Knight Riders" which started with the initiation into the order of John North Willys, president of the Willys Overland Company, during his visit here has been extended to include all of Southern California, it was announced last week by the "Full Floating Grand Axle."

A snow white Willys-Knight car has been especially equipped to carry the "Knight Riders" on their raids which are reported to be dealing total devastation to Doubting Thomases.

Cohorts of picked "Knights" helmeted and encased in coats of mail may be seen riding raucously around every night now, spreading the contagious gossip about the new Willys-Knight and Overland cars.

The white Willys-Knight and it's contingent of armored "Knights" invaded Glendale last week and led a half-dozen curious motorists a merry chase all over the pretty suburb.

The real motif of the Knight Riders raids is to induce more motorists to become members of the order, the Grand Axle explained. Qualifications are simple he says. All a candidate needs to do to be eligible is to swear allegiance to good roads, better motor cars and buy and Overland, or a Willys-Knight. He then automatically becomes a member in good standing, with full privileges of a "Knight Rider."

MANUFACTURERS MUST KEEP UP WITH TIMES

THAT'S THE ONLY WAY MOTOR CARS CAN BE HANDLED SUCCESSFULLY

Keeping up with the times in design, construction and equipment seems to be the measure of success enjoyed by the motor-car manufacturer and distributor of today, according to automobile men who have made their industry and its patrons a careful study.

J. A. Benell, Pacific Coast representative of the Haynes company and manager of the Los Angeles Haynes Company, distributors for this treritory, attributes a large portion of the remarkable sales records established by the Haynes in Southern California to this tendency of the big Kokomo factory's executives.

"The newspapers and magazines of the country are undoubtedly great molders of public opinion," says Benell, "but the publishers in every case may be counted upon to have thoroughly studied their field of readers and to have adopted an editorial policy in keeping up with those findings. A magazine especially is never a success until it adopts a policy of publishing stories and articles that appeal to its particular field of readers.

"The same may be said of the automobile. The tendency of the time is to build a car of striking lines and general appearance without carrying designs or colors to the extreme. In addition the motorist of today wants and demands complete equipment on his car, and he prefers to have that equipment installed at the factory rather than be compelled to add the equipment after taking delivery."

CHEVROLET FLEETS SURGE AROUND CITY

DEALERS FIND IT A TRIBUTE TO QUALITY AND NEAT APPEARANCE

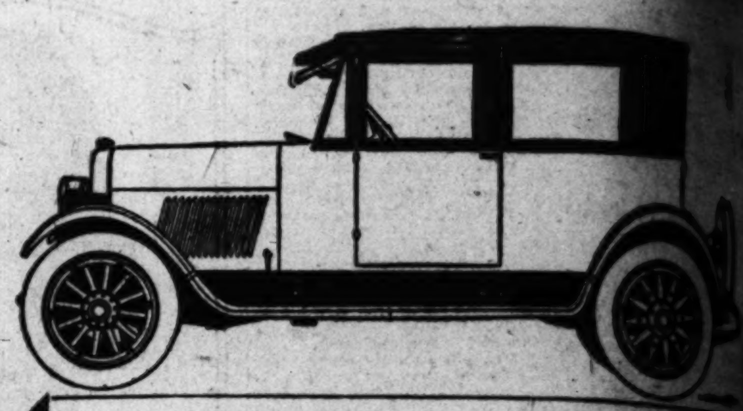
A strong recommendation for Chevrolet, the dealers in the city say, is that large and successful business concerns are turning to fleets of Chevrolets to carry on their salesmen business.

"The Coupe is a business asset," is the contention. "Chevrolet has been long known for its economical transportation and added to this is its neat appearance, due primarily to the fine coachwork of the Fisher Body Corporation.

"This immediately presents a good impression in the minds of the customers. A company is judged in part by its representation. And also a better attitude is allowed the salesman, a sense of pride and responsibility which has direct result on his record of sales."

MORE BEARING SURFACE

"There is more bearing surface on the Stearns Knight crankshaft than on any other motor-car built today," says Ed Barnett, salesmanager for Lynn C. Buxton, Stearns Knight distributors.



WITHOUT question, the Royal Coach comes nearer answering the closed car question for more people than anything the market offers just now. It is neither too large, heavy, and expensive—nor is it too cramped, light, and skimped! Its charm results from a tailored simplicity rather than from ostentatious display.

Nothing has been omitted that contributes to day-in-and-day-out dependability and convenience, but not one penny has been wasted to provide useless accessories that are rarely used and never needed.

Driving vision was given prime consideration. You will note the unusual expanse of glass—which is, by the way, the finest plate—as well as the unique construction surrounding the windshield.

By using a casting for the windshield mounting, it is possible to employ an extremely narrow corner brace.

Contrast this for a moment with the cumbersome, bulky posts that are seen on about nine closed cars out of ten even in this modern era.

Fully in keeping with the manifest desirability of the Royal Coach body is the chassis on which it is mounted. Powered by the justly famous Ansted Engine, it is superbly equipped to serve you—better drop in and let us tell you more about it.

ORD FOR SHORT MONTH

Sale of Fords is Greatest Ever

Thousand Mark by 15,000

Than the Demand Not Satisfied

DISPATCH.] March 17.—With sold at retail in record for the month in the year has February sales of January by more and marked the in which Ford topped the 100,000 line. record bears out predic- at the opening of the shortage in Ford and this shortage is within the next two months with the increased volume of car buying which is always attenuant upon the spring months.

Even the high production schedule set at the Ford Motor Company factory here which will reach 6000 cars and trucks a day about April 1, will be unable to meet the apparent demand for Ford products.

Anticipating a great increase in the demand for Ford cars during the present year the factory here laid plans for increasing production to the 6000-car-a-day schedule, and since January 1 has been constantly speeding up manufacture to reach this figure. Demand so far has been of such great proportions as to absorb nearly all production and stock in hands of dealers are at the present the lowest they have been in months.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS ARE NOT INCREASING AS RAPIDLY AS CARS

Life insurance companies point to the increasing death rate for automobile accidents. In 1922, in proportion to population, the number of automobile fatalities was higher than ever. But the great and encouraging fact from the standpoint of motorists is that accidents are not increasing as rapidly as motor vehicles. Per automobile on the road, fatal accidents are nearly 50 per cent fewer today than they were in 1914.

If you were an owner or an operator of an automobile in 1914, the chance was one in 356 that your car would be involved in a fatal accident. In 1922, the chance against you was but one in 800. Though the total number of automobile fatalities has shown a steady progress for the last eight years, the death rate per automobile has shown just as steady a decline.

According to a study just completed by J. W. Perry, general manager of the automotive department of Johns-Manville, Inc., in 1915 one out of every 453 automobiles figured in a fatal accident, in 1916, one out of 468, 1917 one in 503, 1918 one in 670, 1919 one in 675, 1920 one in 780, 1921 one in 795 and 1922 one in 800.

Recent investigations have shown that probably as high as 75 per cent of all automobile accidents are due to worn brakes and brakes improperly applied, which is to say that this year 11,000 of the 15,000 probably automobile fatalities could be prevented if motorists would give proper attention to their brakes.

There are at least a dozen rules on the subject of brakes, which, if rigidly followed, would do much toward keeping the motorist out of jail or the hospital. If the owners and operators of automobiles in America could be convinced of the necessity of adjusting brakes every thirty days, keeping brakes on both sides operating with equal pressure, using the motor as a brake on hills, applying brakes slowly, and always allowing liberal margins of safety—if these might be the lessons for the year, the automobile might be removed from the list of important agents of death.

DEALERS HINT OF ANOTHER SURPRISE

It seems to be typical of dealers in sleeve-valved automobiles to about every so often whisper it about that they have something new up their sleeves. Bridge-Bullock, Inc., Willys-Knight and Overland dealers, began whispering again this last week.

A few months ago they whispered of flat-rate service on Overland cars. That went over with a bang, according to C. J. Bullock, president, and now they are going farther toward providing more service to their many patrons.

It is still a secret, evidently, for Bullock would only hint at facts. He said it had something to do with extension and expansion, more convenient service and shopping for residential motorists and all that sort of thing.

TOOTLE YOUR HORN TRUMPET WITH VIGOR IN NIPPONLAND

The favorite indoor sport of Los Angeles these days being the discussion of the traffic problem and means to relieve congestion in the downtown streets makes doubly interesting a copy of a traffic notice received recently by a Times reporter from a relative traveling in Japan. The following notice, printed in English by some Japanese official with the right idea, adorns the streets of Yokohama:

"At the rise of the hand-fist of a policeman stop rapidly. Do not pass him up or otherwise disrespect him.

"When a passenger of the foot hove in sight, tootle the horn trumpet to him melodiously at first, then aggravatively. If he still obstacles your passenger tootle him with vigor and express by word of mouth the warning, 'Hi, Hi!'

"Beware of the wandering horse that he shall not take fright as you pass him up. Do not explode the exhaust box at him. Go soothingly by.

"Give big space to the festive dog with your wheel spoke.

"Avoid entanglement of the festive dog with your wheel spokes.

"Go soothingly on the grease mud as there lurk the skid demon. Press the brake of the foot as you roll round the corners on the high and save the collapse and the split up."

Perhaps, were Los Angeles motorists to obey the Japanese official's explicit instructions, there would be less congestion on our streets. We're going right out and try out his ideas, though we fear we are doomed to failure. There are few "wandering horses" hereabouts to "go soothingly by." And as for "tootling" our Patsy's horn trumpet "melodiously"—well, it can't be done. Our little gas-filly just hasn't got it in her to be tootled melodiously, though she might qualify in the "vigor" specifications.

HUNDREDS VISIT KISSEL SHOWROOM

The new Kissel phaeton, which recently made its debut in Los Angeles, has met with a most happy reception at the hands of local motor enthusiasts, according to D. Gerard Chessman, manager of H. J. Wurzburger Inc., Kissel distributors here.

"The fact that, though a Kissel, it sells for under $1500, has attracted a whole host of new visitors to our display rooms," he says, "people who heretofore let Kissel announcements go unheeded because they felt that the car sold for more than they could afford."

According to Chessman, these visitors were unanimous in expressing the opinion that the new model creates a new standard of quality in this price class. He points out that in all important detail sof contsruction the phaeton is identical with the Kissel de luxe models, the only changes being those made necessary by increased production demands.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS ARE BETTER THAN EVER

SUCH IS THE WORD BROUGHT BACK BY SHORTY ROESCH FROM TRIP NORTH

General business conditions throughout California are better now than they have been for many years. San Francisco and smaller cities of the north are hitting on all cylinders with the prospects of a great spring and summer of automobile sales. The north, however, doesn't compare with the Southland even though it is enjoying exceptional prosperity.

This is the word brought back to Los Angeles this week by C. A. Roesch, president of the Alemite Lubricator Company of California, following a business trip to San Francisco, Oakland and other places north of the Tehachapi.

"The demand for Alemite lubrication systems and accessories used in this type of greasing cars, is a pretty good barometer of motor car sales activities," Mr. Roesch explained. "While most of the better cars now come from the factories equipped with Alemite nipples, still there are many owners of older type used cars or even some of the new ones who insist on Alemite installation in order to obviate the old-fashioned, inefficient and disagreeable greasing by the cup method."

One banquet given by President Loubet of France to the Czar and Czaripa of Russia, cost $30,000 for 500 covers.

HIGH RUBBER IS CERTAIN

"There is no division of opinion among American tire manufacturers as to the desirability of producing rubber on American soil," declared P. W. Litchfield, vice-president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, in charge of production.

"But no one should be fooled into thinking that establishing rubber plantations in the Philippines is going to bring the price back to the levels of the last two years," he added.

"Rubber sold at this time a year ago for 16 cents a pound. Two years ago it was selling for 19 cents a pound, as against 34 cents today. But these are not normal figures. Ten years ago we had to pay as high as $1.30 a pound. And the price has never been below 50 cents up till the summer of 1920.

"New rubber plantations in the Philippines, even if they could be brought into bearing immediately, instead of after seven years, would not give the American people 16-cent rubber or 19-cent rubber. Rubber can't be profitably produced for that figure, in the Philippines or anywhere else.

"The low-priced rubber of 1921 and 1922 represented distress sales. They represented as well heavy losses on the part of the plantation owners. Rubber was sold way below the cost of producing it. It sold at low figures because there was a huge surplus of crude rubber on the market.

"This period of low prices was a very serious one, not only for the rubber growers but for all the industries depending upon rubber—and for all consumers. That situation could not have continued very long without the growers being forced to give up their plantation and let them go back to jungle, with the result that when rubber was in demand again, and the supply was depleted, the price would sky rocket, and we would perhaps find ourselves paying $1 a pound again, as we did ten years ago."

Mr. Litchfield presented a table of rubber prices since 1909, as follows:

February average, 1909 to 1913	$1.[illegible]	per pound
Feb. 1, 1915	.60	per pound
Feb. 1, 1916	.81	per pound
Feb. 1, 1917	.80	per pound
Feb. 1, 1918	.74	per pound
Feb. 1, 1919	.55	per pound
Feb. 1, 1920	.51	per pound
Feb. 1, 1921	.19	per pound
Feb. 1, 1922	.16	per pound
Feb. 1, 1923	.34	per pound

"Plantation rubber sufficient to meet the world's needs costs on an average around 25 or 30 cents a pound to produce," he continued. "The price would have to be from 30 to 35 cents a pound before new capital would be justified in starting plantations, because of the heavy initial expense in clearing the jungles, in recruiting labor, in building mills, towns, roads, railroads and the like, and the further fact that the investor would have to wait seven years before he could begin to get anything back on his investment."

COMMERCIAL CARS HERE

"Our first shipment of commercial cars on Star chasses arrived and disappeared instantly, and we are looking for further shipments every day. These cars seem to fill a muchly aggravated demand," says E. J. Cox, associate manager for the Walter M. Brown Motors, Inc.

NEW CHANDLER SIX

millionth motor:

Buick has reached and passed—the 1,000,000 mark in the production of Valve-in-Head motor cars. This means that the Buick Motor of today has over 1,000,000 Valve-in-Head motors behind it, each improvement found in this stupendous total representing the unceasing efforts of Buick engineers to build more power and economy into a motor already famous for these qualities.

During the more than 20 years of Valve-in-Head manufacture in addition to achieving the present marvelous Buick Valve-in-Head motor and chassis Buick has seen the unquestioned triumph of the Valve-in-Head principle.

The world's fastest racing cars are all powered with Valve-in-Head motors.

The world's fastest motor boats are powered with Valve-in-Head motors.

And the world's finest aviation motor—the Liberty—is a Valve-in-Head motor.

Surely the best proof of Valve-in-Head supremacy is the fact that when real work is to be done Valve-in-Head gets the job.

The fourteen models that represent the present line of 1923 Buicks have taken the entire country by storm. Your critical inspection of these beautiful models is earnestly solicited.

PROPOSED WEIGHT REDUCTION OF TRUCKS CAUSES MUCH TALK

The question of the proposed reduction in legal weights of loaded motor trucks at this time is receiving unusual consideration throughout California. This is due to the fact that the Legislature now is in session and some revision of the present laws governing weights is anticipated. At this time, the maximum legal weight of a four-wheel truck and load on the State highways is 30,000 pounds. This same figure obtains in most of the municipalities.

The two automobile clubs of the State and some other organizations have declared their belief the weight limit should not exceed 22,000 pounds. The California automotive conference places the figure at 36,000 pounds, and maintains that a reduction below this limit will seriously interfere with the transportation requirements of the State. The contention is that drastic weight reductions are bound to result in additional charges to the public, which eventually will be reflected in the prices of all commodities.

According to Roy H. Compton of the Mack-International Motor Truck Corporation, distributors of Mack trucks, it is estimated by one of the biggest building material companies in the State that the proposed reduction in gross weights to 22,000 pounds will result in an increased cartage charge of not under 15 cents per yard for sand and gravel used in buildings in Los Angeles. This would mean that the increased cost of sand and gravel to consumers would add $1,150,000 to building expenses in a year. A proportionate increase would be necessary for the transportation of all other supplies, such as cement, steel, brick and lumber.

It is proposed to have a gasoline tax in California, thereby increasing the cost of motoring. Practically all gasoline consumed by Los Angeles motorists is transported by truck. This means that if the carrying capacity of the trucks in service of the oil companies is decreased there is reason to believe the result will be reflected in the price of gasoline. This would be in addition to the tax on this commodity. In this connection, it will be recalled that at the time of the last railroad strike in Southern California, practically all of the gasoline supplied the outlying districts was hauled by truck.

ACCELERATORS IN TIRES

Just as there is an accelerator in every automobile, so is there an accelerator in every tire on the car. It is placed in the tire at the factory and its function is just the same as that of its namesake in the car. It is designed to "make it go faster" when the tire is being vulcanized. It is a compound that is mixed with the rubber. A tire could be vulcanized without it, but so much time would be required that the intense heat would tend to disintegrate the rubber.

Vulcanizing is a slow process at best, and research men in all of the tire factories devote many hours to the development of some accelerator that will expedite manufacture. The time consumed in vulcanization runs from sixty or seventy minutes in the smaller sizes to three or four hours in the big pneumatic truck tires, according to chemists of the Miller Rubber Company.

Accelerators have been developed which would bring about vulcanizing in the course of two or three minutes. But that kind of vulcanization would only cement the various parts of the tire together. Such a tire could not withstand the punishment of road service much longer than the time required to vulcanize it. The amount and nature of foreign substances mixed with the rubber would ruin its elasticity and toughness.

The accelerator is placed in the different kinds of rubber stock in just such proportion as it is needed. For example, the tread of the tire is nearest the heat when vulcanization takes place. Therefore, the tread does not need as much accelerator as the rubber which is impregnated into the innermost ply of fabric. The intense heat does not get to this inner ply nearly so quickly as it does to the tread.

LUXURY COMES IN SMALL CARS NOW

NO LONGER NECESSARY TO PUT ALL FAMILY BANK ROLL IN A BIG CAR

No longer is it necessary for the motorist who is a devotee of the more de luxe things in automobiles to purchase a big, expensive motor vehicle. As a consequence of the greater refinements being given many of the smaller and less expensive machines, the public is now able to buy cars of modest upkeep cost which have all the verve, dash and distinctiveness that used to be possible of obtainment only in huge monsters of the highway.

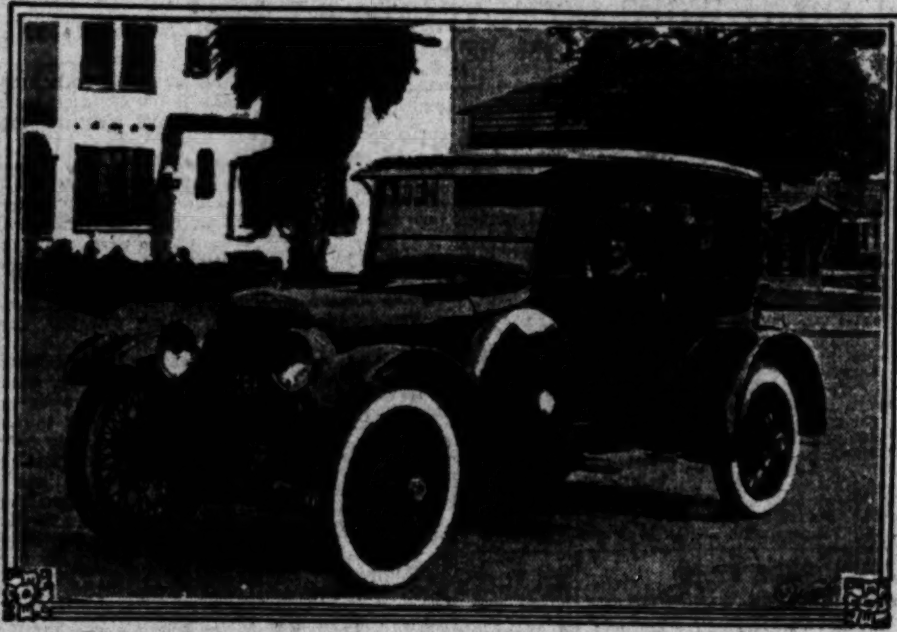
This is the case with the new models of the Maxwell, according to Conan A. Doyle, manager of sales for the Union Motors, Inc., Maxwell distributors. Particularly the two sport types—the roadster and four-passenger sport—are designed at the factory so that their snappy equipment is an integral part of the auto ensemble. In order to attain real art in a car, Mr. Doyle believes, the designers must work to make all parts harmonize—lines, colors, wheels, etc.

"In the new Maxwells," Mr. Doyle said, "we have an example of a stock car with equipment which used to feature only so-called 'show jobs.' The latter were cars specially equipped for exhibition purposes. The stock Maxwells, little beauties of color and equipment, have beauty of performance which matches the beauty of looks."

HAS CANTILEVER SPRINGS

The full cantilever springs of foreign design in both the Dort four and the new Dort six not only give the car the utmost riding comfort but so far as records show, danger of spring breakage is entirely eliminated, according to F. A. Petria, president of the Mission Motor Company.

A New Arrival in the City of the Angels



The H.C.S. brougham, at the rudder of which is Miss Katherine McGuire, who received delivery of the first car of its kind to reach this city. Miss McGuire is well known in social circles in New York and Newport.

DURANT PLEASED AT VISIT

Veteran Manufacturer is Tickled Over Way Things Are Run Out West

The visit to the Pacific Coast of W. C. Durant, father of "Cliff" Durant—motor sportsman and auto manufacturer—and head of the greater Durant automotive manufacturing enterprises, really means much more than the average arrival of some notable personage.

This is the way H. C. McVey, general manager here for the Durant-Steves Motors, Inc., distributors of Durant "fours" and "sixes" in Los Angeles, expresses it. And Mr. McVey, one of the motor magnate's old associates, is in a position to know. For he was one of the few with whom Durant conferred while in the Southland.

"Since the Durant car was first visualized, California has played a big part in its success and Mr. Durant is properly appreciative of that fact," Mr. McVey said.

"His son, R. C. ("Cliff") Durant, makes this State his home, is head of the big factory at Oakland and also head of the sales organization here, which is marketing the product in the county that tops all others in the world in the sale of automobiles.

"Then, too, the race victories run under Cliff's patronage, and won in races personally entered by Durant the younger, have pleased the veteran motor-car manufacturer and financier. And he was more than pleased to get the opportunity to come to California just at a time when the name 'Durant' was in the mouth of everyone; when sales of the cars are exceeding all expectations."

Metzger Is a Graduate of Old Bike Era

The story of how at least one celebrated American automobile maker came to visualize a world of "horseless speed" has just come out of Detroit. It is told in connection with the recent visit of William E. Metzger to the 1923 London Automobile Show. His attendance at the English show held elements of the romance of automotive progress, for this manufacturer attended in 1895 the first "horseless carriage exposition" ever held in Europe.

In a letter just received by L. V. Starr, branch manager for J. W. Leavitt & Co., distributors on the Coast for Columbia and Oldsmobile cars, something of the unique history of Mr. Metzger, vice-president of Columbia Motors and a director of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, is narrated.

"For thirty years I have been a nardent exponent of better personal transportation," this giant of the motor industry was recently quoted as saying, and those who have followed his career point to the fact that he has been "at it" since the old bicycle days. He opened his first automobile store in Detroit; helped bring out the famous old northern; later helped organize Cadillac, E.M.F., Metzger and finally topped his activities in 1914 by organizing the Columbia company.

Featured by units of known dependability, the Columbia car has been described by Mr. Metzger as his "masterpiece for the motorist of moderate means."

INTEREST MOUNTING OVER INDIANAPOLIS

With the launching here of a number of the new 122-cubic-inch racing babies for use in 1923 speedway events—notably Tommy Milton's and Ralph De Palma's mounts—interest has been reawakened in the forthcoming 500-mile international classic at Indianapolis.

Most of those who follow doings of the tracks, according to Eddie Cleveland of Shafer-Harrigan-Cleveland, Inc., Duesenberg distributors, are wondering just what Europe's entries will be. Mystery shrouds the Italian cars—no one knows just what they are. France and England (and probably Germany) are said to getting ready some swift wagons to cop, if possible, some of the glory won by Murphy when Jimmie ran away with the Grand Prix while mounted on a Duesenberg some time since.

LOOKS FOR BETTER BUSINESS IN 1923

That there is every reason to believe that business conditions will be better in 1923 than ever before is the statement of Hamlin W. Nerney, Ford agent, whose place of business is the brick block at the corner of Fifty-second street and Vermont avenue, is the busy Ford corner of the Southwest. Optimism in the automobile industry is the watchword of the man who is busy passing out the Ford booklets telling of the transcontinental tours that are available.

Ford prices have been dropped, Nerney says, in spite of the fact that commodities which are used to make the Ford have increased in price. He points to the fact that the March report of the National City Bank of New York shows copper steadily rising, with the latest quotation at 16½ cents. Lead is up to 8.10 cents per pound and tin and zinc have reached the top price since the close of the World War.

Life Rafts for Warves

Although ships have carried life rafts for many years, the only provision ordinarily made on docks and wharves for accidents is the common, round life preserver. These are inadequate at times, especially in the event of a gangplank breaking and precipitating several persons into deep water at once. A California seaport, realizing this danger, has installed life rafts mounted on trucks for instant moving and launching. They are almost the size used by ships but with a double deck body and a central cock pit for passengers, the whole being rigidly mounted on pontoons. The buoyancy of the crafts is sufficent to support a large number of persons.

A Proper Remark

The lumberjack was directed to proceed from camp to the nearest town and arrange for certain supplies. This entailed a long tramp through a forest composed of hemlock. For miles and miles he trudged through a never-ending growth of hemlock. At night he camped. The hemlock was hard to cut and when it was cut it made a poor fire. Hemlock roots tripped him and boughs of hemlock scratched his face.

So when he finally emerged it was not inappropriately that he remarked: "Gosh all hemlock!"—[Chicago News.

Dogs Increase Price of Meat

The sheep-raising industry of this country is on the decline, which means that lamb and mutton is growing scarcer and consequently higher in price, adding quite a little to the cost of living. The reason is laid to the door or rather the kennel of a comparatively few sheep killing-killing. It is not only the number of sheep which are killed in the course of a year by these dogs, but it is the effect that their depredations have upon persons who would be otherwise influenced to embark in the business of raising sheep. The total number of sheep in this country in 1903 was 64,000,000, while in 1923 it had fallen to 36,000,000, a decline of 28,000,000 sheep, more than 43 per cent. This showing is worse than seems on the face of it for in the same time the population of the country has increased and the sheep herd should have increased in the same ratio at least. Sheep-killing becomes a mania with some animals. They may be well behaved all day long and then at night two or three will get together and go on a rampage and the damage done in a few hours may amount to several thousand dollars.

Unloading Cargoes by Hand

Coolie labor is so cheap in China that modern freight handling machinery seen on the docks of this country and Europe has not been generally adopted. At some seaports of the Orient there is complete disregard for the number of men on one job and as many as twenty dock laborers will be used on a comparatively small piece of freight.

DO YOU KNOW WHY
THE GEAR-SHIFT IS DIFFERENT?

The design of Dodge Brothers gear-shift takes into consideration the natural inclinations of the driver.

To start, you throw the lever forward. To reverse, you pull the lever backward. And when the car is running in high gear—which is about ninety per cent of the time—the lever is in a forward position, out of the way, where it does not interfere with passengers, robes, or luggage.

Moreover, the transmission, developed and patented by Dodge Brothers, is so designed that the countershaft—used in intermediate speeds and in reverse—is disconnected when the car is in high. There are no gears in mesh. Power is transmitted directly from clutch to rear axle.

This exclusive feature prevents the loss of power through friction, reduces gear-box noises and eliminates a vast amount of wear.

That is why the gear-shift of Dodge Brothers Motor Car is different.

Now—the Completely Equipped Closed Car at a Low Price
5 Passenger Brougham $1375

Here's what you have been waiting for in a closed car—all-steel paneled body, complete equipment for a cross-country trip on a minute's notice, and a chassis that has piled up official records for all around dependability.

When you buy a closed car you don't want to have to take it to an accessory store and spend money for a heater, windshield wiper, transmission lock, etc. Nor should it be necessary to have the front seat cushions rebuilt so that the two people in front ride as comfortably as the three on the rear seat.

This completely equipped Brougham leaves no extras to be bought later. See this car at our show room today and you will realize that Oldsmobile with the cooperation of the great General Motors Corporation, offers you the finest closed car value for your money.

CLEVELAND SIX
The Quality Makes the Price More Startling

WHEN you hear a man speak of a quality car, you instinctively know it has more than four cylinders.

But do you know that of the quality cars, 75% are powered by six cylinder motors? And that of 68 such cars costing between $1500 and $10,800, only 5 are fours? Obviously there is an established preference for the six.

And if you ride in a Cleveland Six, you will understand why.

In the Cleveland you will find a motor that takes hills without a flying start and that makes traffic driving a matter of using the accelerator, and not the gear shift.

You will find singularly attractive Fisher-built bodies—gracefully proportioned, attractively finished, comfortably upholstered and completely appointed.

You will find a chassis so staunch and rugged that it delivers thousands of miles without even minor adjustments.

Down to the smallest detail, you will find it characterized by the fine craftsmanship which is the only basis of quality—and the only basis of lasting satisfaction.

And that is why its price is startling.

Outside of the issuance of the two important balance sheets the rubber industry was devoid of developments during the past week. Production is maintained at practically the same levels. Some authorities who have made a complete survey of the tire industry in the United States place production of tires on the basis of 185,000 tires a day.

"Authoritative" reports issued privately by some of the larger rubber companies during the week again tell of the certainty of increased tire prices by the beginning of the coming month. The same arguments of increased labor and material costs are mentioned, but these announcements have become hackneyed by constant repetition without results in fact.

The following brief table shows the earnings of the five large rubber companies over the last four-year period.

Making Webster to His Grave

Here's a chap down in Providence who dares to find fault with the dictionary. He says it is full of eccentricities and points out a number of things in it he believes should be changed. Which reminds us of a couple of "eccentricities" discovered therein by a friend of ours, viz., that it calls a verb a noun and prints "Finis" in the middle instead of at the end.

But criticise the work as one may, one must admit that its moral teaching is all right, for it never fails to put duty before pleasure.—[Boston Transcript.

TIRES NURSE THEIR GRIEVANCES LONG

HARD BUMPS AGAINST CURB SHOULD BE CAUSE FOR EXAMINATION

A tire will sometimes nurse a grievance a long while after it has received an injury before it blows out as a final expression of its indignation, according to Max Shiffner of the Commercial Tire Company here.

"An injury done to a tire is not always apparent at the time inflicted," he says. "For instance, a tire shows no outer ill effects after it has received a bad bump against a curb, and yet this is one of the worst things that could happen to it, and will nearly always result in a blowout at a later date."

Shiffner explained that the reason a tire does not show outer evidence of such an injury is because it is hurt on the inside rather than on the outside.

"The inside of the tire has a smaller circumference than the outside," he says, "and the inner plys o. fabric are of necessity shorter, consequently, a heavy blow to the outside of the tire stretches the inner ply beyond its limit of elasticity, and it breaks."

According to Shiffner, it is the part of wisdom for the motorist to remove his casing and inspect the inside of it, after it has been subjected to a severe bump against a curb or similar accident, so that he can promptly ascertain the amount of damage done, and can have it repaired.

NEW PRINCIPLE FOR CORD TIRE REVEALED

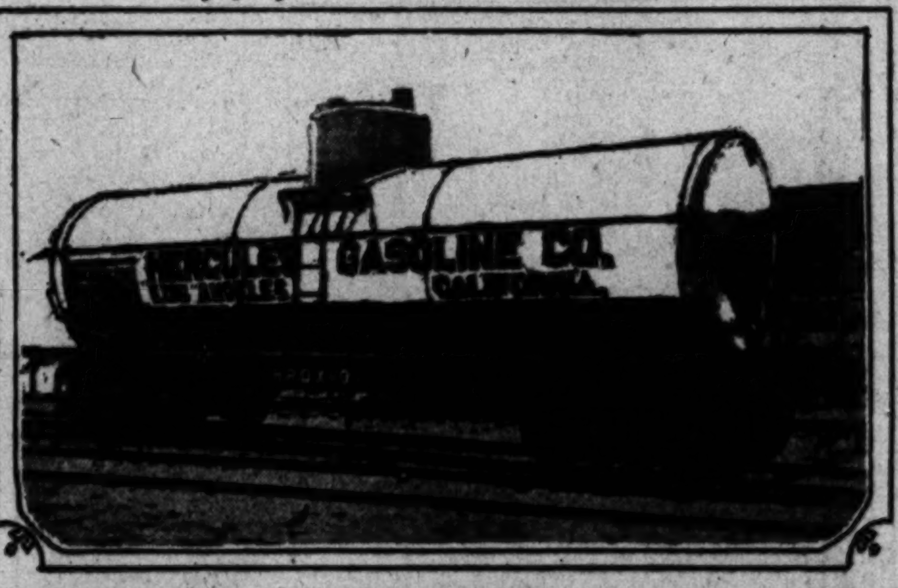
Close on the heels of the announcement of its new latex processes, the United States Rubber Company again comes into the limelight with the announcement that it is making its cord tires on a principle entirely new in tire manufacturing. Instead of building up the casing on an iron core of the form of a tire, the company is making casings flat on a collapsible steel drum, subsequently bringing them to shape by inflation.

gine soon flounders in oil and rapidly carbonizes."

McBryde says that the indicator should be consulted as to the engine's need for oil, and always kept at the right point.

"[illegible] another thing," he continues, "some men are prone to tighten their fan belt too often. Of course it requires tightening once in a while, but if done too frequently the life of the belt will be shortened, or the fan brackt sprung out of line."

Fifty of Them Put in Commission



Half a hundred new tank cars similar to the one pictured above have been purchased by the Hercules Gasoline Company to haul crude oil from Santa Fe Springs to the Hercules refining plant at Vernon.

"Jew's Harp" Industry

The Jew's harp has nothing to do with the Jews, but is a corruption of "jaw's harp." It came originally from Germany, and the first man to attain any notable degree of skill as a performer on the instrument was a soldier in Frederick the Great's army.

In England the Jew's harp industry is practically confined to Birmingham and Cradley in South Staffordshire.

The "harps" are mostly exported abroad, China being the best customer, though a large and increasing trade is done also with the negroid African races.

The Jewett Six is the highest powered sedan of its size and weight. It weighs enough to be comfortable over the roughest roads; safe under all conditions, and enduring. Superbly powered, Jewett sedan for each cubic inch of piston displacement has but 12½ pounds of car weight. Other sedans of its size have 17 pounds or more.

The resulting "open-car" performance of the Jewett sedan is what you might expect from a Paige-designed, Paige-built car. And remember, the Jewett is the only car of its price and class that is built by a builder of high-grade cars.

To its fascinating ease of handling Jewett adds distinguished comfort which every woman will appreciate. It is upholstered in French blue, long-wearing wool fabric. All wanted appointments are furnished. The seats are soft and comfortable. Everything is roomy and handy—luxurious. All this, mind you, in a full steel-paneled body sturdily built to endure with the chassis.

What a delight to a woman driver is such a car! From 2 to 60 miles an hour, by the mere pressure of her foot on the accelerator. No need to change gears in rounding corners or following slow teams. And on the rare occasions when gear-shifting is needed, it is delightfully easy. Jewett, with its Paige-type clutch, positively amazes those who are accustomed to pause to avoid clash or "missing." Move the gears fast or slow. Let in the clutch as fast as you can move your foot. You cannot jerk the car or stall the motor.

And one of the finest things about the Jewett is the certainty of its endurance. No motor was ever better oiled—and lubrication is life. With the Jewett high-pressure, hollow crank-shaft oiling system, 2 gallons of oil per minute are forced through all main and connecting rod bearings.

You've a new sensation in store when you drive this Jewett Sedan. See for yourself what the sedan with "open-car" performance would mean to you and your family. Let us send ohe for you to try.

SNOW BLOCKS HIGHWAYS

Southern California's mountains have had their full share of snow this season, but except for the out-of-the-way canyons and almost inaccessible peaks, the snow does not last long. Our neighboring State, Arizona, is generally considered more nearly tropic in climate than California, yet even there roads are occasionally made impassable, especially in the mountain districts of the northern portion of the State.

Arizona has done wonders in road improvement during the past two or three years, but the millions spent thus far served only the more settled districts and the main traveled highways. Rain and snow soon renders unimproved dirt roads impassable, and the recent rainstorms, which turned into snow at higher elevations, played havoc with the desert route to Arizona by way of Needles, and from Prescott to Phoenix a large portion of the route was badly cut up and, for a time, actually blocked by snowdrifts.

Charles H. Bigelow, well-known project engineer of this city, who is now in Phoenix, writes of his recent trip across the desert by way of Needles, Kingman, Ashfork and Prescott in a Reo seven-passenger touring car, and has sent in some interesting photographs which show the conditions he met with on the trip.

"Desert rains had filled the washes of the Mojave Desert in California and about fifteen miles west of Seligman snow had fallen, extending from that point on east over the mountains of Northern Arizona," he says in his letter. "I was storm-bound for two days at Ashfork, the roads being impassable, even for the Reo. When I finally did get out, however, the Reo was the first car that succeeded in getting through to Prescott for forty-eight hours. Marooned cars were strung along the Cedar Grade road at short intervals and few were even making an effort to go through.

"The trip from Prescott to Phoenix was made by way of Wickenburg, owing to the high water at various points on the Black Canyon road, and it was a case of bucking snow nearly all the way to Skull Valley, and of mud the balance of the way. The New River was swollen like a poisoned pup, but the Reo bucked her way across and sailed serenely into Phoenix. I think I passed about every make of car in existence on the road, and I am not belittling them in the slightest when I say they were having their hands full trying to negotiate the terrible roads. Many of them had given up the task as impossible. The conditions were enough to test the mettle of any automobile."

DRAWS ON OTHER BRANCHES

In the effort to keep up with the call for Ford cars and trucks, the local Ford branch is drawing on five other Ford plants for shipments this month, according to a bulliten just received by the Los Angeles Ford dealers.

"Seven straight trainloads of Ford cars, each trainload consisting of forty freight cars, are being shipped from the Milwaukee branch to this district this month," the bulletin goes on to say. "Minneapolis branch will ship 106 freight cars of Fords; the St. Louis branch will contribute 168 carloads, the Kansas City will supply 36 carloads for Arizona points. In addition, the San Francisco branch will ship 265 straight carloads of Fords into this territory. As each one of these carloads will average seven cars or trucks, the shipments will total 6000 Ford cars and trucks!

"In several instances, railroad companies are expediting movement of these straight trainloads as much as possible, which is good news to the many Ford buyers, whose orders have been awaiting arrival of these cars.

"Work on the large addition to the Los Angeles Ford branch is progressing rapidly, with two shifts of men working day and night. It is hoped that by May 1 the first story of the new building will be ready for occupancy, which will permit an increase in production. As it has been impossible for local Ford dealers to accumulate any stock of cars to take care of the spring rush, the only relief in sight is increased output. The Ford Motor Company is making prodigious efforts to meet the March demand by scheduling a production of 149,000 cars and trucks, and one car and truck in every twenty-five will be shipped to Los Angeles."

HOLDS SIMPLICITY RECORD

Since the inception of the product twenty-three years ago, Mack truck engineers have held an unchallenged record for simplicity of design. The most recent development in this connection is the new type V cooling system on the Bulldog models, which provides for the entire elimination of fan belt and bearings. So far as is known, the Mack Bulldog is the only water-cooled highway transport vehicle that does not require a fan belt.

A squirrel-cage type blower is bolted direct to the back face of the flywheel. It has a diameter of twenty and one-half inches and around its outer edge sixty thin blades are substantially riveted. This blower is said to be the lightest, most efficient and most rigid and durable type known to the engineering fraternity. By rotating as a part of the flywheel two additional bearings are done away with.

Four Ways in Which Economy Is Manifested

BY GEORGE S. PELTON,

President Pelton Motor Company

There are four ways in which economy in any passenger car is manifested: Low gasoline consumption, low oil consumption between changing periods, high tire mileage, and economy of maintenance. Ordinarily it is attempted to secure economy along these lines by refinement folowing the original design of the car. Where economy is considered in the original design, it is generally on only one or two of these points, and then economy in the other lines is realized by what refinements and improvements can later be made.

Wide experience both here and abroad, however, indicates that this method of obtaining economy is unsound, and that the only correct system of real benefit to the car owner is to make economy a controlling factor from the very inception of the design.

American engineers are already turning their activities in that direction, a noteworthy example of this being the present Marmon 34. For instance, gasoline economy, which in the past has usually been aimed at, through carburetor and manifold design, really goes considerably deeper than that. The first requisite is an engine with high thermal efficiency. This can generally be measured by the horsepower out-put per cubic inch of piston displacement, which in the Marmon motor is four inches per horsepower, a very high figure.

Light weight or rather low weight per horsepower developed, is another important factor. In the Marmon it is some forty-six pounds. Eliminating power losses through inefficient drives is another source of economy as is a low rolling resistence for the entire car.

REBUILT CAR SALE GOES WITH A BANG

Newspaper advertising, properly planned and written, backed up by a reputation for square dealing, is attributed as one of the chief reasons for the remarkable success of the rebuilt car sale last week by the W. P. Herbert Company, Chandler and Cleveland distributors.

They report forty-eight of the rebuilt cars sold during the four-day sale, with only $600 worth of cars taken in trade.

The inducements offered in the advertising helped to do that, Used Car Manager Armstrong said, and once the buyers had inspected the line, hardly recognizable as used cars, as far as condition went, sales were not hard to close.

RARE AND BEAUTIFUL LIZARD

A large and beautiful lizard, common to all mountainous countries of tropical Africa, brings a bright touch of color to those granite boulders which it has elected as its domicile. Its head and neck are a brilliant chrome yellow, its body sea green, its tail turquoise blue. Being of an inquisitive turn of mind, it scans the approach of the stranger with marked curiosity, by moving its head up and down, before it rushes to conceal itself in some crevice. If one keeps very quiet, however, it will come back, and, if she happens to be present, start courting its lady, indifferent to the fact that she has no beautiful colors to boast of on her plain brown body. It is very amusing to watch them at play, running round and round and making love to one another, at which latter game their habits are remarkably like those of dogs.—[Hans Coudenhove in Atlantic Monthly.

A MISSOURI SCENARIO

Down near Bucklin, Joseph Molt, 50 years old, while hunting pitched his tent under a tree, built a big campfire and went to sleep in the tent. The tree caught fire, burned away at the base and fell across the tent pinning Molt down so that he could move only his arms. The flames crept along the tree toward him and he fought desperately in an effort to keep the fire from reaching him. At exactly the right moment it rained. He was discovered later by three other hunters, who rescued him.—[Kansas City Star.

CURIOUS OLD ENGLISH LAWS

Until about twenty years ago the raising of tobacco in Great Britain and Ireland was strictly forbidden by virtue of a law enacted in the reign of the Stuart kings to promote tobacco growing in the American colonies. Although the colonies cut themselves adrift from the British Empire, and England had nothing to gani from fostering an American, every attempt to repeal the law met with failure.

The Treasury Department in London feared if tobacco was grown in the British Isles the large revenue derived from the importation of foreign-grown tobacco would diminish.

PULLS A FIVE-TON LOAD

A brag is all right if the bragger can back it up.

In this case Frank L. Darling, Long Beach dealer for the W. P. Herbert Company, local Cleveland and Chandler distributors, was the bragger and the way he backed it up will be preserved in the Cleveland archives for many a day.

Expounding upon the virtues of the Cleveland six Darling told a Long Beach merchant the Cleveland could pull as big a load as a five-ton truck.

The Long Beach merchant, evidently having a combination of sporting and "show-me" blood in his veins, took issue with Darling on that brag, and put up a wager to show that he meant business.

Darling stood pat, so a huge platform was built and fitted over the body of a strictly stock model Cleveland which had been driven 30,000 miles. The front cross beam rested on the headlights and chassis arms, the center one across the two front doors and the rear one on the chassis arms and rear seat structure. It was constructed of heavy lumber with a rail around it.

Two men stood on the platform, while the sturdy little car was driven through the streets towing a four-ton truck in which eight more men rode.

There was 8000 pounds deadweight load on the Cleveland itself and 16,200 pounds tow weight, making a total load of 24,200 pounds. Darling reports most of an hour's run about the streets of Long Beach was made in high gear.

PICKS OUT TWO FAMILIAR SPOTS

L. M. Van Riper, general sales manager for the Racine Rubber Company of Racine, Wis., accompanied by Mrs. Van Riper returned to Los Angeles last week for the first time in ten years and could pick out only two places in town as familiar. They were the Van Nuys and Alexandria Hotels. After they got beyond those they were lost.

The growth of Los Angeles during his absence amazed the tire man, who said that the Racine Rubber Company's business had shown a correspondingly large increase. Mr. Van Riper was greatly impressed with the multitude of motor vehicles in Los Angeles and our splendid network of fine boulevards. He also marvels at the amount of building going on here, the equal of which he has not observed in the other cities he has visited.

MILLION-DOLLAR PLANT STILLS OAKLAND RUMOR

Full recognition is given to the sentiment of the public in favor of the closed car by the Oakland Motor Car Company, according to Reeve Gartzmann, and the General Motors Company in its official announcement a few weeks ago established the fact that the purpose of erecting a million-dollar body-building plant for the Fisher Body Corporation in Pontiac was to supply bodies for the Oakland six.

"This should set at rest any rumors that the Oakland six was slipping and was to be discarded by the General Motors Company. To any person with reasoning powers it should convey the fact that the Oakland is to be made one of the most important units of that great concern," says Gartzmann.

Billy's Retort

Seeing an intoxicated man on the train, Billy Sunday gave a brief lecture on intemperance for his benefit. When it was over the drinker glared at Mr. Sunday and said, "I'd like to give you a punch in the nose."

"My friend," the revivalist answered, "charity begins at home. Never give away what you want yourself."—[Boston Transcript.

A few turns of the wrench!

THAT'S all your brakes may need to put 'em back on a 100% efficiency basis.

Or they may need re-lining. Whatever it is there are good men who can tell you in any one of the places listed below.

They are good places because they use only good materials.

If your brakes need re-lining you don't have to tell 'em to use the best brake lining.

They use it anyway.

They re-line with Johns-Manville Non-Burn.

BRAKES are safer and last longer with

AMONG THE FANS

Ralph C. Lane has returned from a two-weeks' business trip to Chicago and Indianapolis.

Walter M. Mills, an ex-champion of Kansas and Nebraska, is again in our midst and vows that here he will remain.

E. C. Waterhouse won the J. J. Lannin tourney, held in Boston, February 22, defeating S. S. Bell in the finals, 2 to 1 and 2 draws.

J. J. Lannin and L. S. Head are spending a few weeks in Tarpoon Springs, Fla.

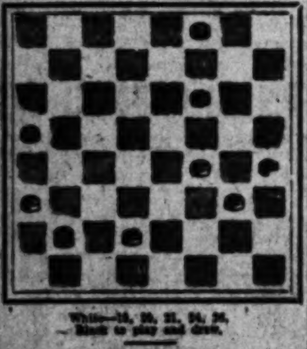
Nothing new has happened in the local tourney—in fact, nothing has happened at all for some time. Nichols and Jensen have not met since playing their four-game tie a couple of weeks ago.

Should the present tourney end before hot weather sets in, the annual "go-as-you-please" tourney will take place, as several of the boys are just ravin' to go.

PROBLEM NO. 718
By F. Hopewell.

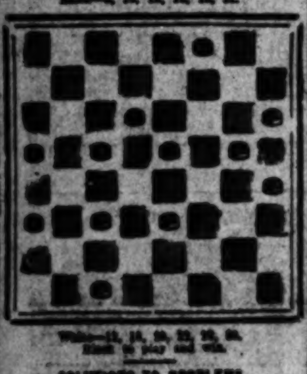
The two problems this week are a couple of end games that came up during some analysis at the clubrooms a few days ago.

Black—3, 11, 12, King 23.



White—15, 20, 21, 24, 26.
Black to play and draw.

PROBLEM NO. 719
By Fred Wright.
Black—3, 10, 13, 14, 15, 21.



White—12, 18, 19, 22, 28, 30.
Black to play and win.

SOLUTIONS TO PROBLEMS
PROBLEM NO. 716
By C. W. Fenton.

Black—1, 6, 10, 14, 15, 19, 24.
White—11, 13, 17, 21, 27, 28, 31.

PROBLEM CHATTER

Problem No. 3 in Wendemuth's Checker Companion by E. D. Banks is:
Black—15, 20, 21, King 29.
White—22, 26, King 23.
Black to play and win.

His solution goes:

[illegible]

and continues to a Black win, but at this point instead of 19–16, Asher Jensen published play in the Allentown (Pa.) Record to draw for White by 23–32, 24–27a, 32–28, etc., drawn.

a—But here H. L. LeClere steps in and restores the Black win by: 26–23, 32–28, 14–18, 19–16, 28–32, etc., B. wins.

PRIZE SWITCHER ANALYSIS

Contributed by J. V. Crone, Salt Lake City, Utah.

To the Checker Editor: From the prize position published in your column December 31, 1922, viz.:

Black—1, 3, 4, 6, 12, 21, King 28.
White—7, 18, 20, 23, 26, 30, 32.

Play as follows: 25–29, 30–19, and we have Los Angeles Times Game No. 1379 at 24–19 the ...th move of that game, and also Los Angeles Times Game No. 1399 at the 28th move. New ... position that well illustrates the beauty of Tomah's hidden charms.

27–23 was played by S. S. Bell against J. O. W. Smith, and a draw resulted, but Black should have won, as the move in question is a loss. Instead of 27–23, play 31–27 and draw. If now Black goes 6–9, White draws by 27–24, as shown by Alf. Lambert in game No. 1399, quoting play by the writer published in Pittsburg Leader Game, No. 1287, published December 27, 1914. If, however, Black goes 25–29 we have the following:

[illegible]

J. B. Haven and J. V. Crone, Salt Lake Tribune Game, No. 321, August, 1915.

a—While the writer starred 27–23 at this point he did not publish play on 27–24, against which his manuscript shows a win, and which runs the play into game No. 1379 again. We have lately received play from Francis Tescheleit of London, Eng., agreeing exactly with our manuscript, except in the matter of variations, and also from James Jack of New York City, whose play is identical with that of Mr. Tescheleit and the writer, except for an oversight near the end. The following is the play in question:

[illegible]

HAIR NET INSPECTION

When the demand for hair nets was developed a few years ago, the great bulk of these articles was made in China from hair which was gathered up in that country, but they were unsatisfactory for the reason that they varied greatly in size and were of poor quality generally. The manufacture of the nets was what is known as a "home industry," being made in the homes of the natives and collected by middlemen which accounts for the absence of uniformity. As the demand grew it was found necessary to establish a hair net inspection which was done by the merchants handling the nets. At the present time there are several establishments devoted to the inspection and sorting of hair nets and one of them employing the services of 1000 persons. This has resulted in a great improvement in the character of the product.

HIS OUGHT TO

Blossoming forth from poverty to riches, Mr. Smith bought a motor car.

It wasn't much of a car, but he talked about it a lot. He always called it "my automobile." He tried many experiments with it and was often seen reclining underneath it. This happened so frequently that Smith and his automobile became the joke of the neighborhood.

One day Smith was mowing his lawn when something went wrong with the mower. He sat down beside it to have a look at the machinery.

A wag, chancing to pass that way, paused.

"Good morning, Smith," he said; "is that your automobile?"

"No," growled Smith. "It's my oughtermograss—but it won't!"—[Chicago News.

Going to buy a New Car this Spring?

~ then consider these things:

1 Every week, more and more buyers are choosing Oaklands. In little more than a year, the demand for the Six-44 has taxed the production facilities of the Oakland factories.

2 Oakland is so confident of the superior merit of its engine that it places upon every engine a written 15,000 mile guarantee against excess oil in the combustion chamber. Oakland is the only company to offer such an unusual guarantee!

3 Oakland is the only company that gives you a definite gauge with which to judge, in advance, the actual mileage the essential parts of the Oakland Six will deliver—free from trouble or expense.

4 Oakland service stations are keeping accurate records of upkeep expenses on Six-44's. In Cleveland, for instance, the average upkeep last year was only $8.06 per car. Other cities report similarly low averages.

When You Buy An Oakland—You Buy Known Mileage

You see new Oaklands everywhere! Every week, you meet them on the streets in increasing numbers! Have you considered the reasons for Oakland's phenomenal success?

It is simply the result of Oakland's purpose to build the finest light-six in the world—a purpose realized some eighteen months ago in the Six-44.

Oakland's success has been justly merited—merited by definite superiorities that will become more and more evident to you the more closely you inspect the car.

It is these definite superiorities—that enable Oakland to offer buyers a definite gauge by which they can estimate the minimum number of miles their Oaklands will deliver. It is these same superiorities that enable Oakland to give a special 15,000 mile engine performance guarantee.

And it is this same superior quality that alone is responsible for the unusual records—in open competition and in private service—that have been established by Oaklands during the past year.

Twice, you will remember, Oakland won important national economy and endurance contests. In Cleveland, actual records show an average annual upkeep cost of only $8.06.

If you are considering the purchase of a new car this spring—you simply cannot afford to overlook the Oakland.

It is a beautiful car—and an extremely comfortable one. It has ample power for any emergency; its six cylinders insure a remarkable smoothness of operation at all speeds. Its economy has become the subject of universal comment. The table of mileages shown below estimates, with remarkable accuracy, the minimum number of miles you can expect from your Oakland.

Compare these facts with your own personal experiences with any cars of similar price. Analyze the Oakland. Then remember that Oakland—a division of General Motors Corporation—offers this splendid car upon a basis of definite and actual mileage.

You will then readily understand why more and more discriminating buyers are daily convincing themselves that no other light-six offers the dollar-for-dollar value so evident throughout the Oakland line.

The "Mileage Basis" Gauge

Main Bearings—40,000 miles or more without attention.
Valves—15,000 miles or more without need of grinding.
Connecting Rods—40,000 miles or more without attention.
Cylinders, Pistons, Rings—Guaranteed in writing 15,000 miles.
Gas Mileage—20 to 25 miles per gallon.
Tires—15,000 to 25,000 miles per set.
Transmission, axles, and major parts—Life of the car.

THIS beautiful Sedan—with its Fisher-built body—matches in comfort and in the completeness of its appointments the quiet and smooth-running performance of the Oakland chassis.

DON'T ABUSE THE BRAKES

BY REEVE GARTZMANN
President California Oakland Motor Company.

The greatest fault with American drivers today is that they drive with their brakes.

It may be due to the fact that life in America is speeded up to a dizzying pace; that our great cities are congested with automobile traffic, and that the brakes are actually built so mechanically sound that even in spite of the abuse they are subjected to they stand up under the strain.

Every time you hear a traffic officer's whistle in a large city, you almost immediately hear a crunching of brakes and scraping of dry tires on the dry pavement.

And even in long cross-country drives, where hilly country is encountered, some drivers constantly jam on their brakes when slowing down, instead of allowing their cars to slow down before the brakes are applied. Every tire mark on the pavement costs some automobilist money sooner or later.

The motorist should take things easy in driving, whether in a crowd or out of a crowd. Fast driving between short city blocks, followed by a sudden jamming on of the brakes, gains little time and is expensive, both in the wear and tear on the tires, the burning out of the brake lining and injury to the brakes and other mechanical parts of the car. Never put more pressure on the brakes than is absolutely necessary to stop at the point you wish.

In going down hill, take your foot off the accelerator and the motor, set at a safe pace, will hold the car back. If the grade is very steep, shift to second or first speed as the grade may require before starting.

Under no circumstances is it advisable to throw the clutch out when actually driving down hill. To do so may mean absolute loss of control. It is not good driving, either to shut off the spark completely. It is a safe practice to have the motor running in order to have power on tap in case of emergency.

There is no question at all that brakes are extremely important for the purpose for which they are built, but simply because they are efficient, reliable and the easy way to drive is no reason for their abuse—abuse which results in damage to other parts of the car as well.

Two million gallons of gasoline can be produced from 800 pressure stills in one State by a single large oil company.

RUNS ON ITS OWN POWER

One of the unique displays in the history of the local automobile row is the running motor in operation at the salesrooms of the Paige Company of Southern California. The exhibit has been attracting unusual attention because of the fact that it is one of the new Paige 6-70 motors, and an absolutely new one, being run under its own power right in the salesrooms.

"It is very seldom that you will see a new motor subjected to such a severe test," said J. M. Sterling, manager of the company, in discussing the display. "A new motor is generally considered as something to be babied along, and one that cannot be expected to undergo the hardships of continued running while the car is standing still.

"This new 6-70 motor, by the way, is a power plant that we are very proud of. The Paige 6-66 made itself famous by performance tests and record runs of all sorts, but the new motor is a decided improvement on the 66, good as that power plant proved itself to be."

A Test for Thirteen Club

The Woman's Thirteen Club, of New York, meets once a month on the 13th, pays 13 cents a month dues, and the chairman begins each meeting by breaking a mirror with her gavel. The members enter the luncheon room under a ladder with the rungs 13 in hes apart. They also pass under an umbrella held open in the room. No doubt they think they are superstition proof. But let someone place a lively mouse in that room, then see what happens.—[Capper's Weekly.

ADVENTURING AMERICAN TRAILS WITH "LIZZIE"

BY EDITH L. SLOUGH

Being the Adventures of Peoria (Ill.) Natives Who Traversed the Country in a Ford

CHAPTER 8.

Yellowstone National Park

When we awoke, a new day had flooded the world with sunshine and I gazed from my tent door upon a magnificent panorama of mountains and valleys.

Not always are the gods so kind in matters of weather to mortals who venture into this realm of the mysterious and mighty forces of nature, so we hastened to take advantage of their favor.

We had purchased one of the guide books, provided for the convenience of guests, at a little store in Gardiner and this advised that a short distance above the camp to the west we would find that most wonderful curiosity in the region, Mammoth Hot Springs. So we climbed the trail. As we rounded a turn, we came fully upon it—a majestic mountain of snow-white terraces, descending far down into the valley—one below another.

It is of limestone deposit and stands out vividly from the green forests and purple mountain ranges which form its setting.

From the great hot springs, on the plateau which crowns its summit, and from the smaller pools, in the various terraces about, flow streams of boiling water, which send up clouds of steam. The active terraces are brilliant with color due to a velvet-like covering of algous growth—a low form of plant life—which cleaves to the surface of the limestone rock and requires hot or tepid water in which to live. The multitude of tiny streams which trickle down the face of the snowy mountain, add a mosaic of color, until the whole is like nothing else so much as a magnificent fountain, carved from marble by a master's hand.

We climbed the mound and explored its various wonders, rather gingerly as to the path followed by our wandering footsteps, for steam was rising out of little crevices in the limestone surface at many points other than the boiling pools and a misstep would undoubtedly bring about the fulfillment of that old proverb: "Those that burn themselves must walk on the blister!"

Everywhere were the brilliant colors we had noticed from below; yellows, greens, browns and reds prevail where the water is hottest and where it is only tepid rust color appears.

The sections of the mound where the deposit has dried are of glaring chalk white. The formation is many acres in extent, of unknown depth, and is the result of successive layers of deposit and decay through ages of time. The boiling springs are caused by great masses of heated rock, far beneath the earth's surface, which have not yet cooled below the zone of percolating waters.

The Golden Gate, Yellowstone

Many of the terraces have been named and although it would be impossible to describe them individually, each has its own peculiar characteristics. The largest terrace, Jupiter, was placid at the time we were in Yellowstone, but has since sprung into eruption. No visitor to this park will be disappointed in Mammoth Hot Springs if he is seeking the unusual and beautiful in nature.

FORT YELLOWSTONE

To the east and adjoining these terraces, occupying another wide plateau, is Fort Yellowstone, formerly in use by the Army. It is now the administrative headquarters of the park and contains the superintendent's office and information service; also the park museum, well worth a visit.

Here are the residences of Uncle Sam's own force of employees and they are estimable servants—always courteous and most willing to serve the guests in any way possible.

One of the rangers gives an interesting and very educational lecture at headquarters each evening at 8:30 on Yellowstone, and it is free to everyone. Among the many buildings which constitute the little city of Ft. Yellowstone, was one (the only one of its kind that I have discovered in any national park, as yet) a church! And because churches are so rare in these playground estates of ours, it was almost as much of a curiosity as the geysers.

Terrace Mountain faces the southeast and the valley of the east Gardiner River, and looking down from the summit, a wonderful view presents itself. It is through this valley that the trail returns to Mammoth and the city of Gardiner after having made the circle of the park.

The motor trails in Yellowstone are arranged in twin loops, one below another. All traffic passes over them to the right—no matter at what point you may enter—excepting during certain hours of the day, which are controlled by the different ranger stations.

Soon after we struck camp and started over the trail to the right up the face of Terrace Mountain, just beside the Hot Springs Mound en route to Norris Ranger station, and the Geyser Basin, surrounding it, twenty-five miles distant to the south.

The grades were not bad, but we climbed 1000 feet in less than three miles before we came out "on top" at the Golden Gate. Within these three miles we passed through the Hoodoos, an area of about a square mile—along the mountain side—covered with huge blocks of fractured limestone rock of most peculiar and fantastic appearance. In the heart of it, the trail makes an abrupt turn, between two immense limestone pillars and this has been designated as the Silver Gate. Then the road winds through a rugged pass, high up along the wall of the canyon—between the bases of Terrace Mountain on the north and Bunsen Peak opposite. In this pass the walls tower above the roadway from 200 to 300 feet and because they are covered with a yellow moss or lichen, they have been given the most appropriate name of Golden Gate.

Minute Man Geyser in Lower Geyser Basin, Yellowstone Park

Passing out of the Golden Gate, we came abruptly onto what I should term a mountain meadow. It was quite vast in extent and along its western border, rose the Gallatin range of peaks, some of whom average over 10,000 feet in height. To the north and right of us, was Electric Mountain—11,155 feet in altitude. This is so called because it contains a very large amount of magnetic ore and attracts lightning during storms. The bases of these great, blue peaks and ranges, were buried in forests of dense black fir and cedar and formed a wonderful meadow background for the emerald meadow, across which we were traveling.

APOLLINARIS SPRING

Presently we came to a pot where a number of cars were parked beside the trail. On inquiry, we learned that a short distance up the mountain path to our left was a delicious cold spring. We filled Elizabeth first, and as it didn't seem to affect her seriously, tried it ourselves. It tasted like Bromo Seltzer with the shiver left out and I asked some one if there was anything wrong with it. He said: "Well, anybody could tell that you have never been in high society. That's Apollinaris water." I admitted that I have never been any further in than the sidewalk out in front, but—! if I have to depend on that stuff to get me an introduction, I'll remain in the jitney class and guzzle skimmed milk for the rest of my life!

Now! Up-to-date — Yellowstone Park had been all that the professor from Chicago and the Haynes guide-book had claimed for it, and more—abundantly more—and I was beginning to realize to some extent, at last, what a glorious inheritance was mine, because I was lucky enough to have been born, once upon a time, an insignificant, little tow-headed Yankee—down in Lenox, Iowa—but a child of the United States of America, and a ward of Uncle Sam, instead of having to be led around with a ring in my nose, by a cannibal husband on some God-forsaken island of the Southern Seas.

TOP BUSINESS HAS AN INTERESTING HISTORY

FIRST LEATHER CLOTH OF ANY VALUE MADE IN ENGLAND

How tops began away back there in the dim distant ages makes a "topping story y' 'now," as our English cousins would say.

"For thousands of years," says Robert Thompson, specialist in building distinctive automobile tops and bodies, "man has found various means for protecting himself against the elements.

"The first leather cloth of any value was made in England in 1800. It was used for hoods on baby carriages. The first American manufacture of this goods on any scale began in 1850. Big scale in those days meant a few hundred yards a day, while now millions of yards are turned out yearly for the automotive industry.

"Automobiles have developed this auxiliary industry until last year 50,000,000 yards of leather cloth was used on the 2,500,000 cars and trucks manufactured."

WHAT BECOMES OF THE OLD BUGGIES?

MANY ARE CONVERTED INTO TRUCKS AND RUN AROUND FOR SEVERAL YEARS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, March 17.—What becomes of these old automobiles that look as if they might fall to pieces on the next turn? This was a question put to a junk man who wrecks automobiles. The answer expected was "Oh, they go to the junk pile" but the man who asked the question was fooled and all those who heard it.

"Most of them keep right on running," said the dealer. "We wreck mighty few automobiles in a year's time. There are probably two or three hundred machines sold in Redlands every year, maybe more than that, probably more. And we wreck less than fifty each year in the city. The records will show that is true for we have to make a report.

"These old wrecks are not as bad as they look," he continued. "Ofttimes a new body, some engine work and other work will put a car in good shape, at least for hard service in light trucking. And you would be surprised to know how many $2000 to $2500 cars are bought for $600 or $700, a truck body put on them and several years of good hard service in trucking secured from them."

STEEL WHEELS STANDARD

"The Oakland Sport touring and roadster finished in deep maroon, are supplied with brilliant red steel wheels as standard equipment," says H. E. Franklin, manager of the California Oakland Motor Company.

FIRST CLOSED CAR WAS WEIRD AFFAIR

SLOW, PONDEROUS, SQUEAKY, THE WIND WHIPPED IN THE CREVICES

The modern closed car is a thing of splendid beauty. The original closed car, though, possessed no eye appeal whatever. It grew out of a strictly utilitarian need and its present-day beauty is an incidental development in its fulfillment of that need.

This view is taken by H. J. Wurzburger, Earl distributor here, who goes way back into the dark ages of motor-car history—around 1902—and tells of the funny equipages people were wont to call automobiles in those days.

"The automobile then was an awkward carriage that could attain under stress the tremendous speed of thirty miles an hour," he says. "Such a speed, in fact, most any speed at all with the wind blowing, was supremely uncomfortable for the passengers, and travel in inclement weather took on the nature of a hazardous adventure."

According to Wurzburger, the closed car was the inevitable solution. He says, however, that the first ones hadn't much to prove them superior to the almost intolerable open carriages of the day.

"They were ponderous, wind whipped in through crevices, doors and windows squeaked, vision was obstructed, and they were almost unbelievably ugly with their grotesque panels and ungainly proportions," he says. "It was a start, though, and from that start designers and manufacturers have each year improved them until we have the luxurious closed car of the present day—in comparison, a miracle of beauty and utility."

STANDARDIZED SERVICE INTERESTS THE TRADE

PUBLIC COMMENTS FAVORABLY ON NEW PLAN INSTALLED BY PACKARD

Much favorable comment was aroused last week by the action of the Packard Motor Car Company in standardizing repair and service costs all over the United States. Packard is one of the first companies to adopt such a plan, and its operation will be watched with much interest by the entire automotive trade.

"When the average owner of an automobile brings his car in for a service or repair operation he does not have the slightest idea what such an operation should cost him," says Frank Randall, service manager for Earle C. Anthony, Inc. "After two years of study, the Packard factory has determined very definitely what almost 1000 such operations should cost when performed by efficient service men, working under the best of conditions and with the best equipment. They determined these figures by comparing costs at five of the largest Packard branches in the United States, and by making time studies of the various operations at the factory.

"Under the new system, an owner bringing his car into a Packard service station is given an exact price as to what the needed work will cost for labor and materials, both. The price that he gets has been set by the Packard Motor Car Company itself, and is set with as much fairness as the price of their own product."

SILENT TIMING GEARS

"Noise in timing gears has been entirely eliminated in the new Oakland by adopting the silent chain drive with adjustments made from outside of the gear case," says H. E. Franklin, manager for the California-Oakland Motor Company.

VACUUM SYSTEM IN STARS

"The gasoline tank in the Star car is carried at the rear and fuel is supplied by Stewart Vacuum System to the carburetor," says E. J. Cox, associate manager for the Walter M. Brown Motors, Inc.

GRAHAM BROTHERS TRUCK

It costs much more to haul 1000 pounds of chassis than it costs to haul 1000 pounds of pay load. So it is certainly to the user's advantage to eliminate as much chassis-weight as he possibly can.

The safest and most practical way to accomplish this is to install Graham Brothers Truck, which is built with the weight cut to the minimum.

Instead of being made sturdy through the use of heavy materials, its gets its superb strength from a well balanced arrangement of fine materials.

Anyone who knows the fundamental facts about the cost of hauling dead weight can readily understand why Graham Brothers Truck owners are showing such large savings in operating expense.

Shipments by mail from out-of-State points would also make collections difficult. No appreciable amount of fuel could be imported in the same manner.

What is more important than the manner of raising the levy is the purpose for which the revenue is to be applied. Motorists have not shown any great antagonism toward a tax that would be entirely for maintenance of roads and highways but have shown a strong opposition to being taxed as a class for the new construction of roads which are of general benefit to the entire community and to every individual directly or indirectly.

Another point that it would be well to understand is what amount should be raised for maintenance of roads and highways and what part would be given the county for local roads. Until the officials of the State inform the public what amount would be required for maintenance and how it would be distributed the public is not likely to give approval to any method of taxation that affects them as a class.

NEW PLANT AIDS OUTPUT

BY H. H. BASSETT.
President Buick Motor Company
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FLINT (Mich.) March 11.—Buick's recent acquisition of a new plant at Detroit, together with added manufacturing facilities of the Fisher Body Corporation, have placed us in position to meet 1923 production demands.

The Detroit Buick plant is used for assembling closed cars, the bodies for which are built by Fisher in that city. Formerly the bodies had to be hauled to Flint by motor truck. The change has been of inestimable value.

So, then, we enter upon 1923 with every hope of a good year.

Speaking for automobile manufacturers, I believe we will continue to face prosperity. The same general reasons that have created such promising conditions in other lines govern us, plus the wide dependency of most other lines upon us. I think it is no longer seriously questioned that business does depend to a great extent upon the automobile.

Materially improved conditions in agricultural districts as to crops, prices and renewal of confidence is one important reason.

Merchants' shelves are comparatively bare, ability to buy is constantly increasing, sane corrective legislation is an immediate prospect and determination has displaced timidity. These facts count.

Complete business recovery is well under way. That indomitable will "to bring about" things and not just wait for them "to happen" has hastened it.

BEARINGS WELL SUPPLIED

SPEED KINGS BANQUET

Noted Race Starter Sends the Boys Off on a Spaghetti Chase at Amerigo Bozzani's Home

Sunny Italy with all its sparkling spirit and inimitable hospitality was transplanted for a night last Tuesday by Amerigo Bozzani, head of the Bozzani Motor Company, Willys-Knight and Overland dealers, to his spacious home at 1342 Jeffries street. Speed kings of the whizzing oval and the roaring press were the guests of honor.

Fred Wagner, famed custodian of the checkered flag, was there to see that everybody got a fair start. His namesake of the Express made him a close second.

Jimmie Murphy, Ralph De Palma and Bennett Hill ate up their share of the seeming endless stream of good things, much as they do the miles in a real race.

Paul Lowry of The Times showed a surprising penchant for large plates of long-wheel-base spaghetti, while Will Mathews of the Examiner expressed partiality for buns and oranges, explaining that he had to choose things that would pack easy in order to get Jack Howe's share, since Jack couldn't be present. Nelson Lally assisted in preserving order in his customary dignified way, while L. J. Rogers, Express and "Spud" Mershon, Herald, did everything in their power to upset the equilibrium.

Bozzani was an ideal host, the boys reported, and the sprang a surprise treat in the form of Italian songs, sung by a native artist that fitted admirably with the stimulating Italian refreshments.

CLEANING A MOTOR

According to Harry Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company, an excellent way to clean a motor is to spray kerosene over the exterior of the motor. This effectively washes down all grease and oil. Most of It Man Caused, It is Declared

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—Fires in the national forests of California, during the ten-year period ending 1920, burned over 1,300,000 acres and caused nearly $4,000,000 damage, according to S. B. Show and E. I. Kotok of the San Francisco headquarters of the Forest Service, in a circular just issued by the Department of Agriculture.

The report of these forest experts is based on a study of more than 10,000 fires, most of which were man-caused. Data compiled on such an exhaustive analysis of fires by causes, size, damage, cost, location, season and other relating factors, and the drawing of conclusions as to the best methods of preventing and fighting fires, will prove interesting and helpful to everyone connected with forest protection, not only in California but elsewhere, especially throughout the West. It contains valuable information as to the various theories and principles that have been tested out both in patrol, and actual suppression, leading to a selection of means and methods that have proven most effective.

The circular is replete with statistical data and graphic illustrations pertaining to every phase of the forest-fire problem. It may be had free on application to the United States Department of Agriculture, division of publications, Washington, D. C., requesting department circular No. 243—"Forest Fires in California, 1911-1920."

HORRORS OF UNPAVED CITY ROADS RELATED

AUTOMOBILES NOT EQUIPPED UNLESS SHOCK-CHECKING DEVICES ARE USED

Wtaching people ride over a bumpy road in a car unequipped with a spring recoil checking device is a good deal more fun than joining them in the endeavor. This fact is emphasized by H. R. Leonard of the Watson Stabilator Company here, who describes the terrors of motoring over such of the city's roads as still remain unpaved.

"Wow, you've hit a bad bump," he says. "If you're driving your arms are nearly torn loose from their sockets by the wild twist taken by the steering wheel. Cousin Ned in the back seat tries to go right through the top of the car, but his heavenward progress is fortunately stayed by the bow, which nevertheless inflicts a hearty thump to his head. Your wife is bounced out of her seat and tells you so in no uncertain terms. The children giggle hysterically; it's all a lark for them.

"You look around sheepishly only to be greeted with: 'John, for goodness sakes, keep your eye on the road. There! I knew it; you've hit another one. If I ever get the children home alive I'll never take them out again.'"

Leonard claims that if for no other reason than that they permit such motoring parties a peaceful ride, Watson Stabilators and kindred devices are a priceless boon to humanity.

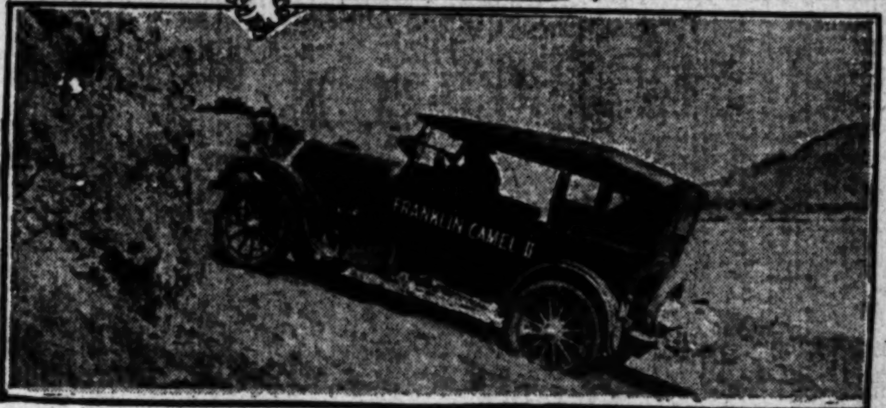
Guarantee on Gardner Four for One Year

After forty-one years of vehicle building Russell E. Gardner, president of the Gardner Motor Company, Inc., puts his stamp of approval on the new Gardner Four in the form of a one-year guarantee carrying his signature at the bottom. That ought to be worth a whole lot to the motor car buyer, says William G. Fisher, salesmanager of the McGill Motor Company, local Gardner distributors.

Gardner says: "It is with a good deal of pride and satisfaction that I am able to say now that to the Gardner organization has come the honor of finding the answer to eliminating the dreaded vibration point from the entire range of operating speeds of the improved Gardner four-cylinder engine.

"The five-bearing crankshaft did it. The Gardner is the only four-cylinder car obtainable at any price with this new and marvelous feature. The same principle has been applied to several high-priced cars but the Gardner is the first and only four with five main bearings on the crankshaft."

The Colorado River? Yes, Near Tristate, Arizona



The Camel II, Ralph Hamlin's new scout car, busted out on its first run last week, making a rapid and rough trip to the once thriving mining town of Tristate, Ariz., now abandoned to its own devices. Below we have a photo of the Camel II starting a climb up the hillside from the Colorado River at Tristate.

NEW FRANKLIN ON A SPIN

Once Wide-open Town of Tristate on the Colorado River is Visited; Also Needles

With but twenty-eight miles on the speedometer when it was turned over to the advertising department of Ralph Hamlin, Inc., Franklin Camel II, after 500 miles of warming up on pavement, was packed up and sent out on a three-day, 931-mile jaunt through some of the roughest country of the Southwest—what Ralph Hamlin would term a pleasant little workout for any of the new Franklins.

Leaving Los Angeles one Friday morning the new Camel, with three passengers and camping equipment, headed out over Cajon Pass to Barstow, thence by way of Garlic Springs to Cave Springs in the Avawatz Mountains. Here a grizzled old prospector whom the party had last met at Saratoga Springs in October of last year, at which time he was "a'goin somewhar," held forth with his burros, having traveled some sixteen miles in five months.

He recognized the camel as an old friend immediately and was glad to get a copy of that morning's Times, newspapers being rather scarce in that region and the news of the world of more than passing interest. After the usual conversation about roads, the weather, etc., he launched on a rather mild denunciation of the various magazines that have during the last six or eight months printed such wild stories of abandoned wealth and hidden mines in the Death Valley region. According to his story motorists are flocking Death Valley way in increasing numbers, a few to see the sights, but many more hoping to find lost mines, buried whisky, precious stones and the like. Only a few weeks ago three men went looking for a diamond mine and one became lost.

ON TREASURE SEARCH

"T'aint no sense to it," he declaimed, squinting in the flickering rays of the sun that filtered through the storm clouds. "Here they come, all a'lookin' for treasure of one sort or t'other. Feller comes in only few days ago. Says he's lookin' fer a wagon-load of A-1 whiskey that was buried in a sandstorm forty years ago. Wants to know does I know whar it is. Shucks, does he think it would still be thar ef I knew whar it was. 'Sides, war any teamster agoin' to leave a valybul load out like that?"

Leaving the prospector to muse over the gullibility of magazine editors in New York, who would print such far-fetched nonsense, the Camel proceeded by way of Denning Spring to Confidence Mill in Death Valley. Being a trifle too windy for the Camelopers to tramp on the floor of the valley, the party pushed on over Salisbury pass to Shoshone and spent the night at the latter place.

Saturday the new car continued on by way of Pahrump and the Manse through a pass in the Charleston range in Nevada to Wilson's ranch. Shortly before entering the pass eight wild horses were seen feeding close by the trail—a beautiful sight on the desert plain. One pinto was handsomely marked and most spirited looking.

The mountains at Wilson's ranch terminate in great cliffs from 2500 to 3500 feet high and the coloring is on a par with that of Zion Canyon. In fact, the Charleston range at this point might be considered as a second Zion for the cliffs are even more imposing, if not quite as high, and the coloring is not one whit inferior. It is hard to understand why such a scenic wonderland, only thirty miles from Las Vegas and the Arrowhead Trail, should remain unknown. Of course, it does not promise much as a resort, but for sheer effects it is the equal of America's best and will well repay the time spent for the sixty-mile round trip.

DRY LAKE SLIPPERY

Leaving Vegas, the Camel scooted over the road to Searchlight in a pouring rain, and about midway encountered the "dry lake," no longer dry, but a slippery mass of mud. Meeting a stripped Ford which had just crossed, the lake was given the O.K., though, without fenders, the Ford was plastered from stem to stearn and the driver looked like he had been posing for a clay modeler. Outside of being rather soft for a few hundred yards, the going was fine, so Searchlight was reached in short order and the party continued on down to the Chiquita mine, spending the night there.

During the night Charles Carr, one of the trio, woke up with a terrible chill and found the foot of his bed was soaking wet, so moved to another part of the room. The next morning it was discovered a few shakes were missing around the ridgepole of the building and snow—the first ever known that far down for seventeen years—had drifted through and melted on his bed, a very pleasing experience when one craves sound sleep. It would seem that the very elements had it in for Carr, for at Shoshone it rained in his face.

After breakfast the party took a new road, recently constructed by Clark county, Nevada, down to the "one night" town of Tristate, on the Colorado River. Not a sign of life any place, and the gasoline ferry, operating spasmodically for those wishing to cross the river to the famous Katharine mines in Arizona, was moored upstream in the lee of a protecting rock jetty.

Some time ago Tristate was advertised as the "only wide-open town in the West," or something on that order, but in the adjoining mining claims did not pan out very well, and travel across the river was light, so it has evidently joined the ranks of our "ghost cities." However, it occupies a pleasing site on the Colorado, and the road leading to it is one of the most interesting in this part of the country, traversing the Spirit Mountains. It is in excellent shape, and travelers returning via the Arrowhead trail who desire a little variety would do well to turn off and take the road to Tristate, thence down the Colorado to Needles.

Part of the Tristate Road and the new road along the river to Needles was once known as the old Tuck mine road. Some fifty years ago a man by the name of Tuck located a likely looking claim on Newberry Peak and employed Chinese labor to build a road up from Needles, or thereabouts. The new road is practically a regrading of the old one and is in excellent condition in Nevada, though rather neglected in California.

Shortly after we entered the war in 1917, a prospector, looking over claims near the site of Tristate, glanced out over the river and forthwith hurried into Searchlight with all possible speed. He had seen a German submarine, so he reported, and even described the conning tower. Of course, everyone was convinced he had had a little too much in the line of liquid refreshment, but it afterward developed that some one had conceived a brilliant idea in the line of salvage at Eldorado Canyon, some miles above Tristate, and had boosted one of the old boilers into the Colorado, figuring that the heavy spring floods would carry it down to Needles. At Tristate it had lodged on a sand bar, with nothing but the steam dome showing above water, hence the German submarine with the conning tower exposed.

At Needles the Camel took on another passenger and more baggage, then hiked out for home, covering the 320 miles in ten hours, rather snappy time with four passengers and baggage, a total load of 1150 pounds, over the National Old Trails Road. It is a harder pull from Needles to Los Angeles than from Los Angeles to Needles because at this end of the road one has the advantage of pavement, while from the Needles end the road elevates itself 2000 fet in thirty-one miles up a sandy wash. Of course, being new, the car was not pushed too hard at any time, making the time by a steady average, but at that it was pretty fast stepping for a touring car carrying such a heavy load. From Needles to Barstow the Camel managed to clip ten minutes from the fastest scheduled train time.

Too Much Oil as Bad as Not Enough of It

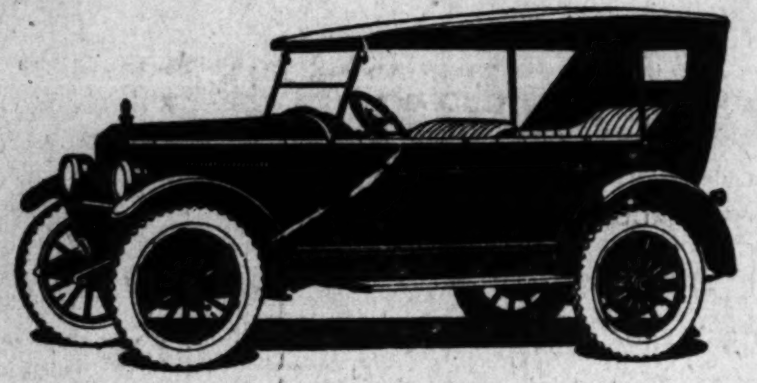
"Don't fuss over your car. Too much care is almost as bad for its good health as too little care."

D. R. McBryde of the McBryde Lubricating Service here, is responsible for this warning. He explains how the overzealous car owner can injure his car by too intensive efforts expended in taking care of it:

"Continually pouring oil into the generator bearings will result in the armature being soaked with oil and consequently short-circuited. It is a habit with some drivers to give their car a quart of oil whenever it occurs to them to do so. If they are inspired to such a course too frequently their en-

COMMON SHELLAC WILL SEAL UP A GAS LEAK

"A leaky seam in a gasoline tank can be temporarily repaired by painting the joint with common shellac," said C. C. Eichenhofer, proprietor of the Atlas Auto Works, 1338 South Hope street, top manufacturers and sheet metal workers. "If shellac is not available almost any kind of soap thoroughly worked into the seam will prove effective until such time as you can have the tank repaired. It is never advisable to attempt soddering a gasoline tank, for the work is so inexpensive, and the danger so great when attempted by an amateur, that it doesn't pay."



Hidden Values
They Keep Essex Young

From the first Essex wins the admiration of owners.

But the greatest Essex enthusiasts are those who have driven their cars 50,000 miles or more. They have discovered the hidden values.

Design and construction details not observable in the new car assert their importance as use increases. They keep the car young.

Essex values extend to the minute details. The finest bearings made are used throughout. They are to an automobile what jewels are to a watch. Parts that wear are inexpensively replaced.

In chassis and body, Essex throughout possesses qualities essential to long hard service. That means economical service, always.

Essex is the only American car with roller bearings in the valve mechanism. This construction overcomes wear and frictional loss at one of the most important points. Prevents noisiness and saves a big item of replacement expense. All other cars use plain bushings for this vital function. Just another of the hidden values that account for the everlasting goodness of Essex cars.

No Change in Construction of the Jordan

"There never will be a radical change in the Jordan car." This statement was made with great emphasis by Edward S. Jordan, maker of the Jordan automobile, in the course of a talk he gave to the Jordan dealers in Southern California on the occasion of their annual banquet tendered by the Lord Motor Car Company Monday night.

"Radical change in motor car design, whereby the model of this year is rendered almost unsalable by an entirely new design next year, is a thing of the past in so far as the Jordan car is concerned," said Mr. Jordan. "The secret of success in motor car merchandising today is found in the fact that the dealer must consider himself as much in the business of buying used cars as he is in the business of selling old ones. It is the resale value of the motor car which determines success in the making and marketing of automobiles today. To choose a motor car intelligently, the prospective buyer need only take a pencil and a piece of paper and write down the factory price of a few leading models in the price class he selects, then find out from the used-car man what the resale value of the last three previous models is today, and to choose the car which stands up best under this acid test.

"The engineering stage of the motor car industry has been passed. Even the engineers themselves are stumped for anything that will make a radical improvement in the performance of motor cars. During the next decade there is likely to be very small improvement in the design of any part of the motor car. Today we are in the merchandising stage of the industry, where the selling methods count more than ever before."

Lady Dealer Makes a Hit at Niagara

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NIAGARA FALLS (N. Y.) March 17.—Tourists have found a new object to vie with the frozen splendor of Niagara Falls this winter. She is unusual Miss Ethel Mullane, one of the few lady automobile dealers in the world.

Pretty, with peach-blown cheeks, golden blond hair, sparkling blue eyes which almost disappear in the folds of a typical Irish grin:

Miss Mullane, physically developed by outdoor life in the crisp breezes of twenty-three Niagara winters, demonstrates and sells the cars built by Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker and his organization at Detroit, Mich.

"Not all the couples in Niagara Falls are honeymooners," she chuckled with a pleasing touch of brogue, a rightful heritage of her parents, who were born on the Emerald Isle.

"Yes, I believe a saleslady gets an added attention from men prospects, especially if she demonstrates the car with her own driving. For when they see a car handled perfectly in the hands of a woman they are not skeptical. Still my sales have been evenly divided between women and men. Girls and women would much rather have a demonstration by a girl because it gives them added confidence, especially if they are to drive the car," said Miss Mullane.

Recently Miss Mullane met Capt. Rickenbacker. Immediately she took him for a ride, giving him a complete demonstration of the car. Then she halted, raised the hood and gave a thorough explanation of features of the motor he was a factor in designing.

"She certainly knows how to sell cars," was the terse compliment the famous motor car manufacturer paid the pride of Niagara Falls.

Hupp Company Operating at Full Capacity

Though the Hupp Motor Car Corporation completed a 30 per cent enlargement to its Detroit plant only seven weeks ago, it already finds itself forced to operate its entire facilities at capacity to meet its present demand, is the information just received from Detroit by P. H. Greer of the Greer-Robbins Company, distributors for California.

All previous Hupmobile sales records are being shattered. Hupp is finding itself in the unique position of just having considerably added to its output facilities and then almost immediately discovering that they are insufficent.

February shipments of Hupmobiles easily surpassed those of January, which came close to breaking all monthly records. The continuance of transportation difficulties throughout the month necessitated further numerous driveaways to the nearer centers of distribution in an effort to lighten the general traffic burden and to provide additional freight cars for shipment to the more distant cities.

"Hupmobile distributors and dealers last November placed orders for 1923 for nearly 10,000 more cars than the company produced in its record year, 1922," says Greer. "Now they are urging the factory to raise their quotas still higher."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

BY JAMES W. MARSH.

Question: I have lately bought a used Oakland, model 34 C, and I am having lots of trouble with cylinders 4 and 6 fouling the spark plugs and pumping oil. When I try the compression with the starting crank all of the cylinders have good, high compression and the valves were ground just before I got it. It has new oil-proof rings and seems to be in otherwise good condition. What is the trouble?

Answer: It looks as if your only trouble was too little clearance between the rocker arms and valve stems. A valve-in-the-head motor must have from three to five times as much clearing as an L-head motor. The Oakland, when new, is set at .008 of an inch, but as it gets older it is well to use about .010 of an inch space between the end of the valve stem and the rocker arm. Probably the seller of the car had the valves set closely so as to cut down the noise of the valves. Swab out the dirty cylinders through the spark-plug holes, clean the spark plugs and carefully adjust your clearance to .010 of an inch, using a thickness gauge.

Q.: Can you explain through the question and answers column why the hydrometer readings are higher when a storage battery is charged than when it is discharged?

D. C. M.

A.: Sulphuric acid is almost twice as heavy as water. A pint of water weighs almost exactly one pound, while a pint of sulphuric acid weighs almost two pounds. The gravity of water is 1, and the gravity of pure concentrated sulphuric acid is 1.84. The liquid in a storage battery is made up of two parts of pure distilled water and one part of sulphuric acid. This electrolyte has a specific gravity of 1.280, or a little more than a quarter heavier than water. As the battery discharges sulphur and oxygen leave the electrolyte and unite with the lead plate, forming lead sulphate. As the sulphur combines with the lead the electrolyte becomes lighter; thus the hydrometer gives a smaller reading when a battery is in a discharged state. On charge, the sulphur and oxygen are returned to the electrolyte from the lead plates and the hydrometer gives a high reading when the battery is charged.

Q.: I am driving a Paige light six and I find the heads of the pistons are oval. What is the reason for making them round instead of flat, as they are in other cars?

M. F. L.

A.: They are made oval because the high centers prevent the cylinder oil from spreading over them to some degree; this overcomes carbonizing considerably. It is claimed by some engineers that there is some gain in power, as a dome-shaped head has a larger area upon which the exploding gas has to act. To me this gain seems very small, but it is certain that this type of piston offers advantages from a lubrication point.

Q.: If a storage battery reads 1.300 or above, what is the proper thing to do? Is it well to burn the lights while running to prevent the battery from overcharging?

A. N. H.

A.: If the electrolyte ins a storage battery reads above 1.300 there is too much acid in the electrolyte and it should be reduced. With the hydrometer syringe draw out all of the liquid possible and fill with pure distilled water to the proper level. This may have to be repeated at the end of a couple of day's running if the reading is still above 1.280, which is the best electrolytic strength. The cause of the reading going to 1.300 is that there is too much sulphuric acid present. If the electrolyte is properly adjusted when the battery is built and fully charged, no amount of charging can bring the electrolyte reading above 1.300. Strong electrolyte destroys the separators, damages the plates, causes corrosion and hardening of the jars, which results in cracks and leaks. Lights should not be burned in the daytime when a battery is fully charged, but the battery should be partially discharged while standing idle by starting the car several times and by burning the lights for two or three hours. Burning the lights while running results in a reduced rate of charge, of course, but the charging current still continues to pass through the battery, overcharging and damaging the plates. Think of one eating a full meal and then, without exercise continuing to drink a small stream of milk the rest of the day. Any storage-battery man will tell you that he finishes charging a battery at about three or four amps, and this rate, if too long continued, causes free gassing. Free gassing indicates a destructive chemical action going on inside the battery after it is fully charged. On the road, while burning lights, this destructive action is going on when a battery is fully charged. Discharge the battery and recharge. Work actually livens up a battery but overcharging destroys it.

NORTHERNER COMES SOUTH FOR MATERIAL

"It's good to see the way San Francisco is recognizing Los Angeles, commercially and industrially," said O. W. Herber of the Golden State Brass Manufacturing Company of San Francisco, on a recent visit to Los Angeles. "Not so many years ago, owing to sectional jealousy, it was hard to get San Francisco and Los Angeles business men together. But through a more unselfish attitude on the part of commercial leaders in both cities this feeling is being wiped out.

"When we looked around in the north for a suitable windshield line to make for our high-grade trade, we found that we had to turn to Los Angeles—if we wanted the quality we needed. The outstanding tonneau and other shields we found were the Hartfords made here by the Hartford Windshield Company. Nowhere in the United States could we secure a line that could compare in all-around quality with this Los Angeles factory's product, and we secured the rights to San Francisco and Fresno territory.

"Our judgment in selecting the Hartford line has been well vindicated. The quality of the goods pleases our patrons and the sale of Hartfords in San Francisco is a good second to Los Angeles."

AUTOMOBILES IN HOT RACE WITH PHONES

Recent published statistics to the effect that there are almost as many automobiles in the United States as there are telephones, affords a striking commentary on the place which the automobile has come to assume in American family life, H. W. Curtis, sales manager of Clippinger-Kincaid, Inc., local Chevrolet dealers, believes.

"The total number of telephones is 13,000,000," he says, "and the total number of automobiles is reckoned at 10,448,000. A comparison of the two figures shows that there are within 3,000,000 as many automobiles in the nation as there are telephones—a truly astonishing fact, when you stop to think of it. For one thing, it demonstrates pretty conclusively that the automobile has definitely taken its place in public esteem as an indispensable adjunct of comfortable living."

CHEAP OIL IS CHEAP

"Investigation has shown that the average automobile owner gives scarcely any consideration to the quality of oil he uses. A good percentage even go so far as to consider the price of the oil, and endeavor to obtain the cheapest oil, imagining that one oil is as good as another," said A. A. Derry, manager of the L. A. Motor Supply House, Inc., 1065 South Main street, distributors of Veedol.

Livery Men Wander to Other Tasks

Fifteen or twenty years ago, the young man who wanted to give his sweetheart a particularly nice treat, hired a horse and buggy and drove ten miles or so in a Sunday afternoon.

Now, that man's son hires an automobile and travels three times as far in an hour. The chief difference, however, is that the horse could steer himself and thus leave the young man's arms free for other duties, while the automobile has caused a shifting of these duties to the fairer sex.

Among the legion of livery men who have wandered to other fields is Mr. F. E. Dunn, who spent most of his life with horses up to the time when the automobile became the universal means of individual transportation. Seeing the possibilities of the "gas-eaters" as compared to the "hay-burners," Mr. Dunn was quick to take advantage of the greater scope offered by the automobile.

He now owns over fifty machines of various makes and two establishments; one in Hollywood and one in Los Angeles. With the increasing popularity of closed cars, he has standardized on Hudson and Essex coaches.

"I find the Hudson and Essex cars to be the most economical to run of any of the popular makes," said Mr. Dunn. "A strict record of all expenses is kept by nearly all rental firms, and we find that it pays to get cars such as these which will stand up under the unusual abuses of careless and incompetent drivers.

"Not all people who rent cars are either careless or incompetent, far from it, but the occasional driver who is new at the game will do more damage than fifty who have had more experience. It is therefore best to be prepared for any emergency, and for that reason I have decided to buy only these two makes."

YELLOW CAB COMPANY INCREASES FACILITIES

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, March 17.—Public pressure has been so great for increasing the transportation requirements in this city that plans have just been disclosed for the ultimate operation of a large fleet of double-decked busses on the streets of Chicago, as rapidly as they can be produced by the Yellow Coach Manufacturing Company, whose new 13-acre factory is being rapidly completed on premises adjacent to the Yellow Cab Manufacturing Company plant on West Dickens avenue of this city, thus explaining the recent leasing of the R. & V. motor plant at Moline, Ill., by the Yellow Cab Manufacturing Company, which owns the Yellow Coach Manufacturing Company, as a subsidiary, as these new busses will be equipped with Knight-type sleeve-valve motors.

Big Trainload of Peerlesses a Bit Overdue

Owing to a slight delay in getting ready the big shipment of Peerless eights in the factory at Cleveland, the special train that is scheduled to come through to Los Angeles in eight days, did not leave until last Tuesday, according to advices received by Stanley W. Smith, president of Stanley W. Smith, Inc., Peerless distributor for Southern California. Each freight car has two banners upon it, announcing that the big shipment is en route to California.

"It will be a great source of satisfaction when that train arrives, for we have been behind on deliveries on several models of the new Peerless for some time," declared Smith. "So popular is the new car that our volume of sales is showing a very healthy increase each succeeding month. Our sales for February were greater by far than they have ever been for any previous corresponding month.

"Under Richard H. Collins' able direction, everything has been done at the big plant in Cleveland to increase production, and it is now being operated at capacity and on overtime. However, in order to satisfy demands of distributors and dealers, there is not the slightest let-up in the high degree of efficiency that marks the production of the Peerless eight in every detail."

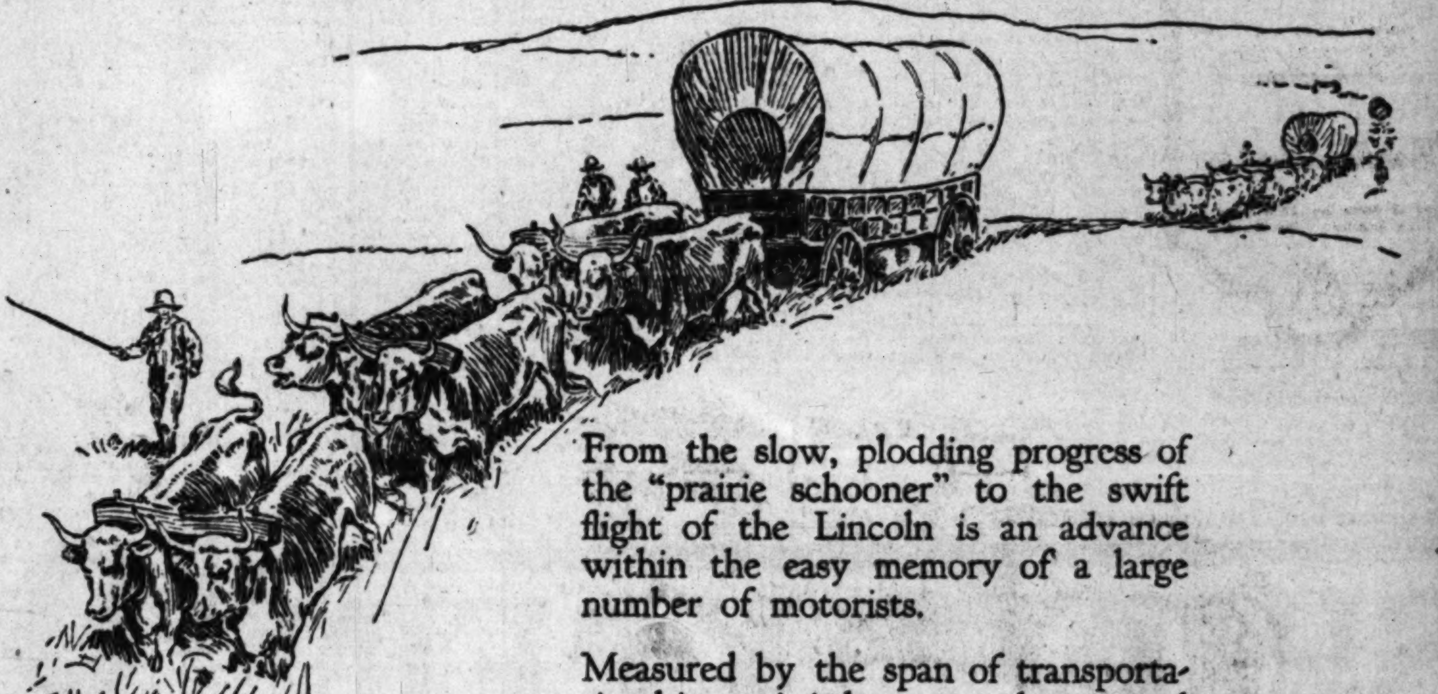
LINCOLN
MOTOR CARS



From the slow, plodding progress of the "prairie schooner" to the swift flight of the Lincoln is an advance within the easy memory of a large number of motorists.

Measured by the span of transportation history it is but a step, but gauged by the requirements of luxury and convenience it represents the greatest stride ever made.

Today, cross-country travel in the Lincoln is transforming all roads into avenues of comfort, shrinking tiresome miles to easy stretches of keen enjoyment and reducing arduous grades to pleasurable changes in scenic beauty.

SOME PICKUP IN TIRE SALES

But Truck Market Shows Its Saturation

Talk of Raising Rubber in California

Goodyear Factory Manager Investigates

AKRON (O.) March 17.—There has been some pick-up in motor-truck tire sales during the past few months, and the increasing demand for building materials and other materials will make for a wider sale during the next few months, but the market is not yet up to what it would reasonably be believed it should be from the number of trucks sold during the boom period.

Truck sales last year were given at only 243,000, as compared with 154,000 the previous year and 322,000 during 1920, while the sale of automobiles broke all previous records during the year just closed. This is looked upon by tire men as an indication that the truck market for the time being is saturated while the passenger-car market is far from this point.

The rubber company ship by truck, and transportation bureaus also sense this lack of full employment for trucks throughout the United States, and those familiar with the ordinary operation of these bureaus can realize that situation is far from satisfactory.

TO TRY ARIZONA

Prospects for raising of crude rubber in Arizona, with eventual possibilities of raising the same products in California, are foreseen here in the trip made by Factory Manager P. W. Litchfield and a staff of investigators to the Salt River Valley, where the Goodyear cotton plantations are located and additional ground for other products is still available.

The plan to raise crude rubber in the Salt River Valley and possibly in other Southwestern States, including California, was suggested at the recent conference called in Washington by President Harvey S. Firestone of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, to fight the effects of the British Stevenson law and to find new sources of crude rubber.

Goodyear in making use of the Southwest for rubber production, is following the same plan followed six years ago when the supply of long staple cotton was menaced. At that time Goodyear established cotton plantations which are to a large extent supplying the necessary cotton for Goodyear and makes the company independent of the other supplies to a large extent, although not wholly by any means.

LOOKING AHEAD

Goodyear's hopes are not those of Firestone, to make the American industry independent of foreign rubber supplies, but rather to prepare for the shortage of rubber which is now foreseen within the next five years.

During the week Frank A. Seiberling, formerly head of Goodyear, issued a statement in which he pointed out as has been done previously from Akron, the impossibility of developing crude rubber plantations in the Philippine Islands because of the labor laws prohibiting the importation of "coolie" labor for plantation work.

While it has been suggested here by those advocating the Philippine plan that the labor laws be suspended for a short period, these men have been told that any effort to change these laws in the islands will probably meet with stubborn resistance from Western States, especially California, because the breaking of the immigration principle on the islands would easily be construed as a precedent for letting down the immigration bars in the United States as far as the Chinese are concerned, and that California especially is far from wanting any precedents set which might further menace her position as far as the immigration of oriental peoples is concerned.

With the exception of a continuation of production increases which have been noted heretofore and following closely the lines predicted, the larger rubber companies gave way to the smaller companies as far as news is concerned in the rubber center during the past week.

The American Rubber and Tire Company has reorganized and will follow a more aggressive policy during the future, as far as can be learned from unofficial sources.

Floyd C. Snyder, son of the president, has been made a vice-president of the company, and will take an active part in the management. Thomas J. Thompson has been made factory manager and R. R. Stull has been made sales manager. Johnson was formerly with the Howe Rubber Corporation at Brunswick, N. J., which has just completed reorganization.

The company is operating at peak of 1000 tires a day, and is "hopelessly behind" on orders on bathing shoes, which have become a material factor in its business.

The Rubber Products Company has announced that its sundry business has picked up to such an extent that additional financing which was anticipated several months ago will not have to be done. The company has discontinued the manufacture of rubber tires until the market conditions become more staple.

Must Take No Risks

A group of youngsters were off for the "old swimming hole." Stopping on their way, they called for one of their pals, whose mother shortly appeared at the door. "We're goin' swimming, Mrs. Schmidt. Can Henry come?"

"No, indeed," she asserted. "My Heine can't go swimmin' 'till he knows how!"—[American Medical Association Journal.

More Miles Per Car in WINTER by Ray McNamara

Who Has Driven Farther Than Any Man in the World.

[Copyright, 1923, by the Christy Walsh Syndicate.]

Proper Safety Equipment Relieves Nervous Tension of Driver

How much attention and thought are you giving to the several little safety accessories that made their appearance on the market in the past few years, and do you know the real value and driving comfort that some of these afford, particularly during the winter months when early darkness overtakes the evening traffic rush from the downtown section to home?

Driving in the traffic jam, which is becoming greater every year as the automobiles multiply, is not so bad when the streets are dry, but with rain and fogs in some climates and snow and sleet in the north, the operators' nerves are in tension and driving is anything but comfortable if one has a keen sense of danger and a regard for the safety of others, particularly the pedestrian who is hard to see when the windshield is wet or fogged. With the proper safety equipment driving under these conditions becomes less hazardous and relieves the nervous tension so that the operator has a clear mind as well as clear vision front and rear and can act unerringly in emergencies.

MAKE FOR SAFETY

When air brakes were first tested out on trains of passenger and freight cars, it did not take the authorities long to recognize their value in safety to the public and make their use compulsory. So it will be with the windshield wiper, windshield visor, rear stop signal and rear mirror on the automobile. The State of New Jersey already has a law making the use of rear view mirror compulsory. The tourist will find this out at the ferry docks in New York, where street vendors sell rear view mirrors to tourists waiting for transportation to the Jersey shore. The automobile manufacturers are beginning to recognize the value of these safety devices and a great many are making the rear view mirror, windshield visor and wiper regular equipment, and I do not believe it will be long before the rear stop signal becomes a part of this.

Rear end collisions are about as numerous as head on collisions and can be reduced to a minimum by the use of rear stop signal and rear view mirror.

The danger of running down pedestrians, collisions at intersecting streets or getting into the path of fast moving electric or steam cars after dark during inclement weather can be reduced to a minimum by the use of windshield visor and wiper. These when attached and used properly afford clear vision ahead at all angles.

If you once use any of the above equipment, you will never be without it again and you will wonder how you got along as well as you did. Don't wait for the laws to make their use compulsory; get fully equipped for safety and you will be contributing much to the safety-first campaign.

EVERYTHING LOOKS BRIGHT

GREENVILLE, (S. C.) March 16.—The outlook of the coming meeting of the United States Good Roads Association, Bankhead National Highway Association and United States Good Roads Show, that meet in Greenville, S. C., during the week of April 16-21, promises to be the greatest gathering of enthusiastic crowds that have ever assembled in America, judging by the correspondence that is pouring into the headquarters of these organizations, which are in charge of Director-General J. A. Rountree. Every mail brings inquiries about hotel rates, hotel accommodation and rooms, railroad rates and exhibit space at the show. Already the assurances have been received of a large delegation from Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, Florida, Texas, Tennessee, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina, as well as the State of South Carolina, which will furnish large crowds of enthusiastic good roads boosters who are anxious to show their wonderful country to the visitors from the other States, and to receive inspiration in regard to road building.

Every mail brings the appointment of delegates by governors, county highway commissioners, chambers of commerce and automobile clubs. Each of these delegates are receiving a personal letter from Director-General Rountree, giving them full information about Greenville, the convention and the show, and urging them to attend. The United States Good Roads show will be an education within itself, as there will be numbers of exhibits of machines, and machines in demonstration. The latest machinery models of trucks and automobiles will be on exhibition.

The Greenville Chamber of Commerce is appointing the various committees, and are perfecting plans to give the members, delegates and visitors a royal time when the convention meets. Many unique entertainments and automobile drives are being planned.

Director-General Rountree, who has been in Greenville for the past four weeks, is perfecting plans, sending out literature, writing letters and arranging the details of the convention and is very much gratified with the progress that has been made and the success that has been achieved.

Casey and Kerrigan went to a fortune teller. When the fortune teller was out of the room they found a bottle of whisky, which they drank. The fortune teller returned, discovered the empty bottle and asked Casey, "Did you drink it?"

Casey said "No."

"Come on," says Casey, "she's no fortune teller."—[Good Words.

JUST AN EVERY-DAY FAD

"It is not unusual for a motorist to drive his car 20,000 or 30,000 miles a year," says N. W. Tuttle, assistant general manager of the Howard Automobile Company, local distributors of Buick cars.

"Lots of traveling salesmen do it, so do many doctors—and others. Many people practically live in their cars during the summer months.

"Think of the touring that is done! Look at the reports from the great national parks, which record tourists in motor cars from every State in the Union and not a few from foreign lands.

"Think of the thousands who motor to resorts where no records are kept. Think of the millions who live in the country and motor to their business in the city every day and back again at night.

"If we were to publish a book containing the names of all those who have driven their Buicks 250,000 miles it would make a bulky volume.

"Buick's popularity for touring purposes is graphically indicated by the records at Yellowstone and Yosemite National Parks. Ever since these beauty spots were opened to automobiles, more Buicks have visited these parks than any other car, with the exception of one small model."

January first the Rickenbacker Directors paid a 5 per cent cash dividend from the earnings of the past year.

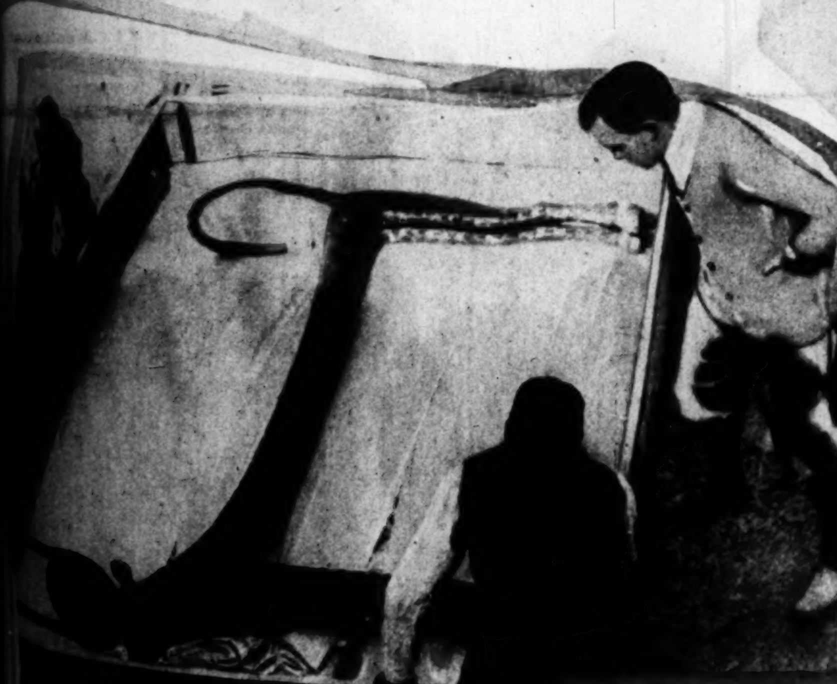
Tray of precious fragments and sweepings from the floor of Tutenkhamun's tomb at Luxor. Among the scatterings of miscellany lie many thousand dollars' worth of gold work and precious stones. Only a small part of the $40,000,000 treasure has been taken from the tomb.



Section of one of the couches upon which Tutenkhamun reclined. It represents Hathor, the Egyptian cow goddess. Between the horns of the image is a disc, which is meant to represent the sun. This couch was found directly in front of the entrance to the first chamber of the tomb, and was the first object seen by the excavators, headed by Howard Carter, an American.

CHARADES

By

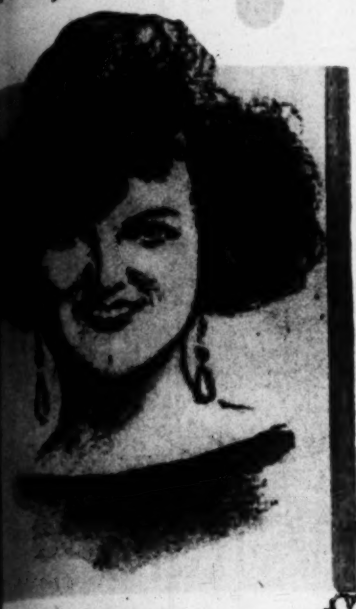
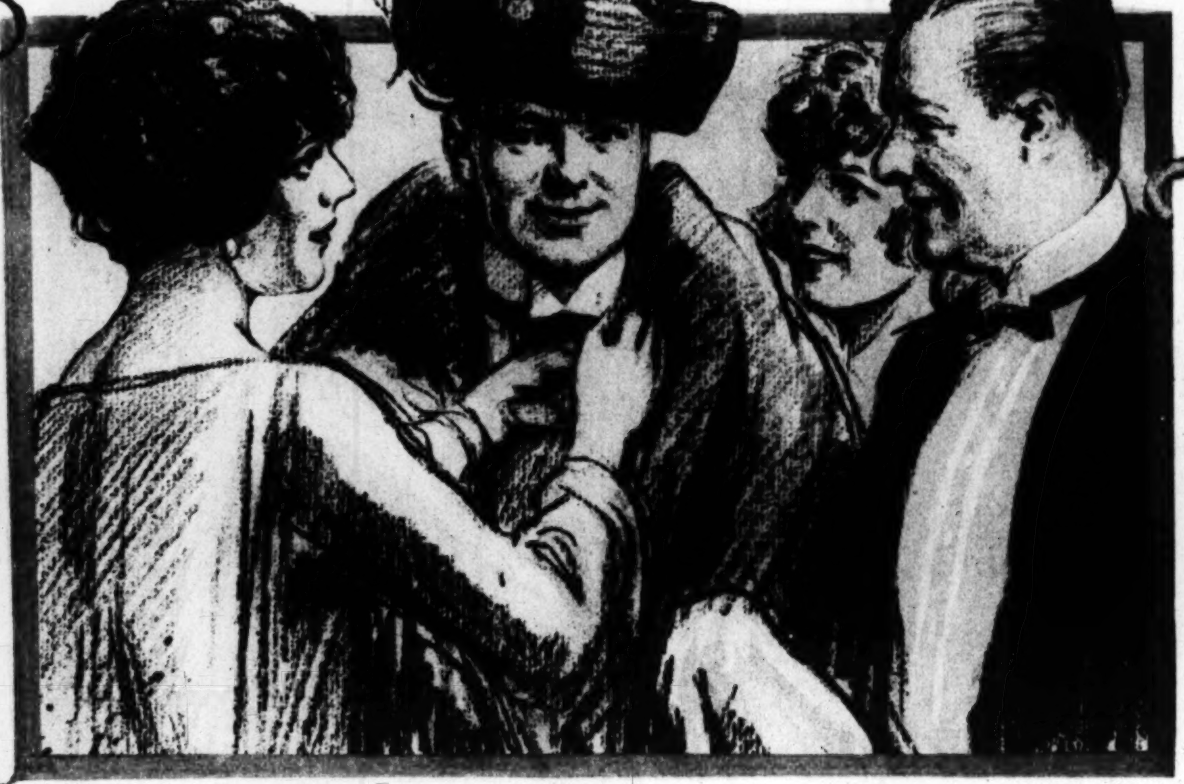
pyright 1923 by
Chicago Tribune

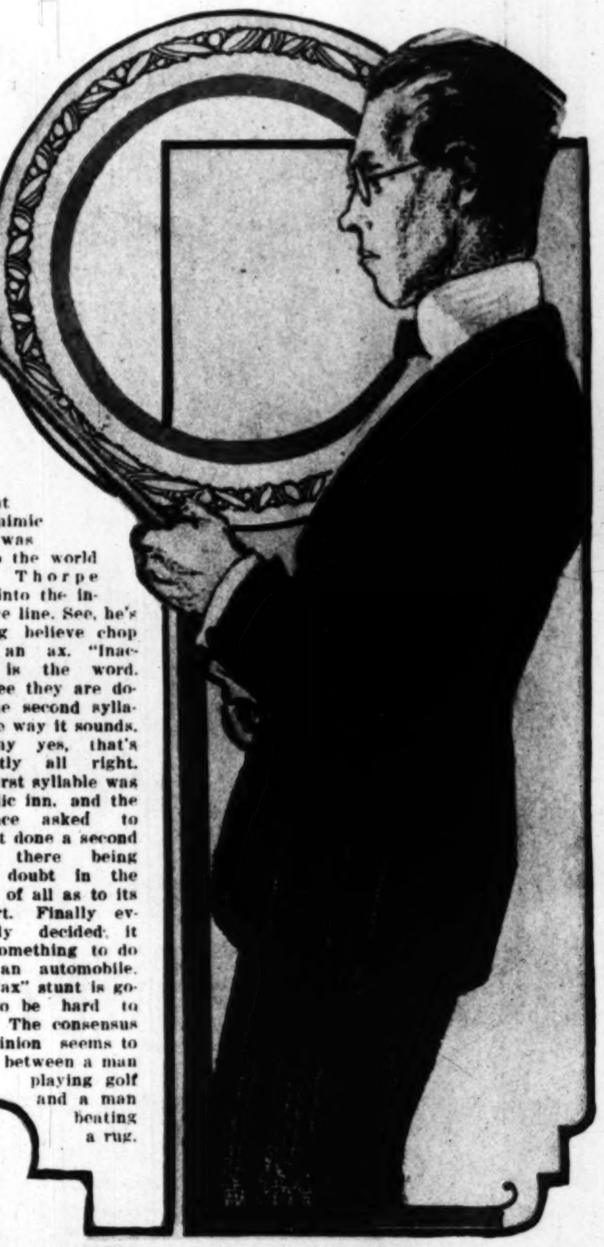


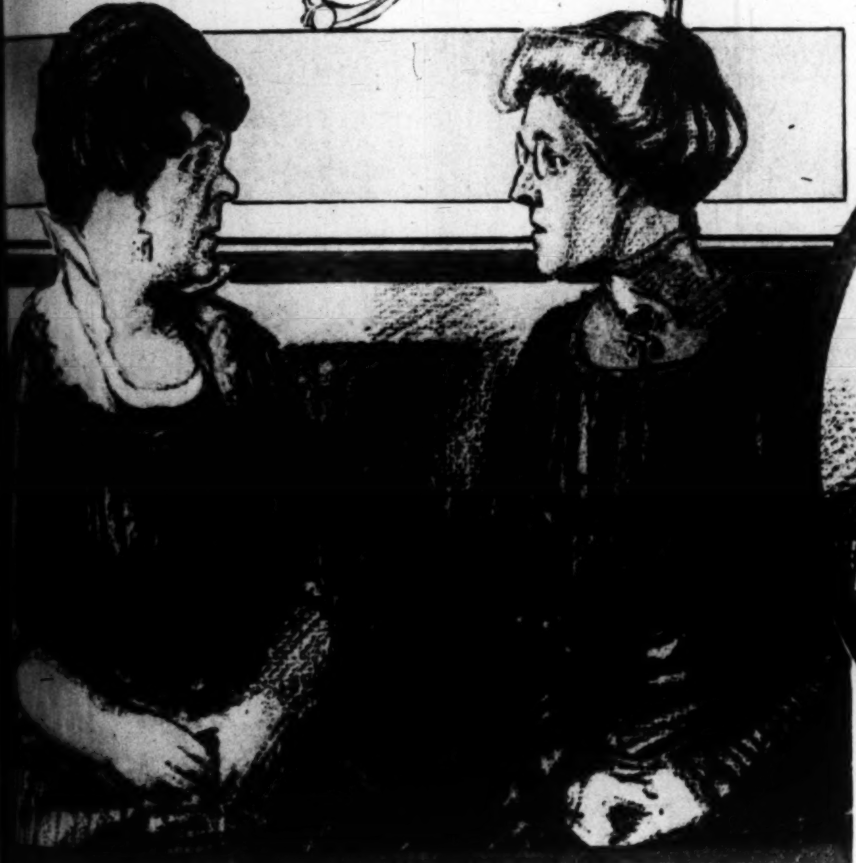
just wait. We've got a word up you'll never guess!"



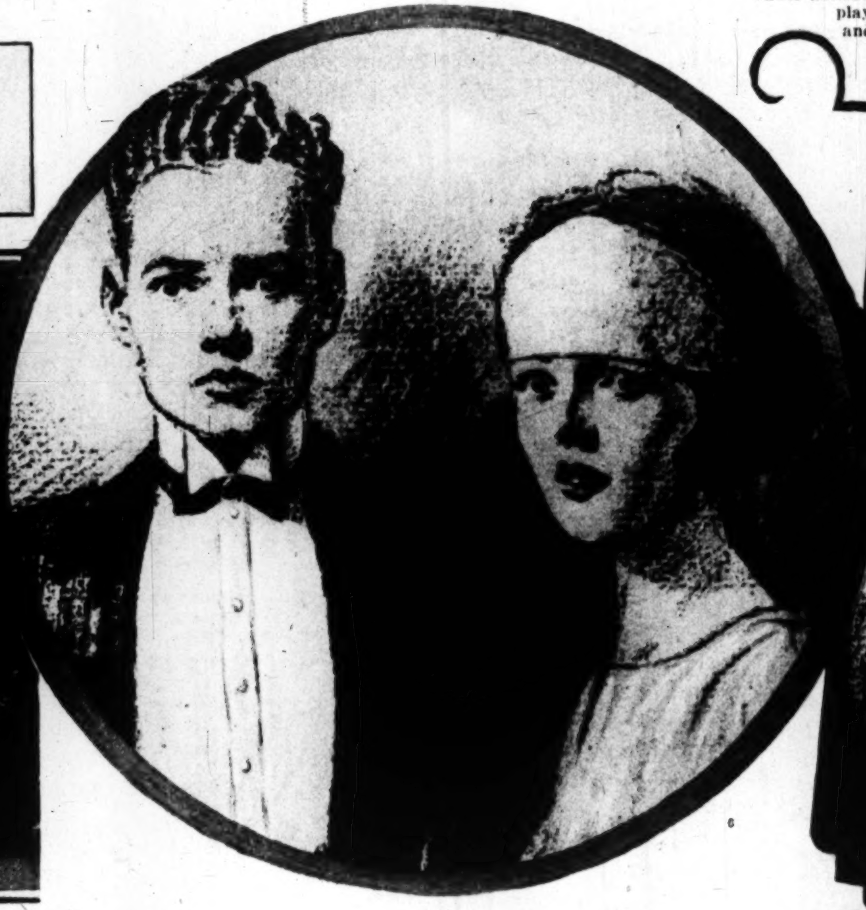
The dressing up process, once the guests at a charade party get used to the idea of being mussed up, is great fun. Shrieks of merriment issue from the dressing-room and if the effect achieved is something of an anti-climax for the audience, well, at least somebody had a good time.

A great pantomimic artist was lost to the world when Thorpe went into the insurance line. See, he's making believe chop with an ax. "Inaction" is the word. You see they are doing the second syllable the way it sounds. Oh, my yes, that's perfectly all right. The first syllable was a public inn, and the audience asked to have it done a second time, there being some doubt in the minds of all as to its purport. Finally everybody decided it had something to do with an automobile. This "ax" stunt is going to be hard to guess. The consensus of opinion seems to waver between a man playing golf and a man beating a rug.

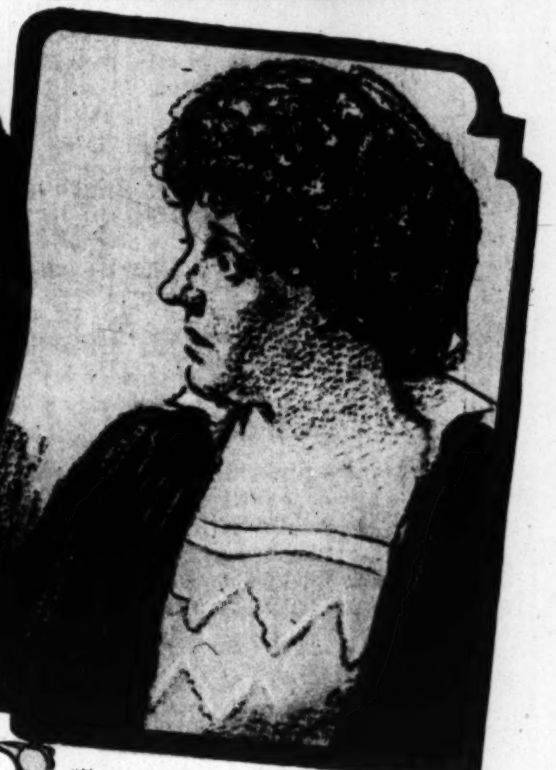




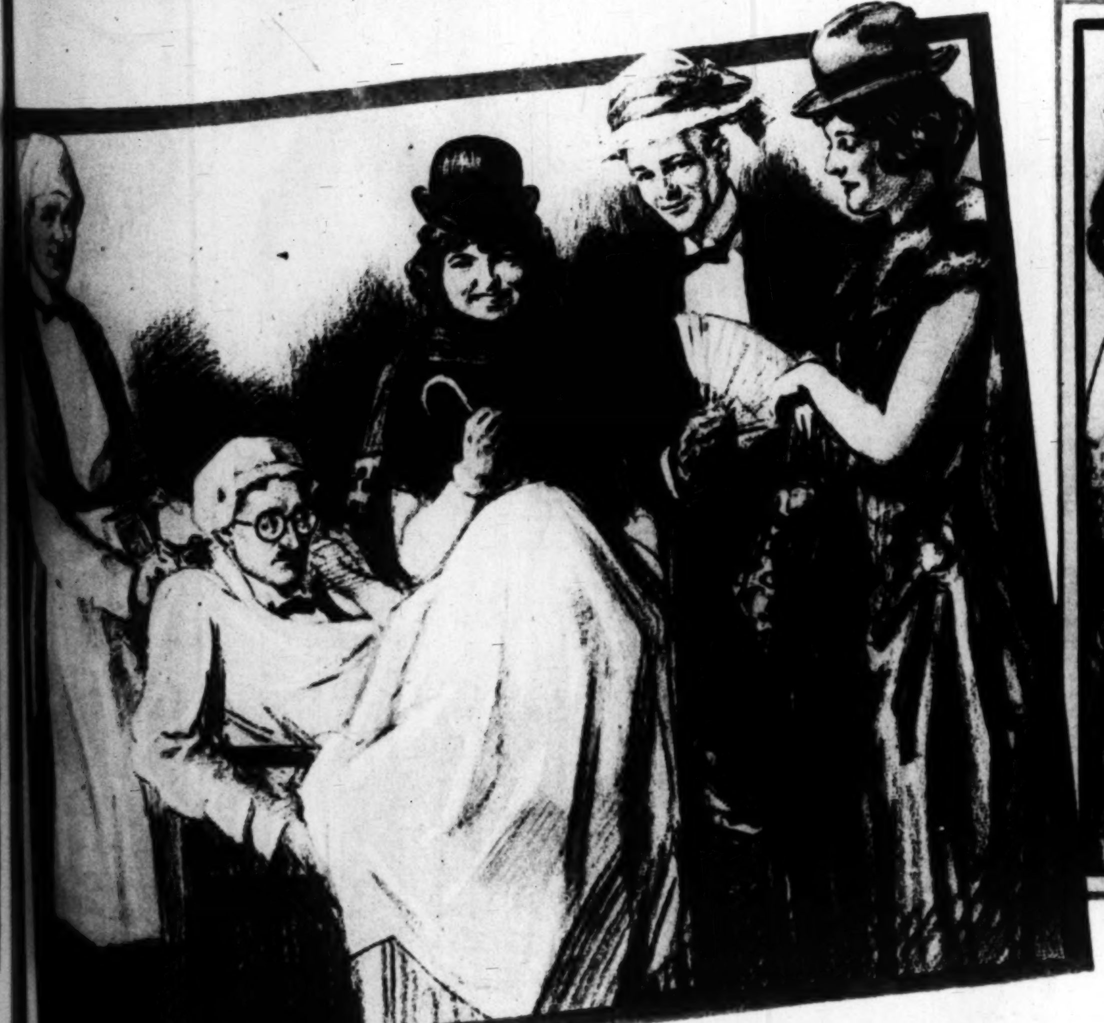
The actors have been gone so long from the scene of action that the audience has lost track of things. Instead of deciding once and for all whether Joe and Rosa were digging a garden or rowing a boat in the last tableau (because then, you see, that pins us down to either "hoEIGaant" or "heROic,") Mrs. Dr. Mead is saying to Miss Mable Irene Deck: "My dear, there has NEVER been so much as a HEADSTONE—not even a HEADSTONE, my dear—set up to mark poor Cousin Gracye's grave. Now WHAT do you think of THAT?"



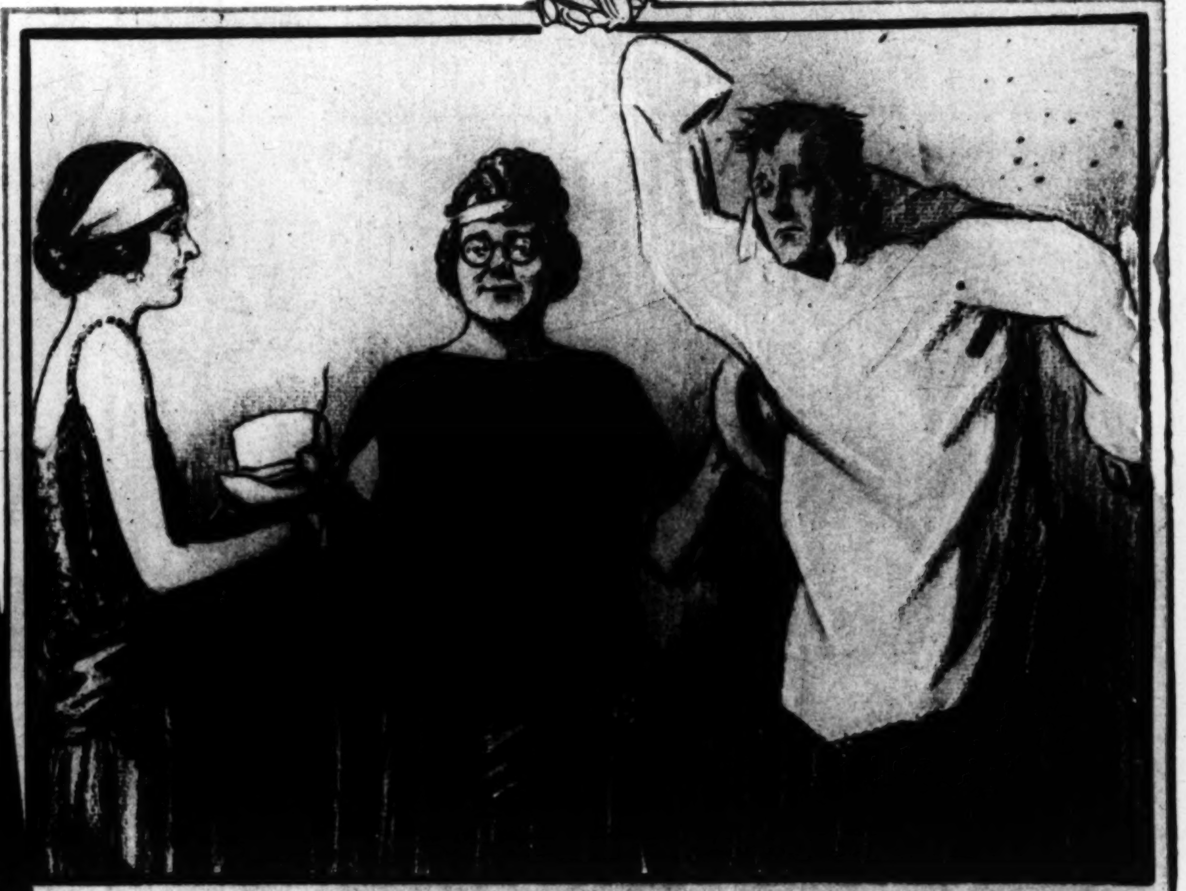
"How can you expect us to guess it when there ISN'T any such word?" Little quarrels between factions will happen now and then during the evening.



"Now, Agnes, you MUST not tear Aunt Sara's negligee. I don't think she would like your putting it on Mr. Sampson!" Even the family wardrobe comes under the head of costumes at a charade party.



No one on the other side will ever guess this! It is the first syllable of "neurotic." the "new" baby—that's the idea being put over. It took twenty-five minutes to work this up, but you'll have to admit it's a good job.



For a whole week the hostess who is giving the charade party has been digging around in trunks and ragbags for dress-up costumes. Old things, you know, that no one will have to worry over in case a little damage is done, thus leaving each guest free to worry over his or her personal wardrobe—particularly the lady in the new evening gown and the man who wondered as he dressed for the evening if the broken suspender would be a safe risk. (The lady in the new evening gown and the man with the questionable suspender have encountered the worst. Urged on by a determined hostess, who is entering right into the spirit of the thing, they are going to stage a bull fight. No one will ever guess that it's the first syllable of "bulldoze" —now, will they!)

A slow daily poisoning that wrecks even the strongest constitution—

The first symptoms may not seem alarming. Headache—a touch of indigestion—an "off-day" every week or so—thousands of people don't even suspect that anything serious is developing.

Then comes the day when growing ill-health and irritability lead them to their doctor's office. The examination—and the verdict: chronic disease has already fastened upon them.

And when they ask the reason—"Constipation," says the doctor. "Day by day it has been distilling poisons into your blood. Your body is never free from them. This is the result."

The real reason why thousands suffer

Constipation is becoming more common every year. Our whole way of living is unnatural today.

Our work demands less and less physical exertion. And instead of the coarse, raw foods of the forest for which our bodies were built, modern civilization demands a more delicate, concentrated diet, which leaves the muscles of our intestines with no real work to do.

Day by day these muscles get softer and flabbier. There is nothing to stimulate them to a complete thorough removal of the waste which the body produces constantly every day. Consequently, even though they may act with fair regularity, they are often leaving much of the waste behind, to decay and form phenol—one of the deadliest poisons known.

Useless to try to blast a way through

Drugs and cathartics are worse than useless, for their artificial irritation weakens the intestines still more—till at last the muscles refuse to respond at all.

What this does to the muscles of your arm, Fleischmann's Yeast does to the muscles of your intestines—gives them normal, healthy exercise

The only way to cure constipation permanently is by exercising the intestinal muscles as Nature intended.

That is why physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today—not as a medicine but as a fresh corrective food which gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the colon, softening them and increasing the bulk of the waste. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils.

Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast—yeast in its natural fresh form. Recent experiments have shown that yeast corrects constipation only when its cells are alive and active—and that it loses its power when these cells are "killed" and dried.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate violent action. It is a nourishing food—not an indigestible medicine—and like any other food, it must be eaten regularly to secure results.

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

She is No Longer Fat

She found a way to reduce her fat. It was a way far more pleasant than dieting or exercising would have been. This new way allowed her to eat foods without danger of becoming fat again.

She found Marmola Prescription Tablets. They aid the digestive system to obtain the full nutriment of food. They help Nature to turn food into muscle, bone and sinew instead of fat.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are made from the famous Marmola prescription. Thousands have found that these handy tablets give complete relief from obesity. And when the accumulation of fat is checked, reduction to normal, healthy weight soon follows.

All good drug stores the world over sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar a box. Ask your druggist for them, or order direct and they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid.

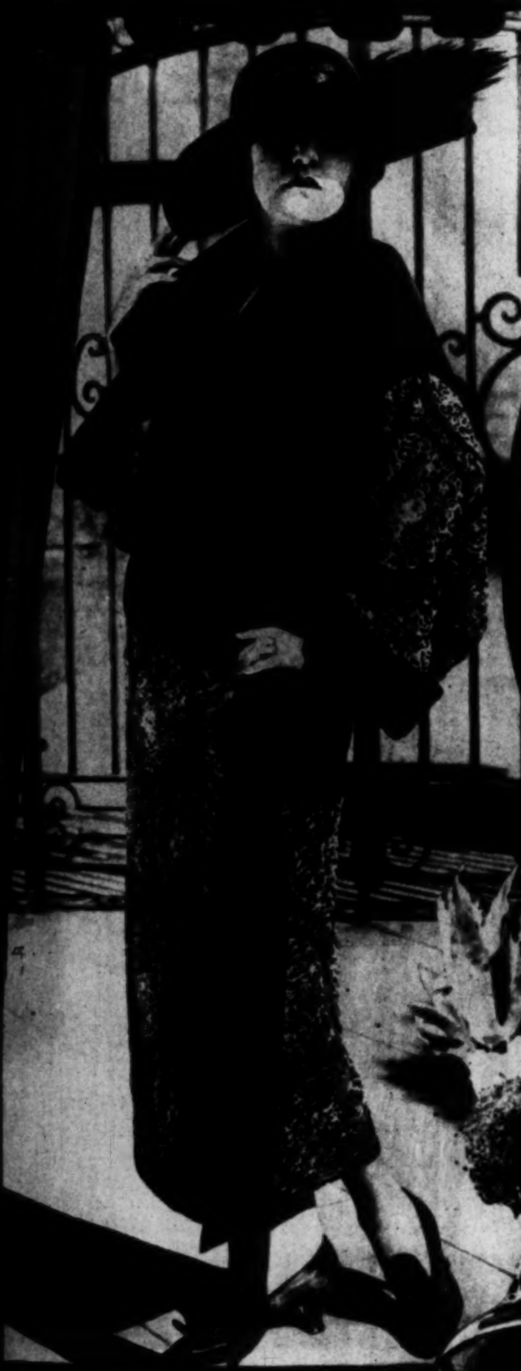
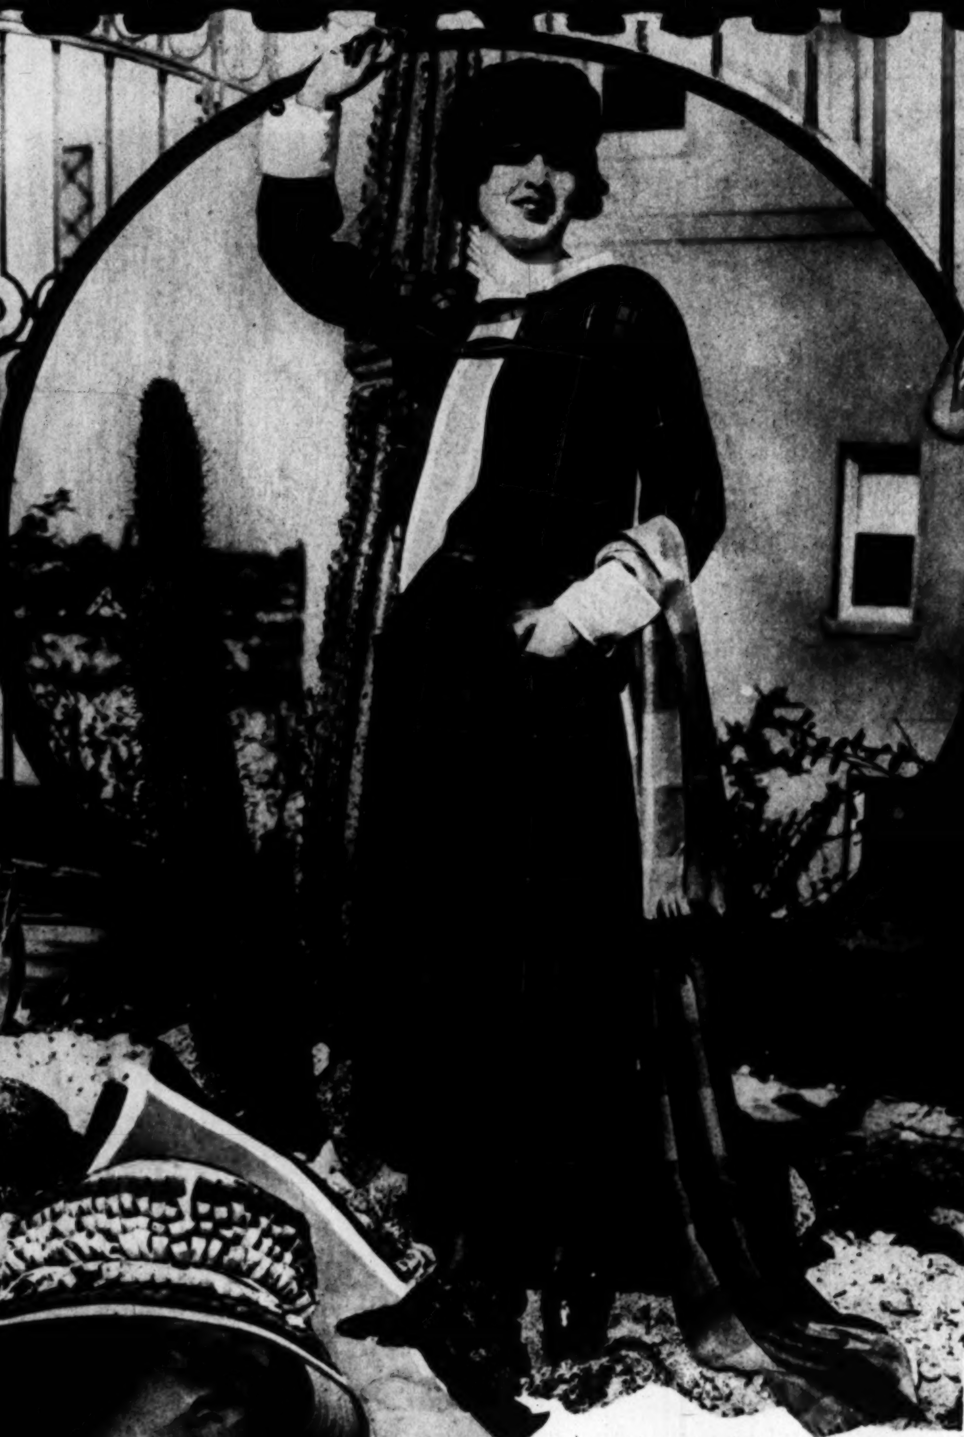
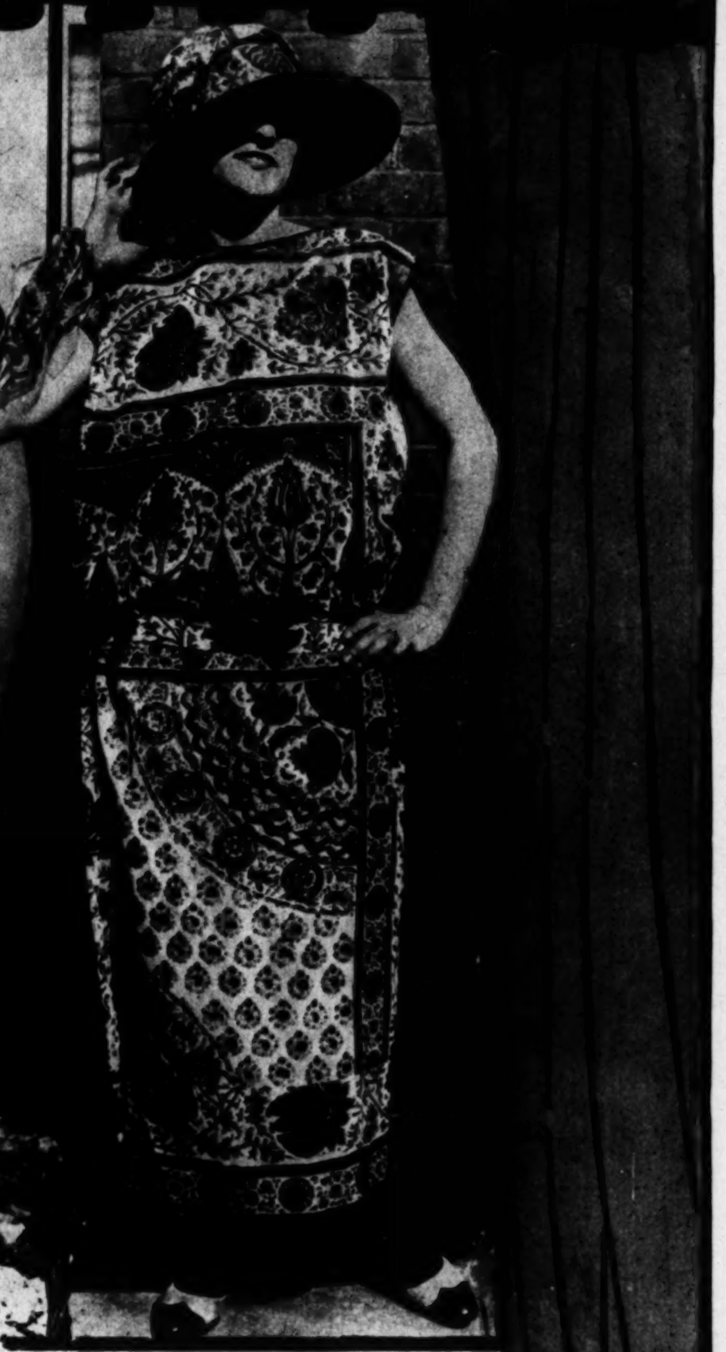
Peggy Hamilton draws back the curtain from the Winter Fashions and gives you a peep at the coming SUMMER STYLES from our most exclusive shops



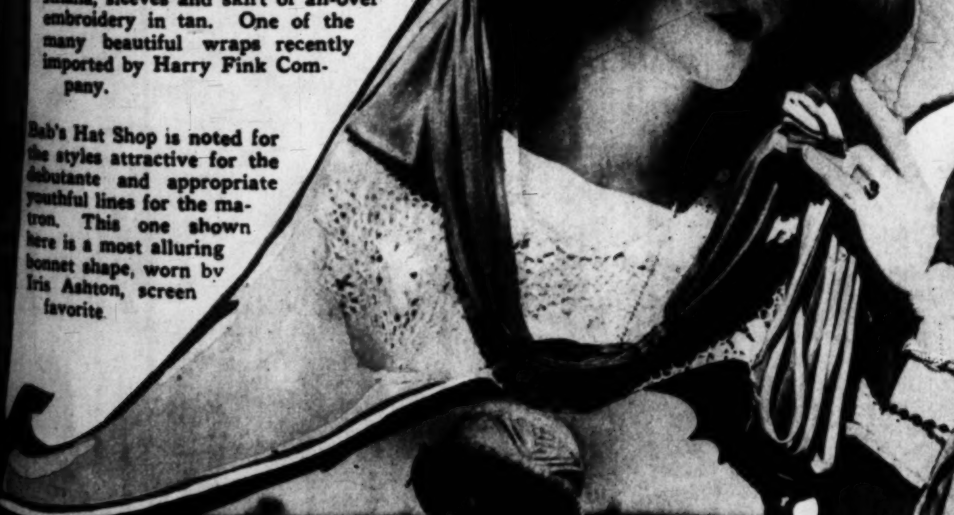
An extremely exclusive coat of navy Rhana, sleeves and skirt of all-over embroidery in tan. One of the many beautiful wraps recently imported by Harry Fink Company.



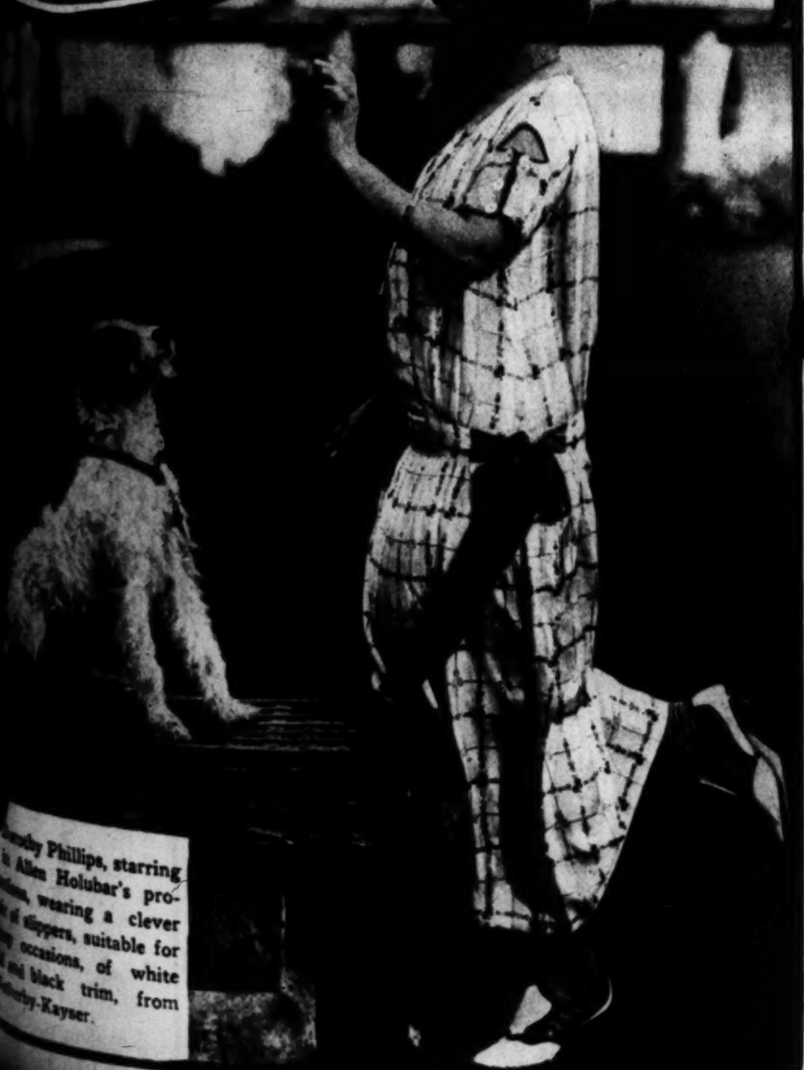
A very attractive sports dress of plaid Rodier flannel from I. Magnin & Co. of the Ambassador and Maryland Hotels.



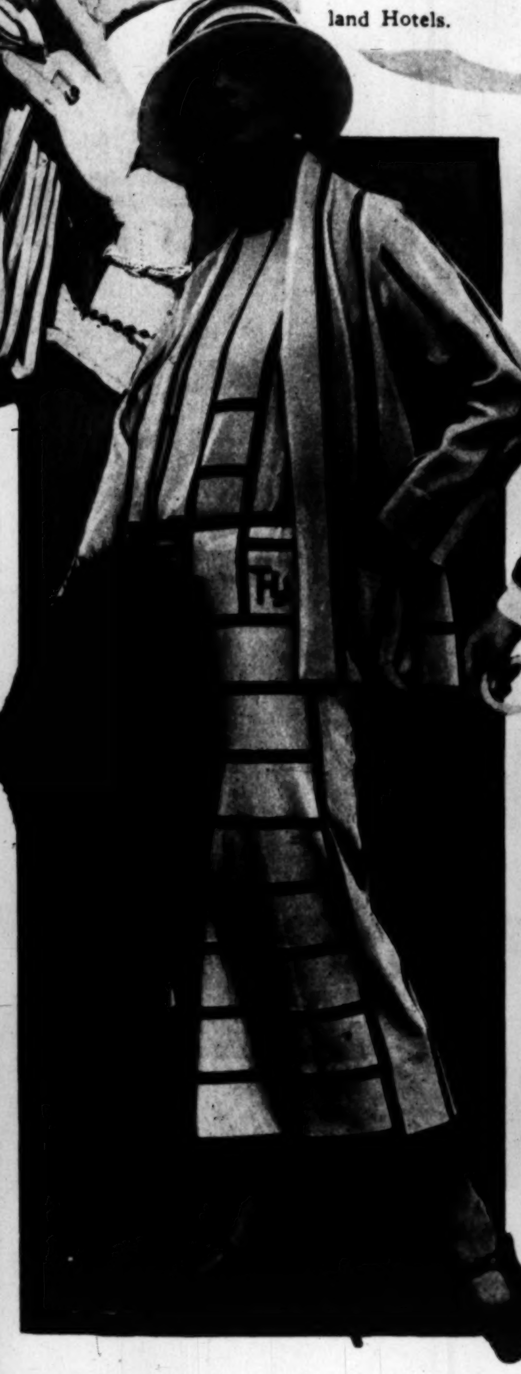
Swobdi has imported, among many other unusual creations, this sports dress of printed linen with hat to match.



Bab's Hat Shop is noted for the styles attractive for the debutante and appropriate youthful lines for the matron. This one shown here is a most alluring bonnet shape, worn by Iris Ashton, screen favorite.



Dorothy Phillips, starring in Allen Holubar's production, wearing a clever pair of slippers, suitable for many occasions, of white kid and black trim, from Wetherby-Kayser.



The Unique is showing this smart three-piece sports suit of white flannel with navy-blue stripes.

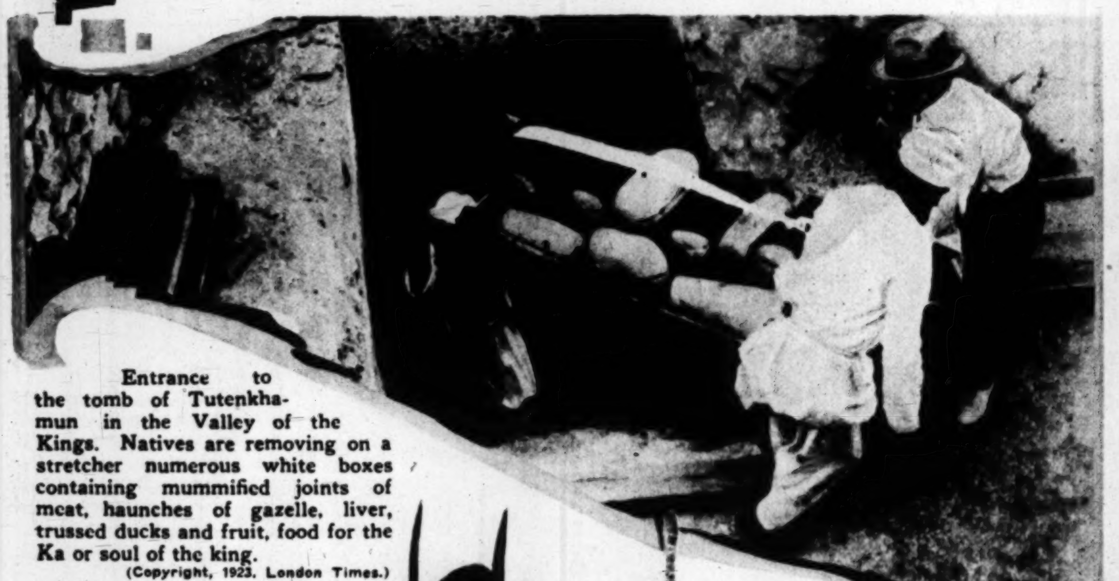
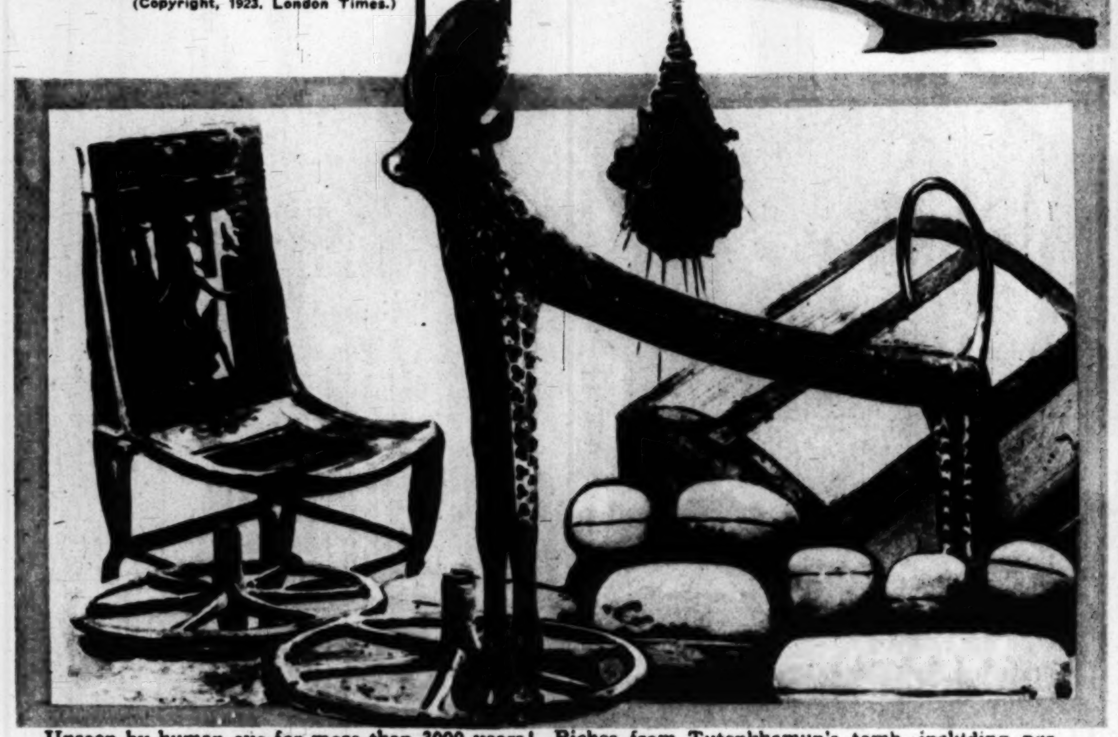
In the Valley of the Kings



Entrance to the tomb of Tutenkhamun in the Valley of the Kings. Natives are removing on a stretcher numerous white boxes containing mummified joints of meat, haunches of gazelle, liver, trussed ducks and fruit, food for the Ka or soul of the king. (Copyright, 1923, London Times.)



Unseen by human eye for more than 3000 years! Riches from Tutenkhamun's tomb, including portion of the royal ceremonial couch, supported by image of the Hathor cow; boxes containing mummified food; chariot wheels, and the king's footstool, looking much like a modern hall chair. Above the Hathor cow hangs a floral bouquet, found after thirty centuries. But the most striking object in the picture is the wooden casket, with an arched lid, white and decorated with an ebony veneer. It bears the king's name and that of the queen, Ankhsenamen. "An oily skin is especially liable to infection"

There is constant danger in an oily skin

IF your skin has the habit of continually getting oily and shiny—you cannot begin too soon to correct this condition.

A skin that is too oily is not only unattractive in itself—it is especially liable to infection from dust and dirt, and thus encourages the formation of blackheads and other skin troubles that come from outside infection.

You can overcome excessive oiliness by using every night the following treatment:

FIRST cleanse your skin by washing in your usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and luke-warm water. Wipe off the surplus moisture, but leave the skin slightly damp.

Now, with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion.

Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Within a week or ten days after commencing this treatment you will notice a marked improvement in your complexion.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks. Woodbury's also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

Tells the Story

I proved it many years ago by restoring the original color to my own prematurely gray hair with the same Restorer I now offer you. This time-tested preparation never fails, as hundreds of thousands of gray haired people since have learned.

There is not space in this advertisement to tell my story. Send for Free Trial bottle and learn all.

Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer is a clear, colorless liquid, clean as water. No greasy sediment to make your hair sticky and stringy, nothing to wash or rub off. Application easy, restored color perfect, in any light. Faded or discolored hair just as surely and safely restored as hair naturally gray.

Experience my teacher

I invented my scientific hair color restorer to bring back the original color to my own hair which was prematurely gray. Since, millions have used it and so will millions more. It is the most popular and biggest selling preparation of its kind in the world.

Now I have something new to offer and almost as important, in the shape of a new preparatory powder which puts your hair in perfect condition for restoration. This powder is a recent discovery of my laboratories and its action is that of tonic and antiseptic. A package now comes with each full sized bottle and a trial sized package is included in my special patented free trial outfit. I urge you to send for this patented outfit today and prove how easily, surely and beneficially you can restore your own gray hair to its natural color.

TEST NO. 1

Low melting point. Easy digestibility!

Into half a glass of lukewarm water drop a small lump each of Crisco and any other shortening. With a spoon gradually add hot water until Crisco melts. You will find that few other fats melt at this point. Food authorities say that an easily digested fat should melt near body heat—98 2 5 degrees. Crisco, you will find, melts even below this temperature. It melts at 97 degrees. (This test does not necessarily condemn the digestibility of the other fat, but it will aid you to establish Crisco's fine digestibility.)

TEST NO. 2

Avoid smoke and odor!

Put into separate pans equal amounts of Crisco and any other fat. Heat slowly for eight minutes or until they reach a temperature where a bread crumb browns in 40 seconds.

Notice that the Crisco, unlike most cooking fats, does not smoke at this proper frying temperature. You will find that frying with Crisco will be very helpful in keeping your whole house fresh and free from the odor of cooking fats.

How these 2 tests concern:

—your children's health

LIKE ALL WELL-POSTED MOTHERS you realize, of course, that fats are a vital necessity in supplying childhood's energy. You know that boys and girls would lose their "go" if deprived of fat in foods.

On the other hand, you doubtless question the digestibility of many fats.

Your children need fats! But many fats are considered indigestible! This situation causes much motherly anxiety.

Do you wish finally to settle the question: "Will my boys and girls easily digest foods made with my shortening?" Would you welcome care-free assurance of easy digestion in the foods your little ones crave?

We suggest, then, that you make, in your own home, test No. 1 explained in detail above.

—your housekeeping reputation

AS you enter an otherwise inviting home, how often the odor of cooking fat gives you intimate news of kitchen activities.

Wouldn't it be gratifying to have the assurance that your own home will always be sweet, fresh and free from the odor of cooking fats?

You can have that assurance.

Test No. 2, explained above, will show you how. We suggest that you make this simple test.

The twofold reward of a few extra pennies

After you have made the above tests you will understand why Crisco is a trifle higher in price than shortenings whose digestibility is very doubtful; than fats which may carry kitchen news to the front door.

But we find this:

When the health of their children is concerned, mothers cease to consider pennies. They would no more deliberately choose a cheap indigestible shortening than they would deliberately buy inferior milk.

When a housekeeper's reputation is involved she rightly considers the slight extra cost of Crisco a good investment in more comfortable hospitality.

Your grocer doubtless sells Crisco. Practically all modern grocers do.

FOR RENT
INQUIRE OF THE TEENIE WEENIES BUILDERS OF HAPPY HOMES

THE TEENIE WEENIES

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THE LITTLE FOLKS GO INTO THE REAL ESTATE BUSINESS.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies were quite too proud to mention the matter, but it was a fact—the little folks had mighty little food to eat, and often they went hungry. Tippy Tim, the red squirrel, found it out and, of course, he had to chatter, and in a short time most of the bird and animal neighbors of the Teenie Weenies knew all about it. The fire had destroyed all the Teenie Weenies' store of food, and for the last few months they had been living on anything they could find, but there was little to get, for the birds and animals, too, had to eat.

One day the General swallowed his pride and spoke to Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, about it.

"Mercy on us; 'Aven't you any brains?" scolded Tilly. She was always scolding, but really she was the kindest hearted of birds.

"We can't eat our brains," answered the Cook, who was just a little peeved at Tilly's remark.

"Well, you act as though you 'ad already eaten them," retorted Tilly "Why don't you go into the real estate business and earn something, instead of complainin' about 'ard times?"

"The real estate business?" gasped the astonished General.

"Certainly! Certainly!" cried the bird. "The real etate business. It's just the time. Land sakes, the birds will be comin' north in a few weeks, and if you got busy now and built a few 'omes, bird 'omes, you'd be sittin' around all summer with nothin' to do but collect rent."

"You mean for us to build bird houses and rent them to the birds?" cried the Old Soldier.

"What could be simpler?" answered Tilly. "The birds will be comin' along pretty soon, and they will be lookin' for 'omes. It takes a lot of time to build a nest for the summer, and they will be glad to rent a 'ouse. I was talkin' to a couple of robins that came in this morning, and they would give a great deal for a 'ouse. The blue birds, the Phoebe birds, the wrens, the martins, and a lot of families will be comin' pretty soon, and if you build a few cottages you'll rent 'em as fast as you can put 'em up."

"How much could we rent the houses for?" asked the Dunce.

"Thirty grains of wheat a month, or twenty grains of corn," answered the bird.

The Teenie Weenies considered Tilly's idea a brilliant one, and they set to work at once building houses. The little men worked in groups of three and four, and they soon had five houses under construction. They built the houses in the best trees, using twin and grass as building material. Tilly was hired as special agent, receiving five grains of corn each month for every house rented. In a short time birds were looking for houses; in

HOW TO COLOR THE TEENIE WEENIES

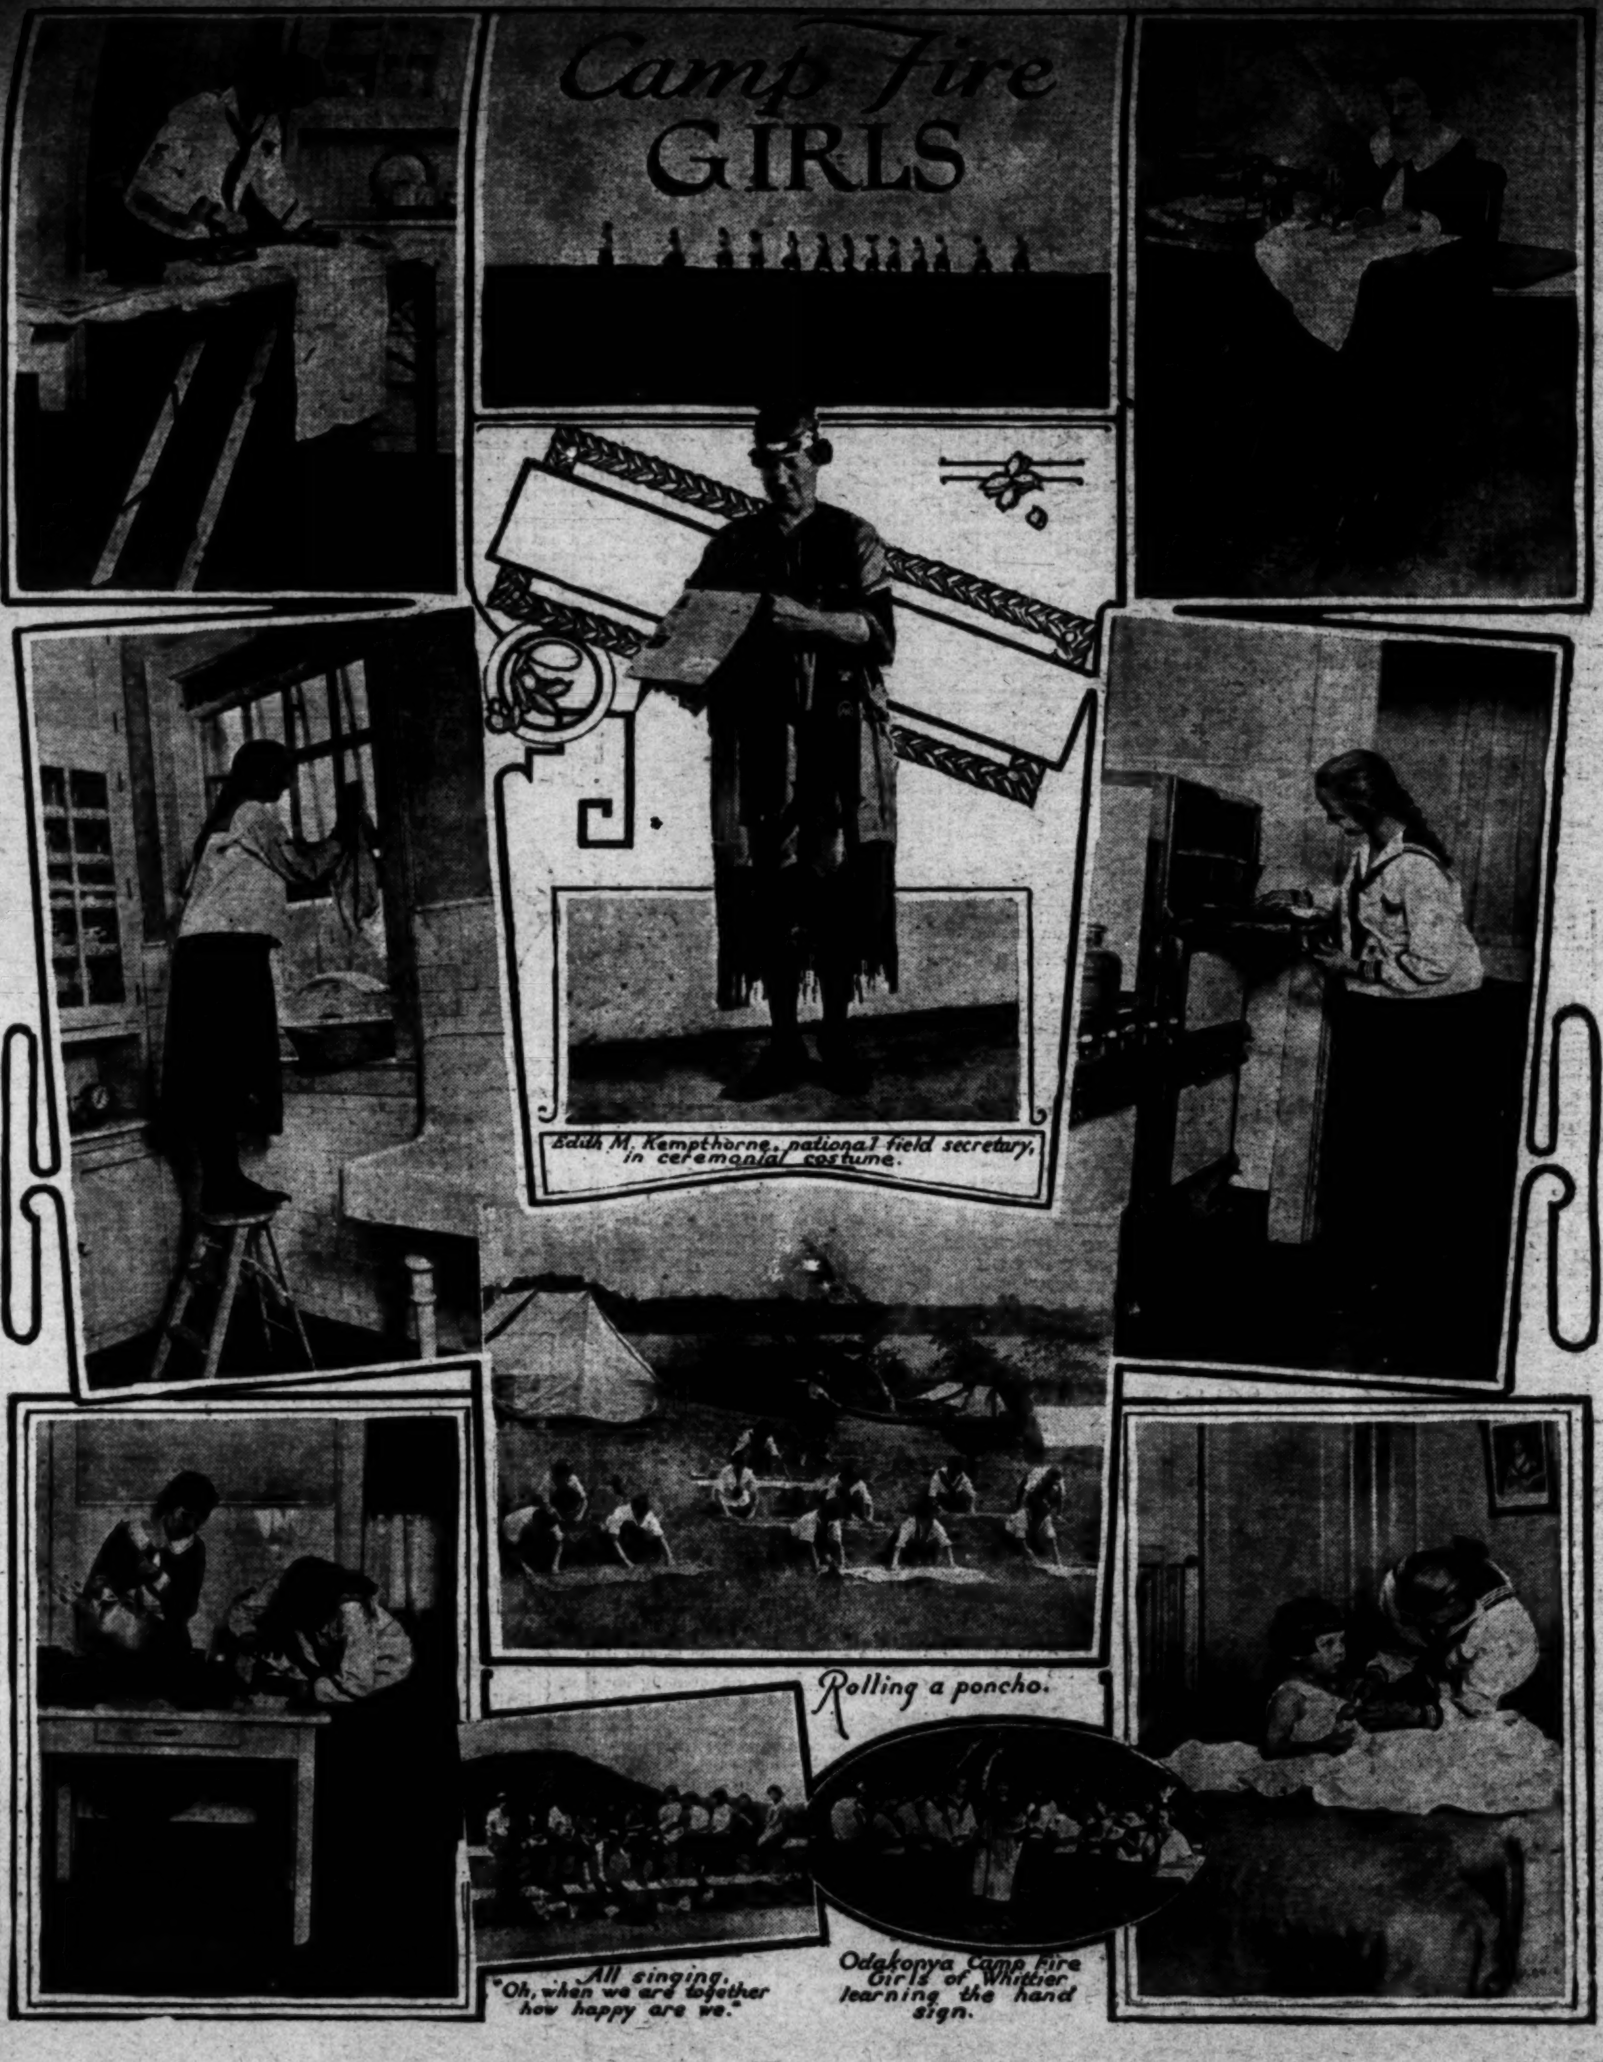
While you are coloring this picture, you also may get a few ideas that will add to the happiness of the birds of our own California, for they are now nesting, as you know.

First regarding the cottage for Mrs. Wren, who is sitting on a twig while the Teenies finish their grass house. The cottage is built, as the story sets forth, of grass and twine, with green twigs for flooring and for the framework. This makes the start on the picture very easy. But above all don't forget the blue sky showing through here and there.

Now for the Teenies. The General, as usual, is dressed in his blue Army suit, with gold epaulets. The two Teenies on the roof are wearing blue sweaters and the Dunce has on his red cap. The third Teenie—the one who is drawing up a bundle of grass—is wearing a brown suit.

This only leaves Mrs. Wren to color. She is clothed in a modest brown, for wrens are modest, home-keeping folk and do not go in for gay colors.

Watchword is "Wo-He-Lo"-Work, [illegible] Love.



Edith M. Kempthorne, national field secretary, in ceremonial costume.

All singing, "Oh, when we are together how happy are we."

Odakonya Camp Fire Girls of Whittier learning the hand sign.

With a Cameraman in the Footsteps of Members of the Big Girls' Organization.

On either side of the page Camp Fire Girls are shown winning home honors. The fundamental idea of Camp Fire is to foster the personal relations of the mother to her daughters, to cultivate the closest intimacy between them, and to magnify home as the center of their relations. CLEAR COUNCIL CIRCLE

Western Rangers Complete Work Started Two Years Ago; Nature Observations Reported

Precipicio Canyon, in which is located the Camp of the Red Gods, the week-end camp of the Western Rangers of Los Angeles, was crowded recently with parties from the Mohawk, Oraibi and Acoma councils, under the leadership of James Lynch, Van Clegg, Paul Hunter and Carl Sharsmith.

At this assembly was completed the Council Circle, which was two years in the making and from which more than fifty huge boulders were dug up and moved, to make the necessary clearance of a spot large enough for the campfire circle. Rustic seats have now been built and two large totem poles erected at the entrance to the camp.

In a demonstration on the care and use of the axe, Carl Sharsmith, assistant to the Chief of the Western Rangers, discussed the relative merits of the single and double-edged axe and also the proper methods of carrying, sharpening and swinging the axe.

Many valuable nature-study observations were reported, among which was the seeing of a pair of water ouzels bringing nesting material in under a waterfall. Several canyon wrens also were reported and the flowers of the scrub oak, big cone spruce and maple were studied. Games also were played in council between the different groups represented in camp.

ST. THOMAS'S TROOP LEADS

HOLLYWOOD'S "FINEST" HOLD RECORD IN ATTENDANCE AND MEMBERSHIP

Scoutmaster A. G. Seiker, director of scout activity, asserted yesterday that his Troop No. 57 at the St. Thomas Episcopal Church, Gardner and Hollywood Boulevard, is the local leader in attendance and membership.

First of all, the troop boasts a 97 per cent attendance and, second, an increase in membership from twelve to seventy-five boys in the last fourteen months. As a result of these achievements the troopers have earned for themselves the name of "Hollywood's Finest," which by virtue of their good work they rightly deserve.

Much of the credit for the attendance and membership records is due William C. Keim, director of boys' work.

The troop has seven instructors, one for each night of the week, and each teaching one of the various divisions of scouting.

HELPING THE "POLICEMAN"

Little Mary was rather willful and inclined to have her own way. She was especially fond of slipping out of the front door when her parents were not looking. So often did this occur that they were afraid that one day she might get lost. So they instructed her, should this happen, never to speak to anyone but a policeman.

One day she was out for a walk with her father, who was anxious to know if she had grasped her instructions correctly.

"Now, Mary," said he, "let's pretend that you're lost and I'm a policeman."

He crossed the road, and Mary followed, tearfully saying:

"Please, Mr. Policeman, I'm lost!"

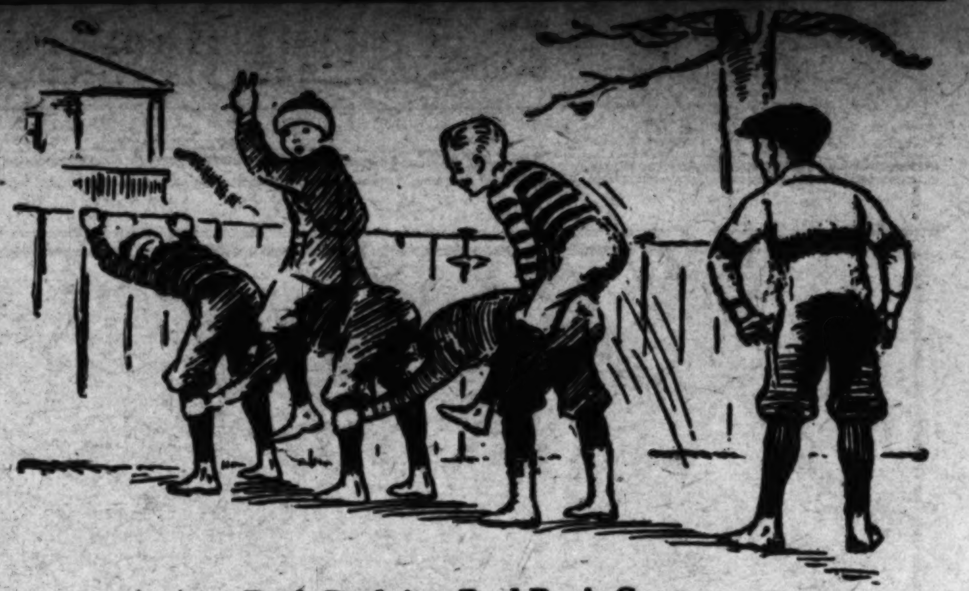
"What's your name, dear?" inquired the psuedo policeman.

"Mary Jackson, please," was the correct reply.

"Where do you live?"

"Come on, I'll show you!"—[Unidentified.

The Fun Maker



Buck Buck is a Real Boy's Game

(Play experts from all over North America send in their newest ideas to The Fun Maker. Regular readers of The Fun Maker will learn about all sorts of games and stunts just as soon as they are invented.)

Boys Pose For Games

The boys in the picture above are sure-enough boys. They live in the artist's neighborhood and pose for all the games he illustrates. First he tells them just how to play the new game, and then he watches them play it while he sketches them. These boys were having a fine time playing "Buck Buck."

The boys who live near The Hiram House in Cleveland, O., like "Buck Buck, How Many Fingers Up" best of any of the games which P. R. Graham has taught them on the playground.

The game is played with two equal sides, three or more boys on a side. One side takes "down," which means that the boys on that side form a line with one man at their head, called the "lamppost," upon whom the whole line depends. The boys following the first one place their heads between the legs of the boy in front of them, grasping his legs with their hands in order to steady themselves and thus form a strong, bridge-like line.

Leap On Line

After they have taken their position, the boys on the other side, standing back of them about ten feet or more, one after another run and leap upon the line as in leap frog. When they have all leaped, the first man holds a certain number of fingers on one hand up, calling out, "Buck, Buck, How Many Fingers Up?" The last man of the side that is down calls out the number which he thinks the man on top is holding up. If he guesses correctly, then the side that was down gets to leap. If he fails to guess, however, then his side stays down and the same side gets to leap again.

If any member of the side that is leaping touches the ground in any manner when he jumps, then that places his side down. Each jumper must hold the position he is in when he strikes the line. Also, if the side that is down does not hold up the other side they are not allowed to guess how how many fingers are up, but have to take their place down again,

(Next week the Fun-Maker will tell about the game "Rainbow.")

How to Make an Ironing Board Support

Ironing boards are usually set up on legs that soon get wobbly or are in the way so that skirts cannot be slipped over the end. The board with one end set on the kitchen table and the other on a chair isn't satisfactory, either. These inconveniences may be done away with by building a simple ironing-board support which fastens to a door, wall, window sill or cupboard.

Select a location that gives sufficient light and is near the stove, or in case the iron used is an electric one, near an electric-light socket. Fasten the support in place with screws instead of nails, as at some time it may be necessary to remove these supports, and screws are always much easier to take out than nails.

Saw the end of your ironing board square and fasten two cleats, as shown in the drawing above, near each end. These cleats prevent warping. Fasten also two strips at the end as at A. A brace or leg, the proper length, should be hinged forty-one and one-half inches from the square end. Use a three or four-inch hinge for this.

The support, or part B, which is fastened to the wall, is made of five pieces. The end of the board A slides into it from either side. You will note from the measurements that the board cannot be pulled out from the front, as it is held in place by two strips screwed to the one and one-half-inch pieces.

When not in use the board may be slipped from the holder and the leg folded back, so that the board may be placed in a corner or in an ironing-board rack.

GAMES to PLAY

Margery Daw

This lovely dancing game is based on the old see-saw rhymes. Its movements, indicated by numbers, are explained in the Key:

(1.) See-saw, Margery Daw: (repeat thrice.)
(2.) Jack shall have a new master.
He shall have a penny a day,
(3.) Because he can't work any faster.

(4.) See-saw, Margery Daw (repeat thrice.)
(5.) Sold her bed to sleep on the straw (three times.)

(6.) See-saw, sacradown;
Which is the way to London Town?
(7.) One foot up, the other foot down,—
That's the way to London Town.

(8.) The poor man was digging, digging, digging;
The poor man was digging
To and fro, to and fro, (3 times.)

(9.) He put his spade on his shoulder (three times.)
(10.) And he went marching home,
To and fro, to and fro. (three times.)

(11.) See-saw, Margery Daw;
Father should be his own master;
(12.) Run we to meet him, as he's coming home,—
Run, run, run, run,
Faster and faster and faster!

KEY—(1.) Players march in pairs, singing, arms raised sidewise, bodies swaying to left and right in see-saw motion. (2.) Partners join hands, skipping rapidly. (3.) Each steps to left, right foot forward, shaking right forefinger at partner. (4.) Repeat movement 1. (5.) All stand still, closing eyes and nodding heads. (6.) All march; inside hands joined, outside hands shading eyes. (7.) Right-and-left-foot skip-dance around circle. (8.) Stand in place, digging motions. (9.) Dance in place, right hand on left-shoulder. (10.) In same-shoulder-position all march, dancing sidewise in and out of circle. (11.) Repeat movement 1. All march with progressive speed, finishing with a gallop.

Happy Families

In some respects this amusing pastime resembles Sultan Saladin, but it is an improvement on the more limited game, in which but four can play, using only the five top cards of each suit. In Happy Families the whole pack is dealt. As many as thirteen can play, with four cards to each player. If four are playing, each is dealt thirteen cards; if five play, ten cards are dealt to each. The extra cards may be "sold" for a counter each. With six or more players the procedure is the same.

The cards are named Father, Mother, Son, Daughter (King, Queen, Jack, Ten.) The Ace is Baby, the other cards two-year-old, three-year-old, etc. Each player puts a counter in the pool. Cards are dealt one at a time, face down, as in bridge. The player to left of dealer asks his left-hand player for a certain card in this way: "Father Diamond wants his Daughter to make his family happy." If the second player does not hold the card requested (the ten of Diamonds) he need not give any, but, in his turn, asks the third player for a special card in the same manner. Every one is obliged to surrender the requested card if he has it. No one must ask for a card unless he has one of the suit in his hand. Nor is he allowed to say, "I want." The formula is, "Father," or "Mother," etc." "wants Baby, etc." to make the family happy."

Anyone breaking a rule is fined a counter. Any four-of-a-suit makes a sequence, and is thrown on the board with the proclamation, "Happy Family!" The player first getting rid of all his cards wins the pool.

OBSERVE THEIR ANNIVERSARY

CAMP FIRE HEAD'S VISIT GIVES NEW IMPETUS TO MOVEMENT

Marking the eleventh anniversary of the organization of the Camp Fire Girls of America, 160,000 lassies of America, including 1000 members of the order in Los Angeles, yesterday hiked to the big woods, built their own camp fires and conducted their own ceremonies and games.

There is only one thing more important to a nation than its manhood—and that is its motherhood. In the development of women worthy of the sacred duty and privilege of motherhood the school, the church and the home each has its splendid place, but it is doubtful if there is any substitute for God's great out-of-doors, for it is there that strength and courage are tested and it is there that the goddess of health dispenses her nourishing wine. So reason those back of the Camp Fire movement.

Camp Fire girls of Los Angeles have been exceptionally busy recently in the attempt to secure new members for the organization, since the visit to this city, a few days ago, of Edith M. Kempthorne, who for the last seven years has been national field secretary of the Camp Fire Girls of America, with headquarters in New York City.

IN NEW ZEALAND

Miss Kempthorne, who is conducting a membership drive throughout the country, has organized Camp Fire chapters in thirty-three States and one in Alaska. She has climbed many of the highest mountains in seven different countries and is noted for having organized the first Walking Club in New Zealand.

Enthusiastic over the reception accorded her on her first visit to California, Miss Kempthorne left Los Angeles last week for a visit to various cities in Arizona, whence she will go to Texas and then to Tennessee and other Southern States.

While in Southern California Miss Kempthorne spoke before the Polytechnic Training School for Girls, the Le Conte School, the Hollywood High School, the Woman's Club and Kiwanis Club of Lankershim and at public meetings at Whittier, Burbank, Oxnard, Santa Paula and San Diego.

"One of the schools at Huntington Beach is planning to build a school bungalow for the Camp Fire Girls," said Miss Kempthorne, "and the example should be followed by all schools, wherever it is possible. Miss Edna V. Hoogner, chairman of the Guardians' Association in Los Angeles, assures me that plans are being made for a summer outing at one of the near-by popular camps, and that, ultimately, the girls will have their own camp.

"The six weeks' celebration, beginning March 17, will afford an opportunity to thousands of girls of the country to take a pleasurable and at the same time beneficial vacation," said Miss Kempthorne. "Last summer more than 125,000 girls enjoyed the camping trips. The law of the Camp Fire is sevenfold and is as follows: 'Thou shalt seek beauty, give service, pursue knowledge, be trustworthy, hold on to health, glorify work and be happy.'"

GIRLS' WATCHWORD

"Wo-he-lo!" That sounds like a Chinese swear-word doesn't it?

It's the watchword of the Camp Fire Girls. Like unto King Tut in his tomb, "Wo-he-lo" has lain for many years in its sarcophagus of mystery, visited and understood only by the Camp Fire Girls, but at last the meaning of the word has been revealed.

Miss K., recent visitor to Los Angeles, provided the key to the translation of the mystic word and your correspondent, after much arduous study, figured out that "Wo-he-lo" means work, health, love.

The chief slogan of the Camp Fire Girls is "Give Service." The members work together for their homes, their schools, their churches, their communities and their country. They have established day nurseries and story clubs for children and have adopted children and entire families in cases of great need. They have raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for the Red Cross and similar organizations and last year they presented to Anna Pavlowa $1500 for the relief of starving Russian children.

The girls and their leaders believe that to give service in their own neighborhoods is to give real citizenship to their country and they strive to live up to this ideal. They also realize that a healthy body and a wholesome mind are necessary to greatest efficiency in service, hence the attainment of health is one of their chief aims.

THEIR OATHS

There are three ranks that Camp Fire Girls may attain. The first is Wood Gatherer, the second is Fire Maker and the third is Torch Bearer. When, through the accomplishment of certain tasks, a girl wins the honors of the first degree she solemnly repeats the Wood Gatherer's desire:

"As fagots are brought from the forest,
Firmly held by the sinews which bind them,
I will cleave to my Camp Fire sisters,
Wherever, whenever I find them.
I will strive to grow strong like the pine tree,
To be pure in my deepest desire;
To be true to the truth that is in me,
And follow the law of the Fire."

Blood-curdling as that may sound, it doesn't hold a candle light to the oath taken by the Fire Maker, for this is what the initiate of that degree has to say, upon assuming her sacred duties:

"As fuel is brought to the fire, so I purpose to bring my strength, my ambition, my heart's desire, my joy and my sorrow to the fire of humankind; for I will tend, as my fathers have tended (and my fathers' fathers since time began) that fire which is called the Love of Man for Man and the Love of Man for God."

Equally beautiful, yet more brief and simpler, is the desire publicly expressed by the initiate of the third degree, the Torch Bearer. It takes a long time and real desire to learn and to be the things required of a Torch Bearer, and for a girl to be able to say, when she receives the symbol of the rank: "That light which has been given to me I desire to pass undimmed to others."

To be one of a comradeship of nearly 200,000 happy girls, who live in various parts of the world, to be a part of that vast sisterhood which is having good times out of doors, cooking over open fires, singing the same songs around camp fires, living the same ideals of work, health and love—this, in part, is what it means to be a Camp Fire Girl.

MANY WOULD BE WOOD-GATHERERS

ODAKONYA CAMP FIRE GROUP OF WHITTIER HAS OWN "HIKING SONG"

Although their charter dates from Nov. 1, 1922, several members of the Odakonya Camp Fire Girls of Whittier, the youngest group in the Methodist Church, are about to take the first rank of wood-gatherer.

Girls of the group are Hilda Walker, president; Maxine Eltringham, treasurer; Ruth Pitts, secretary; Lucile Neimeyer, Flora Cohan, Florence Theaker, Elizabeth Needham, Emma Wyant, Eleanor Wheatland, Nellie Wells, Frances McBeth, and Vivian Rule, with Mrs. Lulu M. Pitts as their guardian.

That the Odakonya Camp Fire Girls preach what they so often practice is proved by their "hiking song," sung to the tune of "Smiles."

Camp Fire Girls;
For Camp Fire life is life worth while;
Life grows fonder as we wander
Down each magic mile
O-da-kon-ya
Is our name and motto;
We turn sadness into gladness
With our Wo-he-lo.

CHORUS—

We hike miles around the mountains;
We hike miles up o'er the hills.
We all love the trees and birds and flowers
And the sunshine cures all our ills;
We hike miles and miles to make us healthy;
We hike miles and miles to make us strong,
And the miles that fill our hearts with gladness,
Are the miles we sing as we march along.

KANDIKA, Whittier.

CAMP FIRE TEACHES SERVICE

The fundamental idea of the Camp Fire is to foster the personal relations of the mother to her daughters, to cultivate the closest intimacy between them, and to magnify the home as the center of their relations.

The program of the Camp Fire Girls emphasizes the dignity of work as a primary condition of happiness, the necessity of keeping good health as a personal duty and an essential to success in any field, and the spirit of comradeship as a condition of happiness.

Its ideals are expressed in its watchword, "Wo-He-Lo," which is derived from the three words which embody the fundamental principles of its teaching—Work, Health, Love.

Its law opens seven roads leading down long vistas of endeavor and opportunity toward the goal of balanced, efficient young womanhood: Seek Beauty; Give Service; Pursue Knowledge; Be Trustworthy; Hold On to Health; Glorify Work; Be Happy.

Under its seven crafts (Home Craft, Health Craft, Camp Craft Handicraft, Nature Lore, Business, and Citizenship) nearly 1000 specific suggestions are tabulated, each opening some avenue of helpful endeavor for girls.

The basis of the Camp Fire honor system is appreciation. It gives recognition for attainments accomplished in the simple and modest things of daily life and its recognition is an incentive to do more.

Its honors are given for work actually accomplished, and their wide selection stirs the imagination and develops originality.

Every honor achieved means an added bead of color, according to the particular craft, which goes to decorate the ceremonial gown. Some examples are:

Home Craft: (a) Prepare an invalid's tray (b) cook two Sunday dinners while mother rests; (c) Keep bureau drawers in order for two months.

Health Craft: (a) Sleep with open windows for one month; (b) Swim one hundred yards; (c) Walk forty miles in any ten days.

Camp Craft: Build an open fire in wind and rain.

Handcraft: (a) Make a set of baby clothes; (b) Trim a hat; (c) Make a dress.

Nature Lore: Identify and describe twenty wild flowers.

Business: Do not borrow money or wearing apparel for two months.

Citizenship: Beautify the back-yard or garden.

Any girl of 12 years of age may become a member and help form a Camp Fire, which consists of not less than six nor more than twenty girls under the leadership of a guardian. Camp Fire Guardians are older women who because of their larger experiences, are able to lead the girls into larger interests.

National Headquarters believes in self-support as a character-building principle, and the dues of the girls enable the correspondence to be carried on, the magazine to be published, literature printed, etc.

The organization is undenominational, and works equally well in school, in church, factory or settlement amongst all kinds of girls.

There are many reasons why Camp Fire is being adopted by so many churches, why it is so popular, and why it is proving to be so successful; it furnishes the Sunday School with a working program which maintains interest throughout the week. It will also bring into the daily life practice of the girls the teachings imparted by the Sunday School.

Camp Fire will help to train future leaders for church work. Camp Fire will help to tie the home to the church.

There is a growing demand for Camp Fire in the schools. The program gives esprit de corps—it creates interest in physical training and in health. It arouses interest and leads to independent thought. It develops leadership and provides a channel for civic service.

To sum up, the Camp Fire is an organization for finding the romance, the beauty, and the adventure in every day life. It makes the homely task contribute to the joy of daily living.

Camp Fire aims to develop the home spirit and make it dominate the life of the entire community. It uses beautiful ceremonies and bases rank and honor upon personal attainment. It interprets the things of daily life in terms of poetry, symbolism, color and imagination.

A Camp Fire Girl, when receiving rank, expresses her desire to strive toward a developing ideal which reflects the spirit of the organization.

The Camp Fire program preempts the leisure time of girls, thus saving them from harmful types of activities; but in addition to this, it does the positive work of directing them toward those things which are recreational in the highest and best sense.

Furthermore, the Camp Fire program develops the girls within their natural environment. It does not take them away from the home, nor does it try to make them boyish. It looks with high favor upon domestic skill and loyalty. The three institutions that influence most deeply the life of a girl are the home, the church and the school. Camp Fire seeks to organize the activities that naturally lie outside of these institutions, and use them to create higher efficiency within these three groups of relationship.

No better record of Camp Fire accomplishments is to be found than the list of honors won during the year 1921, a total of 1,781,951 honors.

HONOR LONG-DEAD SAINT

Half a million pilgrims gathered in Goa, India, for the exposition of the body of St. Francis Xavier, who died in China 500 years ago. The body was taken afterward to Portuguese India. The festival which occurs about every ten years, draws all races and religions, including many crippled and infirm, who hope for a cure. The festival proper began when the saint's body, which lies ordinarily in a magnificent shrine in the church, was exposed to view. The body is still in a fair state of preservation, though it is denied that any embalming process was used. The face is brown and appears mummified, but is recognizable.—[Exchange.

The Wonderful Stories of OZ

By L. Frank Baum

The Hungry Tiger

THE first thing Dorothy did was to rush into the embrace of the Scarecrow, whose painted face beamed with delight as he pressed her form to his straw-padded bosom. Then the Tin Woodman embraced her—very gently, for he knew his tin arms might hurt her if he squeezed too roughly.

These greetings having been exchanged, Dorothy took the key to Tiktok from her pocket and wound up the machine man's action, so that he could bow properly when introduced to the rest of the company. While doing this she told them how useful Tiktok had been to her, and both the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman shook hands with the machine once more and thanked him for protecting their friend.

Then Dorothy asked: "Where is Billina?"

"I don't know," said the Scarecrow. "Who is Billina?"

"She's a yellow hen who is another friend of mine," answered the girl, anxiously. "I wonder what has become of her?"

"She is in the chicken house in the back yard," said the Princess. "My drawing-room is no place for hens."

Without awaiting to hear more Dorothy ran to get Billina, and just outside the door she came upon the Cowardly Lion, still hitched to the chariot beside the great Tiger. The Cowardly Lion had a big bow of blue ribbon fastened to the long hair between his ears, and the Tiger wore a bow of red ribbon on his tail, just in front of the bushy end.

In an instant Dorothy was hugging the huge Lion joyfully.

"I'm so glad to see you again!" she cried.

"I am also glad to see you, Dorothy," said the Lion. "We've had some fine adventures together, haven't we?"

"Yes, indeed," she replied. "How are you?"

"As cowardly as ever," the beast answered in a meek voice. "Every little thing scares me and makes my heart beat fast. But let me introduce to you a new friend of mine, the Hungry Tiger."

"Oh! Are you hungry?' she asked, turning to the other beast, who was just then yawning so widely that he displayed two rows of terrible teeth and a mouth big enough to startle anyone.

"Dreadfully hungry," answered the Tiger, snapping his jaws together with a fierce click.

"Then why don't you eat something?" she asked.

"It's no use," said the Tiger sadly. "I've tried that, but I always get hungry again."

"Why, it is the same with me," said Dorothy. "Yet I keep on eating."

"But you eat harmless things so it doesn't matter," replied the Tiger. "For my part, I'm a savage beast, and have an appetite for all sorts of poor little living creatures, from a chipmonk to fat babies."

"How dreadful!" said Dorothy.

"Isn't it, though?" returned the Hungry Tiger, licking his lips with his long red tongue. "Fat babies! Don't they sound delicious? But I've never eaten any, because my conscience tells me it is wrong. If I had no conscience I would probably eat the babies and then get hungry again, which would mean that I had sacrificed the poor babies for nothing. No; hungry I was born, and hungry I shall die. But I'll not have any cruel deeds on my conscience to be sorry for."

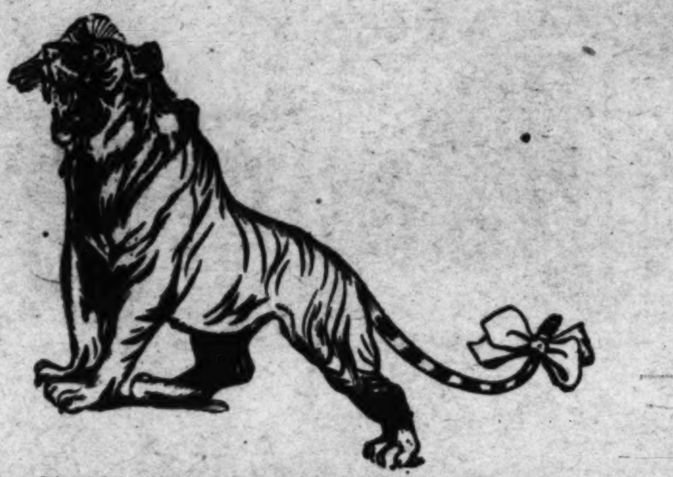
"I think you are a very good tiger," said Dorothy, patting the huge head of the beast.

"In that you are mistaken," was the reply. "I am a good beast, perhaps, but a disgracefully bad tiger. For it is the nature of tigers to be cruel and ferocious, and in refusing to eat harmless living creatures I am acting as no good tiger has ever before acted. That is why I left the forest and joined my friend the Cowardly Lion."

"But the Lion is not really cowardly," said Dorothy. "I have seen him act as bravely as can be."

"All a mistake, my dear," protested the Lion gravely. "To others I may have seemed brave, at times, but I have never been in any danger that I was not afraid."

"Nor I," said Dorothy, truthfully.



The Tiger Wore a Bow of Red Ribbon on His Tail

"But I must go and set free Billina, and then I will see you again."

She ran around to the back yard of the palace and soon found the chicken house, being guided to it by a loud cackling and crowing and a distracting hubbub of sounds such as chickens make when they are excited.

Something seemed to be wrong in the chicken house and when Dorothy looked through the slats in the door she saw a group of hens and roosters huddled in one corner and watching what appeared to be a whirling ball of feathers. It bounded here and there about the chicken house, and at first Dorothy could not tell what it was, while the screeching of the chickens nearly deafened her.

But suddenly the bunch of feathers stopped whirling, and then, to her amazement, the girl saw Billina crouching upon the prostrate form of a speckled rooster. For an instant they both remained motionless, and then the yellow hen shook her wings to settle the feathers and walked toward the door with a strut of proud defiance and a cluck of victory, while the speckled rooster limped away to the group of other chickens, trailing his crumpled plumage in the dust as he went.

"Why, Billina!" cried Dorothy, in a shocked voice; "have you been fighting?"

"I really think I have," retorted Billina. "Do you think I'd let that speckled villain of a rooster lord it over me, and claim to run this chicken house, as long as I'm able to peck and scratch? Not if my name is Bill!"

"It isn't Bill, it's Billina; and you're talking slang, which is very undig'n'fied," said Dorothy, reprovingly. "Come here, Billina, and I'll let you out; for Ozma of Oz is here, and has set us free."

So the yellow hen came to the door, which Dorothy unlatched for her to pass through, and the other chickens silently watched them from their corner without offering to approach nearer.

The girl lifted her friend in her arms and exclaimed:

"Oh, Billina! how dreadful you look You've lost a lot of feathers, and one of your eyes is nearly pecked out, and your comb is bleeding!"

"That's nothing," said Ballina. "Just look at the speckled rooster! Didn't I do him up brown?"

Dorothy shook her head.

"I don't 'prove of this, at all," she said, carrying Billina away toward the palace. "It isn't a godo thing for you to 'sociate with them," replied Billina.

"It is that cross old Princess who is to blame. But I was raised in the United States, and I won't allow any one-horse chicken of the Land of Ev to run over me and put on airs, as long as I can lift a claw in self-defense."

"Very well, Billina," said Dorothy. "We won't talk about it any more."

Soon they came to the cowardly Lion and the Hungry Tiger to whom the girl introduced the Yellow Hen.

"Glad to meet any friend of Dorothy's" said the Lion, politely. "To judge by your present appearance, you are not a coward as I am."

"Your present appearance makes my mouth water," said the Tiger, looking at Billina greedily. "My, my! how good you would taste if I could only crunch you between my jaws. But don't worry. You would only appease my appetite for a moment; so it isn't worth while to eat you."

"Thank you," said the hen, nestling closer in Dorothy's arms.

"Besides, it wouldn't be right," continued the Tiger looking steadily at Billina and clicking his jaws together.

"Of course not," cried Dorothy, hastily. "Billina is my friend and you mustn't ever eat her under any circumstances."

"I'll try to remember that," said the Tiger; "but I'm a little absent-minded, at times."

Then Dorothy carried her pet into the drawing-room of the palace, where Tiktok, being invited to do so by the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman. Opposite to them sat Ozma herself and the Princess Langwidere, and beside them there was a vacant chair for Dorothy.

Around this important group was ranged the Army of Oz, and as Dorothy looked at the handsome uniforms of the Twenty-seven she said:

"Why, they seem to be all officers."

"They are, all except one," answered the Tin Woodman. "I have in my Army eight Generals, six Colonels, seven Majors and five Captains, besides one private for them to command. I'd like to promote the private, for I believe no private should ever be in public life; and I've also noticed that officers usually fight better and are more reliable than common soldiers. Besides, the officers are more important looking, and lend dignity to our army."

"No doubt you are right," said Dorothy, seating herself beside Ozma. "And now," announced the girlish Ruler of Oz, "we will hold a solemn conference to decide the best manner of liberating the royal family of this fair Land of Ev from their long imprisonment."

Editor's Note—Next week we shall hear of "The Royal Family of Ev" and the conference Ozma held to decide how they should be rescued from imprisonment in the land of the Nome King.

ADVENTURES OF TEENIE WEENIES

fact, before the houses were finished they were rented.

Mrs. Wren was the first customer. She flew into a tree where four of the little men were working, and was received by the General.

"Is this house for rent?" she inquired. "Or is it for sale?"

"Whichever you like," answered the General with a deep bow, for real estate agents must be most polite to their customers.

"What does it rent for?" asked Mrs. Wren.

"Thirty-eight grains of corn," answered the General as he noticed that the bird was well fed and looked quite prosperous.

"My word!" exclaimed Mrs. Wren. "Terribly expensive."

"But, madam," said the General, "it's the frontage you pay for. This tree fronts on the garden, where there are many fat bugs and worms, and this tree is restricted to three houses. It's in a most exclusive neighborhood. There are no cats in the neighborhood, and the people who live in the big house always put out suet for their bird neighbors."

"I would much rather buy the house than rent it," said Mrs. Wren. "What price do you ask? I much prefer to own my home.'

"Four hundred grains of corn, or five hundred and six grains wheat,' answered the General.

After much argument the General finally agreed to sell the house for four hundred and eighty-five grains of wheat, eighty-five grains to be paid at once and the rest to be paid in four months.

In a few days the houses were all rented or sold, and the Teenie Weenies were fairly rolling in corn and wheat. Tilly Titter grew so fat on her commissions she could hardly waddle, and everybody was happy

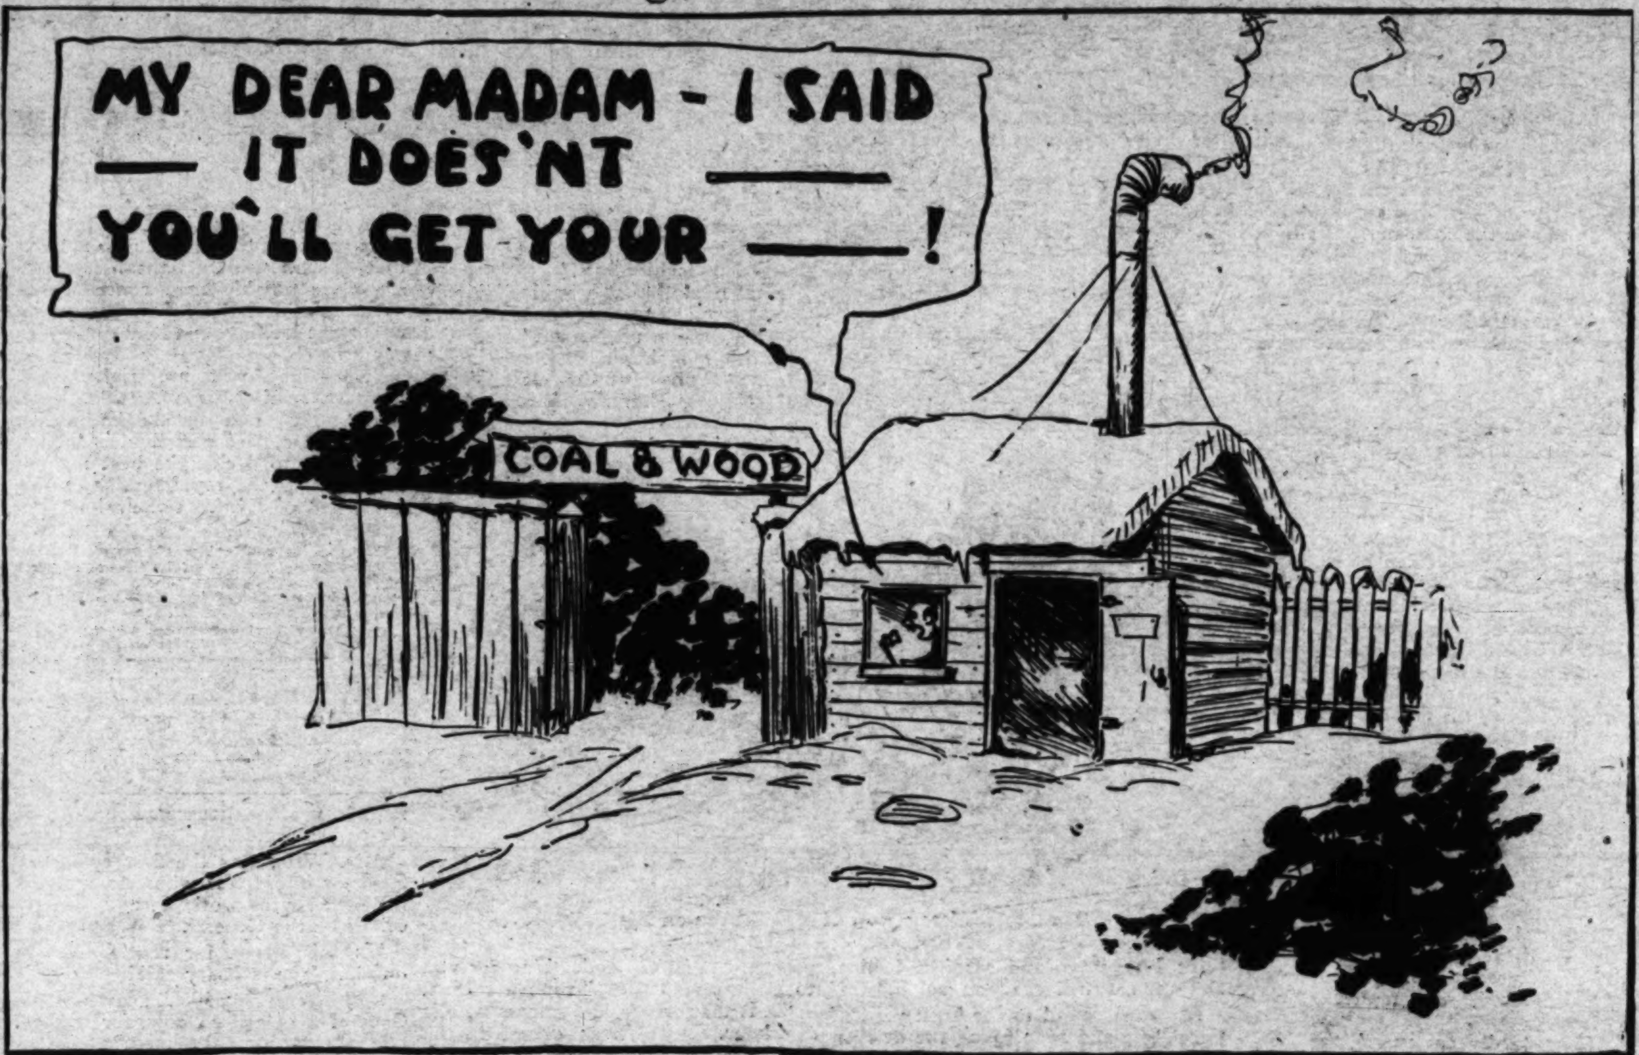
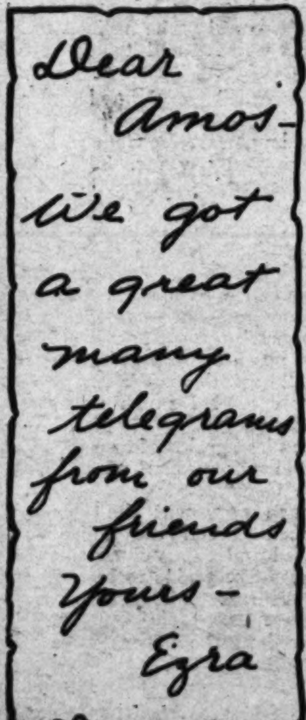
A Song Without Words



MY DEAR MADAM - I SAID — IT DOES'NT ____ YOU'LL GET YOUR ____!
COAL & WOOD

There are three words missing from the coal man's telephone conversation. Can you supply them? The letters in the three words when properly arranged will spell California. Answer in the Junior Times next Sunday.

What City?



Dear Amos-

We got a great many telegrams from our friends

Yours-

Ezra

A city in New York State is hidden in the above letter. Can you find it?

THE POET AND THE PRINTER

"Bill," the poet gasped to his friend, "I wrote a poem about my little boy and began the first verse with these words:

" 'My son, my pigmy counterpart.' "

"Yes, yes?"

The poet drew a newspaper from his pocket.

"Read!" he blazed. "See what that compositor did to my opening line."

The friend read aloud: "My son, my pig, my counterpart."

HE WAS TOO QUICK

The chairman of the board of directors was close. He came in late as a ballot was being taken, thought they were trying to put something over on him, and yelled:

"I don't know what you're balloting on, but I'm against it."

"You've got plenty of company," said a quiet old director.

"Hey?"

"The vote was on a motion I made to buy you a gold watch."—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Teacher: Now, Willie, what is the Order of the Bath?

Willie (puzzled:) Johnny comes first, then Henry, then the baby, and then me.—[London Answers.

THE PART HE TOOK

The dean of the faculty was exceedingly angry.

"So you confess that this unfortunate young man was carried to the pond and drenched? Now, what part did you take in this disgraceful affair?"

"The right leg, sir," answered the sophomore, meekly.—[Harvard Lampoon.

THE ONLY WAY

"We'll put a cook stove in the automobile and go touring," announced Mr. Chuggins.

"But what'll we do for a servant?" inquired his wife.

"It's the only way to keep a servant. Once we have succeeded in hiring one, the only way for her to resign will be to get out and walk."—[Washington Star.

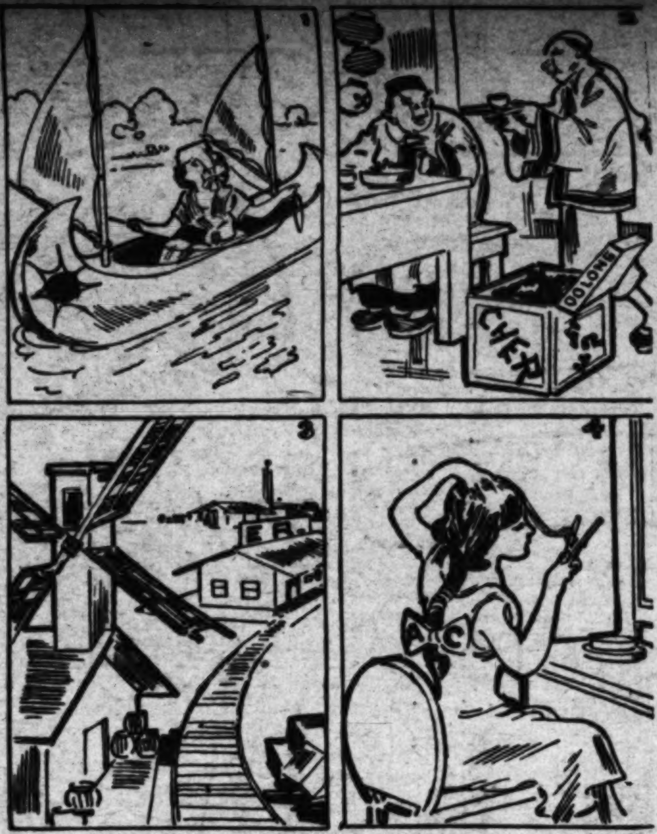
OUR PUZZLE GYM

BY SAM LOYD

AMBITION PUZZLES

Here we have translated into rebus form, replies from four girl students who were asked what careers they were ambitious to follow after graduation. Each picture represents a woman's occupation or profession.



A CHARADE

There is a noun of plural number,
Foe to peace and tranquil slumber;
But add to it the letter S,
And—wondrous metamorphosis—
Plural is plural now no more,
And sweet what bitter was before.
What is the word?

RIDDLES TO GUESS

What nation is usually in arms?

Why is a retired carpenter like a teacher?

Why is the earth like a school slate?

Which river is always, frozen.

GEOGRAPHICAL PUZZLES

Find in each of the following sentences the name of a place in the State of Illinois:

The formal tone thawed when a joke was cracked.

The blooming tonka bean is used to flavor tobacco.

If you failed to notice her ring it was not her fault.

Real men do take a joke in the right spirit.

Call a man ten or more years over his age and it's a joke—but the gentle sex, oh my!

CREATING A STATE

Take a point of the compass, add a vehicle, add a fruit, subtract an article of kitchen furniture, add a facial feature, add a hot argument, subtract one end of a ship, add an old horse, add a girl, subtract a transparency, and the resulting letters will spell SOUTH CAROLINA.

A SOCIAL PUZZLE

Here is a problem that is going the rounds of our upper social circles:

It appears that Mrs. C. started out to call on Mme. K. and when she reached the domicile of the latter found that Mme. K. had been gone just eleven minutes on her way to Mrs. C.'s, so Mrs. C. at once returned to her own home.

Now, Mme. K. reached the C. mansion fifteen minutes after its mistress had departed, so she too returned home. On their return trips the ladies met at a point midway between their homes at just 4 o'clock.

The puzzling question is: What time did Mme. K. leave her home to call on her friend, Mrs. C.?

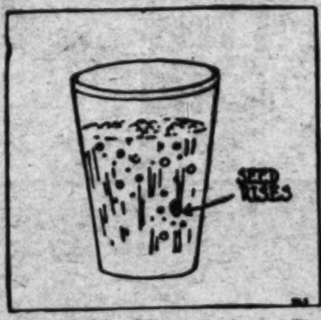
OF DUST THOU ART

Wouldn't it be a huge joke on the serious artists of our time if in 3000 years archaeologists should dig up a department-store cloak and suit model and write long criticisims about it as a great work of early American sculpture? The news dispatches indicate that the bust of a lady found in Tutenkhamun's sarcophagus was not a work of art at all, but merely a fitting bust. All this after expert critics have expatiated upon the fine artistic qualities of the thing! He who "Ahs!" last "Ahs!" best.—[Hartford Times.

LOVE LETTERS BY RADIO

A Swedish inventor has devised a machine which automatically turns radio telegrams into secret code as they are sent and translates them into straight text at the receiving station. That means such messages can be sent and received as secretly as if the sender and the receiver were the only two persons in the world. Imagine love letters by radio. Write them, send them and get the answer back in just a few minutes, no matter how many thousand miles in between. That ought to help some in the world's great business of creating more homes.- -[Capper's Weekly.

AFTER-DINNER TRICKS



The Magic Seed

A grape seed is dropped into a glass of ginger ale and sinks to the bottom. After it has remained there a few moments the performer makes magnetic passes above the glass and the seed slowly rises to the surface in a very mysterious manner.

The secret lies in the fact that the tiny effervescent bubbles in the ginger ale gather about the grape seed and lighten it, so that it will rise to the surface. If it is lifted out with a spoon, the air bubbles will immediately disappear, and the trick may be repeated.

WOMEN HUNT ELEPHANTS

Two women are on the way to the White Nile country to hunt elephants. They are Miss Myrtle Farquharson of Invercauld, a great favorite of the royal family, and Mrs. Loeffler. The latter and her husband are hosts of the party, in which are several men, including Lord Claud Hamilton and Capt. the Hon. Roger Coke.

At Khartum the party will board the steamer Gordon Pasha, chartered by Capt. Loeffler, which will be the party's headquarters. Every member of the expedition has taken out a license to shoot elephants, which is to be the primary object of the trip, and the height up the White Nile to which they penetrate will depend on where the best sport is found.—[London correspondence, New York World.

Passed Off Coyotes for Wolves

The opportunity for dishonest practice under the bounty system is well illustrated by a case that came to the attention of the predatory animal inspector of the Biological Survey stationed at Olympia, Wash. The auditor for Grant county, after paying out much money for "timber wolves," decided to send one of the "wolf" pelts to the district inspector of the Biological Survey for identification. It was pronounced a coyote pelt, although somewhat darker and larger than the average. The hunter who brought in the pelts claimed that the animals were driven down from the timber to the lowlands by forest fires. The local coyote bounty is $1, while that of the wolf is $15.—[Department of Agriculture Bulletin.

••••Verbenas••••

If properly woven into the scheme of your garden, there is nothing more effective when used as a carpet of color than a mass of verbenas in full bloom.

Verbenas, like hollyhocks and other old favorites, have been used in American gardens for generations and where a ground cover and mass of color is desired, they still hold first place in popular favor.

In addition to their wonderful array of color and their free-blooming qualities Verbenas have another outstanding feature which should not be overlooked. They possess a delightful fragrance and in the long summer evenings when we take full enjoyment from the cool of our porches and gardens, they fill the air with their exquisite perfume.

We have a splendid collection of these plants ready for immediate delivery and offer the following colors:

H & S CRIMSON KING:—The largest flowered verbena in existence. The individual flowers are enormous and have a color unequalled by any other verbena we have ever seen, being one of those deep, glorious crimsons that catch the eye at once. The Crimson King Verbena produces a constant sheet of bloom from spring to late autumn.

Price—15c each; per dozen, $1.50.

H & S ELLEN WILMOTT:—Unquestionably the best of all deep-rose colored verbenas. Flowers and trusses of splendid size with a color tone of charming effect.

Price—10c each; per dozen, $1.00.

H & S LAVENDER QUEEN:—This variety is also the result of our crosses. The color is a beautiful shade of pure lavender. Trusses extra large.

Price—15c each; per dozen, $1.50.

H & S PURPLE KING:—A vivid bluish purple and unquestionably the best of its color.

Price—15c each; per dozen, $1.50.

H & S SCARLET QUEEN:—Almost as large as the Crimson King, but the color is lighter, being a deep velvety scarlet.

Price—15c each; per dozen, $1.50.

H & S GIANT MIXED—A splendid strain of giant types containing rich and varied shades of lavender, claret, purple, garnet, cherry red, etc.

Price—10c each; per dozen, $1.00.

(When ordering by mail 10c extra per dozen is required for postage.)

Just-Rite Waffles

1¼ cups Globe "A1" Flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon Globe "A1" Corn Meal
1 egg
2 tablespoons Adola Oil
1 cup milk

Sift the flour before measuring, then add the baking powder, salt and corn meal. Sift again. Beat the egg until light, add the oil and beat a moment longer, then add the milk. Pour this liquid mixture into the dry mixture and beat thoroughly. Bake in hot waffle iron that has been lightly brushed with Adola Oil. This recipe makes 4 or 5 waffles.

DEUTSCHLAND'S DANCE OF DEATH

man who has only his pension has an income of about 17 cents.

What can such men do? They might live off their relatives, but their families have also been ruined. The answer is difficult. Some of the old sea captains are acting as night-watchmen, others are door-keepers in business establishments, and others are trying to learn petty trades which old men can follow. This is merely one class of the vast number of people who have been ruined by the breaking down of the financial system of Germany.

The fall of the mark has meant life to the debtor and death to the creditor. It has affected every mortgage by forcing its holder to take $1, gold value, for every $12,000 he got as a loan before or during the war. To give a concrete instance, there is a piece of property here in Berlin which had a ten years' mortgage put on it in 1913. The mortgages was for 100,000 marks, or what was then equal to $25,000 in gold. That mortgage comes due this year and its owner can collect no more than 100,000 marks. He will get it in paper and it will have a gold value of only $2 to $3. In the meantime I happen to know that the man who borrowed this 100,000 marks has used it to buy other properties, which, if Germany comes back, will sell for more than $25,000. In that case he will have in hand the amount he has borrowed and it will not have cost him one cent.

Mortgages of all kinds are being paid off by those who can scrape together the marks represented by the figures on the face of the note, and every one is getting rid of his debts at this enormous reduction. Companies of large capital and municipalities are paying off their bonds. For instance, the North German Lloyd and Hamburg-American Steamship Company have an indebtedness of $32,500,000 in bonds subject to call. They will pay these April 1st and the sum required, according to the arrangements now pending, will be less than $7000.

Farm Mortgages Rapidly Disappearing in Germany

THE farmers of Germany, as a class, have been getting rid of their indebtedness. Their incomes have been less affected than those of other classes and many of the mortgages have been cleared. It is interesting to know how such a situation would change the condition of our farmers at home. In 1920 we had farm loans amounting to more than $4,000,000,000. Supposing they were in Germany, they could be paid off for $333,000 and the annual interest charge, which is a little over 6 per cent, would be reduced from $240,000,000 to just about $166 per month. New England owes over $90,000,000 on her farms. She could clear every one of them for the lump sum of $7500. The Massachusetts farmers owe altogether $24,000,000. It would take only $2000 to clear them, and the total amount of interest they would annually pay would fall from over $1,300,000 to $112 all told.

Pennsylvania owes $88,000,000 in such mortgages. Less than $8000 would make every farm clear, and as to Ohio, its great farm indebtedness would drop to the pitiful sum of $10,000 in comparison with the $120,000,000 which it is today.

A striking example of what would take place is shown by the farms of Missouri. In 1920 the average value of each farm was $11,000, the average mortgage was $3000 and the rate of interest was 6 per cent. If that land and its indebtedness could be slid over to Germany, the land would still hold a great part of its value, but every mortgage would require only 25 gold cents to pay it off, while the farmers' interest charge of $180 would be reduced to 1½ cents per annum.

Many of the people of Berlin have been reduced to such straits that one frequently sees them picking over the garbage and refuse of the streets for stray bits of fuel and food.

But how about the capitalist, the owner of the mortgages? He suffers, of course, and he has no means of helping himself. He may have a thousand dollar note paid today, and the money received would not get him a haircut in any barber shop in the United States. He might have a $20,000 note, made before the inflation, paid, and the sum would be barely enough to give him one night's lodging in a second-class hotel in New York.

In this way have disappeared the accumulated fortunes of the thrifty German investors of before and during the war. You may see here, riding in the motor busses and walking the streets, men and women who used to have their automobiles, and who now have not enough for a new suit of clothes. All of the saving people of the past have suffered and all incentive to save for the future seems to have gone. One spends all he makes, and gets his money as quickly as possible into concrete things which are sure to have some value tomorrow.

Just one more example to show how the fall of the mark affects such things as pensions and government awards. In 1921 we paid out about $250,000,000 in pensions, to more than 500,000 widows and invalids. If we had had the conditions of Germany, each of those pensioners would have got, on an average, less than one-half cent a month. Suppose the bonus bill should pass, and each of our soldiers be awarded $500, and, before the money could be paid, out of the financial sky should come a flash like that which has cut the German Republic wide open. Then the doughboy's $500 would shrink to 4 cents, and his conditions of living would be such that he would be glad to walk five miles to get it.

FRANK G. CARPENTER.

still bears traces of comeliness—was then an uncommonly pleasing countenance. His now booze-puffed figure was then symmetrical in outline, and the shambling gait was then a quick, springy stride.

This superb equestrian whom I shall call by the fictitious name of Johnny Jones, did an act that was the very acme of expert [illegible] in concluding his act he [illegible]. The second animal was [illegible]. When released, the spirited equine darted off like a stampeded wild [illegible]. The musicians tooted a lively tune on their blaring instruments; the pompous ringmaster cracked his whip incessantly, while the rider's "go long Jim," was interspersed by various seemingly impossible feats of equilibrium and acrobatic stunts of equestrianism that thrilled and startled the spectators. The enthusiastic applause accorded his performance at its conclusion, amply attested the deep appreciation of the audience.

Brilliant Career Blotted Out in Love of the White Lights

BUT Johnny was by no means the superior being mentally that he was physically, and he suffered from having too much success. He was unable to withstand the lure of the white lights and was a frequent visitor at the resorts where the bright incandescents glowed and corks popped merrily.

As time progressed the drinking habit fastened itself upon him with a firmer hold until it had forged chains that his weak will power was unable to break and he eventually degenerated into a confirmed sot.

Although Johnny's present life is but a tarnished remnant of what had been a glittering career; and he is broken in spirit, health and purse and has descended to the gutter and apparently is beyond the pale of redemption, yet he is not wholly friendless. His remarkable agility, indomitable courage, prodigal generosity and charitable impulses, are still kindly remembered by the spangled fraternity. Admiration for an erstwhile talented artist; pity for a professional brother in the clutches of a terrible craving, linked with the belief that this poor devil's booze and drug soaked body would be in absolute misery if deprived of its accustomed poison, are among the sentimental reasons that impel performers to contribute money which possibly most laymen condemn as injudicious charity.

OUTDOOR SHOPPING

combination: "Pies and Dohnuts, Fat Hens, Geese and Honey."

At another place we come upon a shack which is almost covered with moth-eaten bear, wolf and deer skins that are for sale.

A bachelor girl friend of ours insists that she has seen advertised on these roadside signs almost everything except "Husbands For Sale,' but she has hopes of even running across that some day in her travels.

Our last objective point is a vine-covered bungalow, a bit off the main road, where you can purchase "Cottage Cheese, Day-old Chicks and Eggs from Contented Hens." A neat gingham-clad woman is in charge of the pretty white hens that seem to fairly swarm in the yards back of the house. In answer to the inquiry as to how contentment is assured to her flock, their mistress smiled demurely and replied:

"After they have been fed each morning by our Mexican, I come out and say to them, 'Good morning hens! Have you everything you wish?' and that keeps them satisfied."

Free from the nerve strain that usually accompanies a buying expedition in the city, we drive home facing the glories of the setting sun as he is just slipping down behind the mountains. The sky is paneled with rose, pink and golden clouds, that undergo rapid transformations as we watch them, and we reach home at last with our well-filled car, happy and satisfied with the results of our country shopping.

Should Take It All

We read of a doctor in New York submitting to a surgical operation the other day "just to see how it feels." Somehow or other we refuse to believe it was just idle curiosity that prompted the act. Must have been in the interest of science. And to carry out the idea completely he should pay the big bill that always follows a surgical operation.—[Florida Times Union.

With Ivy and Ella I see you there
In star-eyed girlhood's fresh loveliness;

Lucy and Crilla, Louise and Grace,
Edna, Viola, Kathie and Jean,
Each smiling again from a winsome face—
Ah, lovelier maidens never were seen!

Yea, most of you married and mothers now
Have daughters standing where once you stood,
Dreaming those dreams to which we all bow
When youth is the glory that makes life good.

Dear classmates all, though the schooling's done
And youth, sweet youth, is a thing long past,
Yet ever I'll see you on youth's feet run
As long as a dream in my life shall last!

The Golden Call

IN THE synagogue of the Congregation of the Faithful there sits regularly every blessed Sabbath morning a brother whose habitat is the far-flung village of Hollywood.

Brother Draper—that's his name—has sounded a golden trumpet call from the land of sunshine to the denizens of the benighted and frozen East, and he thinks that maybe it would sound good to have the tune of it played in the synagogue between the prayers, the speeches and the hymns.

And we think it would sound good. But, it is a long tune, and we will give only a strain of it, because there are so many other numbers on the program, as you might say.

Well, here is one of the blasts from Brother Draper's golden trumpet:

"When the old house creaks at midnight
With the cold that's so intense,
And snowdrifts grow higher and higher
Till they cover the barnyard fence;
Just put on your old gray bonnet,
You wore so long ago,
And come to the land of sunshine,
Away from the ice and snow."

By gollies, that's the way to talk to them. Just tell them to put on their old gray bonnets and come right out here to California.

Going Straight and Strong

A FEW evenings ago, who should we come across over at San Gabriel, but Harry James and a squadron of his Western Rangers.

If you have never met Harry James you must make some way to do so. And especially if you have a boy of your own. And when you meet Harry tell him for us that we want him to have your boy join the Western Rangers.

That's what the Western Rangers are—boys. Boys who are going straight and strong. And this clear-eyed, clear-souled young fellow, Harry James, is their Chief. If God had given a boy to us we would want him to be a lot of the time in the hands of Harry James.

With the Western Rangers a boy must go straight and strong, both in mind and in body. He learns what is in God's great out-of-doors. He is taught to be fearless and to be gentle. He will be a boy who would not needlessly set foot upon a worm. He will know how to use his hands and his brain. And if his country needs him, he will be found fit and ready.

Harry James is not making money. He is doing a far bigger thing than that. He is making men.

Can It Be Done?

ABOUT two Sundays ago, or maybe three, a man strolled into the synagogue from out in the neighborhood of the bright and fast-growing city of Alhambra. He came in, it seems, to ask a question.

It was a question which, at first glance, you would think to be a very strange question for any man to ask. But when you come to turn it over, as the saying is, you realize that the man with his question represents a very large class of the world's population. For want of a better name, we would call it the vicarious class. People who believe in things that they do not do themselves, but are glad enough when others do them for them.

Conductor, said the man to us before he was in the synagogue two minutes, I would like to inquire whether you have associate memberships in the Congregation of the Faithful. What I mean, said he, is this, can a man who doesn't meet the full requirements of the Congregation still have some sort of a hold on your good ship of grace?

Well, sir, to say that we were taken off our feet by this question, is to put the matter mildly.

As everybody in the world knows by this time, all that a man need do to be a full-fledged member of our Congregation of the Faithful is to say his prayers every morning and every night. Not a thing else in the world need he do. He can go to any church he pleases, or to no church at all, although he would be the better for it if he would go to some church. He can be of any race that the good Lord has created, he can smoke a pipe if he likes, go to the movies, play pinochle, march in parades, and still be a member of the Congregation of the Faithful. But he must say his prayers when he awakes in the morning, and he must say them before he goes to sleep at night. The simplest thing in the world is it to be a member of the Congregation of the Faithful.

But here is a man who, as far as we could make him out, wants somebody else to say his prayers for him. He makes us think of the old story of the man who had the Lord's Prayer printed on a piece of paper which he tacked on the head of his bed. And every night when he was going to sleep he would wave his hand at the piece of paper on his bedstead, saying, "Those are my sentiments."

Of course, it is not for the unworthy Conductor of this poor, blundering page to say whether or not associate memberships in the Congregation of the Faithful shall be created. It is for the Congregation itself to settle all matters of this nature, as it is proper to do in all pure democracies, whether they be religious or political. Vox populi, vox Dei, as the saying is. Let the people rule.

Now, it will take a long time to get the full vote in on this question, because the members of the Congregation are scattered to the four corners of the earth. And the eaves of the synagogue are spread over every land and every clime. And it may be years and years before the returns are all in.

But, as far as we, ourself, can have a say in the matter, we do not hesitate, right here and now, to record our vote against the proposition.

In the first place, it is a bad thing for a man to depend upon others to do his praying. He must knock at the door with his own knuckles if he really hopes to have it opened unto him. If he would receive, he must, himself, ask.

And, the spiritual laziness of the idea is appalling. To think that a man didn't make the simple effort of thanking the good Lord for his mercies, and to petition the Throne of Grace for blessings. Some men seem to think that when they contribute their share of the minister's salary they have done all that is necessary. They leave it to the minister to do the praying for them.

But we fear that when they face St. Peter at the Jasper Gates they will have a hard time getting by with it.

And still, as we have often said before, who are we that we should judge our neighbor?

The Winding Way

When twilight falls on Mission walls
The throaty voice of bells is still;
The herdsmen cry as from the sky
And night birds call from distant hill.
The fragrant air is still; somewhere
The vibrant tone of sweet guitars.
With flashing eyes a lover sighs
Without the narrow casement bars.
Those scenes of old again unfold
The winding way of sandaled feet,
Where ocean vies with sunny skies
And laughing waves and flowers meet.
The sunshine gleams on silvery streams
And nodding poppy fields unfold
A mantle sheen, where upland green
And bosomed hills are hemmed with gold
On templed hills where sunshine fills
The heart, where orange blossoms blow,
On bended knee I bow to thee
In reverence—Junipero!

The Poets

THE unworthy Conductor of this poor, blundering page receives many hundreds of poems in his mail. And the dickens of it is that he reads them all. Poetry is a weakness with him, even as strong drink is a weakness with some men.

And, one day not long ago, there came a poem from a poet who said we could print it on this page if the editor would send him a check for it, which the editor declined to do.

So, that's the way it goes with poets. They fill the world with the music of their words, their "eye in a fine frenzy rolling," as Shakespeare said; they give to airy nothings a local habitation and a name, as Shakespeare said also; but they never get rich, and lots of them die as poor as a church mouse and Job's turkey put together.

John Milton didn't get enough for "Paradise Lost" to buy himself more than a couple of loads of coal. And here, just lately, Hausman's "Shropshire Lad" book of verses—a "first copy"—sold for a fortune. A fortune for the book collector who sold it. But that same book brought only about 7 cents to Hausman when it sold originally.

It is, indeed, a true saying that "Poets are born, not paid." But it is worth being poor to sit as a younger brother with Homer and Tasso and Longfellow and the others of that palm-crowned company whose names will never die.

The Laughter Club

WE MET a strange kind of a man, there awhile back, and we would like to tell you about him, and what he said.

It was a misty morning, and we had gone down to the harbor of San Pedro to have a look at the ships. The blood of old Phoenician sailormen is in our veins, and that must be the reason that ships lure us. Every so often we go down to the harbor and watch the ships come in from sea with brown-cheeked, bearded sailormen on their decks.

And always when a ship sails from the harbor to seek some far-away port, we wish we could go with it, and that the port were a port of Spain.

But, we are getting away from our story.

Well, the man we met on this day we are telling you about, somehow got us to laughing before we had been with him two minutes, or maybe three. Not in many a long day had we laughed so much and so heartily as we laughed that day, sitting on a wharf of the harbor of San Pedro with a man we had never seen before in our life.

And we told the man as much, and that we had to thank him for an unwonted hour of jollity.

Then, I have had a successful day, said the man; for, it is my business in life to make people laugh.

So, we said to him, you are an actor. Maybe it is that you have a job in the minstrels, or the movies.

I am no actor, he replied, but the employee of a wealthy gentleman whose name I am not permitted to mention. He is a man burning with the fires of charity, and, in casting about as to which way he can help his fellow-men most, he came to the conclusion that the thing that is needed most in the world is laughter. He says that the world doesn't know how to laugh, any more. And that when it smiles, even—which is rarely—it does it in such a sickly way as to break a man's heart.

So, I and many others are employed by this eccentric yet kindly gentleman, to go about making people laugh. We are oath-bound brothers of what he calls "The Laughter Club." We are sworn to good cheer, and hopefulness. And we are deadly enemies of the devil and all his works.

Well, sir, we were never more amazed in our life than we were then when we hard of "The Laughter Club."

And we offered the stranger $2 and a cigar if he would tell us the gentleman's name. But he refused to be bribed. And he left us to hunt up someone else who needed a good laugh to make his liver work right.

The Calamity Man

ONE evening not long ago when we happened to be near the house of the man who reads the papers, we took a notion to run in on him, as the saying is, and inquire about the news and what is going on in the world.

By gollies, Conductor, said the man who reads the papers, the minute he sets eyes on us, by gollies, he said, I'm glad you came in. A fellow has just left the house, he said, who came pretty nearly wearing me out.

Was he a man from the roaring town? we asked. And the man who reads the papers answered and said, yes, he [illegible] a man from the roaring town.

Oh, well, we replied, you mustn't mind them. You see, those roaring town fellows get crotchety and kind of cranky. And it's no wonder, he said; with all those noises forever dinning in their ears, day and night, year in and year out, Sunday and Monday and all.

It isn't that, said the man who reads the papers. I don't mind them being nervous and ready to jump out of their boots if an owl hoots at them. But, this fellow I am talking about is a calamity howler along with other faults he has.

Dang it, said the man who reads the papers, if you would listen to this fellow you would think the world is coming to an end, that the bottom is going to drop out of business, the crops will fail, another war is about to break loose, and all the married couples on earth are headed for the divorce court.

I just showed this bird the loveliest and most beautiful sunset I ever saw on the Ventura Mountains, said the man who reads the papers, and all he could say was that I would better take a good look at it because there aren't going to be more than maybe two or three sunsets again for anybody living on this earth to see.

Well, maybe the fellow is right, we said, thinking to have a little quiet fun at the expense of our dear old neighbor.

Right, the dickens, shouted the man who reads the papers. That kind of a man ought to be put in a hole in the ground without any skylights to it. He is a pest and seventeen different kinds of a nuisance. And he ought to get a dose of his own medicine instead of being permitted to go around sneering at this beautiful world and the way God made it.

By gollies, the man who reads the papers was mad all over.

THE THINKING MACHINE

Having gone this far without falling into anything, the reporter was willing to plunge—felt that he had to, as a matter of fact.

"He said yes," he murmured without shifting his eyes from the revolver.

"Yes?" the woman repeated again eagerly. "Are you sure?"

"Yes," said the reporter again. The thought flashed through his mind that he was tangling up somebody's affairs sadly—he didn't know whose. Anyhow, it was a matter of no consequence to him, as long as that revolver stared at him that way.

"Where is it?" asked the woman.

Then the earth slipped out from under him. "I don't know," he replied weakly.

"Didn't he give it to you?"

"Oh, no. He—he wouldn't trust me with it."

"How can I get it, then?"

"Oh, he'll fix it all right," Hatch assured her soothingly. "I think he said something about tomorrow night."

"Where?"

"Here."

"Thank God!" the woman gasped suddenly. Her tone betrayed deep emotion; but it wasn't so deep that she lowered the revolver.

There was a long pause. Hatch was figuring possibilities. How to get possession of the revolver seemed the imminent problem. His hands were still in the air, and there was nothing to indicate that they were not to remain there indefinitely. The woman finally broke the silence.

"Are you armed?"

"Oh, no."

"Truthfully?"

"Truthfully."

"You may lower your hands," she said, as if satisfied; "then go on ahead of me straight across the field to the road. Turn to your left there. Don't look back under any circumstances. I shall be behind you with this revolver pointing at your head. If you attempt to escape or make any outcry I shall shoot. Do you believe me?"

The reporter considered it for a moment. "I'm firmly convinced of it," he said at last.

They stumbled on to the road, and there Hatch turned as directed. Walking along in the shadows with the tread of small feet behind him he first contemplated a dash for liberty; but that would mean giving up the adventure, whatever it was. He had no fear for his personal safety as long as he obeyed orders, and he intended to do that implicitly. And besides, the Thinking Machine had his slender finger in the pie somewhere. Hatch knew that, and knowing it was a source of deep gratification.

Just now he was taking things at face value, hoping that with their arrival at whatever place they were bound for he would be further enlightened. Once he thought he heard the woman sobbing, and started to look back. Then he remembered her warning, and thought better of it. Had he looked back he would have seen her stumbling along, weeping, with the revolver dangling limply at her side.

At last a mile or more farther on, they began to arrive somewhere. A house sat back some distance from the road.

"Go in there!" commanded his captor.

He turned in at the gate, and five minutes later stood in a comfortable furnished room on the ground floor of a small house. A dim light was burning. The woman turned it up. Then almost defiantly she threw aside her veil and hat and stood before him. Hatch gasped. She was pretty—bewilderingly pretty—and young and graceful and all that a young woman should be. Her cheeks were flushed.

"You know me, I suppose?" she exclaimed.

"Oh, yes, certainly," Hatch assured her.

And saying that, he knew he had never seen her before.

"I suppose you thought it perfectly horrid of me to keep you with your hands up like that all the time, but I was dreadfully frightened," the woman went on, and she smiled a little uncertainly. "But there wasn't anything else to do."

"It was the only thing," Hatch agreed.

"Now I'm going to ask you to write and tell him just what happened," she resumed. "And tell him, too, that the other matter must be arranged immediately. I'll see that your letter is delivered. Sit here."

She picked up the revolver from the table beside her and placed a chair in position. Hatch walked to the table and sat down. Pen and ink lay before him. He knew now he was trapped. He couldn't write a letter to that vague "him" of whom he had talked so glibly, about that still more vague "it"—whatever that might be. He sat dumbly staring at the paper.

"Well?" she demanded suspiciously.

"I don't know it," he confessed suddenly.

She stared at him coldly for a moment as if she had expected just that, and he in turn stared at the revolver with a new and vital interest. He felt the tension, but saw no way to relieve it.

"You are an imposter!" she burst out at last. "A detective?"

Hatch didn't deny it. She backed away toward a bell call near the door, watching him closely, and rang vigorously several times. After a little pause the door opened, and two men, evidently servants, entered.

"Take this gentleman to the rear room up stairs," she commanded without giving them a glance, "and lock him up. Keep him under close guard. If he attempts to escape, stop him! That's all."

Here was another page from a Dumas romance. The reporter started to explain; but there was a merciless gleam, danger even, in the woman's eyes, and he submitted to orders. So, he was led upstairs a captive, and one of the men took a place on guard inside the room.

The dawn was creeping on when Hatch fell asleep. It was about 10 o'clock when he awoke, and the sun was high. His guard, wide eyed and alert, still sat beside the door. For several minutes the reporter lay still, seeking vainly some sort of explanation of what was happening. Then, cheerfully:

"Good morning."

The guard merely glared at him.

"May I inquire your name?" the reporter asked.

There was no answer.

"Or the lady's name?"

No answer.

"Or where I am?"

No answer.

"Or why I am where I am?"

Still no answer.

"What would you do," Hatch went on casually, "if I should try to get out of here?"

The guard handled his revolver caressingly. The reporter was satisfied. "He is not deaf, that's certain," he told himself.

He spent the remainder of the morning yawning and wondering what the Thinking Machine was about; also he had a few casual reflections as to the mental state of his city editor at his failure to appear and follow up the kidnaping story. He finally dismissed all these ideas with a shrug of his shoulders, and sat down to wait for whatever was coming.

It was in the early afternoon that he heard laughter in the next room. First there was a woman's voice, then the shrill cackle of a child. Finally he distinguished some words.

"You ticky!" exclaimed the child, and again there was the laugh.

The reporter understood "you ticky," coupled with the subsequent peal, to be a sort of abbreviated English for "you tickle." After awhile the merriment died away and he heard the child's insistent demand for something else.

"You be hossie."

"No, no," the woman expostulated.

"Yes, you be hossie."

"No, let Morris be hossie."

"No, no. You be hossie."

That was all. Evidently some one was "hossie," because there was a sound of romping; but finally even that died away. Hatch yawned away another hour or so under the constant eye of his guard, and then began to grow restless. He turned on the guard savagely.

"Isn't anything ever going to happen?" he demanded.

The guard didn't say.

"You'll never convict yourself on your own statement," Hatch burst out again in disgust.

He stretched out on a couch, bored by the sameness which had characterized the last few hours of his adventure. His attention was attracted by some movement at the door, and he looked up. His guard heard, too, and with revolver in hand went to the door, carefully unlocking it. After a few hurriedly whispered words he left the room, and Hatch was meditating an instant rush for a window, when the woman entered. She had the revolver now. She was deathly white and gripped the weapon menacingly. She did not lock the door—only closed it—but with her own person and the attention compelling revolver she blocked the way.

"What is it now?" asked Hatch wearily.

"You must not speak or call, or make the slightest sound," she whispered tensely. "If you do, I'll kill you. Do you understand?"

Hatch confessed by a nod that he understood. He also imagined that he understood this sudden change in guard, and the warning. It was because some one was about to enter or had entered the house. His conjecture was partially confirmed instantly by a distant rapping on a door.

"Not a sound, now!" whispered the woman.

From somewhere below he heard the sound of steps as one of the servants answered the knock. After a short wait he heard two voices mumbling. Suddenly one was raised clearly.

"Why, Worcester, can't be that far," it protested irritably.

Hatch knew. It was the Thinking Machine. The woman noted a change in his manner and drew back the hammer of the revolver. The reporter saw the idea. He didn't dare call. That would be suicide. Perhaps he could attract attention, though: drop a key, for instance. The sound might reach the Thinking Machine and be interpreted aright. One hand was in a pocket, and slowly he was drawing out a key. He would risk it. Maybe—

Then came a new sound. It was the patter of small feet. The guarded door was pushed open, and a tousle-headed child, a boy, ran in.

"Mama, mama!" he called loudly. He ran to the woman and clutched at her skirts.

"Oh, my baby! what have you done?" she asked piteously. "We are lost!"

"Me 'fraid," the child went on.

With the door—his avenue of possible escape—open, Hatch did not drop the key. Instead, he gazed at the woman, then down at the child. From below he again heard the Thinking Machine.

"How far is the car track, then?"

The servant answered something. There was a sound of steps, and the front door closed. Hatch knew that the Thinking Machine had come and gone; yet he was strangely calm about it, quite himself, despite the fact that a nervous finger still lay on the trigger of the pistol.

From his refuge behind his mother's skirt the boy peered around at Hatch shyly. The reporter gazed, gazed all eyes, and then was convinced. The boy was Walter Francis, the kidnaped boy whose picture were being published in every newspaper of a dozen cities. Here was a story—the story—the superlative story.

"Mrs. Francis, if you wouldn't mind letting down that hammer—" he suggested modestly. "I assure you I contemplate no harm, and you—you are very nervous."

"You know me, then?" he asked.

"Only because the child there, Walter, called you mama."

Mrs. Francis lowered the revolver hammer so recklessly that Hatch involuntarily dodged. And then came a scene, a scene with tears in it, and all those things which stir men, even reporters. Finally the woman dropped the revolver on the floor and swept the boy up in her arms with a gesture of infinite tenderness. He cuddled there, content. At that moment Hatch could have walked out the door, but instead he sat down. He was just beginning to get inttrested.

"They shan't take you!" sobbed the mother.

"There is no immediate danger," the reporter assured her. "The man who came here for that purpose has gone. Meanwhile, if you will tell me the facts, perhaps—perhaps I may be able to be of some assistance."

Mrs. Francis looked at him, startled. "Help me?"

"If you will explain, perhaps I can do something," said Hatch again.

Somewhere back in a remote recess of his brain he was remembering. And as it became clearer he was surprised that he had not remembered sooner. It was a story of marital infelicity, and its principals were Stanley Francis and his wife—this bewilderingly pretty young woman before him. It had been only eight or nine months back.

Technically she had deserted Stanley Francis. There had been some violent scenes and she left their home and little son. Soon afterward she went to Europe. It had been rumored that divorce proceedings would follow, or at least a legal separation, but nothing had ever come of the rumors. All this Mrs. Francis told to Hatch in little incoherent bursts, punctuated with sobs and tears.

"He struck me, he struck me!" she declared with a flush of anger and shame, "and I went then on impulse. I was desperate. Later, even before I went to Europe, I knew the legal status of the affair; but the thought of my boy lingered, and I resolved to come back and get him—abduct him, if necessary. I did that, and I will keep him if I have to kill the one who opposes me."

Hatch saw the mother instinct here, that tigerish ferocity of love which stops at nothing.

"I conceived the plea of demanding $50,000 of my husband under threat of abduction," Mrs. Francis went on. "My purpose was to make it appear that the plot was that of professional—what would you call it?—kidnapers. But I did not send the letter demanding this until I had perfected all my plans and knew I could get the boy. I wanted my husband to think it was the work of others, at least until we were safe in Europe, because even then I imagined there would be a long legal fight.

"After I stole the boy and he recognised me, I wanted him as my own, absolutely safe from legal action by his father. Then I wrote to Mr. Francis, telling him I had Walter, and asking that in pity to me he legally give me the boy by a document of some sort. In that letter I told how he might signify his willingness to do this; but of course I would not give my address. I placed a string, the one you saw, in that tree after having tied two knots in it. It was a silly, romantic means of communication he and I used years ago in my girlhood when we both lived near here. If he agreed that I should have the child, he was to come or send some one last night and untie one of the two knots."

Then, to Hatch, the intricacies passed away. He understood clearly. Instead of going to the police with the second letter from his wife, Francis had gone to the Thinking Machine. The Thinking Machine sent the reporter to untie the knot, which was an answer of "Yes" to Mrs. Francis's request for the child. Then she would have written giving her address, and there would have been a clew to the child's whereabouts. It was all perfectly clear now.

"Did you specifically mention a string in your letter?" he asked.

"No. I merely stated that I would leave something there by which he could signify 'Yes' or 'No,' as he did years ago. The string was one of the odd little ideas of my girlhood. Two knots meant 'No;' one knot meant 'Yes'; and if the string was found by anyone else it meant nothing."

This, then, was why the Thinking Machine did not tell him at first that he would find a string and instruct him to untie one of the knots in it. The scientist had seen that it might have been one of the other tokens of the old romantic days.

"When I met you there," Mrs. Francis resumed, "I believed you were an imposter—I don't know why, I just believed it—yet your answers were in a way correct. For fear you were not what you seemed—that you were a detective—I brought you here to keep you until I got the child's release. You know the rest."

The reporter picked up the revolver and whirled it in his fingers. The action, apparently, did not disturb Mrs. Francis.

"Why, did you remain here so long after you got the child?" asked Hatch.

"I believed it was safer than in a city," she answered frankly. "The steamer on which I planned to sail for Europe with my boy leaves tomorrow. I had intended going to New York tonight to catch it; but now—"

The reporter glanced down at the child. He had fallen asleep in his mother's arms. His tiny hands clung to her. The picture was a pretty one. Hatch made up his mind.

"Well, you'd better pack up," he said. "I'll go with you to New York and do all I can."

It was on the New York bound train several hours later that Hatch turned to Mrs. Francis with an odd smile.

"Why didn't you load that revolver?" he asked.

"Because I was horribly afraid some one would get hurt with it," she replied laughingly.

She was gay with that gentle happiness of possession which blesses woman for the agonies of motherhood, and glanced from time to time at the berth across the aisle where her baby was asleep. Looking upon it all, Hatch was content. He didn't know his exact position in law; but that didn't matter, after all.

Hutchinson Hatch's exclusive story of the escape to Europe of Mrs. Francis and her boy was remarkably complete, but all the facts were not in it. It was a week or so later that he detailed them to the Thinking Machine.

"I knew it," said the scientist at the end. "Francis came to me, and I interested myself in the case, practically knowing every fact from his statement. When you heard me speak in the house where you were a prisoner I was there merely to convince myself that the mother did have the baby. I heard it call her and went away satisfied. I knew you were there, too, because you had failed to 'phone me the second time as I expected, and I knew intuitively what you would do when you got the real facts about Mrs. Francis and her baby. I went away so that the field might be clear for you to act. Francis himself is a detestable puppy. I told him so."

And that was all that was ever said about it.

The Thinking Machine

by Jacques Futrelle

PROBLEM OF THE PIECE OF STRING

IT WAS just midnight. Somewhere near the center of a cloud of tobacco smoke, which hovered over one corner of the long editorial room, Hutchinson Hatch, reporter, was writing. The rapid click-click of his typewriter went on and on, broken only when he laid aside one sheet to put in another. The finished pages were seized upon one at a time by an office boy and rushed off to the city editor. That astute person glanced at them for information and sent them on to the copy desk, whence they were shot down into that noisy chaotic wilderness, the composing room.

The story was what the phlegmatic head of the copy desk, speaking in the vernacular, would have called a "beaut." It was about the kidnaping that afternoon of Walter Francis, the 4-year-old son of a wealthy young broker, Stanley Francis. An alternative to the abduction had been proposed in the form of a gift to certain persons, identity unknown, of $50,000. Francis, not unnaturally, objected to the bestowal of so vast a sum upon anyone. So hetold the police, and while they were making up their minds the child was stolen. It happened in the usual way—closed carriage, and all that sort of thing.

Hatch was telling the story graphically, as he could tell a story when there was one to be told. He glanced at the clock, jerked out another sheet of copy, and the office boy scuttled away with it.

"How much more?" called the city editor.

"Just a paragraph," Hatch answered. His typewriter clicked on merrily for a couple of minutes and then stopped. The last sheet of copy was taken away, and he rose and stretched his legs.

"Some guy wants yer at the 'phone," an office boy told him.

"Who is it?" asked Hatch.

"Search me," replied the boy. "Talks like he'd been eatin' pickles."

Hatch went into the booth indicated. The man at the other end was Prof. Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen. The reporter instantly recognized the crabbed, perpetually irritated voice of the noted scientist, the Thinking Machine.

"That you, Mr. Hatch?" came over the wire.

"Yes."

"Can you do something for me immediately?" he queried. "It is very important."

"Certainly."

"Now listen closely," directed the Thinking Machine. "Take a car from Park Square, the one that goes toward Worcester through Brookline. About two miles beyond Brookline is Randall's Crossing. Get off there and go to your right until you come to a small white house. In front of this house, a little to the left and across an open field, is a large tree. It stands just in the edge of a dense wood. It might be better to approach it through the wood, so as not to attract attention. Do you follow me?"

"Yes," Hatch replied. His imagination was leading him a chase.

"Go to this tree now, immediately, tonight," continued the Thinking Machine. "You will find a small hole in it near the level of your eye. Feel in that hole, and see what is there—no matter what it is—then return to Brookline and telephone me. It is of the greatest importance."

The reporter was thoughtful for moment; it sounded like a page from a Dumas romance.

"What's it all about?" he asked curiously.

"Will you go?" came the counter-question.

"Yes, certainly."

"Good-by."

Hatch heard a click as the receiver was hung up at the other end. He shrugged his shoulders, said "Good night" to the city editor, and went out. An hour later he was at Randall's Crossing. The night was dark—so dark that the road was barely visible. The car whirled on, and as its lights were swallowed up Hatch set out to find the white house. He came upon it at last, and, turning, faced across an open field toward the wood. Far away over there, outlined vaguely against the distant glow of the city, was a tall tree!

Having fixed its location, the reporter moved along for a hundred yards or more to where the wood ran down to the road. Here he climbed a fence and stumbled on through the dark, doing sundry injuries to his shins. After a disagreeable ten minutes he reached the tree.

With a small electric flashlight he found the hole. It was only a little larger than his hand, a place where decay had eaten its way into the tree trunk. For just a moment he hesitated about putting his hand into it—he didn't know what might be there. Then, with a grim smile, he obeyed orders.

He felt nothing save crumblings of decayed wood, and finally dragged out a handful, only to spill it on the ground. That couldn't be what was meant. For the second time he thrust in his hand, and after a deal of grabbing about produced—a piece of string. It was just a plain, ordinary, common piece of string—white string. He stared at it and smiled.

"I wonder what Van Dusen will make of that?" he asked himself.

Again his hand was thrust into the hole. But that was all—the piece of string. Then came another thought and with due regard for detail which made him a good reporter he went looking around the big tree for a possible second opening of some sort. He found none.

About three-quarters of an hour later he stepped into an all-night drug store in Brookline and 'phoned to the Thinking Machine. There was an instant response to his ring.

"Well, well, what did you find?" came the query.

"Nothing to interest you, I imagine," replied the reporter grimly. "Just a piece of string."

"Good, good!" exclaimed the Thinking Machine. "What does it look like?"

"Well," replied the newspaper man judicially, "it's just a piece of white string—cotton, I imagine—about six inches long."

"Any knots in it?"

"Wait till I see."

He was reaching into his pocket to take it out, when the startled voice of the Thinking Machine came over the line.

"Didn't you leave it there?" it demanded.

"No, I have it in my pocket."

"Dear me!" exclaimed the scientist, irritably. "That's bad. Well, has it any knots in it?" he asked with marked resignation.

Hatch felt that he had committed the unpardonable sin. "Yes," he replied after an examination, "it has two knots in it—just plain knots—about two inches apart."

"Single or double knots?"

"Single knots."

"Excellent! Now, Mr. Hatch, listen. Untie one of those knots—it doesn't matter which one—and carefully smooth out the string. Then take it and put it back where you found it. 'Phone me as soon after that as you can."

"Now, tonight?"

"Now, immediately."

"But—but—" began the astonished reporter.

"It is a matter of the utmost consequence," the irritated voice assured him. "You should not have taken the string. I told you merely to see what was there. But as you have brought it away you must put it back as soon as possible. Believe me, it is of the highest importance. And don't forget to 'phone me."

The sharp, commanding tone stirred the reporter to new action and interest. A car was just going past the door, outward bound. He raced for it and got aboard. Once settled he untied one of the knots, straightened out the string, and fell to wondering what sort of fool's errand he was on.

"Randall's Crossing!" called the conductor at last.

Hatch left the car and retraced his tortuous way along the road and through the wood to the tall tree, found the hole, and had just thrust in his hand to replace the string when he heard a woman's voice directly behind him, almost in his ear. It was a calm, placid, convincing sort of voice. It said:

"Hands up!"

Hatch was a rational human being with ambitions and hopes for the future, therefore his hands went up without hesitation. "I knew something would happen," he told himself.

He turned to see the woman. In the darkness he could only dimly trace a tall, slender figure. Steadily poised just a couple of dozen inches from his nose was a revolver. He could see that without any difficulty. It glinted a little, even in the gloom, and made it conspicuous.

"Well," asked the reporter at last, as he stood reaching upward. "It's your move."

"Who are you?" asked the woman. Her voice was steady and rather pleasant.

The reporter considered the question in the light of all he didn't know. He felt it wouldn't be a sensible thing to say just who he was. Somewhere at the end of this thing the Thinking Machine was working on a problem; he was presumably helping in a modest, unobtrusive sort of way; therefore he would be cautious.

"My name is Williams," he said promptly. "Jim Williams," he added circumstantially.

"What are you doing here?"

Another subject for thought. That was a question he couldn't answer; he didn't know what he was doing there; he was wondering himself. He could only hazard a guess, and he did that with intrepidation.

"I came from him," he said with deep meaning.

"Who?" demanded the woman suspiciously.

"It would be useless to name him," replied the reporter.

"Yes, yes, of course," the woman mused. "I understand."

There was a little pause. Hatch was still watching the revolver. He had a lively interest in it. It had not moved a hair's breadth since he first looked at it; hanging up there in the night it fairly stared him out of countenance.

"And the string?" asked the woman at last.

Now the reporter felt that he was in the mire. The woman herself relieved this new embarrassment.

"Is it in the tree?" she went on.

"Yes."

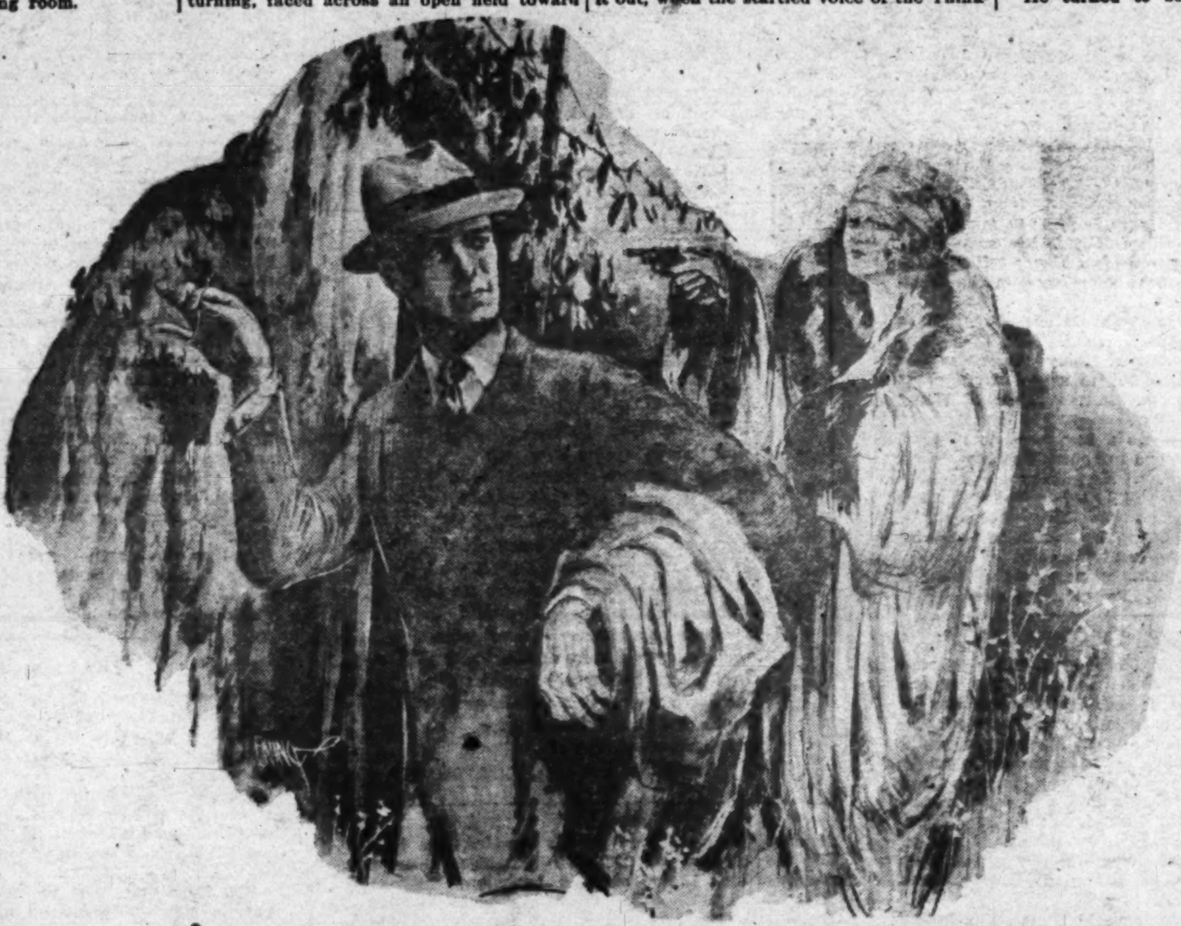
"How many knots are in it?"

"One."

"One?" she repeated eagerly. "Put your hand in there and hand me the string. No tricks, now!"

Hatch complied with a certain deprecatory manner which he intended should convey to her the impression that there would be no tricks. As she took the string her fingers brushed against his. They were smooth and delicate. He knew that evan in the dark.

"And what did he say?" she went on.



"One?" she repeated eagerly. "Put your hand in there and hand me the string. No tricks, now!"

SOME CALIFORNIA BARDS

A Brief Critical Appreciation of the Work of Local Poets Whose Verse Has Appeared Recently in The Times Illustrated Magazine

BY J. RUSSELL McCARTHY

Mr. McCarthy is himself a poet of no mean parts. His work is appearing in America's best magazines. Writing in The Bookman of October, 1920, the late John Burroughs paid him this tribute: "England has produced Masefield and we have produced J. Russell McCarthy, who has written the best nature poetry since Emerson." Mr. McCarthy is also the author of two books of verse "Out of Doors" and "Gods and Devils."—[Editor.

CRITICISING verse is always a presumptuous undertaking; more presumptuous in fact, than the writing of verse. To assume that you can take an idea or an object and by your mere interpretation of it turn it into a song—such an assumption requires high conceit. But to go a step further and assume knowledge of what a song should be and what a song should do, to sit in judgment upon both the subject and the singer of a song—this is downright assurance.

And so, without further apology, to the problem at hand. Here are certain California bards who have been helping Californians to discover themselves and their State through the columns of recent numbers of The Times Illustrated Magazine.

Samuel R. Cone, a frequent visitor to these columns, brings with him a sincerity, an earnest love for the California hills and all nature, which should go far toward crystallizing the same attitude in the minds of his readers. "The Old Ute Trail," if it guided one "expert accountant" down "the mountain-meadow stream," has accomplished all that could be desired. "The Autumn Leaves," with its "reluctantly and silently they fall," and its "Not dead . . . just changing into fairies in the night," retells a pleasant story vividly. "My Little Cabin Homestead" carries the reader into the hills and makes him feel the spirit of the place where "There are no paintings on the walls, they're all hung up outside."

There is evidence of a decided gift for the singing word in the verses of June Melody. The euphonious pseudonym she has chosen is appropriate enough. Hear her singing of "Autumn;"

Over the fields where the daisies grew
The white frost gleams tonight;
Lone autumn winds are calling—calling
Out through the woods where the leaves are falling,
And the moon shines cold and white.

Where are the roses that bloomed in the dew,
And where are the violets sweet?
Faded and gone, and the winds are sighing
In search of the lost ones, crying—crying,
And roaming with restless feet.

"A Cabin in Heaven" is not—begging Miss Melody's pardon—so much a cabin in heaven as a cabin in California with such natural earthly concomitants as sorrow and death left out. But very likely the author knew that from the beginning. Certainly she tells of a homey cabin in a quite satisfactory heaven.

"Sleeping" is a fine human song of sorrow, deeply felt by singer and reader.

"Eventide," by Vivienne Thew, tells in keen lines of "The witchery of this night," saying much in a few words. In "My Baby's Shoes" Miss Thew makes arresting the wonder we all feel over the seemingly aimless toddling of a child.

Sam Simmons, in "Where the West Begins," writss of

"Where the mountains climb from row to row
And bury their peaks in the golden skies."

The cowboy and the campfire and chuck wagon enter into his picture.

"The Christmas Basket," "Passing," "Glory," and "An Ideal" are didactic; but they are sermons easily read and readily taken to heart. Mr. Simmons feels the problems of this world and deals with them understandingly. It is well for us that such men take time to study and to write.

Isaac Jenkinson Frazee gives us the "Peace Prayer for Nohomis," a fine chanting supplication. Especially do the closing lines embody the spirit of prayer:

Give of thy good medicine
That she may live!
Steep for her some aromatic herb of sleep,
Bring thou in from the great silences
Thy soothing peace—
Lull us with love again,
We are thy children.
Amen!

Olive Dwinell writes of "A Secret," which is of course not a secret at all, and she would probably be last to wish it so. When burdened by cares she stands "one golden day" by a brook, and discovers "that the world is full of beauty." A delightful discovery, and new, in a way, no matter how often it is made.

"I See the Cowboy Pass" gives voice to the world's regret at the disappearance of a beloved and storied figure, the cowboy, and the passing of the life and atmosphere he created. This is distinctly a mission for the bard. How well Samuel M. Sargent, Jr., fulfills this mission is attested by these four lines, which picture the cowboy,

Bidding his day farewell,
Seeing his West go by,
With a smile on his windworn cheek,
A tear in his eye.

Taking for his theme Deuteronomy xi, 11, "It is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven," S. A. Widney tells of a land "Where Upland Breezes Blow." Horseback, over the mesa trail, he finds the world inviting and the early morning fair.

In "Mojave," Ona Ellis Smith celebrates the desert, the yucca bells, the linnets and the stars, surely an interesting and colorful combination.

Georgina S. Townsend writes a "Benediction"—"My spirit reaches yours across the night . . ." Eight harmonious lines flow easily, creating an air that a "good saying" should have.

Mabel W. Phillips writes "To Robert Louis Stevenson," a tribute which all the admirers of "Robert Louis the beloved" will appreciate. Perhaps the best line is "He victor was upon the sunlit ways," although surely it would have been better as well as simpler to have said, "He was a visitor" etc.

There is melody of words and witchery of atmosphere in "Ghost Gardens," by Katalina Adelaide Soule.

A faded flower caught against the page:
The soul of some lost garden's summertime
Held for remembrance sake past memory—

Thus you are invited into the "Ghost Gardens," and into the presence of Her, whose hair—"was it the color of the moon?" So delicate a shade is suggested by this question! And you may turn

To him, who stood beside the trellised gate
To watch her coming thro' the dark's perfume,
Was she a fairer bloom than all the flowers?

Eileen Carfrae writes of "Covent Garden," and of "the spoils of Surrey meadow and of lonely Sussex down" which you can buy there of a morning. A happy little song, this is, that leads you right gaily into April.

Alice Berlingett gives us a stately image of "Night," and Monica Shannon sings a "Christmas Song." Monte Williams describes "Sunset on the Mojave" in lines that are not without the desert's color and calm. Cecile E. C. Hodgson, with "In Corpore Sano;" N. M. Black, with "Captive Ships," and Amy Vivan, with "Memory," are likely to touch responsive chords in many readers.

"The Squaw," by Marion Ethel Hamilton, offers a vivid picture in eight lines. "The Land Farthest West," by Laurence Berg, is a rollicking rhyme of California. And "Winter Rose," by mere chance the last in our little pile of clippings, was written by E. French Fiske somewhere in the stormy east, and does a service in its way by putting in fitting words the exile's longing for California and her golden shore.

THIS FREEDOM

in the day would say in a funny constricted voice. "Let me see Flora's letter. Give it to me, will you please?" And would take it away and read it by herself.

Anna was stranger and stranger in her manner and in her behavior at night. Rosalie came quite to dread the nights. Anna began to pray out loud. She used to pray over and over again the same thing: "It's not that I'm jealous, O Lord. O purge my heart of jealousy. It is that I see what could be and what ought to be for me and what never will be for me. I've nothing to look forward to, nothing, nothing, nothing, nothing. It is hard for women. O God, thou knowest how hard it is for women."

It was frightening.

Then came the second Sunday of the absence in London. In the night of Saturday Rosalie was again awakened by the sounds of Anna and again heard her praying and again heard "It is hard for women. O God, thou knowest how hard it is for women."

She had heard it so often! Anna seemed to have stopped praying. There was a light in the room and Rosalie saw that Anna, on her knees, had her head and arms thrown forward on the bed more as if she were asleep than praying. "It is hard for women." Rosalie had heard Anna say that so often. And she was going to be a woman one day. And she had always known that men were the important and wonderful people of the world. Now Anna said that for women it was hard and that God knew it was hard. [illegible] "Anna," Anna. "Why is it hard for women?"

Anna started at her knees and turned her body round. "Rosalie! Why are you awake? You've no right to be awake."

"No, but I am. I woke up. Anna, why is it hard for women?"

"You weren't meant to hear. You couldn't understand."

"But I would like to know, Anna."

Anna got up and came across to Rosalie's bed; and by her manner, and by her voice, and by the tall white figure she was, frightened Rosalie. She said, "Go to sleep. You can sleep. Why don't you when you can? One day perhaps you'll be like me and can't."

It reminded Rosalie of "Sleep on now and take your rest" in the Bible, and frightened her. Anna said, "It's hard for women because men do what they like but women can't." She turned away. She stood still and said with her back to Rosalie, "I've got a longing here." Her hands were clasped and she brought them up and struck them against her breast with a thud. "And I always have had and I always will have. Here. Burning. Aching. And when you've got a longing like that you must—you must—" Then she said very violently, "I hate men. I hate them. I hate them." Then she went very quickly to the candlestick on the dressing table and fumbled with it to blow it out, and it fell on the ground and broke and the room was black.

The next day was Sunday. Anna said she would not go to church as she had a headache. Rosalie had been invited to spend the day with the little girl of Col. and Mrs. Measures and she had lunch and tea there and then came home. The path from the gate to the house was bounded by a thick hedge. On the right was the rectory paddock and through the hedge Rosalie saw that something very strange was going on in the paddock. Away in the corner where there was a little copse with a pond in the middle was a crowd of people, some men from the village and her mother and Robert and some others. Whatever was it? While she peered Harold came running out of the group toward the house. His coat was off, and his waistcoat; and his shirt and trousers looked funny and he ran funnily. He came near Rosalie and she saw that he was dripping wet. Had he fallen in the pond? Then two men came round from the back of the house carrying something, and Harold ran to them and they all ran with the thing to the pond. It looked like the door of the shed they were carrying. Rosalie ran through the shed and ran toward the pond. Some one called out "Here's Rosalie." Hilda came out from among the people and waved her arms and called out, "Go back! Go back! You're not to come here, Rosalie! You're not to come here!" Rosalie stood still.

The Exile's Cry

(Pining for California)

Sunshine land of fruits and flowers,
Golden wheat fields, rainbowed showers,
Forests fair, broad teeming vales,
Snow-kissed peaks, lone mountain trails,
Groves of scented citrus trees
Musical with drowsy bees,
Haunted deserts whereon gleam
Magic pine and mirage stream,
Mystic tules o'er which fly
Wildfowl 'gainst a crimson sky,
Wave-lapped shores where harmonies
Counterfeit pine-haunting breeze,
Missions where the padres old
Pluck bright globes of juicy gold,
All roads lead to thee today
As to Rome when she held sway . . .
Visioned land where hopes and dreams
Hold the heart in youth's glad beams,
Day and night I long for thee—
Boyhood's Land of Arcady!

ALBERT GEYER

Secrets of the Circus

by ALBERT GEYER, WORLD'S CHAMPION TUMBLER, RETIRED

Members of the Circus Fraternity Are Superstitious. They Believe Implicitly in "Luck" as One of the Most Important Factors in Success or Failure in Life

CIRCUS PERFORMERS

THERE is more or less of a general idea that the circus performer leads a very indolent life. This prevailing notion—which is completely discredited by the facts—is based solely upon what the spectator sees of the showman's work in public and lack of knowledge regarding the artist's additional duties, particularly in the matter of arduous, irksome practice.

For perseverance—that intangible factor of success which has written the story of progress on every page of the world's history—is also a leading factor in the circus man's vocation.

Talent—as we know—is but natural aptitude for some particular thing, but unless it is developed by work, it will be an unfulfilled promise. Strenuous practice alone develops the muscular strength and nimbleness essential to the accomplishment of difficult circus stunts, and the goal of athletic excellence can only he reached through the gateway of endeavor. Even after proficiency has been attained, frequent performance is necessary in order to retain it, and this circumstance spells habitual toil for the showman whether he be employed or idle.

While the circus athlete's public performance is of short duration, yet in these brief periods of time is compressed the strength-sapping properties of hours of laborious exertion.

In order to give the reader some conception of the performer's route with a traveling circus, I'll briefly review his main duties: daily routine while en

He arises about 7 in the morning and breakfasts a half hour later at the cook tent which is located on the show grounds. It is one large compartment where every attache of the circus dines; is ararranged in sections and represents several grades of equipment. The most pretentious being reserved for the executive staff; second best for performers; the third for musicians, concert and sideshow attractions, peanut venders, etc. The fourth grade is for the use of artisans.

The diners not only do not mix indiscriminately at table, but they likewise are segregated in other departments—dressing tents, sleeping cars, etc. Caste prevails with a circus and one's employment determines one's social standing and promiscuous fraternizing is rarely practiced.

Some two hours after breakfast, the "kinker," as the performer is called in circus parlance, participates in the free street parade. Star artists are usually exempt from this duty as also is the aerialist who has an intricate apparatus, or "rigging" as they term it, to adjust.

In aerial stunts where three or more persons jointly engage, invariably one member of the troupe will personally supervise the erection of the "rigging." They would not dream of intrusting this task to artisans. Not only must extreme care be exercised with the apparatus itself, but the safety net as well must be painstakingly adjusted.

While the aerialists have from time immemorial constituted a prominent part of the circus, they have recently branched out and now, more than ever, feature their acts with all manner of "thrillers" and spectacular feats. Absolute confidence in the security of the "rigging" is essential. Did the least doubt exist, it would appreciably impair their efficiency, for confidence is a potent factor in the circus game whether the athlete performs in groups or singly.

If for example, an aerialist depends upon a colleague to catch him after somersaulting, and a miss occurs, the falling into the net is far from being a particularly pleasing sensation. There's always a chance of it resulting in injury and a possibility of death by the broken neck route.

A friend of mine, who is one of the world's greatest gymnasts, lost confidence in his partner because of too frequent misses and in a few months' time he retrograded into a third-class performer. When he procured a more trustworthy "catcher" his confidence was restored and his erstwhile proficiency returned.

Should a bareback equestrian possess an unreliable horse; one that will suddenly vary his gait just as the rider is about to turn a somersault; or that is in the habit of swerving to one side, or stopping while the showman is in the air; the steed's adverse behavior not only accentuates the rider's peril, but it likewise shatters his confidence and invariably his act suffers noticeable deterioration.

Reverting to the subject of the performers daily routine, I will state that when he returns from parade, he lunches, and two hours later he, like nearly every member of the circus, participates in what the showbills in bombastic terms describe as the "Gorgeous, Scintillating, Introductory Pageant" that opens the show. Subsequently he performs an individual stunt or does an act of some kind in conjunction with others.

After dinner comes two hours of recreation and then the night show. At its conclusion the "kinker" visits the dining car and lunches, after which he retires for the night. He occupies the same quarters every night in cars belonging to the show management and which are constructed especially to conform with circus requirements. If he happens to be a star performer, he occupies a stateroom; otherwise either an upper or lower Pullman berth.

Equestrians are the show's highest salaried performers. This fact is not due to any acrobatic superiority, but rather to a variety of reasons. For instance, this particular line is less glutted than many others. Then again, riders usually own their own stock, and inasmuch as these trained equines are very expensive, it means something of an investment and a financial risk. Another thing to be considered is the fact that about twelve years is the animal's average period of usefulness. Then too, the equestrian generally carries his private groom, for whose services he must personally pay. And last, but not least, the horse must be provided for during the winter months.

Just at this point it may not be amiss to interpolate the remark that equestrians usually learn to ride in ring barns, which in winter are artificially heated. A regulation size arena is constructed with a stout, upright pole in the center. Attached to this pole is a projecting, circling arm extending to the extreme limit of the ring curbing. Two ropes which pass through pulleys extend along this arm, one end of which terminates in the belt worn about the rider's waist, and the other end is held by the instructor. When the pupil falls the perceptor pulls the rope taut and the equestrian is held dangling in the air.

Men, because stronger and more agile than women, attain a greater degree of expertness and are less frequently injured. When a man falls, his superior dexterity and firmer muscles, enable him to both alight in a more favorable condition and to successfully sustain a more violent shock. Nevertheless, women as a rule, are equally as courageous as men.

The circus fraternity is exceedingly superstitious and believe implicitly in what they term "luck." The harboring of this idiosyncrasy is largely due to occurrences like the following:

One afternoon just after a company of nine trapeze artists had ascended to their high perch, a violent, eddying windstorm struck the canvas structure with a force that well-nigh separated the top of the tent from the sidewalls. All the poles that were not firmly imbedded in the earth were flying about in a promiscuous, dangerous manner. Had this group of gymnasts delayed their ascent one minute, some of their number would undoubtedly have sustained which they are best adapted as it is to educate them.

CARE OF THE BODY

"In vocational guidance it is necessary to know the talents, tendencies and preferences of the individual and the requirements of vocations.

"The proper time to give such service to young people is before they enter high school so that they can adapt their work there to future needs. As the larger cities have manual arts, polytechnic and classical high schools much time would be wasted by making the wrong choice.

"There is a closer relationship between vocations and mental culture than many are aware of. Persons who are in uncongenial vocations often watch the clock hour after hour, anxiously waiting for quitting time to come and such monotony has a harmful effect upon mind and body.

"An employment secretary in a western Y.M.C.A. told the writer that he had found positions for 11,000 young men and that 60 per cent of them said they did not want the kind of work they had been doing before because it was distasteful to them. They were not lazy; they were misfits. There are people standing on 'the bridge of sighs' all their lives because they are misfits in their work. Such tragedy must be prevented by rational education and vocational guidance.

"Persons with symmetrical development are versatile and adaptable so that they have little difficulty in fitting into most any conditions that they meet in life. They belong to the class that can most truthfully say: 'I can be anything that I want to be.' This many sided interest causes difficulty in centering the mind upon one vocation, to the exclusion of the other 16,000 vocations that are now required in doing the world's work. Such adapt themselves most readily to schools as they are now organized.

"Large, angular, 'motor' boys and girls find greatest difficulty in adapting themselves to the larger part of ordinary school work. They learn most easily through observation and by doing things, but limit their study of books to nature and construction. Their creative imagination is deficient, but they often excel in practical phases of education. They are plodders. Like the winter fruit they mature late. Their social nature is not strong. They live in the intellect rather than in the emotions. They observe more than meditate, are built for work requiring strength and endurance rather than speed and fine adjustments.

"When the head is large in proportion to the rest of the body the nervous system predominates over the motor and sensory organs. Such persons are built for work requiring detail and fine adjustments rather than strength and endurance. They are often precocious and need holding back rather than urging on. Their nerves are often pitched upon such a high key that a special effort must be made to relax them in order to develop the poise that will enable them to do their work without wasting nerve force. They are attracted to white collar positions rather than to overall jobs. They are like the spare Cassius that Shakespeare tells about, who had a tendency to live the strenuous life."

Prolonging Life

PONCE DE LEON hunted with no success for the fountain of eternal youth in Florida. He drew only a certain amount of ridicule from his cronies. There are modern Ponce de Leons looking for the fount of longer youth armed with kits of surgical instruments.

John Hopkins writes in Health Culture: "'Can life be prolonged?' The verdict is that life can be prolonged, but not to any extent by needle pricks and operations, not by the use of serums or drugs. The opinion is that life is subnormal, and that greater longevity lies in hygiene, simple diet, philosophy and other precautions against premature weakening of the tissues.

"To the man who has, despite many obstacles, reached old age, the prolongation of life is limited. All living things, animals as well as vegetables, have an evolution of which death is the inevitable. Longevity may be hereditary in races whose elements suffer degeneration slowly and whose nutrition is active and regular.

"Some men of 50 have an organic wear and tear greater than some of 70. Each man grows old in his own way. Science can combat symptoms of organic lesion for a time; but no medicine can attack the nutritive troubles which are of a slow, relentless evolutionary character.

"Taking a monkey gland and transplanting into a man are not a substitute for a human organ. The body is not an automobile which can be driven to a service station and after a defective part has been thrown aside, have another put in its place. In the present state of our knowledge of physiology it is impossible to replace an organ as one substitutes a part in a motor.

"The theory of Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute, that he can keep chicken hearts in proliferation for years, is to no useful purpose. Human cells burn slowly out and while the fires can be made to burn more slowly this devastating force brings the body each day nearer its transition to dust. Prof. Richet says that every human effort must remain powerless to modify the inevitable exhaustion of cellular life.

"'One thing is certain,' says Prof. Richet, 'the wastage of our organs is closely tied to intensity of body combustion—thus if, by any process, body temperature could be lowered, life would be prolonged.' Animals living in glacial seas live longer than the same species inhabiting the tropical waters.

"Is it possible to change the temperature of the human body? Not to any extent, and in any event, it would not be desirable, because it could not be except at the price of diminishing physical activity. There is no danger of being able to reduce body temperature. We could never do this even to the extent of one-half degree, nor by this procedure could we prolong life.

"In order to live long it is necessary to be a true epicurean in the real sense of the word. The divine precept is moderation in everything. Moderation, always moderation, a regular, methodical, simple, sage existence, without excesses, even without brilliance, is the way to guarantee life, not beyond the limits compatible with physiology, but at least without hurrying to the fatal end. Longevity is a result of heredity and prudence."

War

YOU cannot end war merely by destroyin the weapons of war. You must eliminate hate from the hearts of the people.

Nor can you end war by preparing for war. That only makes war more certain, for others will prepare, also.

Selfishness and greed are the main causes of war. Also ignorance.

When nations get to know each other and understand each other, they are less likely to fight.

Naming Children

AMONG some tribes, it is the custom to give children temporary names, when they are born, and let them choose permanent names when they come of age.

I am not sure but that this is a good plan. Children are often burdened, by unwise parents, with preposterous and unfitting names, that are more or less of a handicap to them through life.

HIS HEARING RESTORED

The invisible ear drum, invented by A. O. Leonard, which is a miniature megaphone, fitting inside the ear entirely out of sight, is restoring the hearing of hundreds of people in New York City. Mr. Leonard invented this drum to relieve himself of deafness and head noises, and it does this so successfully that no one could tell he is a deaf man. It is effective when deafness is caused by catarrh or by perforated or wholly destroyed natural drums. A request for information to A. O. Leonard, Suite 117, 70 Fifth Ave., New York City, will be given a prompt reply. (Adv.)

DEUTSCHLAND'S DANCE OF DEATH

Frank G. Carpenter Gives Concrete Illustrations of the Pauperization of a Nation Through Inflation

The Printing Press as Cashier—The Mark on the Toboggan and What It is Doing—Butter at Three Thousand Dollars a Pound and Steak at the Price of an Automobile—What the Mark Means—Silver Coins Reduced to Star-Dust—Where Your Savings Would Go if You Lived in Germany—Sea Captains Retired on Seventeen Cents a Year—New Ways to Pay Old Debts—Where the Thrifty Investor is Ruined and Pensions and Bonuses are Paid Off with Nickels and Dimes

Frank G. Carpenter

BERLIN, Germany.—The bare feet of the whole German nation are on the red-hot skillet of money inflation, and the people hop to the skies as the mark rises and falls. The issues of the Reichsbank are already more than one thousand billions, and hundreds of millions of new paper are pouring forth as fast as the presses can run. The people are bankrupt, and their agonized antics make one think of that Italian church play known as the "Danse Macabre" or "Dance of Death" of which there is a fresco, made before the days of Columbus, on the walls of the Campo Santo of Pisa. Petrarch and Dante wrote of this dance and Goethe celebrated it in "Der Totentanz" ballad. In the original play Death led the dance, calling all classes from the Pope to the peasant to follow him, and they frantically did so imploring God's mercy.

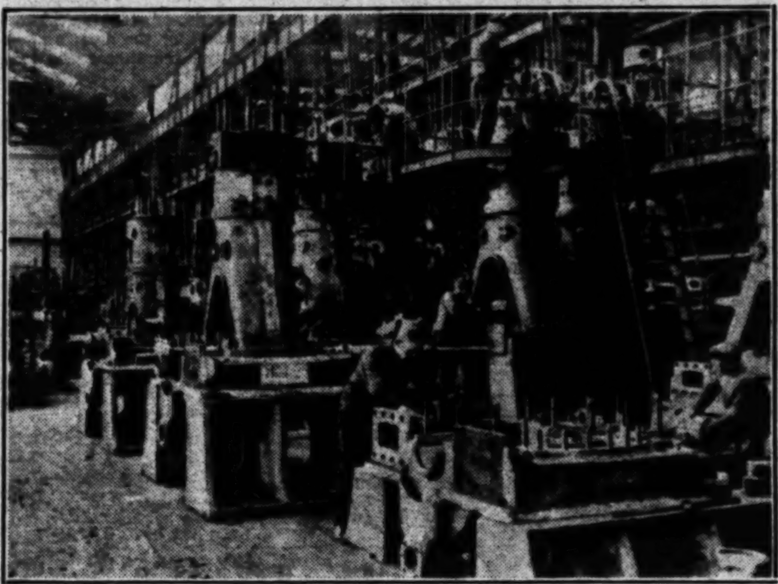
A Nation of Paupers Amid Apparent Plenty

THIS is the condition of the Germany of today. Whatever may come in the future, most of the people are now practically paupers. By the inflation of the mark, whether intentional or not, both the classes and masses have been impoverished, and with the exception of a comparatively few great capitalists, like Stinnes and other profiteers, who have stored away their wealth in foreign banks, all are living from hand to mouth. Before the war there was no nation which had such large accumulations of invested capital as Germany, and in none was the capital so widely distributed. The insurance funds and savings banks were loaded with money. Nearly every man, woman and child had some kind of a savings investment. There were tens of thousands living on the interest of bonds and other gilt-edged securities which they had laid up for their old age, and thousands had income-bearing real estate in city and country. Certain kinds of insurance were compulsory, and the insurance policies ran into the hundreds of millions. They included policies against sickness, against accident and against invalidism and old age. Thousands had pensions and the government officials and the employees of many large institutions were retired on fixed incomes after they had reached a fixed age. All of these funds have been swallowed up by the inflation that has succeeded the war, and the most of them have disappeared as though they had never been in existence.

The Printing Press is the National Cashier

DURING the war Germany was bled white, as she was not able to borrow from the outside nations, and at its close she was practically bankrupt, with 3,000,000 soldiers out of a job. These men had to be fed and had to have work. If work could not be created the danger of Bolshevism and the conditions of Russia were imminent. At the same time the vast industries built up to make munitions of war had to be transformed to industries of peace or many more millions would be out of a job. The only way in which the government could get money to loan for these purposes was to make its printing press their cashier. They did this and the inflation began. They added large numbers to the official payrolls and their salaries came from the presses. They did the same, as far as possible, with public utilities, loading the street car companies and railways and postoffices with extra men, and paid them by continuing to print.

As the world began to realize how the money was made the mark declined. The outside countries lost faith and still Germany had to buy food and raw materials and at the same time pay the reparation demands. All of these were based upon gold, and the mark, as a representative of gold, rapidly shrank. It soon dropped from one-fourth of a dollar to one-sixteenth of a dollar. That was in August, 1919. Six months later one could buy fifty marks for a dollar and shortly after that seventy-five. In January, 1922, the mark had so fallen that it took 200 to equal one dollar in gold. Nevertheless the Germans still had faith in their government, and it was not until almost a year later that their currency took its seat on the electric toboggan. Its first jump was from 200 to 400 per dollar. It soon reached 600, and at the beginning of last December it was already 7000 to the dollar. It went down about 3000 during that month, and it has since been 50,000 to the dollar and lower. In this letter I shall figure the mark at 50,000 to the dollar, or at 500 marks to one cent, which is as high as it is likely to be for a long time to come.



From an inferno for the production of weapons of war, the great Krupp Steel Works have been converted to the uses of peace, and are now making everything from typewriters to giant Diesel engines.

Mark Has Fallen From Silver to Star-Dust

BEFORE the war the German mark was a coin the size of our silver 25 cent piece, and it was worth almost as much. If you will take a silver quarter and grind it up into star-dust, each dust grain would have about the value represented by the paper marks of today. There would be over 12,500 grains, each so small that you would have to take a microscope to separate it from the others, and it would, I venture, take at least fifty of these bits of silver dust to make one of the stars that encircle the head of the Goddess of Liberty under the motto "In God We Trust.' Take a red cent and divide it into 500 pieces and every piece will represent as much value as the mark I am using.

This gives some idea of the enormous decline of the currency of Germany. It shows also the shrinkage of every gilt-edge security, of every bond and mortgage, and of most all accumulated savings these people had piled up before and during the war. In other words, to get the gold value of any security in the Germany of today, you must divide its face value by 12,000 or more, and all wages and incomes must be figured out the same way.

I can explain the situation best by supposing the fate of Germany to come to the United States. One of you, for instance, has been saving for years to have a comfortable sum for your old age. You have skimped yourself and your family, and now, at 60, have accumulated $50,000 in good government bonds or other gilt-edge securities. We shall say that the interest on your savings, at 6 per cent, gives you an income of $3000 a year, which is enough to keep the wolf from the door for a man of small family. Then out of the clear sky comes such a calamity as has fallen on Germany within less than two years. You awake to find your $50,000 shrunken to a gold purchasing value of less than $5. You still have the same figures on your notes, or your bank book, but the actual value is only $4.50 instead of $50,000. Perhaps you hold on to your investments and draw only the interest. You will still get $3000 a year, but it will be worth only 25 cents. Instead of having about $50 a week to spend, your income will be less than 1 cent per month. That would be your condition if you lived here and had such an investment in the Germany of today.

These employees of a steel mill earn less per month than our machinists get in a day. Tens of thousands of expert workmen in Germany are receiving only 25 cents for eight hours' work.

How the Situation Affects Savings Banks

OR YOUR money may be in a savings bank. The United States has 1700 such banks with more than 12,000,000 depositors, and the total amount of their savings averages just about $600 per head. If those banks were in Germany the average $600 deposit would be worth just exactly 5 cents. You might go to the savings bank to draw out your money. The banker would pay you your $600, but the gold value of the notes would be only a nickel, or less than you are paying today for a ride on the street car.

How would you like to pay $3000 for a pound of butter? That is what you would probably have to do if the fate of Germany came to the United States. We will suppose that you have now $3000 in a building association, or in Liberty Bonds, or a gilt-edge mortgage worth several times the amount of the loan, and tonight, like a lightning flash out of the darkness, our credit and securities are changed to the condition of those of the Germany of today. Tomorrow morning you decide to draw your $3000 out of the building association, or sell your securities for the $3000 that they represent. You would get the actual money and it would look the same as that in which you made the investment, but should you take it to the store, the grocer would tell you that his prices had risen, and that butter now had a gold value of 30 cents or $3000 per pound. If you looked at a juicy tenderloin steak it would take twice your investment to pay for it, and a bushel of potatoes might cost four times that amount, or the sum you now pay for the highest priced automobile. In other words your $3000 over night has fallen to a purchasing value of just about 30 cents. It seems incredible, but this is the actual condition of all such investments all over Germany, save that the night of destruction has been a year or so long.

Sea Captain Retired on Seventeen Cents a Year

AS ONE crosses the Atlantic on a great ocean liner, he esteems it an honor to know the captain and have a seat at his table. The captain is king of the ship. The vessel he navigates is worth millions, and he is often responsible for the lives of 4000 or 5000 people. Nevertheless, his salary is small and the Germans, who, as every one knows, almost led the race for freight and passenger traffic before the war, have held their sea captains by giving them pensions. Every large company that sent ships out of Hamburg gave its captains a pension of 8000 marks a year after the age of retirement. This was practically gold, and it meant $2000 per annum. Most of the captains were thrifty, and the average man had saved enough to have an income of 10,000 marks or $2500 a year additional, so that when he left the steamer he could sit down to what he thought was a comfortable old age on an income of 18,000 marks or $4500. There were many such captains. What is their condition today? They have still the same pensions and the same income in marks, but the marks are in paper and their purchasing power has fallen from $4500 a year to about 40 cents, or less than one cent a week. This is the income of the man who has been thrifty and saving. The that time at the zenith of his career with a promising future before him. And, the present, unshaven, bloated face—which

"germ theory" was wrong and that the germ sought its natural habitat—diseased tissue—rather than causing the tissue to become diseased. He likened this to mosquitoes seeking stagnant water, rather than causing the water to become stagnant.

Tuberculin injected into an animal is a potent factor in causing the animal to become the natural habitat for tubercle bacilli.

The proof of tuberculosis being present or absent is not made by finding or not finding tuberculous lesions at the autopsy.

The tuberculin test will not help eradicate tuberculosis from cattle. The way to prevent any animal from having tuberculosis, or any other disease, is to keep them in a healthy condition, and not overfeed them. Overfeeding in humans or animals makes them susceptible to any disease.

If the State reimburses the owner for his tuberculosis cows, many undesirable cows are sold to the State as being tuberculous, and are then sold again to the consumers of meat. This takes place whether the cows are sick or well, provided they do not pay as milkers.

Commercialists and superstition are back of the propagation of the tuberculin test.

Those who are financially interested in the manufacture of tuberculin keep tuberculin testing going, as well as those who deal in cattle and those who think they are going to get more money for their milk if the cows are tuberculin tested. The advanced price for milk produced by tuberculin-tested cows will drop in direct ratio with the number of cows tested. So if all the cows in any State were tuberculin tested, the price of the milk from those cows would drop to a low level in a very short time. On top of this is the tremendous loss in the herd.

I believe the actual milk-producing period of a cow is shortened at least 50 per cent by having the cow tuberculin tested.

Tuberculin testing of cows opens a rich avenue for graft, and I have proof that in some cities this graft is carried on on an enormous scale.

Take all the profit out of the manufacture of these products, and their use would soon be condemned by those who are now using them.

Sanitation and hygiene are the only preventives of any disease, and the sooner the people wake up to this fact the better it will be for them, their families and their live stock.

A Young Mother

FOLLOWING is from the New York World:

"After three physicians of Sidney confirmed the birth of a seven-pound boy to 10-year-old Elizabeth Irwin of Hardin, O., stating that they had been in attendance upon the child-mother, Ohio physicians declare that the case is without parallel in the annals of medical practice.

"'The most puzzling phenomenon of the age,'" said Dr. H. H. Ryan, head of the obstetrics department of McKinley Hospital at Columbus. Dr. Ryan said he had been present at the birth of a child to an 11-year-old girl several years ago. 'Had the case occurred in the tropics, I would not have been surprised,' Dr. Ryan said. 'Closer to the equator, girls mature much earlier and often bear children very early. Such a case this far north, however, is most unusual.'

"Elizabeth is the stepdaughter of the Rev. L. W. Irwin of Hardin. The Irwins moved here from Harrod, Allen county.

"The baby is in fine health. The three doctors at one time despaired of saving the mother's life, but she is now able to be about."

Phosphorus

ACIDITY of the body is caused mainly by overeating of phosphate foods. On the other hand a certain amount of phosphorous in our daily intake of food is necessary, especially for the brain. Large consumption of phosphate foods such as eggs, fish, meat and cereals overstimulates the nervous system, especially the sex organs.

Dio Lewis, M.D., writes:

"A celebrated French chemist has made many analyses of brains of children, idiots and men of different degrees of mental activity. He found the percentage of phosphorus to correspond exactly to the degree of mental activity. In the brain of infants he found .80 per cent of phosphorus; in the brain of a youth, 1.65 per cent., while in the brains of adults, 1.80 per cent.; in the brains of aged people, 1 per cent.; while in the brains of idiots there was only .85 per cent.

"Another fact established by chemical analysis, which proves that the activity of the mind is dependent upon phosphorus, is this—immediately after active mental labor, the excretions exhibit a larger proportion of phosphorus than at any other time, e. g., on Mondays and Tuesdays in clergymen, and at court time in lawyers. Experiments of this kind go to show that the amount of phosphorus used up and excreted is in an exact proportion to the intensity and continuance of the mental effort, and, at these times, observing clergymen and lawyers have declared that their appetites call for phosphoric food, as fish, cheese, unbolted wheat bread, oatmeal or barley cakes, etc.; and some desire and will have made for them cakes of bran, which contain all the phosphorus of the grain."

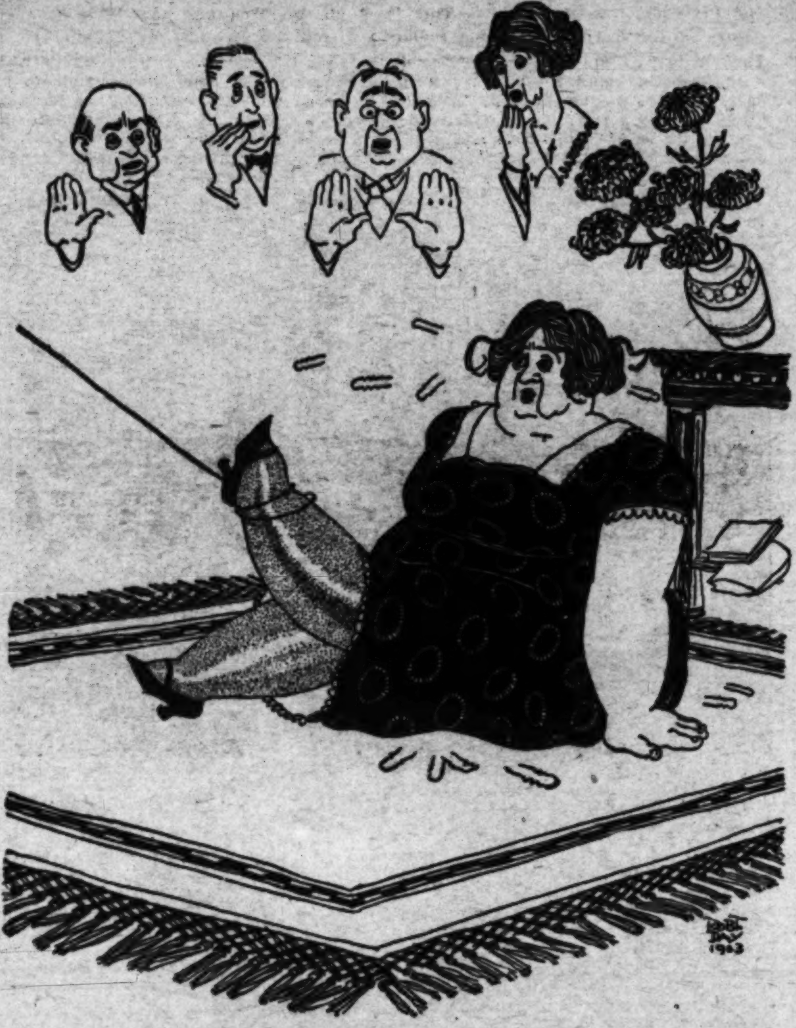
The Murchison's Entertain via Radio

BY ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

ANNOUNCEMENT

This is the first of a series of articles by Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pigs is Pigs," "Mike Flannery," etc., one of America's most widely read humorists, who has recently joined the mighty clan of radio fans. Mr. Butler's experiences, as woven into this series, are as humorous and entertaining, perhaps, as anything that he has written.
—Editor.



At the word of command, "Down!" she sat down so suddenly that all her hairpins fell out and a tall vase of chrysanthemums fell off the table.

FOR two weeks after Mr. Murchison installed his radio receiving set he and his wife did nothing after dinner but sit in the parlor and listen to it. For one week they used ear-phones, but at the end of the week Mr. Murchison decided that it was a shame to have all the pleasures of WJZ, WOR and the other programs and not share them, and he bought a large horn-like arrangement by using which any number of persons could sit at the far side of the room and hear everything very well indeed. It was a great success.

This addition to Mr. Murchison's radio gave him full and happy evenings for one week, for he had become a true radio enthusiast and his days were merely hours that he had to pass somehow until the time came to go home and enjoy radio. He bought the best radio magazines he could find, and twelve books on radio, and he read them all and learned a tremendous lot he had never even imagined about radio. Although he had paid quite a large sum of money—for him—for his ready-made set, he was so excited about radio that he set about building a set himself, and he nearly drove his wife crazy trying to explain what sounded to her like utter nonsense why a high-power reverse action transforms the antenna generator into an edgewise inductance—which means nothing at all.

By the end of the week Mr. Murchison was such an enthusiastic radio builder that he told Mrs. Murchison he was going to take his bought set apart to see what was in it, and he even kept Teena—the kitchen maid—from her work while he told her about indoor antennae and variocouplers. It was clear to Mrs. Murchison that unless something was done to bring Mr. Murchison back to the sane pleasure of listening to the programs of the broadcasting stations he would soon be like Mr. Brownlee, who was so interested in building better and better amateur sets that he did nothing else and never completed one sufficiently to hear anything with it. Mr. Brownlee was indeed a radio enthusiast. He had become such an enthusiast that he could talk nothing and think nothing but radio, and whenever he pulled his hand out of his pocket he shed screwdrivers and crystals and wire and insulators by the quart.

It was for this reason that Mrs. Murchison conceived the idea of having a radio party and, to her joy, Mr. Murchison welcomed the idea with enthusiasm.

"Great!" he exclaimed. "I'd just like to show some of these back-numbers here in Westcote what radio really is! We'll have a dinner—a swell dinner—and after dinner we will go into the parlor and we'll show 'em! And as for class—think of giving the first radio party in Westcote! It will make you, my dear; it will simply make you!"

"I thought of that, too," said Mrs. Murchison; "It should not, to say the least, hurt my social standing. I thought of inviting Mrs. Bimberry, dear."

Mrs. Bimberry was the social dictator of Westcote; she was the society queen. She was also large. Mrs. Bimberry had for years been reducing, banting, starving and dieting and she still grew larger and larger. She hated it and she hated everyone who referred to her size or looked as if she was thinking of it. Mrs. Murchison greatly desired the favor of Mrs. Bimberry's social smiles and in the depths of her heart Mrs. Murchison had a wily little plan. One of the broadcasting stations was sending out "reduce to music" programs every evening, and Mrs. Murchison felt that if Mrs. Bimberry heard the "reduce to music" number over the radio, and was pleased with the idea and bought a radio outfit and reduced herself to music because of it, Mrs. Bimberry would feel everlastingly grateful to Mrs. Murchison and would be her friend forever.

The dinner part of Mrs. Murchison's radio party was a great success. Not only were Mr. and Mrs. Claygull and Mr. and Mrs. Mr. and Mrs. Claygull and Mr. and rs. Brownlee. At the last moment Mr. Murchison had insisted that Brownlee be asked, for Murchison was an extremely nervous little man and as the time for the party approached he became panic-stricken lest his radio set should not work. He wanted Brownlee on hand in case there was any hitch in the program. Brownlee could certainly find what was the matter with the radio outfit if it did not work properly.

The dinner was excellent and all were very merry and talked of nothing but radio, and after dinner Mrs. Murchison proudly led the way into the parlor and seated her guests in a semi-circle after they had examined the radio outfit and exclaimed over it.

"Ah!" said Mr. Murchison, glancing at his watch when all were seated. "We are just in time. The program is just beginning. Now you will see how simple this wonderful invention is. You see here three dials. I turn one, and I turn the next, and I turn the third, and from many miles away comes the—the—the——"

He had turned the dials, but nothing happened.

"Perhaps Central has not given you the right connection," puffed Mrs. Bimberry, who had eaten too much—as usual—and felt a trifle cross.

Mr. Brownlee, who with difficulty had made himself sit at all, now jumped up and went to the table.

"Let me tune her up, Murchison," he said. "I know all about this game. You see, folks, I turn this dial to light the amplifier, and this one to find the wave-length and this to—to—to——"

Nothing happened.

Mr. Brownlee and Mr. Murchison, quarreling in low tones pushed each other aside and turned the dials this way and that way, but nothing at all happened.

"What in thunder did you do to this thing?" Brownlee demanded, and Mrs. Murchison tried to hide the annoyance she felt by asking Mrs. Bimberry, in her sweet voice, if the coal situation wasn't just too pitiful.

"Get a move on, Murchison; get a move on!" urged Mr. Bimberry. "I've got a date at the club if this thing isn't going to pan out."

"Oh! I'm sure it will," said Mrs. Murchison sweetly, and then, to Mr. Murchison: "Henry, dear, do you suppose it makes any difference if the wires you had stretched to the barn are gone?"

"What!" cried Mr. Murchison. "My word, Mary! Do you mean to tell me—"

"Now, please, Henry," begged Mrs. Murchison. "There are guests present, please remember. Of course those wires are gone! I certainly did not know those wires were necessary, did I? You distinctly told Teena—I'm sure I heard you—that the wires out there were no longer necessary. So when they fell down this afternoon I gave them to a little boy who asked for them."

"Well, of all the idiotic—" Mr. Murchison began, but Mr. Bimberry interrupted him.

"Well, Jane," he said to Mrs. Bimberry, "I guess we might as well be going; there doesn't seem to be any radio radiating here this evening. I told you—"

"Now, wait; please wait!" exclaimed Mr. Murchison distractedly. "Don't get mad Bimberry. Don't blame me for this! I did happen to say that out-door aerials were no longer necessary, but I did not mean they were not necessary for us. It's a nice state of things when a woman picks up your slightest word and gives your antenna to the first red-headed boy that comes along—"

"He was not red-headed!" exclaimed Mrs. Murchison. "And if you feel called upon to say mean things to me, Henry Murchison, you might wait until a time when—"

"Don't mind him, Mrs. Murchison," said Mrs. Bimberry, giving Mr. Murchison a cruel glance. "He's nothing but a man—a mere man—"

"Oh! I am, am I?" cried Mr. Murchison, flaring up. "Well, I'll thank any woman that comes into my house—"

"Who are you calling a woman, Murchison?" demanded Mr. Bimberry fiercely. "If you mean my wife I'll tell you we did not come here to be insulted! You enticed us here to hear what you call radio, but if you did it to insult my wife and me I'll mighty soon show you—"

Mr. Bimberry was actually doubling his fists and something might have happened immediately if Mr. Brownlee had not drawn the attention of one and all by clapping his hands together.

"Please! One moment, folks!" he cried. "Please listen to me one moment! I know you are all disappointed because Mr. Murchison's radio does not work, but you forget that Brownlee is here! I know something about radio. I have studied it. It is my life's joy. It was well that Mrs. Murchison invited me here tonight because—"

"Because what?" asked the indignant Mrs. Bimberry grimly.

"Because," said Mr. Brownlee, "instead of the evening being a failure on account of Mr. Murchison's lost antenna, it may turn out to be an evening we will all remember all our lives. And why? Because, with your permission, we will make a most interesting experiment."

He paused to allow his words to have full effect, and then proceeded.

"Recently," he said, "things no one dreamed possible have been done with radio. One man, instead of using outside antenna wires, has received with perfect results the radio concerts through his bed springs. Another man received them by using a common window screen. But, most marvelous of all, another man,—doing away with all antennae—has received the concerts through his own body! Yes, it is indeed wonderful, Mrs. Bimberry, as your face shows me you think. And, with the kind permission of one and all, we will try that very thing. We will use Mrs. Murchison as the antenna and, if we have success, we will still hear the radio program tonight!"

Instantly everyone was excitedly interested and Mr. Brownlee flew from spot to spot, disconnecting a wire here and attaching it there, winding a wire around Mrs. Murchison's waist and running another from her ankle to the radiator for a ground connection. When all was ready Mr. Brownlee tuned in and, to the wonder of all present, a voice—muttered from the horn of the loud-speaker. Mr. Bimberry threw the first monkey-wrench into the amazed admiration of the listeners.

At that moment Mr. Brownlee must have touched a dial or a wire for the mumbling whisper from the horn suddenly came forth loud and clear in the introductory words of the "Reduce to Music" selection, clear and strong, as if aimed directly at Mrs. Bimberry came these words:

"No one, except for reasons of laziness or gluttony has any excuse to be fat!"

For a moment Mrs. Bimberry's face went purple; her vast bosom heaved with anger. She cast a murdering glance at poor Mrs. Murchison and started toward the door.

But only started toward the door. At the first stride the ground wire became taut. For a moment the queen of Westcote society stood on one leg, her arms stretched out before her and one leg extended backward toward the top of the radiator to which she was wired, like a high art nature dancer hopping on one leg.

"Ready! Begin!" cried the voice from the radio horn: "Hop! Hop! Hop! Down!"

Mrs. Bimberry hop—hop—hopped and at the word of command "Down" she sat down on the floor so suddenly that all her hairpins fell out and a tall glass vase of chrysanthemums fell off the table, but she did not have to follow the next command. It was "Raise your right foot!" and Mrs. Bimberry did not have to raise her right foot; it was already high in the air, pointing to the top of the radiator. It was her ground connection but it had no connection with the ground.

And still, relentlessly, through Mrs. Bimberry and out of the horn, came to her ears valuable advice on how to reduce. Radio is indeed wonderful! But that was not what Mrs. Bimberry was saying just then.

Used in this manner, in moderation, it is little more harmful than tea or coffee or tobacco. When concentrated by "medical science" and exploited by commercialism, it becomes a deadly, poisonous, habit-forming drug, demoralizing mind and body.

A great majority of these drugs have been first foisted on the people by "medical science." Many physicians become drug addicts themselves.

Insomnia

THERE seem to be an unusually large number of people in this section who suffer from insomnia.

It may be observed that in nine cases out of ten, insomnia is caused primarily by some disorder of the digestive organs, which, again, arises generally from errors of diet. The nerves are affected by gas, and sleeplessness follows, as a matter of course.

Those troubled in this manner should try a very light meal of simple, easily digested food, not less than three hours before retiring, and then, just before going to bed, should take a cup of some simple herb tea.

Drugs may temporarily alleviate insomnia, but they will inevitably react, and leave the patient worse than before.

Cancer

ONE of the most tragic stories recorded of a doctor's death lies back of the announcement that Dr. Hunter Findlay Tod died in the London Hospital recently.

Dr. Tod was one of the leading throat surgeons in the world. He was senior surgeon of the ear, nose and throat department of the London Hospital and lecturer in aural surgery at its medical college. He died of cancer of the throat and he died in one of the beds in his own ward, tended to the last by his own staff, whom he had led in the battle against throat diseases.

When a physician dies of a disease, in the treatment of which he is supposed to be an expert, we can only conclude that he was mistaken in his methods.

Physicians fail to recognize that cancer is not a local disease, but a disease of the blood and that it is always preceded by a long period of wrong living.

Dangerous Drugs

YOU can't buy a pint of whisky at a drug store without a physician's prescription, but anyone may go in and plank down the price, and get a bottle, or a package, of one of the numerous "heart stimulants" or "depressants" or "tonics" that are sold under various names and widely advertised.

Hence the numerous sudden deaths from "heart failure" that you read of every day in the papers.

Testing Cattle

IN SEVERAL States the loss of cows from the tuberculin test has been so great that farmers are urging legislation to forbid its use.

Following is from Youth (second edition,) by George Starr White, M.D.:

Just now, propaganda is being carried on by political doctors and "health" boards regarding the control of tuberculosis through tuberculin testing of cows and breeding cattle. Inasmuch as I have had over twenty-five years of practical experience in studying the question from all sides and know intimately the inside facts behind this propaganda, I submit the following conclusions:

Every cow is injured more or less by the injection of tuberculin.

A sensitively organized cow is irreparably damaged by the injection of tuberculin.

A well animal will react to the tuberculin test as often as a sick animal.

Cows fed just enough to keep them in good condition will very rarely react to the tuberculin test, but an overfed cow will nearly always react to it.

A full-bred cow is more liable to react to the tuberculin test than a "scrub" cow.

A well animal will always react to an overdose of serum.

The tester can make any cow react or not to the tuberculin test.

The immunity of an animal is lessened by the injection of tuberculin.

An animal is much more liable to contract tuberculosis or any other disease, after having been given the tuberculin test.

Lowering the resistance in humans or other animals is a primary factor in causing tuberculosis to gain a foothold.

All animals, humans included, harbor tubercle bacilli, and [illegible] to take advantage of the situation. If tuberculin [illegible] does not cause tuberculosis, it is at least an important factor in causing it.

In direct ratio with the tuberculin testing of cows will be the increase of tuberculous cows. The increase of tuberculous cows in many States bears out this assertion.

Many cows have been slaughtered after a multiplication of tuberculin tests. In other words, some animals will not react to any serum or vaccine until their resistance has been broken down by the poison injected into them. It is like starving a person before putting him into the ring to fight. It makes of him an easy mark.

If an animal is able to withstand the tuberculin test it may have tuberculosis in the worst form and still not react. In other words, animals will become immune to the test, but the majority of them will sooner or later die from the effects of the test.

An animal is not "sensitized" to the tubercle bacilli or any of its products, if it is tuberculous. I have seen all these "sensitizing systems" worked out, and they have all proved a failure. The biologic factor has to always be taken into consideration. What will work with one will not necessarily work with another.

Healed tuberculous lesions can be found in nearly every human or other animal, at autopsy.

Tuberculin injected into an animal eventually breaks down the tuberculous-lesion barriers and allows a new infection to take place.

It has never been proved that tuberculosis is transmissible from humans to animals or from animals to humans. Personally, I think it is not intercommunicable.

Tuberculosis has never been proved to be contagious or infectious. If it were, all life would have been extinct ages ago.

Many tests have been made by having healthy persons eat food loaded with live tubercle bacilli, but there has never been an authentically recorded instance of the persons having contracted tuberculosis from so doing.

Nature protects her creatures from taking disease from eating germ-laden food, but if the resistance of the animal is lowered and an opening (as by a needle) is made for infectious material to enter the blood stream, then any disease is liable to follow.

Rudolph Virchow, the German scientist, one of the first to proclaim the "germ theory," told one of his pupils, and that pupil told me, that if he could live his life over again, he would devote it to proving that the

The Prize Ring—a Wedding Ring—Action—Thrills—Surprises—Romance—A Fairy Story—And Some Chuckles

THE big auditorium shaped like the lower half of a flare-edged peach-basket, was packed with men. The September night was sickeningly hot.

In the exact center of the place was a raised platform, a twenty-four-foot squared ring. Above this beat down a score of glaring electric lights bringing out into sharp relief three human figures.

Of this trio, one was a sweating and red-faced man in shirt sleeves and baggy trousers. The arc-lights made his bald head shine like a halo. He was "Honest" Tim Constantin; and he was refereeing one of the most spectacular and best advertised fights the Cestus Athletic Club had staged for a year.

The ring's two other occupants were Spike Kennelly and Merle Renton.

Stripped to trunks and socks and canvas shoes, they faced each other, panting through set teeth; their faces gorged and blood-smeared; their hairy chests and white torso-sides spattered with reddish-blue blotches where bruising blows had landed.

It was Merle Renton's fight. The wise ones had seen that from the end of the first round, in spite of Kennelly's savage work. And they had seen it increasingly in every one of the six rounds that had followed.

Kennelly was a born fighter, crafty, ferocious, apelike in his dynamic strength. But Renton was besting him. Steadily, with no gallery plays and with no atom of lost motion, Merle had tackled his job. Bit by bit he was wearing down his taller and showier opponent.

For the most part, the crowd was glad. For Merle Renton, welterweight champion of the East, was popular. Every fight fan knew him to be square and clean.

From the Antipodes had come Spike Kennelly, New Zealand's welterweight champion. Across the continent he had fought his way, from the West traveling east, winning victory after victory—sometimes in a way that did not add to his popularity or to his fame for sportsmanship. And at last he had challenged Merle Renton.

Nobody in the Cestus arena, that night, knew better than did Spike Kennelly, that the New Zealander's unbroken line of victories was in danger, just then, of sudden curtailment. Ruse after ruse he tried—ruses which earned him curt warnings from Constantin and an occasional ringside hiss.

The men came up for the eighth round. Merle advanced to the center in a businesslike fashion.

Spike came out of his corner with a rush. The men crashed together in mid-ring; in a volley of short-arm jabs which culminated almost instantly in a clinch.

As they clinched, Spike brought up one arm awkwardly as if to hit his antagonist on the forehead. The referee's eye followed the silly maneuver; as Kennelly had intended it should. And, in the same instant, Spike brought down his heel, with all his strength and the full weight of his 140-odd pounds on Merle's instep.

The instep is one of the body's most cogent nerve centers. The stamp of Kennelly's heel, for all its soft rubber sheathing, sent a torrent of anguish surging through Renton's whole body. For the first time in his five-year experience as a fighter, Merle "hung on" in the clinch—hung on despairingly lest he topple to the ground.

"Now, then, boys!" the referee was intoning, "Break clean, here! Act nice! Break away. I'm telling you! Break Renton!"

Still half dazed with pain, Merle obeyed. He did not make complaint. It was not his way to squeal to the referee.

At once, Kennelly was at Renton, like a raging tiger. As he charged, he aimed a mighty left swing for the jaw.

Merle saw the swing coming. He threw up his guard, at the same time jerking his head to one side and stepping backward.

But, thanks to jarred nerves and dazed brain, the move was too slow. His tortured foot would not carry him away soon enough. Nor did his glove fly up in time to block the blow. Over Merle's guard flashed the swing.

The thunderbolt fist crashed straight into the center of Renton's forehead, just above the eyebrows. Its impact sent him to the floor. It would have felled a heavyweight.

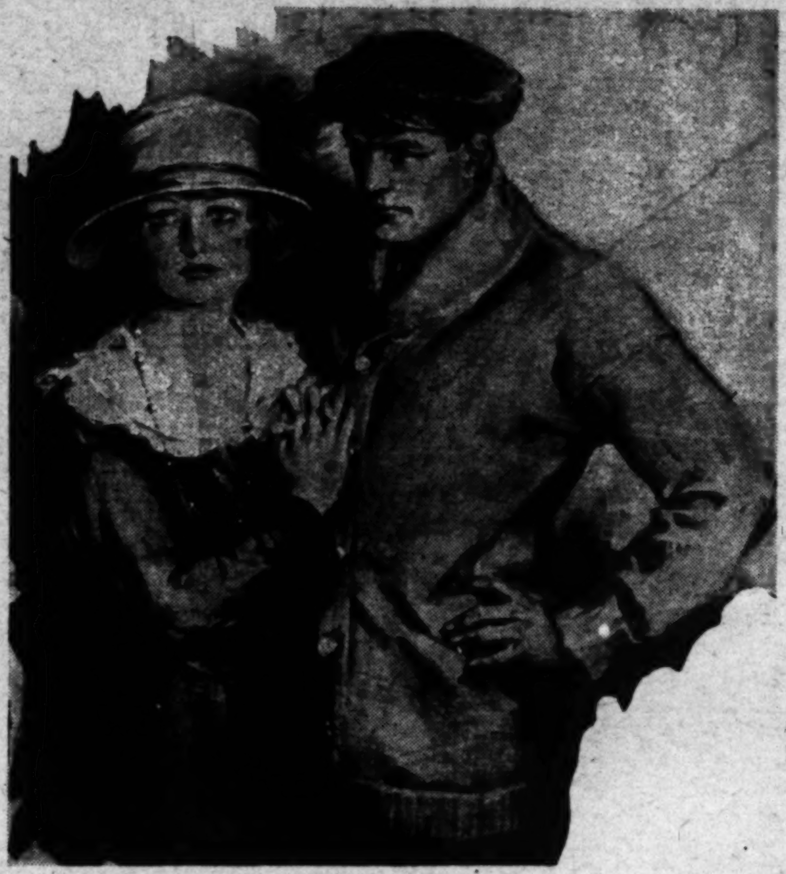
Instantly, Merle Renton gathered his feet under him. Before the referee had reached the count of two, he was on his feet and ready for the fray.

But, even as he scrambled up, Merle was aware that the fuses—in the building's electric light apparatus had burned out. The arena was in pitch darkness.

Merle frowned, vexedly. It was very annoying. He half-turned, to grope his way to his own corner. Why didn't one of his seconds light a match to guide him?

The crowd was still yelling and cheering and shouting encouragement; just as though the place was not in pitch darkness.

Then, in sick horror, Merle understood. It was not the light, but his sight was gone!



Under the doctor's orders, the recent champion had been packed-off to a sanitarium.

To the spectators at large, the only thing apparent was that Merle Renton had gotten to his feet and that he was apparently dizzy or confused by the force of the knockdown.

Spike Kennelly, with his remaining strength and speed, flashed in. Then, as he bored in at his stumblingly groping antagonist, he caught a distinct view of the staring and sightless eyes.

As a lad, back in New Zealand, Spike had spent a year as handy man in an asylum for the blind. Nobody with such experience could misread that awesome blank look. And, immediately, Spike knew what had befallen his foe.

The championship was his! But he must act before the referee should discover the nature of Renton's mishap and stop the bout. Scarce a second had passed since Kennelly had seen and recognized that sightless glare. Scarce three seconds had passed since Merle had risen so waveringly to his feet. There was no time to waste.

Setting himself, deliberately, Spike Kennelly struck with all his trained skill and with every atom of his force and weight.

Down went Merle Renton, face forward.

Slowly, from a billion miles away, Merle Renton crawled back to consciousness. His head was racked and rent with intolerable torment. His mind was as blank as were his shut and quivering eyes. His first semi-clear impression was the sound of Constantin's voice chanting: "Ten!"

In a rush, memory came back to Merle. For the first time in his clean ring career, he shammed. He continued to lie, in seeming unconsciousness, while his seconds lifted him and carried him to his corner and wrought over him.

The arena was rocking with the plaudits of the crowd. It had been a good fight, with a charmingly unexpected twist at the end and a sensational knockout.

Presently, Merle heard Brace, his manager, tell the seconds to carry him to his dressing-room. As he was laid on the table, Merle whispered his manager's name. Instantly Brace was leaning over him.

"You're all right, now, old man!" Brace said cheerily. "Don't try to get up, yet. We'll—"

"Send all the others out!" panted Merle.

Wondering, Brace obeyed.

"Theyre' all gone," he reported, coming back to the table. "What did you want to say to me?"

For answer, Merle Renton opened his sightless eyes. They looked unseeingly past Brace. For a moment, the manager stared bewildered, into the blank orbs. Then he cried out, as in physical pain.

"No!" he yelled. "No! Good Heaven, man! It can't be you're—"

"I'm blind," Renton made simple reply. "I'm blind. He heeled me in the instep, in that last clinch. I was too sick to block his swing, as we came out of it. He got me between the eyes. And it put my sight out of business. Then he knocked me out."

"The filthy swine!" roared Brace, half-blubbering. "I'll murder him for this—if I go to the chair for it! Wait! I'm going to send for the best doctor in town. For all the doctors in town! I'm—"

"Come back!" ordered Merle, glowering in his general direction. "Come back here! You'll stay where you are. I'm not going to have a lot of doctors running here, and have the whole story get around town and be in every paper, tomorrow. I never yet squealed or made excuses. And I'm not going to begin now. I—"

"But, man—!"

"Get me home!" ordered Renton; "get me home, in a rush. Don't tell any of the boys about it. Say I'm too groggy to walk alone; and kind of steer me to the taxi. Get me home and away from the bunch. Then it'll be time enough to send for Doc Meagher."

Nor could Brace move him from his sullen resolve. In the cab, on the way to Renton's flat, Merle explained, "If ever I get my eyes back, I'll pay the bill I owe Kennelly. If I don't get 'em back, I'm not letting any one else pay it for me. I—I kind of hate to talk, tonight. I guess I'd rather we didn't say anything more, just now. I got too much to look forward to. And then, there's—there's Linda!"

"If you'd like me to go upstairs, ahead of you," suggested Brace, nervously, "and break it to the wife—"

"No," refused Merle. "Linda don't belong to the snivelly breed that has to have rotten news 'broke' to 'em. If I can stand this, she can. And likewise she will. And she'll help me."

The rest of the drive was made in silence.

The taxi stopped in front of a flat-house. On the steps stood a woman and a man. The woman was Renton's wife, the man a doctor for whom Brace had telephoned as they left the clubhouse.

Linda did not scream nor have hysterics. She took Merle's groping hands in her own firm grasp, as Renton stepped blunderingly out of the taxicab. Then, with Dr. Meagher on his other side and with Brace miserably following, she led him into the house and up to the little flat that was their home.

It was not until Dr. Meagher had made every possible examination under the circumstances and had departed, promising to call early in the morning with a great specialist of his acquaintance—it was not until Brace had wrung Merle's hand and Linda's and stamped away in Meagher's wake—it was not until she and her stricken husband were alone together in their living-room, that Linda let herself go.

Then, gathering the blind head in her arms she strained it close to her breast, murmuring love words of encouragement; crooning to the sufferer as to a sick child.

"Oh, girl of mine!" Merle muttered chokingly, "Girl, dear, what'm I going to do?"

"It's going to be all right, dearie," she soothed. "It's going to be all right. We got along, when we were so dead broke. And we got on when—when baby died. We can get on, now. Because we're together. You've got my eyes to see with and my hands to work for you. And—and I'm prouder of you for the way you're taking this, than if you won every fight in a single punch."

"What'd I ever do, to have this wished on me?" Merle groaned. "I've played square. You know I have, girl. I've done what I could to be a white man. Sometimes I've fell short, but I've kept on trying. And now, what do I get? I get this—"

"It isn't what you may or may not be getting, this minute, that counts," she broke in, tenderly. "You've been square. And you've always won a way through everything that's been stacked against you. And, somehow or other, you're always going to. I don't know how. But you are. Nobody can play the life-game as square and as helpful as you play it, without winning out at last. See if you don't!"

"I'm a big baby, to whine," he broke out, almost fiercely. "You're right. We're going to face it together. We'll go through it, somehow or other."

He let his tense body relax, sinking back on the couch where Linda had seated him. She curled up on the floor at his side; her fingers roaming through the damp hair of his brow; her soft voice taking up a drowsy song.

Unknown to Merle, his wife had switched off the living-room lights. It was as though Linda did not wish to use a faculty the blind man could not share.

The sedative the doctor had given Merle was beginning to take hold. His breathing grew calmer. His muscles lost their spasmodic rigidity. Gradually, as she sang and smoothed, he drifted to sleep.

Until gray dawn, the woman continued her loving vigil. Then she, too fell asleep, worn out by the night's strain. Her head on Renton's knee, she slept upon the floor beside the couch; as the dim light waxed clearer and as the city's noises began in the street outside.

Merle Renton awoke, stupidly, his mind heavy from the drug and from the exhaustion of the evening before. Idly, through half shut lids, he watched the play of morning sunshine on the window-box of red geraniums.

Then, half-consciously, he realised he was

York recently issued a warning to landlords to provide the required amount of heat for tenants. He said the Sanitary Code of the Health Department required heat to the extent of 68 deg. above zero be furnished when the thermometer registered 50 deg., or less, outside.

Newcomers from the East to Los Angeles do not think of asking about heating. They take that for granted. They should not do so, or they may find that they have to depend on kerosene stoves, without chimneys, which are unpleasant, and a menace to health. Many serious cases of sickness are due to the use of these insanitary heating devices.

War and Crime

A RELATIVE of a Los Angeles man, who was murdered—one of the dozen or more "mysterious murders" during the past year—is reported as saying:

"The soldiers overseas saw so much bloodshed that death means nothing to many of them, and I think many of the murders about Los Angeles since the war could be traced to a disregard for life which had its origin in the World War."

This is quite true. How can we expect to convince young men—many of a low grade of intelligence—after they have been taught for four years that it is a patriotic duty to jab bayonets into men they had never seen, to understand that the moment a treaty is signed by diplomats or militarists, killing a man becomes a crime?

Yet some misguided people still insist on military training of our youth.

Antique Furniture

A LOS ANGELES correspondent writes: "Years ago I earned honest money by doing shorthand work in a big furniture manufacturing place in New York. They made carloads of 'antique' furniture, on order, and it was shipped across to France and England and sold, from some of the old castles. I quietly learned how to detect such goods, for the makers protect themselves by certain secret marks, that no outsider can decipher.

"Recently a man asked me to go to his place to see some old and rare Louis XVI furniture, that his family had bought at a fabulous price from an old castle in France. I went, but did not tell them what I spied. While they were not looking, I uncovered a certain place in the upholstery and found the New York concern's secret mark. The lot was shipped to France in 1900 and was sold from an old castle to Americans at a great price as genuine antique."

No Salt

FOLLOWING is from the Minnesota Daily Star:

"If you were to ask Mr. Heisser—'Raw Food' Heisser, he is known by many—how it is that he can get along in the coldest kind of weather without an overcoat, he will answer:

" 'No salt, no colds, no overcoat.'

"To prove this, of course, he points to the fact that he is able to resist cold better than almost any 'salt eater,' as he calls the average person. He also points to the action of salt in preserving the cold in ice cream and other things.

" 'The system requires salts which are found in fruits and vegetables and maintained without chemical change in the raw state of these foods,' he said 'Commercial salt, however, is distinctly injurious to the system. It cannot be absorbed and becomes an irritant to the system.'

"Talking to an audience, Mr. Heisser said: 'You fellows, wearing eye glasses and those with bald heads are heavy salt eaters. [illegible]

" 'There you have it—salt, sugar and devitalized and demineralized foods. This is responsible for all human ailments.'

"Mr. Heisser is an indefatigable hiker. A ten-mile jaunt is his daily program. He seldom misses the weekly hike of the municipal hikers. When Weston came to Minneapolis on one of this record-breaking hikes some years ago, Mr. Heisser was among the group which met the veteran some miles out of the city and walked with him."

The explanation of this is that inorganic salt, a mineral, impedes the circulation of the blood, so that it does not flow freely.

Freedom from Fatigue: Wear Flexible Shoes

"The foot is a cantilever spring, so made that when it is allowed to function normally it carries the body with ease and resilience."—Dr. Douglas Stewart, of New York, in Physical Culture Magazine.

The average person takes about 5000 steps a day. If the natural flexibility of the foot is restrained in a stiff shoe, if the muscles are bound by a wrongly shaped shoe, if the nerves are impinged and abused, if circulation is impeded, foot fatigue will follow.

Thousands of tired feet the country over could be comforted and rested by the Cantilever Shoe. Each year, more and more women and men are wearing Cantilever Shoes to get free from foot fatigue. They find that Cantilevers make them feel younger and more ambitious and give them greater endurance.

ARCHED LIKE THE FOOT

The Cantilever arch is flexible and shaped like your foot arch. There is room for the toes to spread out; the heel fits comfortably. The Cantilever Shoe fits snugly at the arch and supports the foot without interfering with it. Avoidance of foot strain and restriction makes a big difference in the way you feel after standing or walking a while. Unrestrained—not handicapped—your feet, in Cantilever Shoes, will go the limit for you.

Try on the Cantilever at our store. Take a few steps and note its comfort. The Cantilever is good looking, well made and prices are reasonable. We are the exclusive agents for this shoe.

Rupture Kills 8,000 Annually

Eight thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and all truss sufferers in the land are invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own homes. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—comparatively inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., 298 Stuart Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and instructive information. (c) P.L.

[illegible] on the couch and dressed, [illegible] That did not surprise him. Often, when he came in very late at night, he would sleep on the couch, sooner than risk waking Linda.

He must have been out late. Where had he been? He began to remember.

The fight—the foul blow—his blindness—! His blindness?

Surely that part of it had been some grotesque nightmare! For his vision was as clear as ever it had been. To test it, he focused his eyes on one object after another in the pretty room. The geraniums in the window box, the filmy white curtains blowing in the morning breeze, a basketful of many-colored fabrics on Linda's sewing table.

His glance fell on the sun-kissed hair of the dainty head that rested on his knee. At the same moment, Linda woke. She sat up, wide-eyed and wondering. Then memory rushed into her big eyes, clouding them with black sorrow.

"Linda!" exclaimed Merle. "It's all right, girl. It didn't happen. Or if it did it's gone."

Long and amazedly, she peered at him. Then, for five hysterical minutes she proceeded to go to pieces.

She was still snuggled close in Merle's comforting arms and recovering from her cry, when Dr. Meagher arrived at the flat, the specialist with him.

Followed much examining and many tests and cross-questions. The specialist seemed to find nothing miraculous in the recovery.

The same thing, he said in effect, had happened several times in the course of his own medical experience. A shock, coming upon a system whose nerves were drawn taut by pain or strain, and whose blood-vessels were engorged from violent exercise, might manifest itself in any of a hundred ways. One of these ways was a temporary paralysis of the brain-cells governing sight.

The optic nerve had not been affected. There was no reason to expect any return of the blindness.

After the two doctors had gone, husband and wife went together to the kitchen to prepare breakfast.

While they ate, Brace appeared.

When the triple gabbling had exhausted itself and Brace was tired of thumping Merle on the back and yelling incoherently affectionate insults at him, Linda said, quietly:

"Mr. Brace, you've been the boy's only manager, since he went into the ring. But now you're going to have a partner and the partner's name is Linda Renton. I—I kept thinking of a wonderful scheme, last night, when I was trying to keep Merle asleep. It seemed impossible then; for I didn't dare let myself get to hoping he'd ever be well. But—he is well. Want to hear it?"

"Fire away!" commanded Merle, scenting a joke.

"No," she corrected him. "I'm in earnest. I want to go partners with Mr. Brace in managing your next fight. We've been so sure of winning last night's! And the winner's end of the purse was going to pay for that hotel, back home, and for getting it started all nice. But there wasn't any 'winner's end' to that purse for us. Well, there's going to be, for the next fight."

"I don't quite get you," began Brace. "Of course—"

Drawing a long breath, she began afresh. At first the men listened with amused tolerance. But, gradually, the friendly derision died out of their faces. In Merle's dawned a wonder, tinged with disapproval. In Brace's the wonder was augmented by pure delight. As she paused, the manager gave a great shout, and pummeled the inoffensive table-top.

"Great!" he exalted. "Fine and gaudy! And it took a woman to think of it! It—"

"Not a woman," corrected Linda. "A wife. Can it be worked on, the way I said?" she finished, anxiously.

"Can it?" echoed the jubilant Brace. "Can it? Why, it's a bird! I wouldn't miss it for a—"

"I don't like it," objected Merle, uncomfortably. "It doesn't seem just right. It—"

"Why don't it?" challenged Brace. "It's dead square. I'm your manager. And I say: Go to it!"

"But," insisted Merle, "I don't like—"

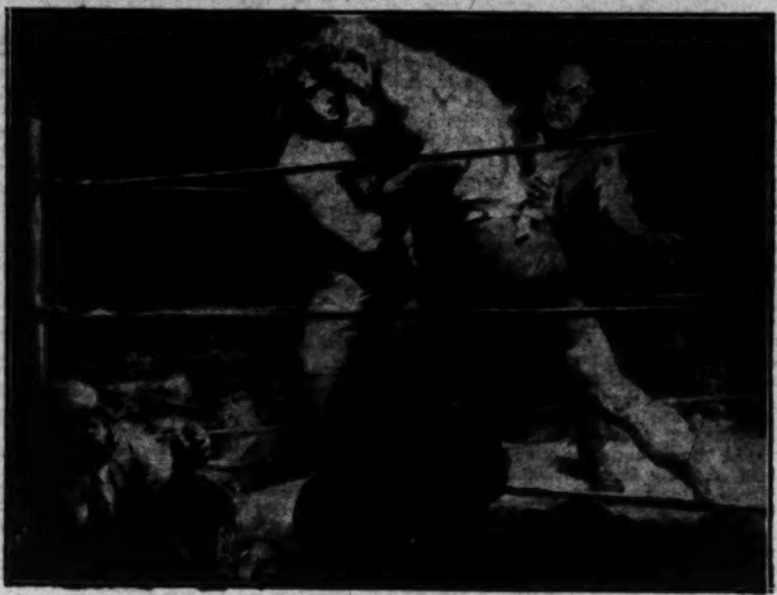
"Listen to me," demanded Linda. "Last night, I told you I'd be eyes and hands to you. Let me be brains for you, now. All you've got to do is to fight, when the time comes. Just the way you always fight. Besides, you said once I was the squarest girl you ever knew. Can't you still trust me to be? One doesn't hit a friend with a bat in a ball game. But one would use a bat to smash a snake—and be dead right in doing it. If Spike Kennelly isn't a snake, I never heard of one. So—"

"But—"

"So that's settled," she flushed serenely. "[illegible] Merle. The more he thinks of it, the more he'll know I'm right. And, when it's over we'll start that hotel. There's a barrel of money in the right sort of hotel, back home. And we're going to run the right sort. How long do you suppose the whole thing will take, Mr. Brace? The other. Not the hotel."

The sporting pages of the various papers, next day, announced that Merle Renton's eyes had been badly injured in the fight with Kennelly; that complete blindness had set in, and that, under the doctors' orders, the recent ex-welterweight champion had been packed off to a sanatorium; where, it was hoped, his damaged sight might in time be restored.

Kennelly read the reports; and he smiled broadly. To him it seemed a delightful joke. Just then he was reveling in the glory and publicity and full pockets that go with a new-won championship. Everything in life seemed, for the moment, either enthralling or amusing.



Spike brought down his heel with all his strength on Merle's instep.

Chancing to meet Brace in a sporting hostelry, Spike proceeded artfully to pump the surly manager as to Renton's true condition. By dint of clever cross-questioning, he elicited from the reluctant Brace the news that Renton prospects were gravely precarious; and that it would be a miracle if ever again he were able to see. Brace had arranged this interview, for his own esthetic pleasure; and without conferring with Linda. But it had a desired effect.

A return match with a man of Merle's prowess was the very last thing Kennelly desired.

With Renton out of the way, that danger was past. Spike could have all the fun and all the loafing he wanted. Afterward, for a goodly while, he could either avoid the bother of fighting or could rake in easy money by means of "set-ups."

But a month later, the sporting pages contained announcement that Merle had come home, apparently cured of his malady. Reporters who had interviewed him declared his eyes showed no visible sign of his late blindness; and that he was curtly uncommunicative about it.

In another three days, the sporting world was happily interested in reading that Brace had issued a challenge to Kennelly, in Merle's name, for a return battle.

Everybody was pleased—except Spike Kennelly. And, in his shifty brain, Spike began to cast about for means of refusing or in any event of postponing indefinitely the fight. He was not ready to hazard his month-old championship; least of all to so formidable an opponent as Renton.

Then, one day, as he was sallying forth for his usual afternoon promenade, a young and decidedly pretty woman accosted him Spike smiled patronizingly. But the woman's first few hurried sentences changed his smirk of gratification to a scowl of bewilderment.

"Mr. Kennelly," she said, speaking very fast and with evident nervousness. "You don't know me. I am Linda Renton, Merle Renton's wife. I have been waiting to speak to you. It's terribly important. Can I walk a little way with you?"

Her agitation and the stark pleading in her upraised face had a silencing effect on Spike's usually too-ready tongue. Nodding [illegible] him.

"I—I don't want to be seen with you," said Linda, with an apprehensive glance up and down the street. "So I'll be as quick as I can. Mr. Kennelly, my husband has just challenged you. Please—I—I'm begging you—please—don't accept. Don't fight him. I beg you not to. There must be plenty of other men for you to fight. Leave my husband alone. Oh, please!"

"Leave him alone?" gobbled the dumbfounded Kennelly. "Why, it's him that won't leave me alone! Here he goes and challenges me, and—"

"That's just it!" she cried, chokingly. "That's the terrible part of it. He insists on doing it. My only hope was to come and throw myself on your mercy. I—"

"H'm," grunted Spike. "Is he as scared of me as all that?"

"He isn't scared of anybody," she retorted. "That's the trouble, Mr. Kennelly, I've no right to tell my husband's secrets. And I won't. So I'm going to tell you just a fairy story; and you can believe it or not as you like. For all you know, I may be making it up—for fun," she explained, choking back a sob and shaking all over.

"Once there was a man," she continued, brokenly. "I don't say he was my husband or that this is a true story. It isn't. It's a fairy story, I'm not telling any secrets. There was a man. And he got into a fight. And he was hit between the eyes. And somehow, it made him blind. Then, after a while the doctors were able to cure him. But that blow had done something awful to his head. I don't know the Latin name for it."

"Hey?" exclaimed Spike, in sudden interest. "What's that?"

"The doctors said if ever he should get a hard blow on the top of the head, it would do something to the nerve-centers there, and make him stone-blind, for life. This next time there'd be no cure. The minute his head is hit hard, on top, he'll be blinded forever. I—"

"Gee!" bleated Kennelly, thrilled to the core.

"Mind you, I don't say that's a true story," she added, tremblingly. "Nobody can say I betray my husband's secrets. Especially when I swore I'd never tell. But it can't do any harm to tell you just a fairy story, can it? Well, if that man was going into a fight, wouldn't his wife want to go to the other man and beg him on her knees, and to fight him? Wouldn't she? Merle says nobody tries to hit the other fellow on the top of the head in a fight. But I'm sure it might happen, by accident. And then—Oh, promise me you won't fight him, Mr. Kennelly."

"Kid," declaimed the champion, resisting a wild impulse to throw his hat in the air and to cheer, "Kid, I get you. Don't worry. I get you. Fight's off."

As soon as he could break away from Linda's effusive thanks Kennelly abandoned his promenade and went at top speed to the nearest telephone booth.

Calling up his manager, he bade that astonished functionary to sign up with Brace, instantly, for the fight; and to try to place a side bet with the Renton manager for as big a sum as he could wheedle the latter into accepting. Also, he decreed that the matter of Spike's "championship share" of 66 per cent of the gate, win or loose, be [illegible]

The manager, fearing lest the money-worshipping Kennelly had lost his mind, came hotfooting to Spike's hotel for further information. But, in a half hour more, he hurried even more rapidly in quest of Brace.

That night there was joy in the Renton flat. Brace came in late with news that the fight papers were drawn up in record time and signed; and that Kennelly's manager had not only waived every moot point, but had agreed to every proviso suggested; and had practically forced a stupendous side-bet on the rapturous Brace.

"I—I knew he'd do it," said Linda with a little shudder. "I knew it! And yet, it didn't seem to me any human could do such a thing. To win a handful of money and a wretched fight, he'd actually blind a fellow-man for life in cold blood. And he'd rob that man still further by a side-bet. He'd trade on an appeal like mine, too! Oh, Merle, I want you to do all sorts of things to him, in the ring! I—"

"I will," grimly promised Renton. "He's put himself outside the white man line."

"And mind you," spoke up Linda earnestly. "I didn't tell him a lie. Not one single lie. I kept saying it was a fairy story. And then he promised me to let me off. And, the moment my back was turned—"

"I know," said Merle. "That wasn't on the free list, either. Tomorrow morning I start training. Only—I wish you'd kept out of it, girl."

"If I had," she countered. "Kennelly'd have kept out of it, too. I had to. I didn't like doing it, any more than you liked having me do it!"

Five weeks later—on Thanksgiving Eve—the Cestus Club's peachbasket auditorium was jammed to the doors and to the roof.

Spike Kennelly had had a busy and happy five weeks. He had trained, it is true; but not in the grillingly drastic fashion that had marked his earlier fight preparations.

A blow on the crown on the head is one of the easiest to deliver. It can be landed as an opponent rushes, head down. It can be struck unerringly as an adversary runs into a clinch or emerges from one. It is a useless and silly blow. The top of the normal human head is fairly impervious to a smash from a padded fist. There is far more danger of breaking the bones in the fist that deals such a blow. Wherefore, many boxers purposely oppose their head-crowns to a punch; in the hope of crippling their adversaries.

Serenely sure that he could hit the top of Merle's head with staggering force, any time he might choose to, Kennelly proceeded to increase his own chances of wealth. Scraping together every available dollar of his ring earnings, he bet half of this sum, at aprpoximately even money, on his winning of the fight. The rest, through commissioners, he placed at odds averaging three to one, that he would win it in five rounds or less. Seldom had a sporting proposition appeared safer.

On the night of the battle the men shuffled out of their bathrobes and came to the center of the ring for the referee's instructions.

The gong rang; and the fight was on.

Spike at once took the aggressive, Merle did not follow his usual tactics of meeting his man, foot to foot. Instead, he retreated before the onset; backing lightly away; dancing just out of reach; sparring at long range. And, while he did this, he broke another ring rule of his, by talking during a bout.

"Spike, my friend," he said, distinctly enough for the pursuing champion to catch every syllable, "she warned you it was only a fairy story—and it was—Anyone but a boob would know the top of a man's head has nothing to do with his eyes—Hammer me there, all you like—Hammer me there, till you break every bone in both your hands—You're out for a killing, hey? Well, the killing is due, all right—Only, you're the killee, not the killer—Watch!"

As he spoke, he halted in his gay retreat. Kennelly had just launched a fierce left lead for his jaw. Ducking, Merle deliberately took the mighty punch on the crown of his head. Its impact staggered him. But that same impact sent shooting pains up Spike's arm and numbed his hand to the wrist. Merle danced away, grinning.

"I keep on seeing, better and better, all the time," he announced. "Try it again!"

Then Merle Renton began to fight. He assailed his foe, amidships; never losing the aggressive.

In the fourth round Merle ripped a punishing lefthander to the stomach; and was following it with a right to the heart; when,

Capital Punishment

THE Anticapital Punishment League of California was organised in San Francisco, having for its principal object the passage of Assemblyman Roy Fellom's bill to abolish the death penalty in this State. Milton Marks, Assistant City Attorney of San Francisco, and Assemblywoman Anna L. Saylor of Berkeley were named president and vice-president, respectively. Mr. Marks is quoted as saying:

"We propose that California shall discard this hideous form of State punishment. Enlightened countries of Europe have abandoned capital punishment and the progressive States in the East already have gone on record against it. California is too advanced a State to continue so barbaric a practice."

In view of the present avalanche of crime, it is rather an unfavorable time in which to advocate the abolition of capital punishment.

Switzerland, a sane country, abolished capital punishment, but recently voted to reinstate it.

However, history shows that it is not the severity, so much as the certainty and celerity of punishment, that deters criminals.

In this country, at present, there is no certainty or celerity, and many criminals are encouraged to take a chance.

A distinction should be drawn between murders committed in the heat of passion, following a dispute, and cold-blooded, premeditated murders, for money, or hatred, or revenge. For the latter leniency is misplaced. They call for justice, untempered by mercy.

Letting 'Em Do It

IT IS surprising what otherwise intelligent people will let a doctor do to them. If they have a pain somewhere from congestion, due to abuse of their digestive organs and a doctor with a serious face says they must have something cut out of them immediately, if not sooner, away they go to the butcher shop—that is to say, the operating room.

And then, after a short period of apparent relief, there are naturally "adhesions" of raw flesh. So more carving.

If a man had a pimple on his nose and was told that the nose must be cut off, he would usually hesitate, because that would spoil his appearance, but anything inside, and out of sight, although of far more vital importance than the nose, is sacrificed, as you might give a $10 bill to a charity.

"The doctor says so." And the doctor is, perhaps, a conscienceless man of long experience. Or again, he may be a young man, who has just scraped through a medical college, and got his diploma and license and who is thinking chiefly of his fee. So an operation, first, last and all the time.

Remarkable, is it not?

Nature Alone Cures

HERE are truthful remarks. They are from an article in "The Healing Art" by Albert J. Atkins, N.D.:

"In the curing of disease, nature is generally right even though it argues that all the doctors are wrong. Have you ever thought that about 80 per cent of all the so called acute diseases will right themselves, if left to nature? Plant this fact in your mind and you will not be led astray by any ism which may assume so much importance.

"Nature alone is the Great Physician. Her forces may be guided by intelligence, but in nature is the healing power, and it is our duty to study how to govern and direct nature's forces, if we would know the art of healing.'

Following is from a newspaper item:

"From a study of the patients admitted to the Royal Edinburgh Asylum for the Insaen, Dr. Robertson, the resident physician, declares that the poisons produced in the system by the influenza microbe are worse in effect than the effect of a cholera epidemic. As a rule these effects were not immediate, as the poison acted slowly by impairing the health and nutrition of the nerve cells, and after the patient had been out of sorts for a fortnight, a month, or even much longer, the mechanism of some nervous function or other broke down. These nervous after-effects were [illegible], and fortunately in only a few cases did they result in complete mental derangement. For one case that was sent to the asylum there were scores who were incapacitated. The ill health of these was a source of misery to themselves, and if they were bread-winners the loss or diminution of their earnings was followed by as serious consequences for their families as would have been the case had the head of the household been a drunkard. It would have been better for a country, according to the doctor, had an epidemic of cholera passed as a scourge through the land and then left it, than to be afflicted as we were by recurring outbreaks of influenza."

These injurious after effects are the result of poisonous drugs that have partially suppressed nature's beneficent effort to purify the system.

Heating Rooms

MANY eastern visitors to Los Angeles complain of lack of heat in rooms and apartments.

The newer apartments are, of course, well heated, by furnaces, but in many of the older buildings such facilities are lacking.

This is a survival of Spanish days. When I came to Los Angeles, forty years ago, I do not believe there was a house with a furnace in the city. Yet, mornings and evenings, the temperature is often cool, or even cold. And just as a high temperature is less felt here than in the East, so is a low temperature felt more, especially by invalids.

The Spanish-Americans knew little or nothing of artificial heating. They spent their life in the open air, and they ate natural foods. Consequently, their blood circulated freely.

In the East, heating of houses is a matter of course—and of necessity.

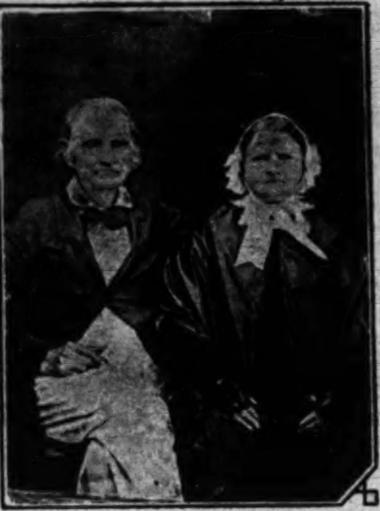
In The Footsteps of ABRAHAM LINCOLN

VI—THOMAS LINCOLN, Father of the President

By Ida M. Tarbell

Copyright, 1922, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

FOR 150 years after Samuel Lincoln landed in 1637 on the shores of New England, the Lincoln family had been in the vanguard which was opening the new continent. Their migration from New England to New Jersey, New Jersey to Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania to Virginia, Virginia to Kentucky, although marked by hardship and peril, had been made without tragedy. But when Abraham, the grandfather of the President, while at work on his clearing, near Louisville, was killed by an Indian, the irreparable pioneer tragedy took place—the death of the head of a family where the children were still young.



Joseph and Mary Young Hanks—claimed by their descendants to be brother and sister-in-law of Nancy Hangs Lincoln. (From a copy of a Daguerreotype, taken in Quincy, Ill., in 1855, and furnished the author by J. M. Hanks of Fremont county, Colo., grandson of Joseph Hanks.

Bathsheba Lincoln must have asked herself, again and agani, as she bent over the dead body of her husband, what was to become of her and of her children. There were five of them now—three boys and two girls—the oldest, Mordecai, not over 14. True, she had upwards of 3000 acres of land, but, even if the Indians had not been so threatening, her boys were too young to finish the cabin that Abraham Lincoln had been building when he was killed, or to carry on the clearing and cultivation of their 400-acre tract near Louisville, Ky., which they had chosen for their home.

The Widows and Orphans Were Well Taken Care Of

FORTUNATELY for Bathsheba Lincoln, she had friends, not a few of them, about forty miles to the south in what is now Washington county—families that had come into Kentucky either with her or near the time that she did. Most important to her no doubt at this sorrowful moment was her husband's cousin, Capt. Hananiah Lincoln. He had become a man of considerable importance in the country by this time. There is an entry in the Washington county records of one tract of between 8000 and 9000 acres in Hananiah's name. He bought and sold tracts, too, in other parts of the country, and he had sufficiently established himself in the respect of the community for the court to appoint him a captain of militia in the First Battalion. In the record of this appointment, to be seen in the Bardstown Courthouse, he is recognized as "gent." That is, Bathsheba had a man of parts, related to her husband, to befriend her. Then, too, we must remember that the pioneers turned, as a matter of course, to help those in trouble. The orphan was "passed around" as the phrase was, and the labor on the widow's land was divided among the kindly disposed. Bathsheba found many friendly hands stretched out to her when she reached Washington county; and from that time to her death she continued to live there, her name appearing regularly on the tax lists up to 1793.

This fact and the fact that the inventory and appraisal of Abraham Lincoln's personal property are in the Courthouse of Bardstown, Ky. (then the county seat of Washington county) have convinced many people that the Lincoln family had always lived there and that Abraham, Sr., was killed there. More than one of the first families in that region has in the later years made affidavit that this has always been the tradition of their people. One interesting affidavit even goes so far as to describe with great particularity Abraham's powder horn!

Considerable Doubt As to Where Lincoln Met His Death

IN MY judgment there must be better evidence than we yet have to upset the belief that Abraham Lincoln met his death in Jefferson, not Washington county, and that, after this loss, his widow came with her children to the little group of friends and acquaintances near Springfield. Certain it is that it was in the first, not the second, place, that he owned land.

Washington county has a fine group of Lincoln traditions to develop without this, much as she wants it and feels it is rightfully hers, for here certainly Bathsheba and her family came to live. And what did she have to live on? The inventory referred to above shows that she had two horses, three cows—two yearlings and three calves. She had a few farm implements—a plow, hoes, some tools, guns and rifles. More interesting is what she had for the inside of her house. It is comforting to know that she had "three feather-beds and furniture," which certainly meant bedsteads, and, let us hope, dressers. She had a dozen pewter plates and two pewter dishes, a candlestick, a Dutch oven, a small kettle and two big cales or tubs. And, most important, she had her flax wheel. Enough, you see, to set up housekeeping with, in a one-room log cabin, which was all that she or many other people in Kentucky, even in good-sized towns, had at that moment. Bardstown, where this inventory was filed, was then but a log stockade, though since that day it has become one of the most finished small towns in the United States.

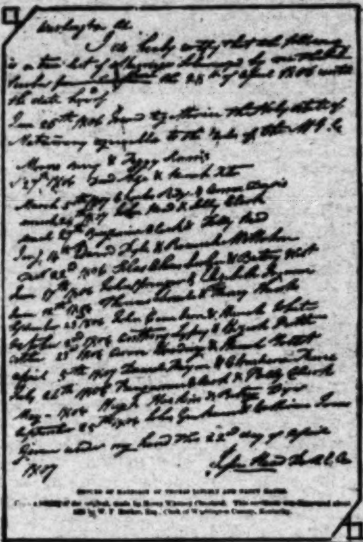
In this cabin Bathsheba must bring up her children. What was the life of little Thomas, now 8 years old—the one of her children in whom we are particularly interested? It has been common to speak of his life after his father was killed by the Indians as that of a wandering orphan-boy—his son once so described it; but it seems to me certain that up to 1793 at least, possibly longer, Thomas had the care of a mother, a well-born woman, more or less attention from his father's cousin, a man of parts, set down in the records as a "gentleman," and at least kindly interest from a group of families that were to figure in his future history—the Berry's, the Thompsons, the Hanks. That would include a little schooling. People of the training and antecedents of his mother and of Hananiah Lincoln, of the Berrys and the Thompsons always saw to it in those days that after food and protection were granted to children, they be taught to read and to work. It was part of their creed.

Thomas Lincoln's "Bungling" Writing Is In Evidence

THERE has long been a tradition that Thomas Lincoln could neither read nor write. We have the documents to prove that he did sign his name—"bunglingly," to be sure, as his son has said; but if one will examine the records of Kentucky at this period, he will find that many a man of eminent name could do little more than to sign his name "bungingly." The writing and selling of the aristocrats of those days, if judged by present-day standards, or by the standards which Abraham Lincoln evidently applied when a grown man, would prove them almost illiterate. People had something to do in settling a new country, overrun with wild beasts and Indians, besides practicing in copy books.

I take it, then, as certain as any deduction that Bathsheba Lincoln and her friend were giving to the little Lincolns, the little Berrys and the little Thompsons as good instruction as they could. Certain it is, too, that they were familiarizing them with the Bible and the stiff moral code of the day. We must not forget that most of these people accepted very definite religious and ethical principles. Puritan, Quaker, Methodist, Baptist traditions of creed and of conduct regulated the lives of the people among whom Thomas Lincoln was reared.

Moreover, it was a time of the most earnest discussion about the future of the country which they were settling. What should it be? Should Kentucky be, as the great Transylvania Land Company had planned a State by itself? Should it yield to England? Should it join Spain? Should it be a State in the Atlantic colonies, newly joined in the United States? Not on the terms which many in Virginia were trying to enforce, that is, a dependency, a colony. If they went with the United States, they must have an independent statehood. It was a vigorous struggle, and these woodsmen were prepared to back it, by force if necessary. This was the kind of strong political meat that young Thomas Lincoln was hearing on every side.



Above—Marriage returns of Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks. In Courthouse at Springfield, county seat of Washington county, Kentucky. Below—Remains of house now standing on former Berry farm, near the first permanent home of the Lincolns in Kentucky. This picture shows the treatmene the original log cabin was given by its owner as he prospered. It was clapboarded without, plastered.

Just when his mother died and he was thrown out of a home we do not know, but probably it was around 1793. We do know, however, that soon after this he went on what must have been an exciting journey for him, a trip of some 200 miles into the beautiful Wautauga Valley of Tennessee.

Thomas Visits Tennessee in One of His Rambles

TO THIS country his uncle Isaac had migrated with his family about 1780. Isaac was a well-to-do man when he left Virginia, and he had married a well-to-do woman of an important family, Mary Ward by name. He had prospered on the Wautauga, acquired lands in various parts of the country, was a flax grower, a slave holder; a careful man, and "close," they say. When his widow died in 1834, she left two finely equipped plantations and forty-two slaves; that is, when young Thomas went to visit his uncle Isaac he found a comfortable pioneer home. He found his uncle's family, too, connected with the best of the countryside.

Isaac Lincoln might very well have adopted Thomas, for his only son had recently died. However, he is said to have found his nephew lazy. I am inclined to think that this explanation has grown out of later-day insistence that laziness was Thomas Lincoln's leading characteristic—an insistence that documents greatly modify—and that the real reason that he did not take the boy permanently into his home was that his wife wanted to adopt children from her own family. At least, that is what she did, leaving to them, when she died, the greater part of the estate Isaac had left her. No one of the Lincoln nephews or nieces was remembered by her.

Just how long Thomas stayed in Tennessee I do not know—probably about a year; but down in the Wautauga Valley there are people who still claim that it was here he found his future wife, Nancy Hanks, and lived with her as a common-law wife, and that it was here that Abraham was born. The site of a cabin upon the hills above the Wautauga is still pointed out as that of the Lincoln cabin. But this is one of the traditions that documents riddle. There are records to show that Thomas Lincoln was back in Washington county by 1797. Moreover, there are many to prove that from that time on he remained in Kentucky until he left the State for Indiana in 1816.

When he returned, it was no doubt at first to the home of his older brother, Mordecai. In 1797 Mordecai sold the 400 acres near Louisville, where his father had been killed, and bought of Sarah Thompson, one of the neighbors with whom the family had always been associated, for £100, a tract of 300 acres on Beech Fork, Washington county, near the newly formed town of Springfield. A few years later his brother, Josiah, bought an adjoining farm.

The Lincoln Boys' Farms Bordered the Farm of Richard Berry

THE farms of the Lincoln boys, Mordecai and Josiah, bordered on that of Richard Berry, a man whose name is of importance in the Lincoln story. I think we may set it down that here on the Beech Fork was the first permanent Lincoln settlement in Kentucky. It was here that a little later a cousin of theirs from the Shenandoah Valley, David Lincoln, a boy then about 20 years of age, found them, and years later, in 1848, wrote to Abraham Lincoln, then a member of Congress, telling him of his trip. David no doubt come to Kentucky to see what the chances were for him there, and we can take it that he found them less than at home, for he went back and later built up a prosperous business on the turnpike north of Harrisonburg, Va., at a place called Lacey's Springs, here his descendants are still living.

A visit to this first place in which the young Lincolns established themselves in Kentucky is worth while if we want to visualize the spot where Thomas Lincoln, father of the President, probably spent much time after he was 17.

The land lies some eight miles from Springfield, the county seat. It is a rough and even dangerous ride, ending in a fording of the Beech Fork, something which, I imagine, could only be done in the dry season. Along the bank of the stream comfortable white cottages are strung—Poortown,

Medical Legislation

FAILING to compete, on even terms, with those who more successfully treat the sick by rational methods, the Medical Trust is constantly increasing its demand for proscriptive medical legislation, to force the people to take what they do not want.

In the State of Texas there is being carried on by organized medical propagandists, with indications that it has the support of a majority of the legislators, an effort to enact a stringent and paternalistic medical practice bill. This measure is designed, unmistakably, to impose upon the people of Texas, by legislative degree, the absolute necessity of employing, in the administration of treatment to the sick, only those who have complied with prescribed requirements and who hold licenses to 'practice medicine.' Efforts to exempt from the terms of the proposed law those who offer to treat the sick otherwise than with medicines are being opposed by representatives of the Texas Medical Association, who are in Austin urging the passage of the bill.

Commenting on this the Christian Science Monitor says:

"Of course the program which the Texas medical men have planned is not one entirely of their own devising. It really is a part of the larger plan, sponsored by the American Medical Association, to which reference has been made in recent Washington dispatches. This Federal program is somewhat more ambitious, its advocates seeking to further their more embracing paternalistic activities by placing a spokesman in the highest councils of the government. But they have not yet desired to show their hand quite so openly as their brethren in Texas, who seem to believe that they will be able to dictate terms to their State legislators.

"In this proposed measure, the defenders of which will no doubt insist is in no sense paternalistic, it is sought to prevent, by injunction, the activities of any persons who attempt to practice healing by any other methods than those prescribed. So far-reaching is the measure that it provides, as well, for restraining and enjoining all those 'who may be about to unlawfully practice medicine.' Thus it would become actionable were anyone to prepare himself or herself to heal the sick by any other than the methods provided, no matter, apparently, whether such person actually offered such services or not. It is not enough, it seems, that in the great State of Texas there are thousands of reputable and unprejudiced witnesses who have testified or are willing to testify to the efficacy of other methods than those which the Texas Medical Association approves and seeks to enforce. To this testimony may be added that of millions throughout the world who have proved the infallibility of methods directly opposed to those which the medical doctors defend.

"Have the medical men proved, even circumstantially, the infallibility of their own theories and practices? They will not even claim that they have. And yet it is proposed, perhaps in the name of 'States' rights," in contradistinction to a hated 'paternalism,' to impose these fallible, experimental and changing, if not altogether repudiated, methods upon the people of a sovereign State, against the protests of thousands of intelligent voters and citizens. If paternalism in any form can be repulsive, it would seem that in the form presented it becomes absolutely obnoxious."

Tonsil Butchery

A STRIKING medical confession is published, doubtless without full realization of its far-reaching significance, in an editorial note in a recent issue of the Journal of the Indiana State Medical Association, regarding indiscriminate tonsil surgery by regularly licensed physicians. It reads in part:

"Tonsil surgery is a great fad among practically all physicians of the present day. . . . Physicians without any training of any kind whatsoever are attempting to remove tonsils . . . with the very natural result of mutilating many throats, to say nothing of performing the operation in instances where it is not indicated."

Commenting on this, the Christian Science Monitor says:

"What a frightful state of affairs, and yet what refreshing candor! And it is these same doctors who are arrogating to themselves the right to determine everything concerning the physical well-being of the human race. Is it any wonder that many are losing faith in their methods? The wonder would be if they were not."

Too Many Laws

AMERICA has more laws, and less regard for laws, than any other nation.

The majority floor leader in the United States House of Representatives thus summed up the work of the Sixty-seventh Congress during a little more than one-half of its life:

"This Congress has, up to this time, placed upon the statute books 398 laws, of which 311 are public and 87 are private, including claims. This is at the rate of one and one-third laws per legislative day for the entire session."

About 20,000 bills were introduced in the Sixty-seventh Congress alone. Then, there are the State Legislatures, not to mention the ordinances of our municipal lawmakers. And most of these laws are voluminous and complicated, some of them interfering with previous laws.

Senator Stanley of Kentucky says: "The best effort, the best thought, for a considerable period of time, must be devoted chief-

His physician's report shows that prior to taking the Witter Water Treatment "The arteries were not as elastic as they should be, but would not say they were hardened." Last report from physician, dated Aug. 15th, shows "Marked improvement in elasticity of arteries; also, general condition wonderfully improved."

..These reports show a good reason for the enthusiasm which this patient has for Witter Water. It also explains why his physician is now using the Witter Water with other patients who are troubled with high blood pressure.

When the doctor put this 70-year-old patient on the Witter Water, he did it because all other treatments had failed to bring a permanently lowered blood pressure, and was, therefore, willing to experiment in the use of Witter Water. Now he knows that Witter Water does reduce blood pressure, and is willing to prescribe the Witter Water Treatment.

RHEUMATISM and NEURITIS

For years I suffered from Rheumatism. I could hardly walk and could do very little work. I had tried nearly everything I had heard of but could only get a little relief.

Two years ago I heard of McLeod's Neurheum Capsules, that they contained no Narcotics or Opiates, and that they actually cured instead of giving relief. I had not much faith but decided to try them. After taking them for four months I was completely cured, and have not had a touch of Rheumatism since and I am working every day.

I can strongly recommend them to any person suffering from Rheumatism or Neuritis.

they call it. Poortown turns out when a car approaches. They know the value of the Lincoln connection and eagerly point you out the site of Mordecai Lincoln's cabin. It was a pleasant site, looking down a long valley. There is nothing left now of the cabin, though a fine old millstone marks the spot on which it stood. They tell you there, with every proof of conviction, that here Abraham Lincoln was born; and all Poortown feels naturally enough that it is wrong indeed that the noble marble monument that stands in Hardin county, near Hodgenville, should not be theirs, that they should not have enjoyed the increase in land values that Hodgenville has had, and that they should not have the roads that the Lincoln Memorial has brought to Hardin county.

Where Thomas Lincoln Met Nancy Hanks

IT WAS a pleasant and easy path over the hillside from Mordecai Lincoln's cabin to that of his neighbor, Richard Berry; and if it is true, as I myself believe, that in this household of Richard Berry there was living at that time a young orphan girl called Nancy Hanks, it is easy to see how young Thomas Lincoln, when making his home with his brother, might have walked back and forth from the Berry home many an evening for a sight of her, to take her to church, to camp meetings, to corn huskings, "bees," house-raisings. There were many things to bring the pioneers together. It is only ignorance that makes us picture the life of the time in this part of Kentucky as devoid of social and religious opportunities. It was full of them. The pioneers were building up a community. They had brought with them from Virginia and Pennsylvania a fine body of traditions. They were trying to work them out, and in every way the school, the church, the neighborly gathering was fostered.

How much of his time Thomas Lincoln spent in Washington county with his brother, Mordecai, is uncertain. He was young and strong, it was necessary for him to earn his living. Workers were in great demand. The year round there was something for every pair of hands in the community. But Thomas did not want to be a jack-of-all-tades. He wanted to be a carpenter, a cabinet-maker, and accordingly apprenticed himself, probably, though not certainly, by 1800 to one Joseph Hanks of Elizabethtown, some thirty-five miles in a direct line west of Mordecai's home.

This Joseph Hanks, in whose shop he now went to learn a trade, was the son of a Joseph Hanks, whose will, properly probated, shows that he died in 1793, leaving eight children. Joseph seems to have been a particularly respectable citizen, hardworking, carrying out the pioneer tradition of combining a trade with a farm. It was a good place for young Thomas Lincoln to be.

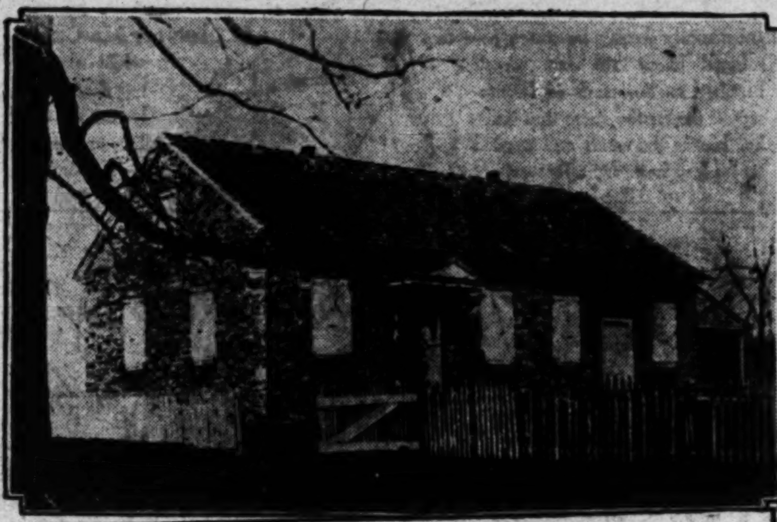
Thomas Lincoln, Like His Forebears, Bought Land

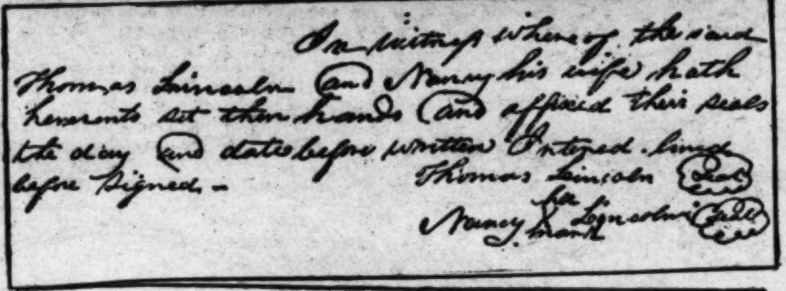
BUT Thomas had the family thirst for land strongly in his blood. A trade was not enough for the Lincolns. Run back over the line that we have been following from Hingham, Mass., in 1637, down, and you will find them always adding land to their trades—Samuel, a weaver, as well as a landholder—Mordecai I and II, blacksmiths and landholders—John, a weaver, like his great-grandfather, and a landholder. If John's son Abraham had a special trade, we do not know. Soldiering and pioneering played so large a part in his career that he never was able to specialize, but that he was a jack-of-all-trades, we can be sure. Thomas, true to form, now specializes as a carpenter. But in 1893, when he was 23 years old, he bought 238 acres of land. He had to pay for it, before its transfer, £118.

Where did he get the money to buy this land? Possibly he had earned it. Certain, he could have done so if he had been as diligent as he might. Again, his uncle Isaac might have helped him a little, though that gentleman's reputation does not give much foundation to the idea. It is more probable that by this time his father's estate had been settled, and that he had received something toward the sum necessary to pay for the property.

The fact that Mordecai had, a few years before, bought the farm in Washington county, of which we have already spoken, and Josiah was a little later to buy a piece of property adjoining Mordecai's, seems to show there had been some division of whatever was realized on the 2000 and more acres of land which Abraham Lincoln, Sr., had bought in Kentucky in the early 1780's.

The location of the land which Thomas Lincoln bought in 1803 has only recently been settled. That indefatigable Lincoln student, the Rev. William E. Barton, started the search which finally located the tract some twelve miles north of Elizabethtown on a tributary of Salt River, called Mill Creek. Possibly the fact that both of his sisters, now married, lived near here, brought Thomas into the neighborhood. Whether he ever built and lived in a house on his farm, cleared and sowed and reaped fields, I do not know. It is probable most of his time was spent in carpentry work in Elizabethtown.

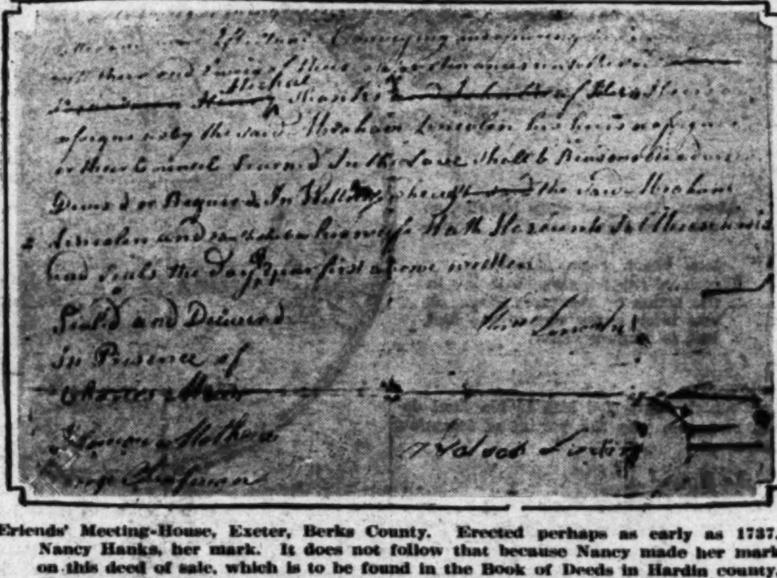




In witness whereof the said Thomas Lincoln and Nancy his wife hath hereunto set their hands and affixed their seals the day and date before written Entered, lined before Signed.—

Thomas Lincoln (Seal)

Nancy her X mark Lincoln (Seal)



Friends' Meeting-House, Exeter, Berks County. Erected perhaps as early as 1737. Nancy Hanks, her mark. It does not follow that because Nancy made her mark on this deed of sale, which is to be found in the Book of Deeds in Hardin county, Kentucky, that she could not write. It not unfrequently happens that people who are unaccustomed to using a pen, sign in this way. Signature of Abraham and Bathsheba Lincoln, grandfather and grandmother of President Lincoln.

Of course carpentering in Elizabethtown does not mean that he was confining himself to that settlement. In those days men traveled far for a job, and it is probable that Thomas Lincoln was working in more than one county at his trade. Of what he was making out of it, however, we have no record—enough to marry on, certainly, since on the 10th day of June, 1806, he and one of his brother Mordecai's neighbors, Richard Berry, put their names to a bond for the "full sum of £50 current money," the condition of which was that Thomas should "shortly" marry Nancy Hanks, of whom Thomas's fellow bondsman, Richard Berry, claims in the document to be the guardian—and he spells it "garden."

President's Parents Married at Berry's Home June 12, 1806

WE KNOW that this marriage took place two days later—the 12th of June, 1806, at Richard Berry's home, a place called Beechland, near which, as we have already seen, Mordecai was living and near which, too, Bathsheba Lincoln had undoubtedly spent her remaining years after the murder of her husband. We have the best of proof of this in the return of the minister who performed the ceremony.

Those whose minds have been confused by the contradictory tales that for years have been told about the father and mother of Abraham Lincoln, would do well to make a pilgrimage to Springfield, Washington county, and see there for themselves the records proving this marriage. You will find them, not in the Courthouse, but in an office across the street. You will not have any difficulty finding this marriage bond and the return by the officiating clergyman, Jesse Head, for both are now carefully preserved under glass, and when a carload of sightseers turns up in Springfield, one of the first things that the clerk in his depository of records does is to bring out these two framed documents. Would that he had as strong a sense of the value of other documents!

Careful searchers for exact documentary material about the Lincolns in Washington county, have, within recent years, turned up tax lists which show, among other things, that in 1811 Thomas Lincoln was taxed in this county on "one horse mare."

There is always a satisfaction in looking on such a record, although it may have been printed and you may have the utmost confidence in this printed source, so I asked to see the tax list. Nobody knew where it was. I think it must have taken half an hour for the clerk to discover, in an upper room, what looked to me like an old lard can, into which had been thrown a quantity of old papers, printed and written, among them the crisp old assessment list of which I was in search—carelessly folded and stuck into this receptacle. If the papers had ever had a binding it had disappeared, and naturally, so old are they—at least 111 years—it is almost impossible to handle them without tearing.

Samuel Haycraft, who at this time was clerk of the court in Elizabethtown, tells in his memoir that, in the early days of Hardin county, the records were kept in a big wooden bread basket. It was a much better receptacle than that in which Washington county is today allowing some of its precious historical records to lie. Springfield and Washington counties are eager to prove their right to the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln, but they are making poor progress when they handle any record touching the Lincoln family carelessly.

But Springfield is by no means the only delinquent in these matters. In Frankfort, Ky., recently, the very tax lists by which the Rev. William E. Barton has been able to prove that Bathsheba Lincoln was alive as late as 1793, were, I have been told, all but burned as waste paper. They had lain so long untouched that the order had gone out to destroy them, but a vigilant woman official gave the order that they were to be examined. To be examined it was necessary to take them into the open and to sweep them in the direction of the wind, so heavy was the accumulation of dust. But to those who look over old records this is an old story. Only a few days before this experience in Springfield, I had a similar one in Virginia—dust so thick on old records that after three hours' work, nothing but a vacuum-cleaner and a Turkish bath would have made me really dustless.

Carelessly kept records have been one of the difficulties that Lincoln students have had from the start in untangling the story of Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks and their life in Kentucky. The statement, spread so diligently after Mr. Lincoln's death, that his father and mother had never been married, took root because not only no indices of the records in Washington county had ever been made but because those records had been treated as "old papers" and stuffed into out-of-the-way places.

The Marriage Bond of Thomas Lincoln Finally Found

RESENTMENT at the scandal which he believed to be false led Square R. M. Thompson of Springfield, whose mother claimed to be an own cousin of Nancy Hanks, to undertake a search for the marriage bond and return which the law required. The clerk of the court discouraged him, but Square Thompson persisted, and finally the papers were found, scotching forever, for people of decent mind, the tale which had been repeated with such relish not only by Mr. Lincoln's political enemies, but as well by envious friends.

It is patient research like this, carried on persistently ever since the death of Abraham Lincoln in 1865, that has gradually brought together so many scraps of indisputable evidence, concerning his father—now a will, now an inventory of personal property—a tax receipt, an appointment to some small post, a deed—that we are able at last to make out of him a much more decent, industrious and respectable man than early and more ignorant tradition painted him.

But how about Nancy Hanks, the woman that in June of 1806 he married at the home of her guardian, Richard Berry? What do we know of her? Who was Nancy Hanks?

NOTE—The next article will deal with Nancy Hanks, the mother of Abraham Lincoln.—[Ed.

Gravity and Levity

This story is told of an Irish lawyer named Keller, who was famous for his native wit, but who, partly from indolence and partly from a frivolous disposition, did not succeed particularly well in his profession.

Another lawyer named Mayne, as sober and ponderous as Keller was light-minded and clever was made a judge, much to Keller's vexation. On one occasion the impecunious lawyer was sitting in the courtroom where Judge Mayne was solemnly presiding. Suddenly he plucked a brother attorney by the sleeve. "Look at that," he whispered. "There's Mayne risen by his gravity, and here am I sunk by my levity. What would Sir Isaac Newton make of that, I wonder?—[Youth's Companion.

Epidemics

DR. H. O. EVERSOLE makes a Jeremiah-like prediction of plagues and epidemics that are to ravage the western world, if we don't watch out—and furnish more medical supplies.

Should Russia engage in war in support of the Lithuanians, as she threatens, and involve Europe in another struggle, the epidemics and pandemics of typhus, cholera, smallpox and malaria, now more or less confined to the land of the Bolsheviki, would be broadcast and bring about the greatest plagues known since the Dark Ages.

This is the conclusion to be drawn from the health report of the National Information Bureau, New York City, made public by Dr. Eversole of Ios Angeles who was the medical member ofthe bureau's commission in Russia.

All this is unfounded fear.

As to "medical supplies," one might suppose that the miserable collapse of "medical science" in trying to "stamp out" the recent influenza epidemic—and incidentally in killing thousands of people, who would otherwise be alive today—might lead them to be modest.

What we need is not more "medical supplies," but more sanitary engineers, and teachers of health, so that people may be clean within and without.

As in former days the priests sought—and some still seek—to increase their power over the people by fear of hell-fire, so the physicians seek to scare the people by fear of "contagious" and "infectious" diseases. Fear, in its various forms, is the greatest enemy of the human race, and has done more to retard human development than any other one thing. How often we see during an epidemic that the fearful are taken while the fearless are left.

Few distinguish between "epidemic" and "contagious" diseases. A disease occasionally become epidemic, but there is no such thing as contagion or infection, as usually understood. Diseases like syphilis, or skin diseases, may be communicated by actual physical contact, but you cannot "catch" any disease by being in the presence of one who has it.

If there was any such a thing as "contagion" or "infection," how then can it be explained that so many escape? These germs, of which the doctors teach us to be so much afraid, are omnipresent. While others are excluded from a house, a doctor, perhaps wearing a long black coat and an ethical beard, goes freely in and out. How is it he does not "catch" the disease? "Oh," it may be said, "he takes precautions." Nonsense. What precautions can he take that any intelligent person cannot also take? How can he avoid carrying some of those awful germs in his coat or in his beard? Or even if he does not, the windows and doors must be occasionally opened, and a few millions or billions of these germs can easily escape. You cannot quarantine against the air.

Epidemics of disease occur when atmospheric conditions are favorable to their development. Health and disease depend much more on the condition of the atmosphere than is generally supposed. An old English saying runs: "When the wind is in the East, 'tis neither good for man nor beast." We all know how brisk and cheerful we feel when the atmosphere is one way, and how depressed and downcast we are when it is another way. When certain atmospheric conditions prevail, those whose blood contains much impurity are liable to an outbreak of a disease, which takes various forms, according to the prevailing conditions, while those whose blood is pure are exempt. An expert may sometimes prophesy when an epidemic is due, by watching prevailing atmospheric conditions.

When a number of people on board a ship, the condition being the same to all of them, put their heads over the side and vomit, you do not say they catch seasickness from each other, do you? When a lot of people go out on a rainy day and all get wet, neither do you say that they catch the wetness from each other. Well, that is just how it is in an epidemic.

Consequently, all these annoying quarantine regulations are absurd, useless, vexatious and tyrannical. They only serve to furnish jobs for politico-medico parasites. As I have said, you cannot possibly quarantine against the atmosphere.

Fumigation was given up several years ago by the New York State Board of Health as useless.

The theory of contagion and infection is based upon the entirely erroneous doctrine that germs are the cause of disease, whereas they are only incidental thereto. You might as well say that maggots are the cause of decay in meat and seek to stop the decay by picking out the maggots.

After a time an epidemic naturally subsides. Then the doctors claim that they did it. They "stamped it out." Another victory for "medical science." The fact is they had no more to do with the disappearance of the epidemic than the man in the moon. Indeed, much less, because the moon does influence atmospheric conditions on our planet.

In the Middle Ages, when living conditions were indescribably filthy, and when poor people alternately starved and gorged, such filth diseases as the plague and cholera, and typhus and smallpox were rampant. Occasionally, they break out again, in oriental or semioriental countries, following a war, when conditions of the Middle Ages are duplicated.

There is no more chance of such diseases becoming epidemic in countries where cleanliness and sanitation prevail than there is of growing wheat on cement sidewalks. Where there is dirt between cracks on the sidewalks a few blades of wheat might sprout. In the same way, a few cases of typhus, or plague, may develop in a clean country, among those who are personally unclean, but it can never possibly assume the form of an epidemic, because there is not enough filth for it to feed on.

I repeat that what we need is not more "medical supplies," or "medical science," but more sanitary engineers and teachers of health.

If I had written the following it would be denounced as the utterance of an unlearned "quack." It happens, however, that it is a statement by Dr. Victor C. Vaughn, ex-president of the American Medical Association:

"The trend and spirit of medical schools is toward curative medicine. The graduates of our best medical schools today are not fitted to do public health work.

"It is a matter for consideration whether the medical profession should fit men for preventive medicine or turn the job over to somebody else. The sanitary engineer as an all around man is better fitted as an epidemiologist than the average physician."

Sugar and Alcohol

FOLLOWING is a dispatch from Chicago to The Times:

"In the olden days saloons were closed on election days because of their political influence on voters. That, also, was before the day of women voters. Now the candy stores may be closed around the polling-places because it is charged they are a lure for the women voters.

"'I bought ten boxes of candy myself this morning,' announced a precinct political worker assigned to getting out the women voters. He was meeting with remarkable success and it was noticed that a number of women he piloted to the polls were carrying boxes of chocolates under their arms."

There is not so much difference in this as you might suppose. The alcoholic stimulation is supplied in another form.

Refined cane sugar—especially when mixed with starch—forms alcohol in the stomach. This is why those who give up whisky take to eating candy.

Sugar also causes fermentation and gas and makes the body acid for which reason candy or mush with cream and sugar, are more unhealthful than light wine and beer or whisky and water, used in moderation.

The "Outcast" Investigated

THE Dearborn Independent, of February 24, published a three page, illustrated report, of a scientific investigation of the Abrams "oscilloclast," made by Robert Morgan, assisted by one of the leading electrical experts of the Pacific Coast.

The machine examined was not, of course, obtained from Abrams. He is not so simple as that. Indeed, he requires of those who lease the box that it be not opened. It was supplied by a physician, who had become suspicious and asked for a thorough investigation.

So far as two of the leading independent electrical engineers of the Pacific Coast could learn from demonstrations, tests and dissection of this machine, it has not the slightest effect on the patient who is "treated" with it.

So far as the most delicate of galvanometers could tell, not one iota of the electric current which is put into this machine passes on to the patient.

So delicate was the galvanometer used in this test that Mr. Morgan, by taking the two terminals in his hands, was able to supply from his own body, without any electrical connection, sufficient electricity to move the needle; yet the Abrams machine, sold as a cure-all for the three deadliest diseases known to man, was unable to produce a single movement of the galvanometer needle.

The report of the electrical expert, in brief, is as follows:

"(1.) That no current appreciable to the most delicate galvanometer passes from the oscilloclast to the patient. Since the vibrations are carried by the electric current, it is obvious that no vibrations pass from the oscilloclast to the patient.

"(2.) That the construction and the wiring of the interior of the oscilloclast are such that no electrical current could pass through the machine, and that this wiring and construction show a profound ignorance on the part of the inventor of all the laws of electricity, or of the handling of the electric current.

"(3.) That the only possible result of the application of the electric current to the oscillolast is the turning over of the armature of a small motor, and the rotation of a small current-breaker, which is belted to the shaft of that motor, both of these having been purchased by Abrams from the common stock of an equipment store, and installed on the outside top of the oscilloclast.

"(4.) That there is more electricity in a handshake, or in the 'laying on of hands,' than is delivered by the oscilloclast. That is to say, the ailing human body would receive more vibration, and a greater quantity of electricity, from the work of a competent masseur, using one hand, than it would from a whole battery of oscilloclasts."

Abrams is said to be making from $6000 to $10,000 a month, out of this "contraption," and doctors who use it are getting rich.

Last December, among the scores of persons who called on Dr. Abrams for treatment, or attended his classes, were five young men, each of whom was informed that he had syphilis in violent form. Though these young men did not know each other, did not visit Abrams in a party, and did not discuss with each other their misfortunes, each seems to have come to the same idea at about the same time, and that idea was that they should see some other physician before accepting Abrams's word.

They consulted three of the most reputable physicians in Oakland and San Francisco. Applying tests, these physicians were unable to find any traces of this disease in any of the five young men. Then the young men told the physicians of Abrams's diagnosis. The physicians thereupon, without informing the laboratory workers of their own tests, submitted each

Good Ship Natalie Rests In Bed of Pacific

Historic Old Windjammer That Brought Napoleon "Back from Elba" Lies Rotting in Deeps of Monterey Bay

BY NELLIE D. GLEASON

MONTEREY is a veritable shrine of California history and romance. Within the confines of this beautiful old city there are a score of structures famous in the annals of this great State, but the shimmering sands of Monterey Bay for years harbored the decaying wreck of one of the most famous ships that ever braved the waters of the Pacific, the good ship Natalie wrecked there in a winter storm in 1843.

The Natalie's claim to fame rests on the fact that as the French ship Inconstant she was one of the fleet of seven ships which set sail from Elba on the evening of February 26 and landed in a little bay near Nice on March 1, 1815. While history makes no particular note of the fact it is believed that the Natalie was the ship upon whose staunch decks Napoleon stood on his famous voyage, "back from Elba." He was accompanied by 1100 of his followers and when he disembarked he was received by a number of the "Old Guard" who accompanied him on his march back to power.

Napoleon Was Received With Wild Acclaim by the People

NAPOLEON'S spectacular return was based on his belief that the Congress of Vienna had failed. He was in constant touch with affairs in France and he timed his return so as to reap the very maximum of results. Instead of going directly to Marseilles, whose population he knew to be royalist in sympathy, he at once marched northward through the mountains, knowing that he was the idol of the peasants in the mountain districts. In this he was not mistaken, for his march was facilitated in every way possible by his admirers. His progress was threatened at Grenoble, but when the soldiers detailed to guard the road over which he was marching saw him they at once broke ranks and with wild Huzzahs surrounded their old idol and with loud cries of "Vive l'Empereur."

Thence forward his progress began to take on the character of a triumphal march and when it was found that Marshal Ney and other officers high in command deserted their posts and joined Napoleon with all their troops his rehabilitation was only a matter of his own time and choice.

Shortly after Napoleon's restoration the Inconstant was sold to Spain and renamed the Natalie. She was then sent to California, where for many years she was used as one of the Spanish fleet of "Guarda Costa." It was while in commission in this capacity that she was one day brought to Monterey by her commander and by one of those tricks of fate, a fate similar in a way to that which the great man who had trod her decks on his return to temporary glory which finally led him to his final defeat, she, too, was the victim of fortune's fickleness.

The accompanying drawing is from the pen of J. Duncan Gleason, painter, illustrator and etcher of international repute. The lines of the Natalie are substantially correct, as the drawing was made from a description of the ship given. Mr. Gleason by an old sea captain who knew her well. Incidentally it may be stated here that as a little boy Mr. Gleason romped about the old wreck while she lay beached on the sands of Monterey Bay and he recalls the terrific storm that finally tore her from her bed in the sands and carried her out to sea to be lost from sight forever.

Natalie Arrived at Monterey in 1843

MONTEREY in 1843 was a sleepy old Spanish town. It took but little in the way change to arouse the people and the arrival of a ship was the cause for much rejoicing. So on that fair day in 1843 when the boom of a ship's cannon announced the arrival of the Natalie off Point Pinos the inhabitants of Monterey, as was their custom, at once prepared a fiesta for the entertainment of their guests.

Capt. Lambert of Monterey, who remembers the ship well, thus described her to the writer: "She was an extremely staunch craft, built of tough wood, most of it being teak. The fastenings were all of copper, she was a brigantine, a two-master, square rigged forward with fore and aft sails on the main mast. She carried a full armament of cannon and her crew was armed with the usual cuttlery of the period."

The Wreck Was Finally Carried Out To Sea by a Great Storm

THESE fiestas usually lasted for a period of three days. On the eventful night on which the Natalie was wrecked the captain and his officers had been invited ashore to be the guests of the town. As there was evidence of a coming storm precautions were taken to leave a goodly number of the crew aboard, but no sooner had the officers touched shore than the crew, eager for the pleasures that such an occasion offered, piled into the remaining boats and left the staunch little ship at the mercy of the wind and waves. During the night she broke from her moorings and drifted ashore and was wrecked in the shallows on the beach.

For about thirty years the battered and decaying hulk rested on the sands of Monnally, during a terrific storm, she was lifted and carried out to sea where she sank from human view.

While as a little girl I often romped about the wreck of the Natalie, I had forgotten all about her and her history until recently, while rummaging in a dust-covered old chest, I came upon a piece of timber about six inches thick and one and one-half feet long. It had a large augur hole in it and was marked: "A piece of the ship Natalie."

My memory at once reverted back to the romantic career of this noble little ship. I thought of the part she played in the great drama of history, in my mind's eye I could see the great Napoleon, standing with folded arms, his piercing eyes fixed upon the French shore as this staunch little craft, after eluding the French and British guardships, swiftly carried him to those anxious and loyal friends who stood awaiting the return of the idolized commander.

OUTDOOR SHOPPING IN CALIFORNIA

BY FLORENCE E. JOHNSON

TO THE average person the term "going shopping" calls up a picture of city streets, with rows of stores almost encroaching upon each other; where all about are crowds, noise and confusion, and the tyrant speed holds sway.

As a contrast to this, come with us into the country and we will find other shops in the restful out-of-doors, where you can supply at least a part of your needs. We will make the trip with the good-natured man who is willing to stop occasionally, and see what is to be seen, instead of with the one whose slogan is "Come, let's go!"

The first call will be at the violet shop. A crude booth at one side of the road is open to the sky. On the primitive counter are two or three jars containing bunches of violets, but the rest of the goods are on the thrifty-looking plants that stretch away for several acres on each side of the little ranch house nearby. A bright-faced woman carrying a baby comes to wait on us, and we purchase two bunches of the fragrant blossoms for 25 cents. When a rush order comes in, the children playing about are called, and with all hands working in the field the required quantity is soon ready.

Driving on along the highway, a blackboard sign in front of a prosperous looking cottage announces, "Persian Kittens, Roller Canaries and Sorghum For Sale." As these articles are not on our list, we do not tarry. A little farther on we find a larger stock of goods on sale, as follows: "Ducks, 'Alfalfa, Rabbit Fryers, Walnuts, and a Three Quart Goat,' but we do not stop here.

As we motor along between the rows of fine old oaks, palmettos, pepper and eucalyptus trees that tower on either side of the road, we get tantalizing glimpses of Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson in the distance behind us, while in the foreground Old Baldy with his hoary crown, seems standing on tiptoe to peer over the shoulders of his lesser comrades, on this glorious January day.

We next stop at a trim litle roadside shop where an Englishman and his good wife serve dainty luncheons to the passing autoists. Here we find fruit for sale, orange marmalade, English plum puddings daintily wrapped for carrying away, and delicious nut cookies that vanish in your mouth, leaving a strong desire for more. We seldom pass this shop without stopping for some of these goodies.

A litle farther on we come to a palm-thatched wigwam with the atmosphere of the South Sea Islands about it. The decorations are of the orange and lemon shades, and besides great baskets of these fruits, there are bowls of California poppies and calendulas to aid in carrying out the color scheme. Here we find on sale in front of the wigwam, all sorts of citrus fruit products, sets of Chinese wicker furniture, and unique baskets from all parts of the world.

Again we take to the road and presently arrive at one of the Japanese markets that are often seen on California highways. The country produce and vegetables are so fresh and clean that you are sure they have just emerged from a morning bath. Here we learn for the first time of a "lug" of potatoes, which upon inquiry we find to be about thirty-two pounds of that commodity, contained in a box with a handle at each end.

A courteous young Japanese woman brings our purchases out to the car, while behind her toddles a tiny Jap doll child of about three years of age. He has awkwardly wrapped up a bunch of turnips almost as large as himself, and in imitation of his mother is trying to deliver the parcel to some of the autos waiting near, but he receives scant attention. As we drive away, the tiny mite stands on the sidewalk with the big bundle clasped in his arms and a disappointed look on his stolid little face.

Passing along between rose-covered hedges, where the scent of orange blossoms comes to us from the groves of glossy trees, we come to another blackboard sign which suggests the interesting

PROLOGUE

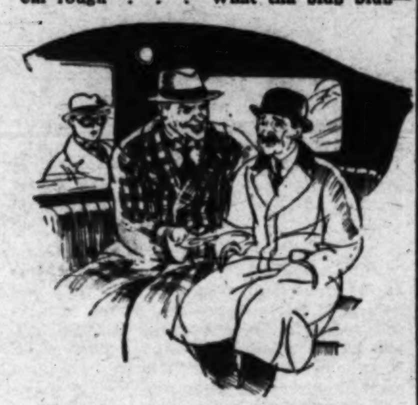
You may recall the Rankins, former neighbors of the Potters, who became rich through acquiring Pa's oil stock just before it began to ooze oil at every pore . . . how bitterly Pa has regretted his timidity . . . how often he has yearned for one more chance like that— . . . wouldn't he plunge . . . wouldn't he strut . . . as the colored gentleman remarked, that's what he wouldn't do nuthin' else but . . . meanwhile there is a distinct murmur in the heart action of the Potter finances . . . the plaster on the family car is beginning to curl up around the edges . . . Mamie, in love with Red, is being rushed by her wealthy employer with, needless to say, the unqualified support of Pa . . . well, well, and this is what is so often referred to (humorously, no doubt) as "the life."

The same sweet spirit of placidity and gentleness that hovers over the Turkish-Armenian conferences flutters every morning over the Potter breakfast table . . .

MA (paging the laggards:) Are you coming, or are you not? How can I keep this coffee hot? Mamie, hurry . . . William . . . Pa!

VOICES: All right . . . all right . . . coming, Ma!

PA (coming in with the sad remains of a mangled shirt . . . some laundries certainly play clean linen dirty tricks:) Lookit the way they've ruined this shirt. They're always doing me some dirt . . . Lookit this collar . . . lookit this cuff . . . Gosh, they sure did treat 'em rough . . . What tha blub blub—



"Take in a few of our best friends on the ground floor."

MA: Hey there, Pa, stop your swearing . . .

MAMIE: Hello, Ma. Breakfast ready? What do we have?

BILL (looking it over:) Bacon and eggs and toast and Jav'—Gosh, it's always the same old chow!

PA: What if it is?

BILL: O, holy cow! I'm sick of bacon and tired of eggs!

MAMIE: Give him some fricasseed humming bird legs, or butterfly ankles . . .

PA: Or oyster's knees. Too bad about you and your bacon . . .

MA: Please! How many times do you have to be told? Eat your vittles before they're cold!

PA (grumbling:) Makes me tired . . .

BILL (grumbling:) Makes me sick.

MAMIE (to Bill:) You make me weary . . .

MA (to all:) Hurry, quick!

(Armistice for a few moments while the morning meal is bolted, together with the morning news . . . small wonder Pa has physical and mental indigestion from eating and reading so fast.)

PA (with a whistle of amazement:) Listen to this: "Oil Company Cuts Melon. The Nonesuch Oil Company has declared a dividend of 400 per cent to its stockholders" . . . wow, I wish I had some of that!

MA (for the thousandth time:) You had some once and you didn't know how to hold a good thing and you let it go, and now we can't afford a maid because you were foolish . . .

PA (bitterly:) No, you were afraid and worried and nagged till I let it go.

MA: It isn't so . . .

PA: It is, too, so . . .

MAMIE: Pa's right; you did . . . so, you can't complain . . .

BILL: Who kissed you in?

PA: It gives me a pain when I think how Rankin got all that dough, when it might have been mine, and I let it go! Some day I'll do what I think best. I'll see what I think's a good chance to invest, and I'll plunge right in for all I've got—

MA (sarcastically:) O, yes, indeed, you've got such a lot, and you'll take us with you, that's what you'll do—Over the hills to the poorhouse, too.

PA: Poorhouse, nothing! Besides, this way we're headed there now at this rate.

BILL: I'll say! Mame oughta marry that Gleason guy before Red kills him.

MAMIE: He'd better try! Besides, they're friends . . .

BILL: Like Cain and Abel!

MA (to the baby:) Take your elbows off the table!

PA: What time is it, Ma . . . I think I'm slow . . .

MA: Twenty past seven . . .

PA: C'mon, let's go . . .

(They go.)

Pa, on his way to the street car, is almost run down by a long, expensive automobile in one end of which sits a sneerful chauffeur, while in the luxurious gloom of the other end rides none other than Thomas C. Rankin himself: Rankin condescends to give Pa a lift downtown . . .

PA (regarding Rankin with awe, now that he is wealthy:) Well, well, how does it feel to be rich?

RANKIN: It isn't painful.

PA (virtuously:) Well, there's one thing money won't buy.

RANKIN: Well, I can't think what it is. Can you?

PA (sadly:) No. Not offhand.

RANKIN (after a pause, during which Pa eyes elegant interior of limousine wistfully:) How are you coming these days?

PA: I'm not.

RANKIN: What's wrong?

PA: What isn't?

RANKIN (after another pause, slowly:) You know, I put you wise to that oil stock first, and you wouldn't believe me, and you sold out too soon. I wonder if . . . but no, I guess you wouldn't . . .

PA (eagerly:) Wouldn't what?

RANKIN (slowly:) I was going to say, I wonder, if I put you wise to something else, if you would go in; but I suppose you wouldn't.

PA (with dawning hope:) You mean . . . ?

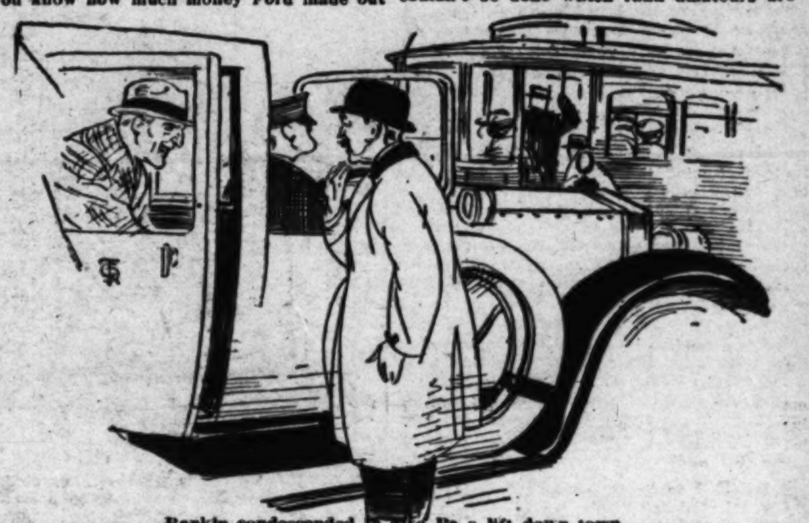
RANKIN: Exactly!

PA: Ohhhh!

RANKIN (mysteriously:) My associates and I are organizing a new proposition which will . . . but, say, you wouldn't be interested . . .

PA (with pathetic eagerness:) Who? Me? Not interested? Say, if there's a chanbe to make some money . . .

RANKIN (scornfully:) Make some money? Don't make me laugh! Say, do you know how much money Ford made out of his idea? And the fellows who went in with Ford at the beginning? And Rockefeller—have you any idea what he's made off his first investment? And why? Because they started at the beginning of something which was new but had tremendous possibilities. Isn't that so?



Rankin condescended to give Pa a lift down town.

PA: Yes, yes. Sure.

RANKIN (solemnly:) What's the newest big thing in the world today?

PA: I give it up.

RANKIN (intoning the magic word, with a caress for each syllable:) Ra-di-o!

PA (dubiously:) Ye—e—es, that's right.

RANKIN: Don't you see it? Radio. In its infancy. Floundering around. Waiting for somebody to come along with vision and money and organize it, promote it, capitalize it, consolidate it, control it. Do you get me? Control it!

PA (bewildered:) But—but . . . how you gonna control it? It's—it—er—wild, isn't it? Wandering around in the air all the time?

RANKIN (confidentially:) Listen. That's our secret. We have patents on plants and processes that will insure us a monopoly on all the radio in the world. All of it. Nobody will be able to send wireless messages without paying us a royalty. Nobody will be able to receive a wireless message until he pays us first. How and where and when it's to be done . . . that's our secret . . .

PA (aghast:) Gosh!

RANKIN (triumphantly:) You may well say gosh. Imagine the possibilities! Control of all the business now being done by all the telephone, telegraph, and cable companies in the world. A monopoly on all radio rights! Tremendous? Absolutely incalculable! Listen. Engineers will tell you it can't be done. Absurd! Three months ago they were saying things couldn't be done which rank amateurs are doing today. The engineers don't know any more about it than you do. Over night, discoveries are being made that revolutionize all their theories. And that's what we've got. Something new. Something none of them has even dreamed of. Something that will startle the world when we announce it. But we're not going to . . . yet.

PA (reeling:) What are you gonna do?

RANKIN: Go along quietly and organize. Take in a few of our best friends on the ground floor. Finance and build our control stations, and then . . . ahhhh!

PA (groggy:) Then . . . what?

RANKIN: Then we will announce to the world that the Cosmic Radio Corporation is ready for business; that we have all radio rights for sale, and the line forms to the right, orders filled in rotation as received, certified checks must accompany mail orders, don't crowd, don't shove.

PA (savoring the luscious mouthful:) The Cosmic Radio Corporation?

RANKIN (blissfully:) Yes, that's it. Wait . . . you'll see.

PA (cautiously:) You sure of all this?

RANKIN (solemnly:) I'm putting all my money into it. That's how sure I am.

PA (dazzled by the vision of sudden wealth:) Oooh! All the radio in the world! Think of it! Suppose I invested in it; how much would I make?

RANKIN (with tremendous earnestness:) Listen. Every man who comes into this now with as little as a thousand dollars, say, will be a millionaire inside of two years. Yes, sir. I mean it. A millionaire! (Car comes to smooth, silent stop.) Well, here's my office. (To chauffeur.) William, take Mr. Potter to his office and return for instructions. (To Pa: Well, glad to have seen you again. S'long.

PA (leaping out excitedly:) No, no . . . I'm coming up to your office with you. I'm . . . I'm . . . I'm interested in this Comic . . . I mean Cosmic Radio Corporation . . .

RANKIN (heartily:) All right, come on.

(A chord in G, please. That's right, professor. Now, will the congregation kindly rise and sing Number Twenty-three?—

"'Will you walk into my parlor?'
Said the spider to the fly;
'I've the prettiest little parlor
That ever you did spy.'" . . .)

(And that's that . . . until next Sunday.)

The Yankee Way

THE late Henry T. Oxnard, the "beet sugar king," often deplored the too commercial spirit of the age.

"Commercialism," he once said at a dinner in New York, "has ruined our literature. In fact, it has ruined all the arts."

"A multimillionaire was being shown over a wonderful old castle in Scotland.

"'This castle and estate,' the guide said, 'have been in the possession of the Marquis of Macbeth's family for 700 years.'

"'And I don't wonder at it, neither,' said the multimillionaire. 'The only way you could get rid of a property like this would be to pull down the house, cut the land up into building lots, and advertise an auction sale, with special train, brass band and hot four-course lunch thrown in.'"

Horse on Him

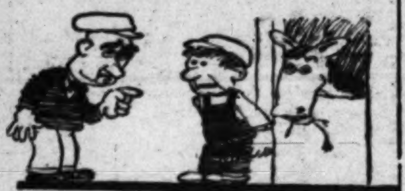
JOE PLANT was the new hostler at the village hotel, and he was being put through his initiation in the care of horses.

The head groom made a tour of inspection to see that his instructions had been obeyed.

"Joe," he demanded, "have you groomed all your horses?"

"Yes, sir," answered Joe promptly.

"Have you cleaned their hoofs?"



"No, sir; I can't do that yet awhile," explained the novice. "They've been standing on them all day, but I've been watching and waiting for them to lie down."

Latest Bandit

THE old deacon was the kindest of men, religious and always ready with a good word. One day while he was driving to town he overtook a peddler with a large pack on his back. Stopping his horse the deacon suggested that the man ride. The peddler carefully stored his pack in the back of the spring wagon and then climbed to the seat beside the good deacon.

For some time the two talked pleasantly. Then there was a long pause, and, thinking to improve the occasion in a religious sense, the deacon turned and asked, "My friend, are you prepared to die?"

With a shriek the peddler sprang to the ground and disappeared into the near-by woods. The calls of the deacon only hastened the fellow's flight, and neither the deacon nor anyone else ever saw him again in that neighborhood. It would seem that the peddler was not prepared.

Think This Over

A GREEK born in the United States had gone to a Greek parochial school till he was 13, when his family returned to Greece, and the boy could not speak a word of English.

An unusually intelligent man, who had worked in an Illinois coal mine, explained in Italian his inability to speak English. "I was in America, and still I was not of America. I worked two years in a mine. I worked and ate and slept with Italians, the boss of the gang was Italian, the company store was Italian, there was no night school.

I learned a few words—"Yes" and "hurry up," and "go t'hell," and "check number t'irty-seven," but that's not speaking English. Only my hands and feet were in America."

Watering the Stock

EDGAR SELWYN, the New York impresario, was talking on the Olympic about the swimming pools that are a feature of the newest and most luxurious liners.

"For these swimming pools and open-air restaurants and so forth," he said, "we passengers pay high enough, goodness knows.

"To tell the truth, I am rather in sympathy with the plump, dark lady who stood on the marble brink of a liner's swimming pool the other day and screamed angrily at her dark, plump daughter:

"'Counfount dot girl, she never learns noddings! Minna, Minna, schwim into der deep vater, und get der vort' of your money!'"

Can You Beat It?

"YOU can't tell me," warned Anthony Joseph, "that wimmin are good sports."

"Oh, Mister Joseph," reproachfully admonished the giggling circle of femininity about him at the tea. "Why, you know they're better sports than men."

"Well, all I know is," he recited, mournfully, "that the other evening the wife and I played double solitaire, to see who'd wash the dishes, and the first game (we were playing two out of three) was a tie, so we drew for the highest card, to see who'd won, and I got that. She won the second game, and the third game—"

"At the end of the third game we counted our cards and the wife she sez to me: 'How many?' 'Twenty-eight,' I replied. 'Go wash the dishes,' she replied, 'I got thirty-two.'

"'Well, I went and washed the dishes and emptied the pan under the ice box and swept under the gas stove and everything, and then when I came back to the living-room about an hour and a half later she looked up from the evening paper. 'All through?' 'Yep,' sez I. 'Well, then, do you know how many cards I had out in the last game—twenty-four. You really won! Isn't that a good joke on you?' Huh, and you call women sports!"

"Sure," agreed one of the group of feminine listeners. "Your wife, for instance if she hadn't been a good sport she would have made you wash the dishes without even giving you a chance of playing double solitaire."

Caught a "Snapper"

A FUNNY case came up in Judge Summerfield's court the other day. It was the usual marital scrap, followed by a divorce suit, and now the couple were trying to explain what it was all about.

"I told her where she got off at, and she hit me with a flatiron," explained the husband.

"Madam," asked the judge, "what did he say to you that caused you so much rage?"

"Well," explained the Amazon wife, "I had been reminding him that before we were married he used to give me beautiful presents but that since we were married he hadn't given me any and he said:

"'My dear, did you ever hear of a fisherman giving bait to a fish after he had caught it?'—and that's when I got mad."

Progress

CHARLES KLAUDER, the well-known architect, said at a dinner in Philadelphia:

"American architecture stands today as high as any in the world, but there was a time when we were almost proud of our terrible jerry builders.

"An American, gazing at the stupendous and lacelike masses of the Spanish Cathedral of Toledo, said to his guide:

"'How long did it take to run up this affair?'

"'Five hundred years, senor,' the guide answered.

"The American gave a contemptuous laugh.

"'Five hundred years? Holy smoke!' he said. 'Why, over in God's own country we could build a structure like that and have it fall to pieces on our hands, all inside of two or three years.'"

Ready Alibi

THE butler in a Scotch family occupies a privileged and unique position. He sometimes assumes a freedom of speech that seems to American ears to border on impertinence; but to those who knew him his frank speech is only one of the many evidences of his interest in the family welfare.

A young American woman was the guest at a house where a butler of that sort reigns. She submitted to his patronage with much amusement; but one day there were unexpected and important guests for dinner, and a little while before the meat was served the butler waylaid the young American in the hall.

"I'm fearin' there's no be quite enough soup," he whispered, "so when it's offered, ye maun decline it, lass."

"Decline soup, James," she said laughing, "why that would not be polite."

"Well, not precisely," said James, with a benignant smile, "but they'll a' make excuse for ye, thinkin' ye ken nae better."

Grand Finale

"PUSSYFOOT" JOHNSON in an impassioned interview in New York condemned the Shipping Board.

"The Shipping Board's soft answer about liquor selling on subsidized American ships," he said, "can't fool me. The Shipping Board reminds me of young Joe Evans.

"Young Joe Evans was taking out a life insurance policy. Unluckily his father had been hung. Now Joe knew how keen the life insurance people always are about the history of your parents, and he was determined not to disgrace himself by betraying the shameful secret of his father's end.

"Well, he thought and thought for some time, and finally he solved his problem. Where the company's questionnaires asked. 'Cause of father's death?' he wrote with a little smile in the blank space below.

"'Father was taking the principal part in a public ceremony when the platform gave way.'"

"Come, Johnny," said he, "didn't I give you a dime just now to throw away that nasty cigarette?"

"Yes, sir," said the boy, "and I've been an' bought a couple o' good 'uns with it."

Cleaning Up

A STREET sweep and a baker in a country town had quarreled. Strangely enough they had exactly the same names. One morning the local paper contained the following announcement:

"In consequence of frequent and irritating mistakes, John Jones, the baker, begs to announce that he is not the same person as John Jones, the sweep, and that he has no connection with the latter."

But he was more irritated than ever when he read the sweep's reply which appeared in the next copy of the paper:

"John Jones, the sweep, who was declared yesterday to be a different person from and to be in no way connected with John Jones, the baker, wishes to be known in the future as 'Lucky John Jones.'"

THE HOW IN HOUSES

HOW TO PLAN HOW TO BUY HOW TO SAVE

RELATING THE FURNITURE

IN THE last few years the realization has come to many home-makers that a harmonious, pleasing interior is quite as much the result of the skillful grouping and arrangement of furniture, pictures and accessories as it is of the wise selection of these. A home that boasts the best and most expensive of furnishings may and often is an utter failure from the standpoint of beauty and harmony.

The failure may be due to the lack of balance in arrangement, to the fact that one piece does not go with another or to the presence of too many things in the rooms. A jumble of perfectly good or unusually choice pieces of furniture is too often the result of lavish expenditure. For this reason, the rule often emphasized on this page that no object should be admitted to a room that does not clearly supply a need, merits serious consideration. To be sure, the need may be an aesthetic one, but its authenticity needs severest testing.

S the first principal in arrangement of furniture is not to admit too many pieces. If they are already there, they should be scrutinized and each required to justify itself. Elimination is not always easy, for it may be that the very pieces that should be parted with are the ones most dear to the heart of the owner. Ruthlessness is needed here. Even prized family heirlooms should be banished if their presence spoils a room by overcrowding or by their incongruity with the rest of the room.

The Grouping of Furniture is a First Step

HAVING made sure that the furnishings selected are within the capacity of the room to absorb, the next thing to do is to decide upon certain centers of interest. Around these, pieces may be grouped in such a way as to bring a feeling of harmony and quiet into the room. Of course, the needs of the family and of the guests that may adorn the room are to be considered at the outset. For a room furnished without reference to these is a parody and a sham.

The center of interest in a living-room is apt to be the fireplace. In winter this is doubly true, unless the fire remains unlit on the hearth. But this is the case in few satisfying homes, for most of us know how greatly an open fire adds to the good cheer and restfulness of a room. Even if the fireplace is not in use, it is frequently a dominating feature of the room about which furniture is naturally grouped and related.

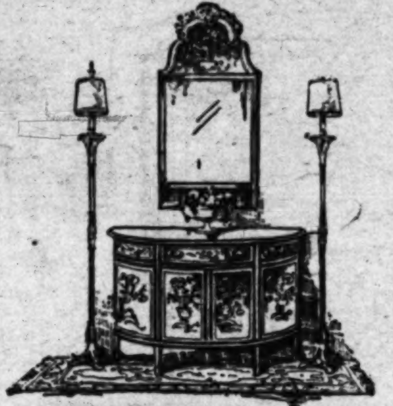
Over the fireplace the best picture is naturally hung, unless there be good and sufficient reasons for another choice. Possibly it is a fine piece of tapestry that merits this honor, but something worth the place of honor is to be selected. There is much to be said for and against the plan now so common of having a great comfortable sofa or davenport drawn athwart the fireplace, with an arm chair conveniently near. Back of the davenport or sofa the long, narrow davenport table is frequently found, and the group is completed by a floor lamp, so placed as to throw the light where needed by a person stretched out on the davenport.

The Davenport Has Captured the Fireplace

FROM the standpoint of use this arrangement has merit. In some rooms it satisfies the demands of harmony and balance. In others it does not. Experiment alone will enable one to decide. The objection to it is that it has a certain stilted effect that even the most skilled handling of details and accessories is seldom able to overcome. Another objection is the sameness resulting from half or three-quarters of the better homes of the land adopting one scheme of arrangement. It has come to be a positive relief to enter the living-room of a well furnished house and find a less cut-and-dried grouping of objects.

Even from the standpoint of comfort and convenience there is something to be said against the davenport athwart the fireplace, with lamp and table completing the group. After all, the most comfortable seat is a chair. Even when propped up with cushions in a way suggesting invalidism, the most comfortable davenport does not quite satisfy as a seat. It seems better, then, to leave an open sace in front of the fireplace, where chairs can be drawn at will.

Instead of the fireplace a window or group of windows having a pleasing view may become the center of interest. Unless the windows extend to the floor, a row of shelves may be underneath. These, filled with books, add to the color and glow of the room. In front of such a window a chair may be drawn, with an end table near by and a lamp on the table. This invites the waiting guest or the tired head of the family. If the space is sufficient, two chairs may be so placed as to balance each other, one on either side of the window. When in use a slight change in their angle will enable the occupants to face the view.



A Formal Group

A Choice Piece of Furniture Takes the Place of Honor

IF NEITHER fireplace nor window has enough interest to command attention, a distinctive piece of furniture may form the center of a group that strikes the keynote of the room. A fine highboy or a cabinet, with a picture or mirror above, always pleases. Candlesticks, a pair of vases or other rather high accessories help to unite the two. A chair or two chairs may be brought into the group where space permits.

The treatment of long wall spaces is important. One large and fine piece of furniture, as a bookcase or highboy, may be placed in the center, with a chair on either side, but it is frequently better to have two pieces balancing each other. It is to be noted that the heavier pieces form the center of groups. The lighter pieces may easily be moved as use and need dictate, but the central piece remains as the pivot. A piano can be used in this way, with an end table, a floor lamp and possibly a chair all placed in relation to it.

In arranging groups the value of mirrors both as a means of bringing pieces into balance and as adding the effect of vistas is to be kept in mind. Pictures, too, have their value, especially when they are hung in such a way that they are related to a group, of which they form the apex.

Formal Balance is Not Necessary

IN BALANCING the units of a group and also one group with another, a formal balance may be secured by offsetting one piece by another of about the same mass and degree of darkness. Thus a highboy used as the center may have a pair of consoles, one on each side, exactly balancing each other. Or a cabinet may have a pair of chairs balancing each other. But this formal balance is not necessary. It is the sense of equilibrium that is to be created. Neither equal divisions nor equal masses are necessary to produce this.

For instance, a small sofa may be so placed at one side of a fireplace as to balance a table and a lamp on another. If the spaces are adjusted correctly, a feeling of balance results. The larger or heavier-appearing object may be placed quite close to the central object and the lighter piece may be removed at some distance from the other side of the central object. Thus balance may be attained.

A teeter board illustrates the way in which this balance is secured. We all know that if a man and a child wish to balance on such a board, the man must move close to the supporting center, while the child must get well down on the end of the board. Thus we see that a comparatively small mass balances a larger one when the distances are properly adjusted. The principle is again illustrated by a steelyard or other weighing device.

The Sense of Harmony May be Cultivated

AS TO the test of balanced grouping, one must trust to the feeling, to the sense of proportion. This can be cultivated by close observation. Experiment often reveals a lack of balance; through experiment a proper grouping may be made. If a chair is to balance a table, with a larger object between as a center, the chair should be tried in several positions at different distances from the center. Then the table should be moved from one position to another, until at last the one that produces a sense of rest is found. A picture hung over the table often helps, as does the placing of a vase or other object on the table. On the other hand, a balanced group may be thrown out of balance by the addition of a picture, a vase, a pair of candlesticks or other object.

Not only is furniture placed in balanced groups, but the groups themselves need to be brought into balanced relation if the room is to have the harmony desired. If heavy groups are placed at one side of a room, the floor will seem to tip. One senses this frequently, but does not know what to do about it. The change of an entire group or of two groups may be necessary.

Of course the arrangement of furniture and accessories into balanced groups must not be carried too far. To do so would result in an absurdly stilted and formal appearing room, lacking the very qualities most desired. But attention to this principle, with a proper realization of its value and also of its limitations, is the greatest help in arranging the furniture in a room.

The balanced mantel is as important as the balanced room. Objects should be placed on it with studied care, each related to the others and to the mantel as a whole. It is not necessary to follow the formal plan of having a central object, as a clock or a piece of pottery in the center, with smaller pieces balancing each other at either side. Neither is it necessary to use pairs of objects. A high vase may be so placed as to balance a quite low bowl or other small object. The distance each is from the center is the deciding factor.

Formal Balance Prevails in the Dining-Room

THE living-room is not the only one in which balanced arrangement of furniture is to be used. In the dining-room, where greater formality prevails, balance is usually quite evident. Here the formal type is usual. The buffet is balanced by two chairs, one on either side; a pair of consoles balance each other at equal distances from a large cabinet; or a pair of serving tables balance on either side of a door or window. This formal balance need not be adhered to. If one prefers, a console with a pair of vases may be so placed as to balance a chair with a picture over it, or some other example of free balance may be used.

In the bedroom pleasing groups of furniture are easily arranged. A stand drawn up to the bed, with a lamp on the stand and a chair at the side, makes a useful group. A cabinet or chest of drawers may balance a dressing table, chair and lamp. A desk and chair, with a picture over the desk, may balance a chiffonier. Pieces thus related fall into natural and convenient groups that add to the atmosphere of rest and harmony so desirable.

There is some danger that balance and grouping may be carried to an extreme, but in a house that is used freely, set and fixed arrangement does not last. The drawing of a chair up to a table or window, the laying down of books and magazines on a table, the moving of a lamp or foot rest—all these help to break up too much formality and to impart the air of comfort that means home.

But even though too much grouping and balance is undesirable, it is well worth study. Especially is this the case when about to buy new pieces of furniture. A chair to be added to a room must be considered in reference to objects near which it is to stand, as well as in reference to the room. If it fails to fit in with the others, it is not the right chair. The same test may be applied to each piece of furniture added to the family. Then unity and harmony are assured.

TABLE DECORATION

Decorated oilcloth mats for the breakfast or lunch table have, we hope, come to stay. They are quite as attractive as linen doilies and far more practical. With care a good set will last two years.

READING WHILE RESTING

Busy people who like to read and who yet have but a small margin of time for doing so should do their reading in bed just before going to sleep at night. At your bedside have a stand with a drawer and a shelf. Here may be kept your favorite books and magazines, and in the drawer some paper and pencils.

THE UGLY ANTIQUE

A William and Mary walnut secretary and bookcase was recently seen. It was guaranteed to be an authentic antique, a family heirloom recently brought from England. It may have been authentic, but it certainly was not beautiful. The top was in a double curve lacking grace; the slanting desk top was on an ugly angle; the legs were heavy, squat and unduly prominent. And yet this piece was priced so that only the few could consider buying it. And at every good furniture store in the city adaptations of the better type of such pieces are to be had for a fraction of the cost of this genuine antique. Why buy the antique?

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER

Warren Exposes to Ridicule Helen's Ardent and Mysterious Admirer

"SIGN here!'

With the stubby pencil Helen signed on the line indicated by the grimy finger.

A florist's box! Who could be sending her flowers?

Closing the hall door on the retreating delivery boy, aglow with expectancy, she took the box into the library.

There could be no mistake—the tag said plainly "Mrs. W. E. Curtis." The writing not familiar, it was probably addressed by the florist's clerk.

It could not be from Warren. He never troubled to send flowers except on her birthday or their wedding anniversary—and not always then.

With feminine indirectness, she examined the tag, the box, and the gilt-lettered name of the florist, for some clew to the sender. No doubt there was a card within, but she wished to prolong the delicious uncertainty.

The florist was a prominent one with several branch stores. This had been sent from the main Fifth Avenue shop—but that was unenlightening.

The square box suggested violets, sweet peas, or lilies of the valley.

At last with flurried eagerness Helen slipped off the string, raised the lid, disclosing, beneath folds of waxed paper, a great bunch of orchids.

Orchids! She had not even thought of orchids.

Six of them! Who could have sent so extravagant a gift?

A card envelope lay under the flowers. For several moments she held it unopened, trying to vision the name within.

Then flutteringly she drew out the card,

"Mr. Robert K. Rodman
"The Carlton Club."

Rodman? Who was Mr. Rodman? The Daltons' dinner—that tall dark man who sat beside her and talked so little. But she had met him only that once.

The card turned over, with heightening color she read:

"For Mrs. Curtis,
"A tribute to her delicate loveliness and charming femininity—so rare in these days of strenuous, assertive women."

The intoxicating glow that comes only from masculine admiration swept over her. That long-forgotten thrill she had not known since her marriage.

She was still young and attractive—she could still elicit this! The sense of feminine power, long submerged by Warren's unresponsiveness, now flared up.

"D'you want that eggplant baked or fried?" demanded Anna from the door.

"Oh!" startling almost guiltily. "Why, either way—no, baked." And bring me a vase—that low wide one. I think it's on the top pantry shelf."

Carefully Helen took off the lavender silk cord and green tinfoil that bound the stems, while Pussy Purr-Mew sniffed inquiringly at the feathery fern.

Six large blossoms! At least $3 apiece. Eighteen dollars!

"What d'you call them flowers?" asked the girl when she brought the vase.

"Orchids. The most expensive flower there is," unable to resist this chance to impress the supercilious Anna.

Where should she put them? Where would Warren be more apt to notice them? On the library mantel? No, the dining-room table. She wanted him to ask who sent them.

Friday they were dining with the Stevens. Would the orchids be fresh enough to wear? If only they were going somewhere this evening or tomorrow.

She would wear one tonight, anyway. Just one, so the rest would stay fresh.

But the old charmeuse that had been good enough for a dinner at home seemed suddenly shabby beside the expensive loveliness of the orchid.

It was not quite 6. She would have time to change before Warren came.

Eagerly she slipped into her new chameleon taffeta. The orchid pinned at her waist and her excited flush were radiantly becoming.

"Company tonight?" was Warren's greeting, as he kicked off his overshoes.

"No, dear. Why?"

"What're you all dolled up for?" Then without waiting for her answer. "Hole in these rubbers. Haven't I got another pair?"

"No, you lost your sandals," suggestively adjusting the orchid.

But Warren, after the first brief glance, did not trouble to look at her.

At the table he was equally obtuse. Intent on his cream of spinach soup, he did not even see the orchids, placed conspicuously before him.

In the interval between the soup and the roast, Helen tried by various maneuvers to direct his attention to the flowers.

"Got those new files in today. Great! Hold more and take up less room."

Not in the least interested in office files, Helen once more adjusted the doily under the orchids.

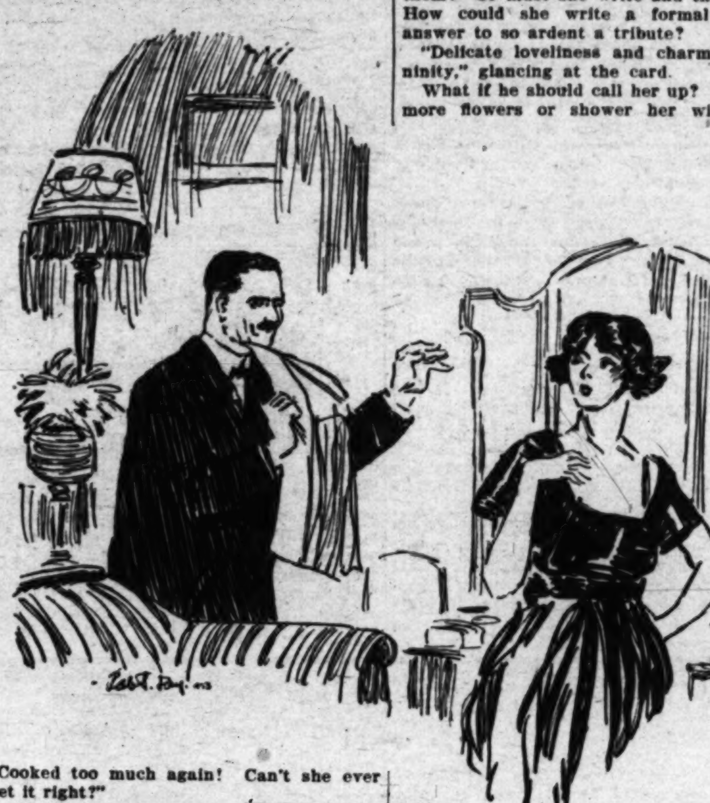
"Goin' to chuck all those old ones. Think I'll move that safe."

"Dear, aren't those lovely?" she blurted out, her patience exhausted. "I thought you'd see them—but you never see anything."

"Eh?" staring at the exotic patrician flowers. "Where'd you get 'em?"

"Some one sent them to me. Guess who?"

"How should I know?" with unflattering indifference, as he carved into the roast.



"Cooked too much again! Can't she ever get it right?"

"Mr. Rodman!" flushing with pleasurable self-consciousness.

"Rodman?" pausing to sharpen the knife. "Who the Sam Hill's he?"

"Don't you remember? I sat next to him at the Daltons' dinner."

"That Gloomy Gus? Well he's got his nerve. What's he sending you flowers for?"

"I'll show you the card that came with them," darting into her room.

With the knife still stropping the steel, Warren glared down at the card she laid by his plate.

"Of all the fool mush! How long you known him?"

"Why I only met him that once. I can't imagine why he sent me flowers."

"Huh, he didn't seem to be having such a heluva time! You both sat there like a couple of clams."

Another disgusted grunt, as he glowered at the card that still lay by his plate, but he did not again refer to it.

Helen was vaguely disappointed. She would not have admitted that she hoped he would be jealous—but at least he might have shown some interest.

This rare chance to impress him she could not dismiss so easily.

"Dear, aren't orchids very expensive now? What do you think those cost?"

"How in blazes do I know? Haven't bought any. A postcard of the Woolworth building is my limit for a skirt I've only met once. What's the matter? You hipped on eggplant? Had it every night this week."

"Only last night. They sent two such big ones. She kept one for tonight."

No further reference was made to the orchids, but when they left the table Helen carried them in to the library mantel.

The card she took into her own room. Not knowing what to do with it, she propped it against the bottle of toilet water on her dressing table.

At the Daltons' dinner she had sat on Mr. Rodman's right. Several times she had glanced up to find his dark eyes fixed upon her. Now before the mirror, with a handglass she studied her left profile.

He was much taller. He had looked down. She tried to get that angle.

Yielding to a swift impulse, she ran to the closet and took out the tulle evening gown worn at the dinner.

Knowing Warren was in the library safely engrossed in the evening paper, she coiled her hair low, as she had worn it that night, and slipped on the gown.

Then again with the hand-mirror she viewed her left profile—trying to see herself as he had seen her. She should always wear her hair that way and never be without a gray-blue gown. The soft quakerish color was most becoming.

When would she meet him again? Should she thank him for the flowers or ignore them? Or must she write and thank him? How could she write a formal note in answer to so ardent a tribute?

"Delicate loveliness and charming femininity," glancing at the card.

What if he should call her up? Send her more flowers or shower her with attentions? He might. The magazines were full of such stories.

Suddenly from the library came Warren's loud guffaw.

"Ha, ha, Kitten, this's great! Come in here!"

"In a minute, dear," starting to take off the dress. "I can't just now."

"Come now! This is too good to keep."

"In just a second," her flurried fingers struggling with the hooks.

Before she could get off the betraying gown, he strode into her room.

For once she was grateful for his careless oblivion to what she wore. Without even a glance at her bare neck and arms, he thrust the paper at her.

"Read that!" he chuckled, rapping the item.

"Wealthy Clubman Sent to Private Asylum
Relatives Secure His Confinement

Robert K. Rodman has been adjudged incompetent and trustees appointed for his estate. One of his eccentricities has been his mania for sending flowers, with an ardent note or poem, to every woman he meets. Last month his florist bill was over $1500. His relatives claim . . .

As Helen read the item, her scorching humiliation crimsoned her face.

"Ha, ha!" roared Warren. "Lucky he didn't send 'em C.O.D. Only bird you could get to send you flowers is a nut! What's that he wrote?" spying the card on her dressing table.

She tried to snatch it from him, but holding it out of her reach, jeeringly he read it aloud.

"No wonder they clapped him in a padded cell. He's batty, all right."

"Warren, you needn't keep rubbing it in! You're cruel to—"

"Huh, you were so darned cocky and [illegible] up about it! Preening all through dinner. And I bet you were in here hanging yourself in that mirror!"

Helen caught her breath. Would he notice her dress? Would he guess all of her silly vanity? But his careless inattention spared her that.

Still without seeing her evening gown, he took up the paper and strode out with a final uproarious,

"Ha, ha, bats in his belfry! When he started to 'say it with flowers' to you—they put him away. Next Johnny you try to vamp—pick one who isn't ripe for the bughouse!"

BETWEEN THE EYES

rattled and in agony, Spike dropped his guard to protect his meridian. In mid-air, Renton shifted the righthander's course, and brought it flush to Spike's unguarded jaw.

Down went Kennelly, under the punch. And down he stayed, until the count of nine. He needed the resting space badly. In the fifth round, he was knocked down, twice; both times taking the full count of nine.

As he came up for the sixth round, Spike swayed drunkenly in his walk.

From the crowd went up the world-old merciless shout of blood-lust.

"Finish him!" bawled the spectators. "Finish the big stiff!"

Merle, unwearied, vibrant with energy, went sternly to his work. Spike unrested by his minute of surcease, strove to lift leaden arms to ward off the attack. Into his eyes had leaped craven fear.

Renton checked his own ferocious advance. He had caught and read the look in his opponent's stricken face. Instead of launching the attack, he merely thrust forth his right hand, palm open. Resting the palm on Kennelly's chest, Merle gave a gentle push. The New Zealander tottered backward and sat down hard, in mid-ring.

Then he sat while the referee counted him out.

Merle Renton, welterweight champion of the East, bent down and picked up the sagging body. He carried it to Spike's corner and turned it over to the unloving ministrations of the beaten man's handlers.

"I'm sorry," he whispered into the puffed ear, "I'm sorry, old man. If—if a loan will help you, till you get into your stride again, let me know."

injuries; but being in the air, beyond the reach of the flying poles, they escaped unscathed. "Luck."

A few weeks later, this same family of aerialists were on the ground ready to ascend, when a hurricane hit the tent, dislodged their "rigging" and carried it away in its entirety a distance of 100 feet, utterly demolishing it. Had the wind overtaken the show one minute later, these gymnasts would have been in their apparatus instead of on the ground, and disastrous consequences would have been inevitable. "Luck."

A clever female trapeze artist who realized that her exploits would prove far more awe-inspiring and her compensation greater if performed without the usual safety net, concluded that her extraordinary skill made a fall so remote a possibility as to be practically nil, and so she elected to dispense with it.

Hitting a Rope by Chance Saves Woman Performer's Life

ONE night while vigorously swinging she involuntarily released her hold on the trapeze bar and her momentum carried her helplessly through the air toward the hippodrome track. When within five feet of the earth, her body collided with a small, slanting, taut rope, used by another performer in sliding down the apex of the tent to the ground. When struck, the rope slightly receded, and this circumstance materially impeded the force of the impact and she dropped to the ground in safety. This rope was the only appurtenance in use under that huge canvas that could have proved of service in an emergency of this character and by an odd chance, it was stretched exactly where its presence was necessary if it was to be the means of saving her from injury. "Luck."

A nimble gymnast who did a stunt on a pair of rings high up in the dome of the waving tent, was scheduled to do his act when the circus entertainment was half over. As a rule all patrons have arrived ere this, and it is a very rare thing for anyone to depart from the show so early, consequently it scarcely ever happens that a spectator is on the hippodrome track at this particular time. On one occasion a physician who was seated in the audience, was hastily summoned on an urgent case. While he was making his exit, the ring performer was smilingly executing his various feats. The showman had no safety net beneath him and a fall to the earth below was pregnant with dire consequences. Like most circus talent who do hazardous work, he had become so accustomed to performing dangerous tricks that he grew careless. Just at the moment that the doctor was passing beneath the rings, the showman fell, alighting upon the medical man. The physician was a large man and collapsed slowly, a circumstance that minimized the force of the collision. The medico was badly injured, the gymnast escaped unhurt. "Luck."

Mental Attitude is Important Factor in Doing Stunts

AS I PREVIOUSLY intimated, the mental attitude of the circus man toward his work, is a factor he must reckon with. One who performs dangerous stunts, sometimes encounters unusual adverse conditions that increase his danger, and when this happens, it naturally induces nervousness and a mishap is more liable to occur. For example:

I did an original, hazardous act one season which was featured by a leading circus and which I will in passing state, has never since been duplicated. It consisted of various combinations of tumbling tricks rapidly executed without intermission and in one spot, upon an elevated, small table. Routines of continuous tumbling in so limited an area, when performed on the ground, while extremely difficult, is not especially dangerous. But when executed in the air upon a small foundation and without safety nets, the exploit assumes a radically different aspect. The difference is as pronounced as walking across a foot-high log spanning a gulley, and crossing the same log on foot when it spans a deep ravine.

Sometimes my table would be unlevel, a handicap that made my work more difficult and infinitely more dangerous. A realization of this fact wrought a nervous condition which I well knew considerably augmented my peril. When confronted with a dilemma of this kind, I would while performing debate the matter with myself something after this fashion: "If you permit yourself to get nervous, you'll most likely fall. If on the other hand you'll control your nerves, you'll pull through safely. Make your choice, be foolish, give way to your nerves and perhaps get hurt, or be sensible, master them and assuredly go unhurt." This process of reasoning with myself constituted a tremendous asset to me as it calmed my nerves in several trying situations and enabled me to invariably escape injury.

Courtship, While Possible, is Carried on With Difficulty

CIRCUS men are very kind and considerate in their demeanor toward the feminine members of the troupe. And the women as a general thing, are very ladylike in their deportment and are far from being the immoral creatures that the uninformed and prejudiced public is prone to believe. Virtue among them is the rule rather than the exception; they are carefully chaperoned, and their morals will compare favorably with those of any community or neighborhood of like population. Laxity of any kind is not countenanced in life under the tents—the management simply won't stand for misconduct between the sexes. When a couple who are mutually attracted toward each other wish to carry on an innocent courtship, it is done under the most discouraging adverse conditions. While marriage between circus folks is not unusual, their courtship while traveling with a well conducted show, is a sadly hampered affair. Mere flirtations are practically unknown.

The most beautiful woman, I think, that ever stepped within a circus arena was an inferior bareback rider whose real name for obvious reasons I will suppress and call her in lieu thereof, Fannie Williams.

When this bewitching, exquisitely garbed damsel stood upon her well groomed horse—which was caparisoned in harmony with the costume worn by the fair equestrienne—she exhibited a wealth of beauty that was positively dazzling.

While Fannie's beauty was universally admired by the circus fraternity, few were favorably impressed with her personality. She was manifestly lacking in amiableness and utterly devoid of magnetism. Her smile was seldom seen and when it was in evidence, it possessed about the warmth of a blast from a refrigerator. The dressing-room boys alluded to her as "the arctic doll." One captious member described her as "the flower without fragrance, the finely plumaged bird with no song in her heart."

While many of the circus attaches paid her court, but one apparently made the least impression, he was a saddle equestrian and horse trainer who broke and rode a magnificent, splendidly trained stallion. He was a very likeable chap, handsome and finely formed, with large, mild, dark eyes that fairly sparkled with the hidden fire of youthful ardor. His attentions were received with favor, his advances responded to and soon there was an understanding followed by a wedding.

It was universally conceded by the tented show world that they constituted the handsomest couple in the profession. The groom was plainly completely enthralled by his captivating bride, and it was evident that the chief happiness or misery of his life depended entirely upon her. Fannie's affection for him appeared to be about as ardent as so phlegmatic and unresponsive a person is capable of harboring.

Kick of a Horse Blasts a Circus Romance

EVERYTYHING seemed to progress smoothly for several months, when the husband was accidently kicked violently in the face by his high-spirited stallion. When he emerged from the hospital his features were sadly marred and his erstwhile comeliness destroyed. A single glance obviously sufficed to create a revulsion of feeling in the wife for her spouse. The scars she beheld were the nails in love's coffin, and her look instantly apprised him that the brightest dream of his life was shattered. The austere Fannie not only ceased to regard him with affection, but she made no effort to conceal her aversion and thereafter she shunned him as if he were a leper.

The horse trainer was still madly infatuated with Fannie; with her seemed all his hopes, all his joy. But his efforts to rekindle the flame of love in her breast, was as useless as the prayers of a condemned man for the imposible reprieve. Her failure to reciprocate his passion, filled his heart with a bitterness for which seemingly there was no sweetening. He grew pitiably despondent and attempted to drown reflection in dissipation, but his efforts—as the sequel disclosed—proved unavailing. One morning he failed to appear for parade duty, and a few hours later came the news of the discovery of a young man's corpse. His misfortunes ostensibly were greater than his mind could sustain and he sought surcease from life's worries under the bridge.

The Beautiful Widow Marries Aged Man of Wealth

SHORTLY afterward Fannie married again—a non-professional old enough to be her grandfather. The dissimilarity in their appearance was as pronounced as the disparity of their ages. He was as unprepossessing as she was uncommonly pretty. When a beautiful woman marries a homely man forty years her senior, it may only be accidental, but it is a significant fact that he invariably is wealthy, and so, it happened in this instance

There are of course many reasons why a beautiful, healthy, young woman might wed an unattractive man thrice her age, but a skeptical, censorious world generally will impugn her motive and will accept the mercenary reason. And, the prevailing impression in "spangleland" was that Fannie was fully cognizant that she possessed those physical allurements which bring a high price in the matrimonial market, and that this red-lipped damsel with the fetching figure, had bartered her youthful charms for gold, in order that she might more fully indulge her well-known passion for gorgeous gowns, expensive jewelry and live in greater ease and luxury. But divorce court records prove quite conclusively that such unnatural unions are not usually domestic idylls and rarely conform with the expectations of the contracting parties, and this one proved no exception to the general rule. There was an utter absence of all mutuality of tastes, while sundry and various peccadillos mutually annoyed. Like all aged Romeos he was very jealous of his young wife and this was a source of considerable friction between them. One prolific cause of well-nigh perpetual dissention was the frugal spouse's unwillingness to remove the choking rubber band that encircled his fat wallet.

And, a strong suspicion prevailed in circus circles that "hubby's" behavior toward "wifey" in another respect, was, from her viewpoint, very inconsiderate if not actually reprehensible. For, instead of obligingly donning a shroud and leaving her his vast hoardings—as seared December, when mated to blossoming May, is expected to do—he obstinately continued robust. Not only did he maintain his good health, but he likewise committed the unpardonable offense of impoverishing himself by extensive, injudicious speculation.

Returns to Circus to Have Beauty Spoiled by Accident

FANNIE'S love for her aged husband had a very delicate constitution and could hardly be expected to sustain so severe a shock. That she would cling to him after his financial downfall was as unlikely as that a miser would overstate his wealth to the assessor. She was reputed to possess too strong an instinct for the buttered side of the bread to for one moment entertain such a thought. It was said of Fannie that she regarded purses as the arteries of life. If your wallet was full, you were considered a live one; if empty, you were counted a dead one. In view of this fact, it is no small wonder that she exceeded the speed limit in hastening back to the billowy tents.

But the two years of idleness and luxurious living had noticeably increased her weight; her muscles had become flaccid and she was besides sadly "out of practice." While striving on one occasion in private practice to regain her former but mediocre skill in riding, she lost her balance, lunged forward, fell in front of the fleeting horse and the equine accidentally stepped on her face.

The surgeon's science was inadequate to straighten her badly fractured nose, while the considerable split in her lip left a deep scar that distorted the previously shapely mouth. Her radiant beauty was destroyed forever; the once unusually attractive countenance was now grotesque and unprepossessing. When it became evident that her power of fascination was forever gone and her circus career ended, the future obviously loomed before her as a barren desert of misery, and when shortly after the accident, she abruptly quitted the show never to be heard of again, it needed no clairvoyant power to divine that she was a broken-hearted woman.

When one reflects that the same visage-distorting catastrophe that befell the unfortunate horse trainer, also later befell the heartless wife, the coincidence assumes a singular aspect. And, one cannot greatly marvel that superstitious cricusdom, when discussing the case, gravely shakes its head and expresses a belief in the existence of a hidden destiny that avenges the wrongs we do, in its own mysterious way.

Temperate Habits Are Characteristic of Most Show People

BOOZE is taboo with a circus; the management won't tolerate its presence on the show grounds. The inhibition, however, doesn't discommode circus attaches to any appreciable extent, for most of them shy at liquor like a fractious pony veers at sight of a gust-blown scrap of paper. Their prejudice is not due to any moral scruples, but rather to the knowledge that its use will greatly impair their efficiency and materially add to the hazards of their vocation.

A circus season generally consists of twenty-six weeks, and at its conclusion the performers of course scatter. Some of the aerialists and equestrians go abroad and perform in buildings where a winter circus is being given. Many of the acrobats and gymnasts play in vaudeville, while some few remain idle till the following spring.

In winter, many performers abound in New York and vicinity. They're very clannish and rarely mix with the laiety, but instead seek out each other and fraternize at some established rendezvous.

Circus People as a Rule Are Generous With Money

IN CERTAIN sections of New York where members of "spangleland" are wont to congregate, one can almost any day see a slightly undersized, compactly built, poorly clad mendicant accosting the sawdust gentry for money, and usually successfully. The ease with which the worldly-wise knights of the arena are induced to part with their coin after listening to the plea of this untidy individual—who palpably is a confirmed booze fighter and drug fiend—nonplusses the uninitiated. Should you inquire of the donor why he gives, he will tell you that he is fully cognizant that his contribution will be spent for liquor or narcotics, and yet he will most likely tender the beggar an additional coin the following day. The donor is not in the least influenced by the man's tale of woe, and he gives him money solely because of the strong fraternal feeling that exists among circus performers, for this man once was a prominent tented artist—the king of bareback riders.

When one of America's foremost circus companies visited Europe, he constituted the principal arenic attraction and was at

Is Heredity Chief Factor in Longevity?

Noted Biologist Maintains That It Is, Though Modified Somewhat By Individual Modes of Living

THIS question as to whether human conduct or human achievement is more influenced by heredity or environment is one that has long been the subject of varying degrees of contention friendly and otherwise. As to which is the more important factor, heredity or environment, in determining the length of life to which man may aspire, is the question which Prof. Raymond Pearl of the Johns Hopkins University has set about to determine and he treats the subject at great length and with much sound reasoning backed by a long series of laboratory experiments in his intensely interesting and scholarly book entitled, "The Biology of Death," just published by the J. B. Lippencott Company of Philadelphia.

In discussing the question as to what determines that John Smith shall die at the age of 58, while Henry Jones lives to the obviously more respectable age of 85, he says:

"We have seen that there is every reason to believe that all the essential cells of both their bodies are inherently capable under proper conditions of living indefinitely. It further appears probable that it is the differentiated and specialized structure of their bodies which prevents the realization of these favorable conditions. But all this helps us not at all to understand why in fact one lives nearly thirty years longer than the other.

"It may help to visualize this problem of the determination of longevity to consider an illustrative analogy. Men behave in respect to their duration of life not unlike a lot of eight-day clocks, cared for by an unsystematic person, who does not wind them all to an equal degree and is not careful about guarding them from accident. Some he winds up fully, and they run their full eight days. Others he winds only halfway, and they stop after four days. Again the clock which has been wound up for the full eight days may fall off the shelf and be brought to a stop at the third day. Or someone may throw some sand in the works when the caretaker is off his guard. So, similarly, some men behave as though they had been wound up for a full 90-year run, while others are but partially wound up and stop at 40 or 65, or some other point. Or, again, the man wound up for 80 years may, like the clock, be brought up much short of that by an accidental invasion of microbes, playing the role of the sand in the works of the clock. It is of no avail for either the clock or the man to say that the elements of the mechanism are in whole or in major part capable of further service. The essential problem is: what determines the goodness of the original winding? And what relative part do external things play in bringing the running to an end before the time which the original winding was good for?

Influence of Heredity and Environment Analyzed

"OTHERS are two general classes of factors which may be involved here. These are, on the one hand, heredity and, on the other hand, environment, using the latter term in the broadest sense. Inasmuch as we can be reasonably sure on a priori grounds that longevity, like most other biological phenomena, is influenced by both heredity and environment the problem practically reduces itself to the measuring of the relative importance of each of these two factors, groups in determining the results we see."

The table herewith presented shows the dominant part that heredity plays as a factor in the determination of longevity and the influence of a considerable degree of longevity in both father and mother upon the expectation of life of the offspring. The table given below is Bell's and in each cell, of which the open figure represents the average duration of life of the offspring and the bracketed figure is the number of cases upon which the average is based:

Father's Age at Death	Mother's Age at Death
	Under 60	60-80	Over 80
Under 60	32.8 years (126)	33.4 years (120)	36.2 years (74)
60-80	35.8 (351)	38.0 (388)	45.0 (172)
Over 80	42.3 (131)	45.5 (206)	52.7 (184)

In discusing this table Professor Pearl says: "We see that the longest average duration of life, or expectation of life, was of that group which had both mothers and fathers living to age 80 and over. The average duration of life of these persons was 52.7 years. Contrast this with the average duration of life of those whose parents both died under 60 years of age, where the figure is 32.8 years. In other words, it added almost exactly twenty years to the average life of the first group of people to have extremely long-lived parents, instead of parents dying under age 60. top to bottom—that is, as the father's age ration of life advances as we proceed from top to bottom—that is, as th efather's age at death increases—and in each row of the table the average expectation of life of the offspring increases as we pass from left to right—that is, with increasing age of the mother at death. However the matter is taken, a careful selection of one's parents in respect of longevity is the most reliable form of personal life insurance."

The Survival of the Fittest Only Is Inevitable

PROFESSOR PEARL, in a section devoted to "The Selective Death Rate in Man" shows that human life during the earliest period is largely a matter of the survival of the fittest. He says, "If the duration of life were inherited it would logically be expected that some portion of the death rate must be selective in character. For inheritance of duration of life can only mean that when a person dies is in part determined by that individual's biological constitution or make-up. And equally it is obvious that individuals of weak and unsound constitution must, on the average, die earlier than those of strong, sound and vigorous constitution. Whence it follows that the chances of leaving offspring will be greater for those of sound constitution than for the weaklings. The mathematical discussion which has just been given indicates that from one-half to three-fourths of the death rate is selective in character, because that proposition is determined by hereditary factors. Just in proportion as heredity determines the death rate, so is the mortality selective.

"Altogether, we may regard the weight of present evidence as altogether preponderant in favor of the view that the death rate of the earliest period of life is selective eliminating the weak and leaving the strong. From our present point of view it adds another broad class of evidential material to the proof of the proposition that inheritance is one of the strongest elements if not indeed the dominating factor, in determining the duration of life of human beings."

Conducts Long Series of Experiments With Life

NOT being satisfied to let his theories rest upon mere statistics, he has gone beyond this into the work of personal investigation, and he, as well as Prof. T. H. Morgan of Columbia University, have produced some intensely interesting results in his experiments with flies. In a chapter on "Experimental Studies on the Duration of Life" he gives a fascinating account of his work in this line and of the sometimes startling results. He says, "In the last chapter there was presented indubitable proof that inheritance is a major factor in determining the duration of life in man. The evidence, while entirely convincing, and indeed in the writer's opinion critically conclusive, must be, in the nature of the case, statistical in its nature. Experimental inquiries into the duration of human life are obviously impossible. It is always important, however, as a general principle, and particularly so in the present instance, to check one's statistical conclusions by independent experimental evidence. This can be successfully done, when one's problem is longevity, only by choosing an animal whose life-span relative to that of man is a short one, and in general the briefer it is the better suited will the animal be for the purpose.

"An organism which rather completely fulfills the requirements of the case, not only in respect of the shortness of life span, but also in other ways, such as ease of handling, feeding, housing, etc., is the common 'fruit' or 'vinegar' fly, Drosophila melanogaster. This insect, which every one has seen hovering about bananas and other fruit in fruit shops, has lately attained great fame and respectability as a laboratory animal, as a result of the brilliant and extended investigation of Morgan and his students upon it, in an analysis of the mechanism of heredity. Drosophila is a small fly, perhaps one-fourth as large as the common house fly. The duration of life of the adult varies in an orderly manner from less than one day to over ninety days. The span of life of Drosophila quantitatively parallels in an extraordinary way that of man, with only the difference that life's duration is measured with different yardsticks in the two cases. Man's yardstick is one year long, while Drosophila's is one day long. A fly 90 days old is just as decrepit and senile, for a fly, as a man 90 years old is in human society."

What We Humans Have In Common With Flies

PROFESSOR PEARL goes on from this to show that among other similarities in the life of the fly and in the life of man, "that at practically all ages in Drosophila the number of survivors at any given age is higher among the female than among the males. This, it will be recalled, is exactly the state of the case in human mortality." The death rate per thousand flies according to age also closely corresponds to that of man. Having thus demonstrated that the incidence of mortality is in general similar in the fly, Drosophila, to what it is in man, with a suitable change of unit of measure, Prof. Pearl proceeds to examine some of the evidence regarding the inheritance of duration of life in this organism. "The first step in such an examination," he says, "is to determine what degree of natural variation of an hereditary sort exists in a general fly population in respect to this characteristic. In order to do this it is necessary to insolate individual pairs, male and female, breed them together and see whether, between the groups of offspring so obtained, there are genetic differences in respect of duration of life which persist through an indefinite number of generations. This approaches closely to the process called by geneticists the testing of pure lines. In such a process the purpose is to reduce to a minimum the genetic diversity which can possibly be exhibited in the material. In a case like the present, the whole amount of genetic variation in respect of duration of life which can appear in the offspring of a single pair of parents is only that which can arise by virtue of its prior existence in the parents themselves individually and from the combination of the germinal variation existing in the two parents one with another. We may call the offspring, through successive generations, of a single pair of parents a line of descent. If, when kept under identical environmental conditions, such lines exhibit widely different average durations of life, and if these differences reappear with constancy in successive generations, it may be justly concluded that the basis of these differences is hereditary in nature, since hypothesis the environment of all the lines is kept the same. In consequence of the environmental equality, whatever differences do appear must be inherently genetic."

Heredity the Dominating Influence In Both Fly and Man

HERE follows a description of experiments in detail, together with some of the results which these experiments have produced. These have served to further prove his theory that heredity is the dominating influence in long life. He says, "The evidence is conclusive of the broad fact, beyond any question I think, coming as it does from such widely different types of life, and arrived at by such totally different methods as the statistical, on the one hand, and the experimental, on the other. We may safely conclude that the primary agent concerned in the winding up of the vital clock, and by the winding determining primarily and fundamentally how long it shall run, is heredity. The best insurance of longevity is beyond question a careful selection of one's parents and grandparents."

Prof. Pearl has also taken up the question of other influences which tend to lengthen or shorten life, such as tend to lengthen or shorten life, such as bacterial toxins, and shows that Drosophila sterilized and made immune to all diseases has not as good a chance of reaching old age as has one which is exposed to the innumerable germs with which the atmosphere abounds. He says, "We reach the conclusion that bacteria-free Drosophila live no longer on the average, and indeed perhaps even a little less long, under otherwise the same constant environmental conditions, than do normal nonsterile—indeed germ-laden—flies. The result is of great interest and significance. It emphasizes, in a direct experimental manner, that, in a broad biological sense, bacteria play but an essentially accidental role in determining length of the span of life in comparison with the influence of heredity."

The Faster We Live the Sooner We Die

NOT only with flies but with rats also have some intensely interesting experiments been made and significant results obtained. One of the most interesting of these experiments was made to show that the duration of life of an animal stands in inverse relation to the total amount of its metabolic activity, or put in other words, to the work, in the sense of theoretical mechanics, that it, as a machine, does during life. Four Albino rats, kept in an old-fashioned revolving squirrel cage, with a properly calibrated odometer attached to the axle, showed during 25, 26, 32 and 34 months of life, 1265, 1391, 2098 and 5447 miles of travel, respectively. The average age for the four rats at death was twenty-nine and one-half months, while three other rats confined in stationary cages so that they could only move about to a limited degree, but otherwise under conditions the same as those in the revolving cage, attained an average age at death of 40.3 months. "From this experiment," Prof. Pearl says, "it clearly appears that the greater the total work done, or total energy output, the shorter the duration of life, and vice versa."

And finally reverting again to the theory that heredity is the dominating factor in longevity he says: "If we live rapidly, like Loeb and Northrop's Drosophila at the high temperatures, our lives may be more interesting, but they will not be so long. The fact appears to be, though reservation of final judgment is necessary till more returns are in, that heredity determines the amount of capital placed in the vital bank upon which we draw to continue life, and which, when all used up, spells death; while environment, using the term in the broadest sense to include habits of life, as well as physical surroundings, determines the rate at which drafts are presented and cashed. The case seems in principle like what obtains in respect of the duration of life of a man-constructed machine. It is self-evident that if, of two automobiles of the same make leaving the factory together new at the same time, one is run at the rate of 1000 miles per year and the other at the rate 10,000 miles per year, the useful life of the former is bound to be much longer in time than that of the latter, accidents being excluded in both cases. Again, a very high-priced car, well-built of the finest material, may have a shorter duration of life than the poorest and cheapest machine, provided the annual mileage output of the former is many times that of the latter."

Rosalie Aubyn, the youngest child of a brilliant but lazy and embittered English clergyman, views the world as a place made and existing primarily for the benefit of man, a place in which woman, as represented by her mother and sisters, is concerned chiefly with administering to the wants and catering to the likes and dislikes of man, as represented by ther father and brothers. To her all men are wonderful beings. As a girl, Rosalie's mother had shown genuine talent in art. Her father, when a young man, had displayed unusual zeal and ability in his vocation. But her mother had sacrificed career for duty to her family while the minister had wasted his talent in shiftlessness. Rosalie begins to feel that men are interfering with her happiness when, on her customary afternoon walks with two of her sisters, she is left to trail behind the two older girls and their beaux.

ONE OF these young men was called Mr. Chalton and the other Mr. Ricks. Like all men, and even more so, they were splendid and wonderful. They had silver cigarette cases and smoked a lot, and they wore most handsome waistcoats and ties, and some of their conversation that came back to Rosalie, trailing behind, was of very wonderful and exciting things they had done or were going to do. Mr. Holland, the headmaster of the grammar school, was the terror of Robert's life, but it appeared that Mr. Chalton and Mr. Ricks were not in the least afraid of Mr. Holland, and they talked a great deal of what they would do to him if he ever tried to interfere with them and a great deal of what they did do in the way of utterly disregarding him. They were undeniably splendid and wonderful, but they utterly ruined Rosalie's walks and they greatly intensified Roshlie's new feelings toward men and boys—that men and boys were a great nuisance and spoilt things.

Time went along. Other young men were met. In the holidays quite a number of young men came for their vacations to their homes in Ibbotsfield and the surrounding district. Certain of these, unlike the grammar school private pupils, called openly at the rectory on one pretext or another, but they were nevertheless also met secretly by Flora and Hilda, ruined the walks precisely as Messrs. Chalton and Ricks had first ruined them, and were on no account to be mentioned by Rosalie to her father or mother.

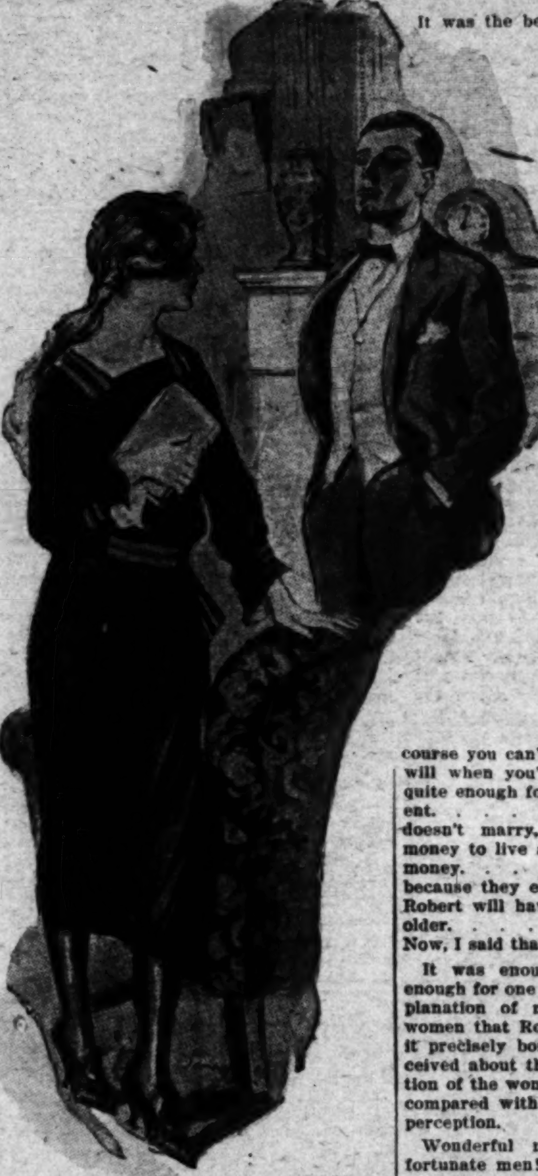
The reason for this secrecy was never explained to Rosalie and the secrecy oppressed Rosalie. It took not only the form of being a thing she was not able to tell to her mother, and Rosalie was in the habit of telling everything she did to her mother, but it took also the form of mysterious and vaguely alarming perils during the walks. An immense watchfulness was kept up against chance encounters with people. One of the party would often cry, "Look! Who's this?" and the young men would separate from the girls and appear as if they were walking by themselves. Sometimes they would break right away and run off and not be met again. Very often Rosalie would be sent on ahead to a turning and told to come back at once if anybody was to be seen and then would be examined as to who the person was. Sometimes she was posted to keep watch while the girls and the young men slipped off somewhere, over a gate or into a barn. She got to know by sometimes rushing in with warnings that Flora and Hilda on these occasions smoked the young men's cigarettes. Then when they got home they would rush up to their rooms and wash their teeth and put scent on themselves. And invariably when the young men took their leave at the end of a walk there would be long and close whisperings in which were always to be heard the words, "Well, say you were—;" or "Look here, we'll say we were—" and generally, "Go away, Rosalie. There's nothing for you to listen to."

It all had the effect of making Rosalie feel unhappy and rather frightened. She sometimes asked, "Why mustn't I say anything to mother?" She was always told, and only told, "Because father doesn't like us meeting men."

No reason why father should not like them meeting men was ever given, and Rosalie, ceaselessly disturbed by the concealment, could never imagine what the reason could be. There could be no reason that she could imagine; and she was thus immensely taken aback when one evening at supper her father made a most surprising statement: "The girls have no chance of ever meeting men in this infernal place."

Amazing!

Rosalie's father had been abusing Ibbotsfield and everything that pertained to Ibbotsfield. Some question of expenses had started him. He was storming in his wild way, addressing himself to Rosalie's mother but haranguing at large to all, everybody sitting in silence and with oppressed faces, avoiding looking at one another and avoiding especially the eyes of father. They were literally ground down with poverty, Rosalie's father was saying. He didn't know what was going to happen to them all. "It's all this place, this infernal, buried-alive place. The girls ought to be moving about and seeing people. How can they? Very well. My mind's made up. There's my brother Tom in India. He could have one of the girls. There's your sister, Mrs. Pounce in London. She's Rosalie's godmother. What's she ever done for Rosalie? Very well. My mind's made up. I shall write to Tom and I shall write to Belle. I shall tell them how we are situated. It's humiliating to have to tell them but what's humiliation? I'm accustomed to humiliation. Ever since we came here I have eaten the bread and drunk the water of humiliation. Now the children are growing up to share it. What can they do in this loathsome and forsaken and miserable place? What chance have the girls got? Can you tell me that?"



Wonderful men! Marvelous and most fortunate men!

He glared at Rosalie's mother. It was clear that he regarded her as to blame. Rosalie thought that her dear mother must be to blame. Her mother looked so beaten and frightened. There was glistening in her eyes. Rosalie's heart felt utterly desolate for her mother. She wished like anything she could say something for her dear mother. Then most amazingly the chance to say something came.

"Can you tell me that?" cried Rosalie's father. "What chance have the girls of ever meeting men in this infernal place?"

Rosalie burst out, "Oh, but father, nearly every day—"

"Rosalie, don't interrupt!" cried Flora very sharply.

"Rosalie, be quiet!" cried Hilda.

Father glared and then went on and on.

It was the beginning of a chain of most startling upheavals. It was also, and the upheavals were also, a new manifestation to Rosalie of the all-importance of men. After supper, in the first place, Flora and Hilda, taking Rosalie very severly to task for her perilous outburst, explained to her that the men they met were not the kind of men that father meant they ought to meet. It was necessary, it was essential, they explained, for every girl to meet men she could marry. That was what every girl had to do. Men—surely you understand that Rosalie—had all the money and everything and met girls and asked them to marry. Those men sometimes met on walks, you little stupid, were too young and had no money yet. "There, that's enough," they explained. "Anyhow, we shan't be meeting them much more. One of us is probably going to India; you heard that said didn't you? . . . Well, of course you can't understand properly. You will when you're grown up. Surely that's quite enough for you to understand at present. . . . How can a woman live if she doesn't marry, stupid? She must have money to live and it is men who have the money. . . . Well, of course they do because they earn it; look at Harold; and Robert will have money when he's a little older. . . . Well, how can women? Now, I said that's enough and it is enough."

It was enough and most satisfactorily enough for one purpose. It was the first explanation of men as a race apart from women that Rosalie had ever received and it precisely bore out all that she had conceived about them. It affirmed her perception of the wonder and greatness of men as compared with women. It intensified that perception.

Wonderful men! Marvelous and most fortunate men!

And then the chain of most startling upheavals began. Father wrote to Uncle Tom in India. Father wrote to Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, in London. What he wrote was not to be known by Rosalie, outside the rectory wheel. The others knew, for father, with enormous pride at his wonderful epistolatory style [illegible] his voice, was heard reading the letter to them. But the others, of course, knew also what Rosalie never realized, the grinding poverty of the rectory. She knew no other life than the herrings, the makeshifts, and the general shabbiness of the rectory. It was not till long afterward that, looking back, she realised the pinching and the screwing that served—almost—to make ends meet.

So father wrote. India was far, London was near. Aunt Belle's reply came while the letter to Uncle Tom was still upon the sea. Such a reply! Wonderful father to win such a reply from Aunt Belle! "You see what it is to be able to write a telling and forceful letter!" cried father. Such an exciting reply! Aunt Belle was coming on a visit "to talk it over and see what she could do."

Aunt Belle came.

CHAPTER VI

Oh, a red carpet, a red carpet for Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, to come into the story! And if at the end of the red carpet there could be an "At Home" in the splendid drawing-room of Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, at Pilchester Square, Notting Hill, an At Home with about sixty-five ladies crammed into it, all of them wives of most successful and well-off men, mostly retired from the Indian Army and the Indian Civil Service, and all of them chattering ecstatically, and nibbling, and pluming themselves, and tinkling their teacups, and Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, enthroned in their midst, and owning everything and seeming to own her five and sixty guests, and chattering and nibbling and pluming and tinkling more ecstatically than any; and then if there could come into them beautiful cousin Laetitia (when about 15) with sleek black hair beautifully ribboned behind, and with pale, fine brow, and wearing the sweetest white frock, and if she could move delightfully about among her mother's guests, and then play the sweetest little trifle on the pianoforte to the delightful murmurs of the five and sixty guests of her mother ("She's under Pflunk. The great Pflunk!") and then if there could come in from the city Uncle Pyke, Col. Pyke Pounce, R. E. (retired,) now director of several highly important companies, and if Uncle Pyke, Col. Pyke Pounce, R.E., could stand on the hearthrug with his massy jowl and his determined stomach, and grunt, and rattle the money in his pockets, and grunt again; and if then there could come in the new parlor maid of Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, with her tallness and her deftness and her slight, very slight, insolence of air, and all the five and sixty gazing upon her as haughty but envious patricians gazing upon a slave, and when she had gone swishing out if Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, could tell all the sixty and five of her tallness, her deftness and her slight, very slight, insolence of manner—

Oh, if there could be this and these and a fine red carpet, how exactly and how fittingly would Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, step upon the scene!

"Dear thing!" That was Rosalie's portrait and thought of her in long after years. Dear thing! The drawing-room of her crowded triumphs is now the shabby drawing-room of a second-rate boarding-house, the jolly horse bus she used to commandingly stop in the Holland Park Avenue and so regally to enter (whipwaving driver, cap-touching conductor) long has given place to a thundering motor saloon that stops wheresoever it listeth and wherein Aunt Belles and old-clothes women fight to hang by a strap.

Dear thing! Her ownership of five and sixty guests is exchanged for ownership of not more than seven and fifty inches of cold earth in Brompton Cemetery. She is passed and Uncle Pyke, Col. Pyke Pounce, R.E., is grunted past to lay himself beside her. They are passed. Upreared upon her and upon him is a stupendous granite chunk (in a way not unlike Uncle Pyke on his hearthrug) erected by their sorrowing daughter. She is passed; she came into Rosalie's life and Rosalie crossed her life and she never forgave Rosalie.

Dear thing! Lie lightly on her, stones!

She came to the rectory "to talk it over and see what can be done" for a week's visit, and she stepped out of the cab, all the family assembled to greet her, a new and most surprising figure such as Rosalie had never seen before. She was dressed in startling fashions of a most wonderful richness, and she had immense plumes in her hat that nodded when she moved and trembled when she stood still, and she was herself either always nodding with glittering animation or straightening her back and quivering as if straining at a leash and just about to burst it and go off. She was like Rosalie's mother and yet not a bit like her. She was older and and yet terribly brisker and stronger. Those were the days when frosted Christmas cards were of the aritistic marvels of the age, and Aunt Belle beside Rosalie's mother somehow made Rosalie think of a frosted card beside one of the plain cards. When Rosalie's mother was in a room you often might not know she was there; but when Aunt Belle was in a room there seemed to be no one there except Aunt Belle. She began to talk, in a voice as high as the house, while she was still descending from the cab on her arrival, and the only time Rosalie ever saw her not talking was during service in church on Sunday, when she was alternately glittering or whispering or else bending down so extraordinarily low that Rosalie thought she was going to lie prone upon the floor.

Dear thing! She was so kind to Rosalie and so kind to them all, and yet—and yet they all, except Rosalie who was too small (then) to appreciate the resented quality in Aunt Belle's kindness, and Rosalie's mother who was too gentle to resent anything, and yet they all, save Rosalie and her mother, loathed and abominated Aunt Belle. It was her way of doing things. She gave kind gifts, but it was the way she gave them. She admired everything and everybody in the rectory, but it was the way she admired. She said most kind and affectionate things, but it was her way of saying them.

"Why, how very nice indeed!" That was her insistent comment upon everything in the rectory. But the tone was, "How very nice indeed—for you."

That was the trouble. That was what made Harold (who at 26 was getting very like his father) hurl about a thousand miles over the garden wall the three apples Aunt Belle gave him as his share of the "very best apples from the Army and Navy Stores" which she brought down with other "goodies" for "the dear children;" and made him grit his teeth after she had been in the house two days and cry, "Dash her! Poor relations; that's how she treats us! I'm dashed if I'm a poor relation. I'm earning three pound ten a week at the bank and I bet that appalling old Uncle Pyke didn't get it or anything like it at my age!"

Dear thing! "She meant it kindly." That was the sweet apologetic excuse with which Rosalie's mother followed the track of the storms Aunt Belle aroused and with which she sought to abate them. "She means it kindly. She means it kindly, dear."

It should be Aunt Belle's epitaph. It ought to be graven upon that granite chunk in Brompton Cemetery. "She meant it kindly!"

Issuing from the cab, Aunt Belle began by kissing Rosalie's mother in a most astonishing series of kisses that whizzed from cheek to cheek so that it was a miracle to Rosalie that the two noses did not collide and her dear mother's be knocked right off; and then most enthusiastically kissed all the family, applying to each the phrase with which she began on Harold "Well, well, so this is Harold!" (As if it were the most astounding and unexpected thing in the world that it was Harold.) "So this is Harold! Why, what a great big clever fellow, and what a comfort to your dear mother, I am sure!" And then gazed rapturously upon the house and said to Rosalie's mother and to them all, "Well, well, what a very, very nice house be sure!"

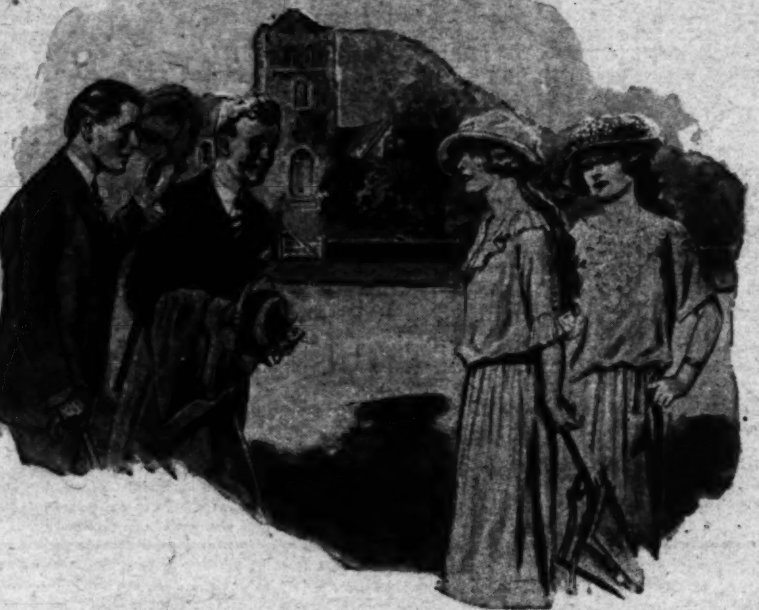
("For you!")

She meant it kindly. Her manner of talking about herself and about her possessions was not that of bragging or of conscious superiority; it was, to the whole rectory family and to all poorer than herself wherever she met them, that of one entertaining a party of children—of a kind lady telling stories to a group of round-eyed infants. When she first had tea on the aftternoon of her arrival she gazed upon the silver teapot as it was carried in and exclaimed, "Well, well, what a very, very handsome teapot! And hot-water jug to match! How very, very nice! Now how ever do you think I keep my water hot at tea? I had a very nice service all in silver gilt! It looks just like gold! And there's a kettle to match with a spirit flame under it. The maid brings in the kettle boiling and we just light the spirit with a match and there it is gently boiling all the time!"

Dusk drew in and the lamps were lit. "Lamps!" ecstatically exclaimed Aunt Belle! "How nice! And Hilda keeps the lamps clean, does she? What a dear, helpful girl and how very, very bright and nice they are! Now what do you think? In my house, everywhere, even in the kitchen, we've got this new electric light! Your kind Uncle Pyke had it put in for me. Installed, as they call it. Now, just fancy, all you have is a little brass knob by each door, and you just touch a little switch, and there's your light! No matches, no trouble, just click! and there you are. Of course it was very expensive, but your Uncle Pyke insisted upon my having it. He always will insist upon my having everything of the best."

Dear thing! The echo of her ceaseless tongue brings her exactly to life again—glittering, chattering, pluming, presenting, praising—her servants! her house! her parties! her friends! her daughter! her husband!—oh, yes, a red carpet, a red carpet for Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, to come into the story, and so (at the end of her visit) into Rosalie's life like this:

"And Rosalie is going away to school! To a boarding school in London where there will be ever so many very nice playmates of her own age, and such romps, and such good wholesome food, and such nice, kind, clever mistresses! Why, what a lucky, lucky girl! There, Rosalie, what do you think of that? You are my godchild, and I and your kind Uncle Pyke are going to send you to school and pay for your education because of course we are well off and can afford it and your dear mother and father can't. There! Now isn't that delightful? Come and give me a nice kiss then. The dear child!"



Time went along. Other young men were met.

Tremendous moment! Supernal upheaval! First and greatest upheaval of the chain of upheavals! Rosalie was to go away to school!

That was at the rectory breakfast table on the last morning of the visit, and that was Aunt Belle, Mrs. Pyke Pounce, coming into Rosalie's life. "Come and give me a kiss then;" that was kind, kind Aunt Belle, inviting acknowledgment of her kindness and the kindness of Uncle Pyke (with a check) and the kindness of Cousin Laeţitia (with a box of beautiful cast-off clothes that would do beautifully for Rosalie's school outfit.) "The dear child!" That was Aunt Belle's acknowledgment of Rosalie's most dutiful and most affectionate and most delightful kiss. (Most amazed and excited and rather fearful Rosalie! Going to school! Going away to a boarding school in London!)

"The dear child!" Such a warm and loving kiss from Rosalie! And time was to prove it the kiss of Judas! Yes, in a few years, "I've done everything for you!" Aunt Belle was to cry. "Everything! And this is the return I get!"

CHAPTER VII

Next, in its turn, and exactly a fortnight before the beginning of the term at which Rosalie was to join the boarding school in London, came the letter from Uncle Tom in India, and with it the beginning of the second upheaval in the chain of upheavals.

All of this upheaval was very bewildering to Rosalie. She never understood it properly. At the beginning it had nothing at all to do with Anna, and yet Anna from the very first reading of Uncle Tom's letter—All that Rosalie understood of it was this.

First the letter came. Tremendous excitement! Father in wild excitement, Flora and Hilda in frantic excitement, every one in highest excitement. Father read the letter aloud at breakfast to Rosalie's mother and to the girls. Such a splendid letter, said father. Really, Tom was a splendid fellow, said father. He had wronged Tom. He had thought Tom selfish in his wealthy indifference. By Jove, Tom wasn't. "By Jove, the way Tom wrote almost brought tears to your eyes. Listen to this. Listen, mother. Listen, you girls."

Uncle Tom, said the letter, would by all means, old man, have one of the girls. He'd no idea that things were so bad with you. Poor old man! Why didn't you tell us before? He was sending home a small draft to Field and Company, his bankers, to help toward the girl's outfit and her passage money. "'Which girl shall you send?' you ask. Well, it's no good asking us, old man. You must decide that for yourselves. She'll be abundantly welcome, whichever it is, and we can promise her a jolly good time. We are at Simla most of the year. If you want my advice which girl to send, send the pretti—"

Father stopped reading.

Rosalie was staring at Anna. Anna's face, which had been pale, suddenly went crimson. The suddenness and the violence of it was extraordinary. One moment she had been pale. In the next she was burning red. It was exactly as if a crimson paint had suddenly been dashed over the whole of her face. It was extraordinary. Whatever was it? That nose of hers, perhaps? a sudden frightful twinge like Rosalie once had had a sudden most awful jump in a tooth? But Anna didn't say anything and no one but Rosalie seemed to notice it. They were all intent upon father. So intent! Flora's eyes were simply shining!

And Flora's eyes soon after that were shining more than ever. She was wild with excitement. Rosalie heard the news just before tea. Flora was going to India to Uncle Tom!

"Oh," cried Flora, "I'm so excited I simply don't know what to do with myself!" It was all arranged. Father had settled it. She was to go in about six weeks' time. Very shortly she was to go up to London with father and buy heaps of clothes and all sorts of things. They were going to stay at a hotel. "Not with Aunt Belle, thank goodness!" said Flora. "At a hotel! Fancy that!" Mother wasn't going and Flora was glad mother wasn't going. She would have a much better time with father. Father had decided everything. He had decided that mother couldn't leave him in the rectory with all the housekeeping to look after, and the change would do him good, and Aunt Belle would be able to help with the shopping. They were going to see some theaters and all kinds of things and were gonig to have a most splendid time and then, soon afterward—India! "Oh, I shall go mad with excitement in a minute!" cried Flora.

The next thing was in the evening, Rosalie, searching for her mother to ask her something, could not find her. She went into her mother's bedroom and there was the most surprising thing. There was Anna on her knees by her mother and her head on her mother's lap and Anna was sobbing; and she was crying in her sobs, "But it's my right! I'm the eldest. It's my right!"

Rosalie stood there, unnoticed, amazed. Whatever was it?

Rosalie's mother stroked Anna's head and spoke very softly, "My darling! My darling!" She said, "My darling, your father has decided. Your father knows best. Men always know best, my darling."

"It's my right, mother. It's my right. It's always Flora. Oh, why should it always be Flora?"

"Dear Anna. Poor Anna. You must be reasonable, dear Anna. We women must always be reasonable. Don't you see that your father thinks of me? He thinks my eldest girl—my dear eldest girl—ought to stay at home to look after her mother. It's on my account, dear Anna. He thinks of me."

"Oh, mother, what's the good of telling me that? A lot he thinks of you or ever has! Why is he going up to London with Flora when it's your place to go? A lot he thinks of you! You say we must be reasonable. You can be. You've been unselfish all your life. I can't be. Not in this. I've never had a pleasure in my life; I've never had a chance; I've never had anything done for me. Ever since I can remember it's always been Flora, Flora, Flora. Now there's this. I'm getting on, mother. I'm nearly 24. What have I got to look forward to? Flora's younger, Flora's different. She'll have lots of chances of enjoying herself. This is my right. It's my right, mother."

"My dear Anna. My eldest girl. My first dear, sweet girlie. How could I do without you? How happy we've been. How happy we will be."

Rosalie crept away.

After a time Flora and her father went away on the great visit to London. They were to be away over two Sundays. A clergyman was coming from Ashborough to take service at the church. Rosalie's father went off in spirits as high and youthful as the spirits of Flora. For days before he was quite a different man. Everybody was asked to choose a present which he would bring back. Everybody chose with much excitement and chaffing except Anna, who said she could not think of anything. At meals father kept on saying how he wished he could regularly make a point of getting up to town for a bit, it made all the difference being able to get away from this infernal place for a bit. When herrings were on the table he actually came round and did her herring for Rosalie's mother and Rosalie's mother was able to eat the whole of it and said how delicious it was and how clever father was.

It was all splendid. Rosalie had never known such a jolly spirit in the house. The only thing that spoilt Rosalie's happiness in the new jolly spirit was the nights in Anna's room. Anna was most frightening to Rosalie. She prayed now longer than ever, her shoulders moving beneath her nightgown as if she was shuddering all the time she prayed. And at night she talked more than ever in her sleep; also she used to get out of bed at night and walk about the room and talk aloud to herself. It was frightening.

Then Flora and father were in London and tremendous long letters came from Flora to her mother and to Hilda—all they were buying, heaps of dresses and underclothes and white drill coats and skirts and a riding habit and goodness knows what all. "A regular trousseau!" wrote Flora with about seventeen marks of exclamation after the word. And all they were seeing—they had been to the Lyceum Theater and seen Mr. Henry Irving and Miss Ellen Terry and to the Savoy and seen "The Mikado." Every moment of the day was taken up and half the night. Oh, this was a change from Ibbotsfield!

Anna would never listen to the letters. When they were read out she either would put her fingers in her ears or go out of the room. And yet, curiously, she often later

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON

IT IS "lovely" to be able to conjure up tales of mystery and aboriginal ceremonies to feed the "tenderfeet" as these hordes rush West to buy our real estate. It casts a glamour over the land which is quite seductive, almost intoxicating in interest. Patient inquiry and research, however, often dissipate the fairy tales written, to sell, by authors possessed of vivid imagination. The writer well remembers reading "Ramona" in 1887 and being almost entranced thereby. How enthusiastically he started to trace her life history, beginning at Old Town, San Diego, and journeying northward, stopping at all points mentioned in this most interesting book! But "or ever" he arrived at Rancho Camulos, "Ramona" had vanished into thin air, never to return. Now he almost regrets the journey; the tale was so beautiful, so realistic, that he would prefer to believe it as 'twas written.

In a newspaper article of recent date, we read how some of the dead leaves on the old fan palms near Palm Springs were burned off, by the Indians many years ago. Each band," we are told, "had its group of trees, and it was the custom to burn off the leaves during funeral ceremonies as a means of pleasing the good spirits." Bueno! Why don't they do so now? The writer has attended all sorts of Indian ceremonies, from funerals to the annual "harvest home," the latter the greatest of all, and one to which he was invited as a guest of Capitan Jose Rafael (1888,) whereas, whites as a fixed rule, are neither invited nor allowed to be present. He has made rough-board coffins for the Indians when no one else had either the lumber or tools necessary. Many a night has he been kept awake by the dark-to-daylight wailing over some departed aboriginal, but no palm leaves were burned from the trees.

In those days seeds of Washingtonia filifera, the native fan palm, were scarce and high in price because of the strong demand for them in Europe. Few trees in cultivation had borne seeds in those days and the seeds were hard to reach, for until they are ripe, and the flower stem droops against the trunk, they are unavailable because the mass of dead leaves that hangs about the tree; then the seeds are on the ground. The writer used to buy the seeds from the Agua Caliente Indians and ship them to Los Angeles. No ladders were long enough to reach up to the seeds and the Indians could not climb over the dead leaf skirt, so they burned this "skirt" off. Palms of this species began to bear abundantly in and about Los Angeles, but seeds were not gathered, for about this time Europe became overburdened with Washington palms and it has so remained to this day. For before the stock was all planted, the older palms in Southern Europe were fruiting, and Europe has bought few of these seeds in America since. All this is to explain why so few of the palms are burned off now. It is all done by whites who want to see a blaze, whites who have no gray matter in their domes.

A grotesque Joshua tree in the Antelope Valley.

Our enterprising writer also says: "The palm trees are regarded as being in the same class with the sequoias and redwood trees." Bueno! The first time we knew that the redwood and the "big tree" were in the same "class" historically, though closely related botanically. As a matter of fact, the oldest palm in these canyons probably does not exceed, in age, 800 years. How many centuries palms have grown there is quite another matter. To make the briefest possible conjecture, the writer believes that at one time they fringed a great inland sea by tens of thousands. As the sole remnants of a once mighty plant host, all that remains in their original or native habitat, they should be protected and preserved and encouraged to reproduce, at any reasonable cost. The general public owes much to "those good souls and true" who are working unselfishly to bring this about. That success may finally crown their efforts is the heart-felt prayer of the writer.

Pasadena Flower Show

The flower-loving public will be pleased to learn that the Pasadena Horticultural Society is to put on a spring show under conditions of unusual promise. Aside from commercial growers, the only ones that have to buy space, the private growers and private gardeners will practically make the show. But, in addition, there will be liberal entries by amateurs, by juveniles, individually, by grammar-chool classes and high-school classes. Then, too, there will be botanical and other exhibits of odds and ends. Altogether, it is expected that the forthcoming show will rival, perhaps surpass, any that have gone before. Jot down the place and dates now and determine that nothing will deter you from seeing one more of the best floral plant exhibits that have been staged in Western America, exhibits that have made the name of Pasadena known to even the plant-growing centers of Europe. The dates are April 19-20-21, and this will be the eighteenth annual show.

Fertilize Lawns Now

Fertilize lawns now and fertilize them well. That does not mean to overload them with chemical or commercial fertilizers or smother them beneath thick coats of stable manures, but to fertilize intelligently. Whatever the material used, distribute it uniformly. Agents for garden fertilizers tell us that they are afraid to sell a lawn fertilizer strong in nitrogen contents because the user seldom distributes it well, the result being an uneven growth of grass. This "bumpy" appearance is laid to the fertilizer, whereas, it may have been the best ever mixed, the fault being entirely in the lack of proper distribution. To overcome this, apply commercial fertilizers of low strength and make more than one spring application. Who told you that lawns need but one meal a year, anyway?

The right kind of a cow, kept in the right kind of a way, in the right kind of a place, by the right kind of a man, pays her way and yields a good profit besides.

An Interesting Date Garden Grown from Seed

BY GEORGE LAW

The DuVall date garden is like a jungly oasis in a sandy waste. Six years ago the spot was desolation itself.

THE great new and lucrative industry of the warmer sections of the California desert, that of date production, started from the vantage ground of hundreds, if not thousands, of years of Egyptian and Arabian experience in the selection and propagation of the most desirable varieties of dates. Our plant explorers, by canvassing the date oases of the Sahara and Libyan deserts, have been able to secure for export to this country the offshoots from date palms of recognized merit. These offshoots have been tested and new ones are continually being tried out in the experiment gardens in our date-growing sections, with the result that certain varieties of demonstrated quality and productivity may be safely recommended to the American grower. For the last six or eight years the California date industry has been developing safely and profitably along the lines of the several accredited varieties of dates.

But the supply of offshoots for planting cannot begin to keep up with the demand. Whereas there are but a few hundred acres set with the established varieties of dates, there are thousands of acres adapted to the planting of this fruit. And the fact is that a good many date enthusiasts have not waited to secure offshoots, but, willing to take a chance, have entered the date industry by means of the wide and easy portal of the seedling date. As in any other lottery, a great many have lost. Some, on the other hand, have managed to break even, while a few have captured enviable prizes.

The man who goes in for seedling dates faces a proposition somewhat of this order: Of the seeds he plants, probably the majority will germinate and grow palms, although he will not be able to tell anything about them for three or four years, or until they bloom. Then the probability is that fully half of the palms will turn out to be males, absolutely worthless, and that of the remainder, few, if any, are likely to bear fruit of desirable size or quality. But there is a chance, a sporting chance, that some will bear good dates. There is also just the barest possibility that one or two will bear fruit equal to or even superior to that from some of the established varieties. Lurking back of the obvious risk in attempting to develop a date garden from seed, is the sporting urge of the possibility of repeating the experience of Arabian originators of the fine commercial varieties—namely, of originating, here in America, certain new varieties that will enlarge and improve the possibilities of the industry, as well as bringing substantial reward to the lucky originator.

Recently the DuVall date garden, nine miles southeast of Palm Springs, at the north end of Coachella Valley, has been attracting many visits from date experts, who are interested in the promise of certain of the dates of this seedling planting. E. K. DuVall's venture in developing a ten-acre oasis of productive and profitable palms from the planting of seed has resulted in an exceptional success. Out of the thousands of palms he has grown from seed, he has more than enough of commercial quality to occupy the permanent orchard spaces, 30x30 feet apart, of his irrigated land. For the last three years (his palms are now 6 years old.) he has derived a profitable income from the sale of his date crop. One of his palms, which he has named the Wonder Giantess because of its size and the quantity of dates which it bears, is as large as many other palms half again as old. This thrifty seedling put forth nine spathes last year, each carrying a heavy bunch of dates, the total weight of the harvested fruit being about 800 pounds. The dates are of the size, quality and general appearance of the Degiet Noor, and Mr. DuVall sells them, neatly packed in strawberry boxes, at 50 cents a pound.

E. K. DuVall, grower of the garden, between an orange tree and a date palm, each six years old.

Of his other profitable palms, all good-sized, some bear dates of exceptional quality, others of extraordinary size. One palm in particular, which may qualify as the progenitor of a New California commercial variety, bears dates which weigh individually almost an ounce apiece. This seedling variety has received, tentatively, the name of Jumbo. His seedling garden has produced all colors of dates from light amber to ebony black. The variation in shape, texture and flavor likewise runs the gamut of date ingenuity; but practically all of the trees he has saved bear fruit that is extremely edible and of commercial value.

Before going any farther, a note of warning should be sounded. Mr. DuVall's remarkable results are in part attributable only to good luck—the smile of the goddess of Fortune for one. This lady has a habit of smiling on one and frowning on the other 999 in 1000. Ventures with date seeds have caused a good deal of hardship, suffering and loss of both time and money. It is not to be inferred from the happy outcome of one man's experience that others can go out into the desert and do likewise. For one instance of success, even in enterprises where chance is as largely eliminated as is humanly possible, there are always a score or two of failures. But life is such that only the remarkable, outstanding case of achievement gains and deserves special mention, and is interesting matter for wide publicity. The raising of date palms from seeds is safe and advisable only as a side issue, a hobby, in circumstances where the livelihood and the future are adequately provided for otherwise.

Mr. DuVall's success, however, is not to be attributed entirely to good luck; in fact, there is no estimating how large a share the peculiar qualifications he brought to the undertaking had in it. He was accustomed to desert conditions from a long apprenticeship served in Imperial Valley. He had grown thoroughly familiar with desert soils; and so, when it came time for him to pick out a prospective date garden, he did not just go and secure land anywhere in the date-growing region; quite to the contrary, he roamed the desert over with a shovel, digging down beneath plausible surfaces. The piece of land he finally selected had the appearance of a sandy waste and was inconveniently situated across a wash, some distance from the highway.

Finding that it was located on a railroad section, he purchased 240 acres at a nominal price per acre in order to secure the desired ten. This was in 1915. The first year was spent in leveling the land and developing water, and the next he planted his date seeds.

These seeds were secured from the government and were of dates of the two well-known established varieties, the Deglet Noor, a medium-soft date, considered by some to be the choicest date grown, and the Thoory, a rather hard, dry date, the manna fruit of the African desert. Some of the seeds were of interpollinated fruit, as, for instance, Thoory dates pollinated by Deglet Noor flowers. He planted the seeds over most of the ten acres, a few feet apart in rows separated by ten-foot spaces, with the intention of leaving such palms as proved worthy of keeping in permanent positions, about thirty feet distant from one another.

As soon as the young palms revealed their sex he dug out the males and burned them. The work of the third and fourth years consisted mainly in eliminating the undesirable females. While this may now be considered complete, after a fashion, still there are more profitable bearing palms left than the land can well accommodate. A few of these, as well as some of the offshoots from the best seedlings, have been set out on adjacent land, looking toward the beginning of a new garden.

After the fourth or fifth year date palms begin to bear offshoots. These must be removed in order to develop a healthy and managable parent. The offshoots of good varieties are of course valuable, being the means of prepetuating the strain, just as budding and grafting, or the taking of cuttings are means to propagating true varieties of other fruits. Such of the DuVall off shoots as are taken from high-class palms, like the Wonder Giantess or the Jumbo, will be used to plant gardens to these particular varieties. After the second and third generations begin to bear offshoots, enough of them will be available to launch the new varieties upon definite commercial careers, if such a move is found advisable.

An aisle in the "jungle."

In working out this profitable date garden from seedlings, Mr. DuVall found that the Thoory seed produced more desirable palms than the Deglet Noor seed. And far from coming true to stock by producing dry, or manna, dates, the Thoory seedlings bore dates of a soft type. The Wonder Giantess comes from a Thoory seed, borne on a spathe pollinated by Deglet Noor flowers. This, in Mr. DuVall's experience, proved the most satisfactory seed producing the thriftiest and best types of palms.

It must be remembered that the soil of this remarkable date garden is largely responsible for the splendid results obtained, at least in the matter of rapidity and luxuriance of growth. In digging the well the proprietor's first opinion of the soil was confirmed by finding an unlimited pervious condition made up of alternating strata of sandy loam, clay, vegetable matter and charcoal. Evidently the soil was built up by deposits of detritus washed down from the near-by slopes of the mountains. The charcoal found at depths of sixty and eighty feet is accounted for in the same way, by the washing down of charred embers from the burnt-over mountain slopes. The surface soil has the appearance of being pure sand, but close inspection reveals that it is thoroughly mixed with fine silty matter. It is the type of soil known as Indio loam, rich and easy to handle, retentive of moisture and excellent for all manner of crops, whether dates, grapes, pomelos, cotton, onions or garden truck.

The luxuriance of this garden may be attributed, in part, to Mr. DuVall's distinctive cultural system. The last word is perhaps inappropriate, as the tender of the garden denies with a quaint smile that he has any "system" rather, his is an honest, an avowed intention to eschew system, and, in his own words, "to avoid work." Be this as it may, because of the results, we are much interested in the methods.

To all appearances, then, the DuVall date garden is a sort of jungle, a wild riotous oasis, abandoned to the laissez-faire caprices of nature. The palms are so dense as to render the garden impenetrable to the eye at any point for more than thirty to sixty feet. Access is difficult, a matter of winding in and out and crawling under branches; rather hazardous, too, on account of the sharp spines of the palm leaves.

A Buff Wyandotte Strain That Lays White Eggs

THE INTERESTING ACHIEVEMENT OF A SOUTHLAND BREEDER BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG

FOR over two decades, O. S. Hofmann of San Jacinto, has been breeding a superior strain of Buff Wyandottes: birds that have made good in the exhibition room, in the breeding-pen, and as good performers in the number of hen points produced. Appreciating the preference on this Coast for a white-shelled egg, and also the desirability for good table fowl, it has been Mr. Hofmann's ambition by careful selection to produce a strain of birds in the American class, the hens of which will lay a white-shelled egg. In a measure he has, after years of patient endeavor, been successful. To "test out" his strain, eight agricultural colleges in various sections are experimenting with it, all of which report encouraging progress; indeed, the eggs come white, are of standard size and of good quality throughout. Obviously, selection in the breeding-pen will have to be observed to avoid reversion to a brown-tinted color.

It will be recalled that the United States Department of Agriculture is working on the creation of a meat breed that will lay a white-shelled egg, and which is known as the "Lamona." While some progress has resulted, the breed has failed, up to the present time, of attaining commercial rank. The Dorking lays a light-colored egg, but not pure white; it is really of a pinkish cast. At times even some of the Mediterranean breeds will lay eggs not snow-white. Just why the heavier breeds should lay brown eggs and the lighter breeds white eggs has never been explained. For Buff Wyandottes to produce white-shelled eggs is certainly out of the usual, and we hope Mr. Hofmann will perfect his strain so that it will become recognized in a large commercial way throughout the country. It will indeed be interesting to learn the findings of the eight agricultural colleges that have taken up Mr. Hofmann's strain in an experimental way.

That Broody Hen

If the hen that brooded chicks well last year is again broody, one is fortunate if he wants to breed this year with a hen mother. When one wants only a small flock in his backyard and not more than fifteen good chicks, it is wise to consider the hen mother and learn of her. Things may be written about her and read in reliable print, yet not impressed upon a reader unless he knows the habits of hens. There is nothing like experience with a mother hen to make one aware of all her virtues. All that expert breeders know, the mother hen has taught them and incubators and brooders are built to perform mother hen stunts. The novice wants to be told how he can know when a hen is broody. One cannot help knowing it if he associates with his hens because the hen mother is a maternal exhibit at every turn she makes. At first she sits a long time upon a nest, and if laying hens peck at her and drive her off, she will hunt bits of litter and carry them in her mouth to a dark corner of the hen-pen, packing them down in a place she has scratched out in the soil or on the floor. She longs to make her nest according to personal taste. If a laying hen likes the idea of an original nest, she may insist upon laying in the nest with her and the broody hen will be glad to get the egg and will keep it warm if it is not moved. When one goes into the pen to get the egg the broody one will cluck furiously and fight the hand that reaches under her. The best of mothers are really savage about keeping eggs under them and one should have a care and remove all newly-laid eggs, while the breeding season is on.

The hen goes broody as she lays the last egg of a clutch, and will sit on the last eggs she lays if permitted to do so. Even though her eggs are fine to incubate, it is a bad plan to allow any eggs to remain under her and to put others with them, since the first eggs will hatch sooner than the others for being covered and kept warm longer. In spite of her clucking, she should be made to give up her eggs until one is sure she means business. Sometime poor mother hens seem to be broody a few days and then quit the nest habit. There are non-sitting breeds, and breeds the hen of which rarely gets broody. One should watch the clucking hen for three or four days and be sure she wants to sit long enough to hatch chicks before putting the nest eggs under her. If one wishes to incubate his own eggs, he must consider that the last laid eggs of a clutch are not the strongest eggs. He should save for incubating the early laid eggs of a clutch, but not the first, and should mark on each egg the date it is laid, so as not to get the eggs too long laid. The fresher they are, the better, but eggs laid two weeks and which have been carefully turned each day are in prime condition. Longer laid eggs are often good for incubating, but should be used as uncertain and only where needed to fill up the sitting. They may be fertile, but the chick may be too weak to get out of the shell in good condition.

If the broody hen likes the dark corner of the pen, and does not let the laying hens bother her seriously, one should take a box big enough to accommodate the hen, and make a nest, much like the nest the hen made, putting enough soil in the bottom to pat down well, and scooping out a saucer-like extension, so that it fits the hen's body and tends to make eggs roll to the middle. Then he should put in a lot of clean litter and pat it hen-fashion and line the nest. One side of the box should be only high enough to hold the litter, the other sides being left to keep drafts off the hen. He should sprinkle insect powder well over the nest, and put it in the chosen corner when it is quite dark at night, when the lifted hen will not make much fuss, and when he will not disturb the perching fowls. It is well to put a china egg in the nest as a coaxer, and to warm it a little beforehand. The hen should be carefully handled, powdered well on the back and under the wing fights, and put into a box raised off the floor of the pen with sunned rocks, so that the floor of the nest-box will keep dry.

If the broody hen is sitting well in the morning when she comes off to eat breakfast with the other hens, one should take out the china egg and put the nest eggs in carefully and watch her go back on the nest. If she is clumsy and threatens to break eggs getting on the nest at first, one should take her up carefully and carefully remove most of the eggs, letting her go back on the few. Then it will be easy to slip the others under her. She will take care of them after she is settled down and sure she is not going to be robbed of her eggs. One should go as far away from her as he can go and yet see her, when she returns from breakfast, so she will not fear being robbed and will go on the nest slowly. The laying hens will be out in the yard as she goes on. One must see that the back perch of his hen-house is far enough front so the droppings will not fall on the nest.

It is anxious work "sitting a broody hen," but after she is settled down to work, the anxiety lifts, because the hen knows more than a caretaker about what had better be. One should be careful to nest only strong-shelled eggs, but if the hen breaks a shell and soils the eggs, they must be carefully washed in warm water when the hen is off eating, and one should not put in a fresh egg to replace the broken one.

About Hen-Feathered Males

The Sebright bantams, male and female, are feathered alike, and every little while a hen-feathered male will show up in breeding Hamburgs. In the latter class they have very short sickle feathers, or none at all, and seldom will fertilize their eggs. In breeding Sebrights, the males are often unable to fertilize eggs, but are always hen-feathered. Sebright bantams are, without doubt, the most beautiful of all bantams. They are like birds and not bred for their usefulness, as some of the bantams may be. A bird-lover greatly enjoys a pen of them for their beauty and sprightliness. In buying a male bird knowing ones have advised buying one having small ends of sickle feathers. That seems to mean "maleness." There is some profit derived from breeding them and selling for pets, but pet birds do not live a bird life and are to be pitied in the eyes of a Nature lover. What is more pathetic than seeing a small child trying to make a bantam hen obey child commands and be hugged and kissed and even dressed! Such handling spoils the plumage and ambitions of a hen. The males do not pet as easily as the females. They can be told from females by being bigger, with lacing of feathers a little coarser, yet the nearer they are to female types, the more valuable they are. Authorities do not agree on how they originated. There are freak chicks hatching in all breeds frequently, and hen-feathered males and those partly hen-feathered arrive in the best of pens, while hens that crow are not uncommon in large colonies of fowls. We would like to put the query: Do cock-feathered females ever show up?

For a Dust Bath

Fowls do not bathe in water, but in dust, and farseeing caretakers always have dry soil in reserve boxes to keep the "bathing" quarters supplied with dust. During the rainy winter the "bathing" quarters should be kept dry, and should consist of a big, flat box of fine dirt. The dust bath kills lice, but one must not expect the confined fowls to take care of all the lice they can collect in this way. The dust must be changed often lest lice remain alive in it.

A soil is prospering only when it is covered with living plants.

SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 18, 1923.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

National Prune Week

THIS is National Prune Week in the United States and for the period from March 19 to March 24, at least, the California prune will be the American National dish. National Prune Week is sponsored by the California Prune and Apricot Association and comes as the climax of the determined campaign made by the Association for the purpose of cleaning up the remaining stock of the 1922 prune crop before next fall's pack is ready to go out to the markets. Prune Week last year saw a grand total of 10,000,000 pounds of the delectable California product sold over the grocery counters of the country; this year the amount disposed of is expected to be greater still. The American housewife has learned some things about prunes in the last few years that the boarding-house proprietors of a generation never knew of, and as a result, the California prune is being used as an important ingredient in innumerable choice products of the kitchen and the baker's oven, and the prune sold in the fine packs of today is not only a better prune, but a better put up prune than was the dried fruit of the old-time boarding-house jokes. The tremendous and growing demand for the healthful, delicious, modern product tells the story.

The importance of the prune in the production scheme of California's agriculture is revealed in the fact that the average annual yield of marketable fruit for the State has been around 200,000,000 pounds for the last ten years and the added fact that new acreage coming into bearing will bring the crop up to 400,000,000 pounds a year in 1925. The prune is grown in nearly every section of the Golden State, though the oldest and most important prune sections are those of the central coast counties. In Southern California, the Banning district has won a reputation for its fine prunes and is making considerable strides in the industry. The one-time lowly prune is contributing most substantially to the wealth and prosperity of California and hence it is only fitting that all Californians should enter into the spirit and observance of National Prune Week. Buy some wholesome, tasty, California prunes this week and try out some of the new prune dishes.

The Value of Radio

THE United States Department of Agriculture recently completed a survey of the practical use made of the radio market reports broadcasted by the Bureau of Markets of the department. Nearly 50 per cent of the hundreds of returns from the inquiry sent out by radio were from farmers having radio receiving equipment. The remainder were from grain dealers, banks, telephone companies, co-operative organizations, farm bureaus, and other agencies which disseminate the reports among large groups of farmers.

The survey shows that there are few places in rural districts where people congregate even in small groups that are without the benefit of radio. Agricultural leaders see in this the development of true community spirit, which forms a large part of the base of agricultural prosperity. As a result of the favorable responses from the survey, the department is assured of the practical value of radio market news, and plans are now being formulated for the further development and utilization of the service.

Nature uses many kinds of legumes in building up the soil when man is not in control, but ordinarily none of them is as valuable and important as the cultivated clovers.

ALFALFA HAY AS A FERTILIZER; A SUGGESTION AND A PROPHECY

By ROBERT W. HODGSON, Farm Adviser for Los Angeles County

EVER recurring and everlasting is the problem of fertilization with Southern California citrus growers. With the exception of prices received for the fruit, there is probably no other question of such great interest to them. The reasons for this interest are numerous and obvious. Outside of the actual labor costs, on the average, there is no other item entering into the cost of production of citrus fruits of such importance as that of fertilization. And if there is any axiom in citriculture, which has become established as a result of a half century of experience it is that regular and annual fertilization is a prerequisite to profitable returns in the raising of citrus fruits.

Numerous angles of the fertilization question are constantly arising, although it is now generally agreed that the fundamentals of the subject are fairly well established. Briefly speaking, the two outstanding requirements of citrus trees, in the way of fertilizers, are decayable organic material and the element nitrogen. In all save the chemical sources of nitrogen the two are intimately associated. The application of barnyard manure, now generally regarded as the basis of a satisfactory fertilizer program, takes care of both organic material and nitrogen, with the exception that small additions of extra nitrogen may be necessary under certain conditions. It is also generally recognized that nitrogen of an organic character is more satisfactory than nitrogen from chemical sources. The chemical forms undoubtedly have a place in a rational fertilization program, but only in combination with ample quantities of organic material; certainly not to the exclusion of the bulky materials of vegetable origin.

As the industry has developed, the sources of these two necessities have increased in number; this year one fertilizer is cheaper; next, another comes into prominence, and so the thing goes, by cycles. Analyzing the situation, however, particularly as it refers to the future, the fertilizer outlook is not particularly auspicious. Indeed, it seems to become less favorable, year by year, with the one exception of chemical forms, which will, undoubtedly, receive much more attention in the future than has been the case in the past. In years gone by, large quantities of manures have been shipped into Southern California from outlying districts, the San Joaquin Valley, Imperial Valley, Nevada and points even farther east. These supplies have gradually diminished through constantly greater amounts being consumed at home or as the result of being shipped to points where they can be sold at higher prices than citrus growers can afford to pay, taking into consideration the high freight rates. The supply of locally produced manure has been comparatively stationary for some years and is certain not to increase materially. The demand, however, is increasing all the while, so that the manure situation is, on the whole, growing decidedly worse, year by year.

The same is true, relatively, for the other sources of nitrogenous organic materials. Tankage and fishmeal are rapidly going into use as live-stock feed, as is also dried blood. Bat guano, formerly in rather common use, has become so scarce as to appear in marketable quantities only occasionally. Cotton-seed meal is subject to great price fluctuations, according to supply and demand, as it relates to live-stock feedstuffs. The supply of bean straw, which, of recent years, has come into prominence as a source of fertilizer for citrus groves, fluctuates enormously from year to year and has come to occupy a relation to feedstuffs which sets the price at a figure which citrus growers can barely afford to pay. There is every indication that bean-straw supplies will diminish in the future, rather than increase. Far-sighted citrus growers, therefore, have come to the general conclusion that other sources of fertilizer than those above mentioned must be relied on in the future to maintain the productivity of Southern California citrus groves.

A number of solutions to this most important problem have been offered and are applicable to a greater or lesser degree. The addition of the dairy herd to the citrus orchard came into prominence several years ago and there are now quite a number of citrus growers who have gone into the dairy business primarily for the purpose of providing fertilizer for their orchards. There is room for some development and expansion of this combination, but it cannot be expected ever to solve the problem of fertilizing the many thousands of acres of citrus groves. The raising of poultry in combination with citrus orchards appears to be particularly promising for small acreages. The confining character of the work, however, renders this combination one which will never be universally followed.

Undoubtedly the practice of raising sweet clover and other leguminous materials on waste lands for use as fertilizers, in certain districts in particular, will increase. This practice, however, can never fully meet the requirements of fertilising Southern California citrus orchards. It is already apparent to thinking growers that there must be developed an industry of a rather permanent character which will provide the necessary fertilizer in adequate amounts and at a relatively stable price, if the fertilizer needs of the citrus industry are to be met in any satisfactory manner.

During the past five years the use of alfalfa as a fertilizer for citrus groves has come into considerable prominence, especially in certain districts. Sufficient data has been secured to demonstrate conclusively that it furnishes a most desirable fertilizer. Its nitrogen content is relatively high, averaging better than 2 per cent. The organic matter contained in cured alfalfa is undoubtedly particularly well adapted to use by citrus trees. The exact reasons for this condition are not definitely known, but, in comparison with other materials of a similar character, alfalfa hay has demonstrated a clear-cut superiority. According to figures furnished by the Alfalfa Growers' Exchange, more than 1,000,000 tons of alfalfa hay, or its equivalent in green feed, is raised in Southern California, clearly indicating an ample supply for the needs of the citrus industry. It is believed that alfalfa can be grown and sold as fertilizer to citrus growers at a price which will pay a reasonable profit to the alfalfa producer and still meet the pocketbook of the citrus grower. Putting these two situations together would indicate that the permanent solution of the fertiliser problem of the Southern California citrus industry may well lie in the greater use of alfalfa. There appear to be many advantages to such relationship—advantages to both citrus grower and alfalfa producer.

The greatest problem confronting the alfalfa grower in Southern California is the marketing of his product. Essential to a satisfactory solution of the marketing problem is the matter of careful grading. Prices see-saw up and down; when the supply is heavy, prices drop below cost of production; when the supply is scant, prices soar. One of the principal contributing features to the price situation, aside from regulating distribution, is the breaking of the market by

STOCKMEN'S WOES DUE TO MANY CAUSES—WHY BLAME NEW YARDS?

BY A. L. SPELLMEYER

LIVESTOCK production has been my business for thirty years, or ever since I was able to follow cattle on a burro. A pony succeeded the burro, and then came cow punching on the Arizona range in rather hard days, and, thereafter, a variety of ranch and cattle experience. One can't help learning through repeated experience, but I can truthfully state that the last four years have taught me more than the preceding twenty-six, as to the vagaries of rain, grass and drouth, and as to marketing essentials, the things that dictate how much the producer gets for his investment and trouble.

In the days of old King Tut, no doubt, the local magicians told the people the sun darkened in eclipse because of some particular error in their ways. In the territory around Los Angeles the range men are being told that the present low cattle prices are due to the Los Angeles Union Stockyards.

It must be admitted that the part of the western cattle trade which is organized into an association represents the bulk of the western range cattle production as to membership, even though it does not represent the sentiment of bulk membership or bulk cattle, on some questions such as the attack aimed at the new stockyards in Los Angeles on the occasion of the recent cattlemen's association convention in the western metropolis. It must also be admitted that the small farm producer, the hog man, the dairy man and the sheep man, together produce more in the West, and count for more in economic life, than the range cattle men alone. The association voice as we hear it in California probably represents a majority in a group of large range producers. This majority equals in point of cattle owned, though not in number of humans represented the non-association strength of the range cattle men. However, the California dairy industry more than equals the range cattle business in investment and number of men employed, while and the sheep and the hog trade, and the registered stock and farmer production in themselves about balances the entire cattle business. When we get into the thing, therefore, we have about 15 per cent of the livestock industry trying to run the whole show in markets, packing operations and in everything connected with legislation affecting livestock production. And a dozen men are managing the activities of the 15 per cent.

It is self-evident that any reform to better the livestock industry must consider all branches of production, and not merely one particular branch. Sheep men are securing high prices and they are very well satisfied. California hog men secure $1.50 or more a hundred weight over Wichita, Kan., prices and are not in any special ferment. The dairy business is paying well. The dissatisfied folks are the cattle producers, and with the present prices, they have just cause for feeling the way they do. Their failure seems to keep them on a chase from one theory or panacea to another; they have a regard for the consumer more tender than for their own welfare, and a leaning toward "opposition" rather than construction. They want to fix the old bus by taking something more out of it all the time, instead of fixing the vitals in it, and they won't even leave the blame thing and build a new one.

TWO ALTERNATIVES

Two things are before these big range producers, to go the whole route, from range production to retail butcher shops, or to co-operate with the present packing, marketing and retail systems and get their profit on production, even though the consumer does pay. When the consumer gets mad enough, he may change the retail end himself

The bulk of the trouble in cattle loss undoubtedly comes from too much meat

TULARE "TRUCKERS" FIND READY MARKET

EARLIMART—Commercial spinach growing in Tulare county is rapidly developing, according to Horticultural Commissioner Frank R. Brann, who declares the largest acreage is found in this district. This year it is being grown chiefly in conjunction with lettuce, and is to be shipped at the same time. But, according to present indications, next year there will be several hundred acres planted to spinach alone.

Truck gardening in this section is proving to be profitable. Cantaloupes were grown here for the first time last season, and Commissioner Brann predicts that the entire territory between Pixley and Delano will be given over to truck farming within two years.

The produce can be marketed either in Los Angeles or San Francisco

DUAL PURPOSE BREED FOR SHEEP INDUSTRY

With the rapid development of the sheep industry, upon which we so largely depend for wool, as well as for a large amount of meat, it is quite evident that the sheep raised for wool should be a type that can also be used for mutton. According to the California Department of Agriculture many sheepmen raise one kind of sheep for wool, another for mutton and still another for lamb. It has been found by the department that this idea is being more and more regarded as impractical and a number of sheep breeders are cognizant of the fact that the three classes may now be combined in a single type of breed.

It has been demonstrated that a mutton sheep may be bred to produce an amount of wool of a quality equal to that produced by the sheep kept exclusively for wool, and, futhermore, that the lamb of the mutton sheep ordinarily is found to be superior to the lamb of the sheep producing wool only.

A Well Marked Pen.
Dark Cornish fowls owned by Mrs. R. D. Morris, Eagle Rock.

In an attempt to build up a wool and mutton band, the department experts say that much consideration should be given the ram, which is required to have characteristics pertaining to either the wool or mutton type absent in the ewes to which he is to be mated. Then, too, the ewes must have the requisite qualities in milk production, in order to supply an abundance of milk to a mutton-type lamb, which grows very rapidly when well nourished. An ewe may not have the well-rounded form that typifies a good milk producer, but if she is a free milker and possesses fair qualities required in the dual-purpose type, it is advisable to give her consideration, rather than to select for breeding purposes, a better-formed ewe which yields a scanty flow of milk. A poor milker may give birth to a good lamb, but it requires a good milker to keep a lamb in a healthy, growing condition.

MOIST HEAT KILLS GERMS IN THE DAIRY

A short time ago a county institution detected a marked increase in the bacterial count of its milk supply. The dairyman producing the product was unable to detect the cause of the contamination, so a county inspector made a careful inspection of the dairyman's premises and investigated his methods. The cows were being milked by hand in a sanitary manner and the dairy in general was in a favorable condition. The inspector was likewise unable to account for the existing unfavorable source of trouble.

It was discovered that the dairyman instead of sterilizing his strainer cloths daily was only sterilizing them every other day. When this irregularity was corrected, the bacterial count was reduced from 80,000 to 7000.

In the same vicinity another dairyman was operating a milking machine and his bacterial count was running in the neighborhood of 13,000. It was found that he was thoroughly washing and rinsing the teat cups and milk tubes, and submerging them in a commercial chemical solution until the next milking. The dairyman was advised to thoroughly wash and rinse the teat cups and milk tubes, place them in cold water, heat it to 180 degrees Fahrenheit and hold at that temperature for fifteen minutes. When this advice was followed the bacterial count was lowered to 1000.

These two incidents illustrate the effectiveness of proper sterilization and also the superiority of moist heat as a germ killer over certain harmless chemical solutions.

WATCH FOR SIGNS OF CHOLERA IN SWINE

Watch for the first hog to show signs of cholera, advises a Department of Agriculture specialist. If the herd is treated immediately, it is generally possible to save it with but few losses. If the disease, however, is allowed to reach all the animals before the serum preventive treatment is applied, heavy losses may be expected. Antihog-cholera serum is a preventive and not a cure for hog cholera.

Whenever a hog dies of an unknown cause, the owner should watch his herd closely for at least a week, and if any more hogs in the herd begin to show signs of sickness, a veterinarian should be called immediately, for the chances are that hog cholera has reached the herd, and prompt action in applying the serum treatment is the only thing that will save the well animals.

A high temperature, ranging from 105 degrees to 108 degrees Fahrenheit, in a hog that staggers when it walks, is a pretty good indication of hog cholera. Such hogs should be segregated and not allowed to mingle with other hogs, or to wander about, for they will spread the disease wherever they go, sometimes in places where it is impossible to disinfect. Hogs that die on the farm should be buried, or, preferably, burned, in order to prevent birds, insects, and animals that visit the carcass from spreading the disease.

Usually the disease is most prevalent during the fall months, and losses are invariably heavy in herds where owners neglect to immunize their hogs before the disease reaches them, or fail to call a veterinarian immediately on its first appearance.

VALUE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

Dairy products in 1922, at farm prices, had a gross value of $2,090,455,000, according to estimates by the United States Department of Agriculture. The value of dairy products in 1921 was placed at $2,352,000,000, and in 1920, the top year in values, at $3,018,000,000. Whole-milk sales from farms and consumption on farms comprised 65 per cent of the total value of all dairy products in 1922, and are given a value of $1,357,000,000. In 1921, the value of such whole milk was placed at $1,567,000,000, and in 1920, at $1,911,000,000. Farm-made butter had a value of $220,000,000 in 1922, compared with $242,000,000 in 1921 and with $366,000,000 in 1920. The 1922 value of cheese made, cream sold, butter fat sold, buttermilk, whey and skim milk, is placed at $513,018,000, compared with $542,817,000 in 1921 and with $740,736,000 in 1920. The farm price of whole milk was 19.09 cents per gallon in 1922, compared with 22.19 cents in 1921, and with 30.10 in 1920. The farm price of butter was 35.33 cents in 1922, compared with 37.16 cents in 1921, and with 54.25 cents in 1920.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

VISALIA—The bill now before the State Legislature to force eradication of weeds, and especially puncture vine, in various counties of the State will have the united support of the Tulare county Supervisors and, they believe, the support of all boards of supervisors in the San Joaquin Valley, where the movement started. At a meeting in Visalia recently, the Valley Association of Supervisors expressed the opinion that the best method of fighting the puncture vine was through united State action. In recent years the puncture vine has spread into the San Joaquin Valley, from Southern California in increasing quantities, until it has become a problem, especially in southern valley counties.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

INDIO—The members of the Coachella Valley Grapefruit Growers' Association were surprised to hear that exhibits of their fruit took first prize at the National Orange Show, as it was entered by the association's packers, who did not tell them of the entry. They consider the results of the contest all the more remarkable because of the fact that the best of the fruit had already been shipped out of the valley and was not available for the exhibit.

PRUNING WELL ADVANCED

YUCAIPA—Pruning in the apple, peach, pear and cherry orchards of the Yucaipa Valley and other deciduous fruit growing sections of San Bernardino county is well advanced, and will be completed in a short time. The prunings are being hauled from the orchards and burned, leaving the land in readiness for the spring plowing. The Yucaipa orchards have been carefully pruned since they were planted and most of them are in fine shape this year, giving promise of good crops.

COLONIZATION PLAN

TURLOCK—A movement has been started in the local Chamber of Commerce by a number of prominent business men and realtors to finance the planting of 1000 acres of figs, east of the city, to be subdivided into small ranches later. The plan is still in its infancy and the question of raising the necessary finances is the greatest obstacle to be overcome. P. H. Bixford, a Department of Agriculture representative, recommended the land which has been selected, as being adapted for fig culture.

LETTUCE SHIPMENTS

HOLTVILLE—According to E. L. Marsh, freight agent for the Holton Interurban Railroad, ninety-six carloads of lettuce had already been shipped from the local sheds by the first of the month. Early estimates of the cantaloupe crop indicate that approximately 1000 cars of melons will be shipped from this district during the coming season.

SHIPMENTS COMPLETE

CALIPATRIA.—The shipments of peas from the north end of Imperial Valley for this season are practically completed, with a record of sixty-five tons from the acreage planted locally. Although a few sacks of peas were marketed around Christmas time, the shipping season proper commenced January 12, and at the peak of the season, two tons a day were sent out by express from the local express office. Large amounts of peas are still being shipped from points farther south in the valley. The yield of peas has been extremely heavy in spite of the slight damage done by the early frost, which nipped the first crop. Three distinct pickings are made of the fields. One tract of twenty acres in the Iris district yielded twelve tons of peas. The price has held up exceptionally well in spite of the heavy shipments from Mexico, which still are coming in.

A NEW POMEGRANATE

EARLIMART—A. J. Lones, a local grower, has had success with a new "No-name" pomegranate. This variety differs from the "Wonderful" in color, as fruits of the Wonderful variety are bright red in color, while the "No-name" is russet. On one of his old trees which is about 12 years old, Mr. Lones picked 597 fruits, and he estimated that the total weight of the fruit was 400 pounds. A young tree of this variety in its second bearing season bore 105 fruits. Mr. Lones is optimistic over the possibilities of growing pomegranates for market.

OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

SUCCESS—With the approaching Valencia season, the car situation is again the theme of discussion in this district. With the reported addition of many refrigerator cars to the railway service, and encouraging reports of the recent meeting between representatives of the leading railroads, the American Fruit and Vegetable Shippers' Association and the Western States' Transportation Committees, relief in the shipping situation seems to be assured.

LATE CAULIFLOWER

RICHGROVE—The Sierra Vista Growers recently began the cutting of their 160-acre planting of cauliflower, the first to be grown in this district. The company shipped eight carloads the first week of cutting, marketing the 'flower through the company's own packing-house.

RESTRICTED DISTRICT

TUCSON.—For the third season, the Arizona Board of Agriculture and Horticulture has placed quarantine against the growing of cotton on the Santa Cruz and Rillito Valley lands near Tucson, as a precaution against spreading the wild boll weevil, present in the near-by hills.

WOOL POOL PLANNED

PHOENIX.—The Arizona Wool Growers' Association is preparing for the establishment of several bonded warehouses in the Salt River Valley, with incidental pooling of a large part of the clip of 500,000 head of sheep now being sheared near here. Heretofore, the crop usually has been sold to eastern buyers who come to Arizona annually, or has been shipped to eastern warehouses. The new arrangement is expected to aid the grower, who will be able to secure advances on his clip.

ACREAGE TO BE SHORT

SAN FERNANDO.—George Reed, who has been growing sweet potatoes on the East Ranch near here for several years, is shipping sweet potato cuttings to Indio, where he is planting a large acreage this year. Mr. Reed is trying out a new system of sweet-potato culture. He built a glass house and held over last years vines, and is [illegible] Other growers are watching his experiment with interest. The acreage planted to "sweets" in the San Fernando Valley will be smaller than last year's as several large growers will not plant this spring.

EARLY CROPS PLANTED

COMPTON.—The Japanese vegetable growers in the Domingue Hill District have completed their planting of early tomatoes and cucumbers. The south slope of the Hill is usually given over to these crops, the cucumbers being planted under cloth. A large acreage of cabbage was planted last fall and at the present time the growers are busy harvesting the crop, which is reported to be of good quality this year. The cauliflower in the lower ground around Elfman Station was all off some weeks ago, and the growers are preparing for potatoes.

ARIZONA LETTUCE CROP

TUCSON (Ariz.)—Prof. D. W. Albert of the Unviersity of Arizona states that this season's lettuce crop in the State, will be about three times as large as that of last year. In the Salt River valley, 1250 acres were planted, with large acreages in the Yuma, Casa Grande and Toltec-Elroy sections. Last year aboutt 200 acres were planted near Flagstaff, for maturity in September and it proved to be a success. Most of the lettuce is of the Los Angeles Market variety, introduced eight years ago by the Experiment Station and found especially well suited to Arizona conditions.

LARGE CAULIFLOWER

BAKERSFIELD.—A cauliflower weighing sixteen pounds and measuring thirteen inches, grown on the truck farm of C. J. Berg, is the latest record-breaking product of the Shafter district. The winter of 1922 was the first season cauliflower was planted in this section, Frank Munsey of Rio Bravo, being the pioneer grower. This season Mr. Berg set two acres of ground to 15,000 plants, with good results. It is expected that other growers will follow in the footsteps of Mr. Munsey and Mr. Berg, and plant cauliflower this fall, as there seems to be possibilities in this crop here.

PLANT CANNERY FRUITS

TURLOCK.—Over 7000 acres of orchards and vineyards have been planted in Stanislaus county this year, according to Horticultural Commissioner A. P. Rutherford. Peaches for canning purposes and juice grapes have been the most popular varieties planted in the Turlock and Modesto districts, and several growers in the vicinity of Ceres have put out large acreages of figs.

PLANTS COMING IN

GARDENA—Unusually large consignments of strawberry plants from outside the State, principally for this district are reported by quarantine inspectors from the Los Angeles County Horticultural commissioner's office. Nearly 3,000,000 plants have been received to date, according to the data available.

NEW OLIVE PRODUCT

LINDSAY.—W. Winsor, manager of one of the local olive plants, has perfected an olive confection through discovery of a method of making sugar and the oil out of the olive assimilate. He has sold the formula and manufacturing rights to the Charles P. Gronan Company of Los Angeles. The "glazed olive" is something new in the way of sweetmeats, according to Mr. Winsor, and can be stuffed with nut meats and coated with cream or chocolate. This confection is expected to open a new market for sales.

TEST SEED AVAILABLE

Arrangements have been made by the Agricultural Extension Service to secure selected seed of several new and promising grain sorghum varieties developed by the State College of Agriculture for testing under Los Angeles county conditions, and particularly as a possibility for the Antelope Valley. Among the varieties which are to be tested are the White Yolo, developed by Prof. Hendry of the College of Agriculture, select dwarf Milo, double dwarf Milo, and a few others. The outstanding characteristics of these crops are drought resistance and a heavy yielding. The plans are for a location of test plantings of one acre, seed for which will be furnished by the Extension Service. A few co-operators are desired for the San Fernando and Antelope Valleys, especially. Farmers interested in co-operative tests are asked to get in touch with the office of the Farm Advisor.

LEMON COLORING AGENT

L. H. Denny, of the Bureau of Chemistry, announced at a recent meeting of the Lemon Men's Club that the agent causing the coloring of lemons during the curing process has been definitely discovered to be the gas Ethylene. It has also been discovered, Mr. Denny says, that minute quantities of this gas are sufficient to color up the fruit satisfactorily and that the gas is relatively cheap and not dangerous to handle.

GOOD FARMS CARVED OUT OF DESERT WASTE

CALEB—Farming in the lower Coachella Valley, east of here, is not of the "kid glove" kind for the men and women who have taken up land hereabouts and made a success are real pioneers. One of the most successful ranchers in the district is A. B. Ames, who, with his son George, settled here eight years ago, on forty acres of desert land which they bought from the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Mr. Ames has two artesian wells on the ranch with a combined flow of thirty-five inches and handles it carefully so that it will supply the entire planting. Mrs. Ames is a true helpmeet to her husband, and their home is the social center of the district. The son, George Ames, is an overseas veteran, and with the help of his father is improving another forty acres adjoining the home ranch.

The crops raised on the ranch include twenty acres of alfalfa grown for seed, seventeen acres of early table grapes, and three acres of grapefruit. Some date palms are also planted on the place.

After six years of experimental work, C. Smith, another local rancher, has decided that grapefruit, dates and table grapes are the most profitable crops for the desert farmer. Mr. Smith has a wide variety of fruits planted in his ten acres of experimental orchard, including dates, figs, apples, quince, pomoloes, grapes, oranges, almonds, apricots, pomegranates, and jujubes. Both the Ames and the Smith ranches are 220 feet below sea level, the latter being on the north side of the Salton Sea. For thirty miles, the desert stretches away on either side, with its sand storms, heat, cactus, sagebrush, "side winders" and loneliness.

J. W. Sheets is another desert rancher who has found profit and happiness here. He has tried cotton and various other crops, but believes that grapes, preferably the Malaga variety, and alfalfa are the most profitable crops for the local ranchers. Mr. Sheets has a fine reservoir on his ranch which is a very popular place during the hot months. The artesian water is warm when it comes out of the ground, and is of a high degree of purity.

Early tomatoes, bell peppers, egg plant and other vegetables can be raised here during the winter months and are planted between rows of young trees and vines, making a source of revenue to the growers until the orchards and vineyards come into bearing.

NEW ORGANIZATION

The Pacific Slope Dairy Show Association was organized recently at Davis, where members representing every branch of the dairy industry assembled at the annual Stockmen's Week. The officers elected were: Dr. C. L. Roadhouse, Davis, president; vice-presidents, George W. Prising, San Francisco; W. E. Haley, San Francisco, and R. A. Condee, Chino; and secretary treasurer, Sam H. Greene.

A FANCIER'S ADVICE TO AMATEUR BREEDERS

BY HARRY JONES

I wanted to know about Arthur Huskins's chickens for I had heard that the Glendale fancier had a splendid flock and was making money with them. Many persons wonder if the backyard fanciers who cater to high exhibition stock really make money. I wanted to know myself so I "fivered" out to Glendale to visit Mr. Huskins. I found him in a long linen duster, busy with his chickens.

"Mr. Huskins," I said, "I have heard that you are having great success with your birds."

"I am having some success," he answered, "there is money in chickens; but unless one has a natural love for poultry, he will not make a success in the game. He must sacrifice his spare time and many comforts in giving his flock the proper care.

"The best birds have always been bred because of a genuine love of caring for them and for breeding work rather than for the money they would bring. If one does not like chickens, he should not attempt to keep them at all. And success depends upon the way you keep them. I love my birds and keep them well and in return they do well for me."

I then asked Mr. Husins to tell me kabout the qualifications a person should have to make a success of breeding fancy show stock.

"Perserverance is essential," he said, "stick-to-itiveness and a determination to succeed deserve and generally command success in poultry breeding as in all endeavors." Concerning the breeding of better fowls, Mr. Huskins gave the same sound advice.

"Though we do not lack good types in most breeds," he said, "breeding chickens means more than reproducing the species. It means the development and mating of birds that will produce offspring of a greater degree of perfection than their parents. The proof of a breeder's skill lies in his young stock showing improvement over the old along the direction he wants. He must learn that the road to permanent improvement lies through birds that have unmistakable evidence of perfect health and vigor. He must breed for what he wants and must always remember that like begets like if systematically bred from the best.

"Without a good bringing up, involving fection inherited from the parents are only fecton inheritted from the parents are only partially realised. Every improvement and attention to feeding, housing and sanitation means less illness, healthier birds and a better and more uniform type!

"There are simple rules in every game or hobby that help to make for success. The main rule to follow is to carefully study the breed that is desired. After learning the good points that go to make a good specimen of this breed, the prospective fancier should look up a reputable breeder whose birds conform nearest to this standard, and who will be most likely not to impose on a novice, but, on the contrary, give him advice as to the best purchase to make. I would suggest not stinting on the price of the first purchase, as it is far better to get a pen of good birds at a higher figure than a dozen or so just because they are cheap."

When I asked Mr. Huskins if he made [illegible] the sale of surplus stock, eggs for hatching and the occasional sale of exhibition specimens for a fancy figure. I know personally of fanciers who derive a good income from breeding high-class exhibition birds and I know of no hobby more interesting whether in a business sense or for pleasure."

A visit to Mr. Huskins's place is an object lesson in the care of chickens. One is reminded of the old saw that "cleanliness is next to godliness." Everything is scrupulously clean. The chicken runs are thoroughly gone over once a week at least and the whole plant is cleaned thoroughly every week.

And Mr. Huskins's fine White Wyandottes reflect the care bestowed on them, presenting a striking appearance in their well-kept quarters. The plant is one of the interesting poultry establishments in Southern California.

LIVE-STOCK INDUSTRY UNDERGOES A CHANGE

One of the many phases of the live-stock industry discussed in the most recent year book of the Department of Agriculture, under the title of "Our Beef Supply," is the change that the industry has undergone since 1850, in connection with the variations in the demands of consumers, and the per-capita consumption of beef. This article was prepared by live-stock specialists and economists of the department.

With a larger proportion of beef cows kept and with cattle slaughtered at an earlier age, it is now possible to raise more beef each year than when there were more cattle in the country than at present, the department men say. However, the system of using younger cattle for beef involves the use of more harvested feed per 100 pounds of beef produced, since a larger proportion of the gains in weight are made in the feed lot than was formerly the case when steers were carried four or five seasons on grass.

While the total number of cattle in the country has decreased in recent years the situation is not as serious as might appear, since the number of cattle is greater now than in any year from 1896 to 1917. The census figures for 1900 and 1920 show that there has been an increase in the percentages of beef calves, heifers, cows and bulls, and a decrease in the percentage of steers, especially aged steers. The number of cattle in the country increased 10,200,000 from 1914 to 1919. During the last three years there has been a decrease of 2,000,000 head, but the greater proportion of cows at present makes it possible to grow more beef, especially if more of the calves, instead of being slaughtered, are fed out as yearlings.

Americans are eating less beef per capita than formerly, but the figures show that when demand and prices provide sufficient stimulus the supply can be increased at a surpriscingly rapid rate, the year book report says. The consumption of beef and veal in the United States decreased from 87 pounds per person in 1907 to 60 pounds in 1915, a net variation of 27 pounds. Between the periods of 1907 to 1910 and 1911 to 1921, there has been a decrease in consumption amounting to approximately 20 per cent.

National Prune Week

THIS is National Prune Week in the United States and for the period from March 19 to March 24, at least, the California prune will be the American National dish. National Prune Week is sponsored by the California Prune and Apricot Association and comes as the climax of the determined campaign made by the Association for the purpose of cleaning up the remaining stock of the 1922 prune crop before next fall's pack is ready to go out to the markets. Prune Week last year saw a grand total of 10,000,000 pounds of the delectable California product sold over the grocery counters of the country; this year the amount disposed of is expected to be greater still. The American housewife has learned some things about prunes in the last few years that the boarding-house proprietors of a generation never knew of, and as a result, the California prune is being used as an important ingredient in innumerable choice products of the kitchen and the baker's oven, and the prune sold in the fine packs of today is not only a better prune, but a better put up prune than was the dried fruit of the old-time boarding-house jokes. The tremendous and growing demand for the healthful, delicious, modern product tells the story.

The importance of the prune in the production scheme of California's agriculture is revealed in the fact that the average annual yield of marketable fruit for the State has been around 200,000,000 pounds for the last ten years and the added fact that new acreage coming into bearing will bring the crop up to 400,000,000 pounds a year in 1925. The prune is grown in nearly every section of the Golden State, though the oldest and most important prune sections are those of the central coast counties. In Southern California, the Banning district has won a reputation for its fine prunes and is making considerable strides in the industry. The one-time lowly prune is contributing most substantially to the wealth and prosperity of California and hence it is only fitting that all Californians should enter into the spirit and observance of National Prune Week. Buy some wholesome, tasty, California prunes this week and try out some of the new prune dishes.

The Value of Radio

THE United States Department of Agriculture recently completed a survey of the practical use made of the radio market reports broadcasted by the Bureau of Markets of the department. Nearly 50 per cent of the hundreds of returns from the inquiry sent out by radio were from farmers having radio receiving equipment. The remainder were from grain dealers, banks, telephone companies, co-operative organizations, farm bureaus, and other agencies which disseminate the reports among large groups of farmers.

The survey shows that there are few places in rural districts where people congregate even in small groups that are without the benefit of radio. Agricultural leaders see in this the development of true community spirit, which forms a large part of the base of agricultural prosperity. As a result of the favorable responses from the survey, the department is assured of the practical value of radio market news, and plans are now being formulated for the further development and utilization of the service.

Nature uses many kinds of legumes in building up the soil when man is not in control, but ordinarily none of them is as valuable and important as the cultivated clovers.

ALFALFA HAY AS A FERTILIZER; A SUGGESTION AND A PROPHECY

By ROBERT W. HODGSON, Farm Adviser for Los Angeles County

EVER recurring and everlasting is the problem of fertilization with Southern California citrus growers. With the exception of prices received for the fruit, there is probably no other question of such great interest to them. The reasons for this interest are numerous and obvious. Outside of the actual labor costs, on the average, there is no other item entering into the cost of production of citrus fruits of such importance as that of fertilization. And if there is any axiom in citriculture, which has become established as a result of a half century of experience it is that regular and annual fertilization is a prerequisite to profitable returns in the raising of citrus fruits.

Numerous angles of the fertilization question are constantly arising, although it is now generally agreed that the fundamentals of the subject are fairly well established. Briefly speaking, the two outstanding requirements of citrus trees, in the way of fertilizers, are decayable organic material and the element nitrogen. In all save the chemical sources of nitrogen the two are intimately associated. The application of barnyard manure, now generally regarded as the basis of a satisfactory fertilizer program, takes care of both organic material and nitrogen, with the exception that small additions of extra nitrogen may be necessary under certain conditions. It is also generally recognized that nitrogen of an organic character is more satisfactory than nitrogen from chemical sources. The chemical forms undoubtedly have a place in a rational fertilization program, but only in combination with ample quantities of organic material; certainly not to the exclusion of the bulky materials of vegetable origin.

As the industry has developed, the sources of these two necessities have increased in number; this year one fertilizer is cheaper; next, another comes into prominence, and so the thing goes, by cycles. Analyzing the situation, however, particularly as it refers to the future, the fertilizer outlook is not particularly auspicious. Indeed, it seems to become less favorable, year by year, with the one exception of chemical forms, which will, undoubtedly, receive much more attention in the future than has been the case in the past. In years gone by, large quantities of manures have been shipped into Southern California from outlying districts, the San Joaquin Valley, Imperial Valley, Nevada and points even farther east. These supplies have gradually diminished through constantly greater amounts being consumed at home or as the result of being shipped to points where they can be sold at higher prices than citrus growers can afford to pay, taking into consideration the high freight rates. The supply of locally produced manure has been comparatively stationary for some years and is certain not to increase materially. The demand, however, is increasing all the while, so that the manure situation is, on the whole, growing decidedly worse, year by year.

The same is true, relatively, for the other sources of nitrogenous organic materials. Tankage and fishmeal are rapidly going into use as live-stock feed, as is also dried blood. Bat guano, formerly in rather common use, has become so scarce as to appear in marketable quantities only occasionally. Cotton-seed meal is subject to great price fluctuations, according to supply and demand, as it relates to live-stock feedstuffs. The supply of bean straw, which, of recent years, has come into prominence as a source of fertilizer for citrus groves, fluctuates enormously from year to year and has come to occupy a relation to feedstuffs which sets the price at a figure which citrus growers can barely afford to pay. There is every indication that bean-straw supplies will diminish in the future, rather than increase. Far-sighted citrus growers, therefore, have come to the general conclusion that other sources of fertilizer than those above mentioned must be relied on in the future to maintain the productivity of Southern California citrus groves.

A number of solutions to this most important problem have been offered and are applicable to a greater or lesser degree. The addition of the dairy herd to the citrus orchard came into prominence several years ago and there are now quite a number of citrus growers who have gone into the dairy business primarily for the purpose of providing fertilizer for their orchards. There is room for some development and expansion of this combination, but it cannot be expected ever to solve the problem of fertilizing the many thousands of acres of citrus groves. The raising of poultry in combination with citrus orchards appears to be particularly promising for small acreages. The confining character of the work, however, renders this combination one which will never be universally followed.

Undoubtedly the practice of raising sweet clover and other leguminous materials on waste lands for use as fertilizers, in certain districts in particular, will increase. This practice, however, can never fully meet the requirements of fertilizing Southern California citrus orchards. It is already apparent to thinking growers that there must be developed an industry of a rather permanent character which will provide the necessary fertilizer in adequate amounts and at a relatively stable price, if the fertilizer needs of the citrus industry are to be met in any satisfactory manner.

During the past five years the use of alfalfa as a fertilizer for citrus groves has come into considerable prominence, especially in certain districts. Sufficient data has been secured to demonstrate conclusively that it furnishes a most desirable fertilizer. Its nitrogen content is relatively high, averaging better than 2 per cent. The organic matter contained in cured alfalfa is undoubtedly particularly well adapted to use by citrus trees. The exact reasons for this condition are not definitely known, but, in comparison with other materials of a similar character, alfalfa hay has demonstrated a clear-cut superiority. According to figures furnished by the Alfalfa Growers' Exchange, more than 1,000,000 tons of alfalfa hay, or its equivalent in green feed, is raised in Southern California, clearly indicating an ample supply for the needs of the citrus industry. It is believed that alfalfa can be grown and sold as fertilizer to citrus growers at a price which will pay a reasonable profit to the alfalfa producer and still meet the pocketbook of the citrus grower. Putting these two situations together would indicate that the permanent solution of the fertilizer problem of the Southern California citrus industry may well lie in the greater use of alfalfa. There appear to be many advantages to such relationship—advantages to both citrus grower and alfalfa producer.

The greatest problem confronting the alfalfa grower in Southern California is the marketing of his product. Essential to a satisfactory solution of the marketing problem is the matter of careful grading. Prices see-saw up and down; when the supply is heavy, prices drop below cost of production; when the supply is scant, prices soar. One of the principal contributing features to the price situation, aside from regulating distribution, is the breaking of the market by

STOCKMEN'S WOES DUE TO MANY CAUSES—WHY BLAME NEW YARDS?

BY A. L. SPELLMEYER

LIVESTOCK production has been my business for thirty years, or ever since I was able to follow cattle on a burro. A pony succeeded the burro, and then came cow punching on the Arizona range in rather hard days, and, thereafter, a variety of ranch and cattle experience. One can't help learning through repeated experience, but I can truthfully state that the last four years have taught me more than the preceding twenty-six, as to the vagaries of rain, grass and drouth, and as to marketing essentials, the things that dictate how much the producer gets for his investment and trouble.

In the days of old King Tut, no doubt, the local magicians told the people the sun darkened in eclipse because of some particular error in their ways. In the territory around Los Angeles the range men are being told that the present low cattle prices are due to the Los Angeles Union Stockyards.

It must be admitted that the part of the western cattle trade which is organized into an association represents the bulk of the western range cattle production as to membership, even though it does not represent the sentiment of bulk membership or bulk cattle, on some questions such as the attack aimed at the new stockyards in Los Angeles on the occasion of the recent cattlemen's association convention in the western metropolis. It must also be admitted that the small farm producer, the hog man, the dairy man and the sheep man, together produce more in the West, and count for more in economic life, than the range cattle men alone. The association voice as we hear it in California probably represents a majority in a group of large range producers. This majority equals in point of cattle owned, though not in number of humans represented the non-association strength of the range cattle men. However, the California dairy industry more than equals the range cattle business in investment and number of men employed, while and the sheep and the hog trade, and the registered stock and farmer production in themselves about balances the entire cattle business. When we get into the thing, therefore, we have about 15 per cent of the livestock industry trying to run the whole show in markets, packing operations and in everything connected with legislation affecting livestock production. And a dozen men are managing the activities of the 15 per cent.

It is self-evident that any reform to better the livestock industry must consider all branches of production, and not merely one particular branch. Sheep men are securing high prices and they are very well satisfied. California hog men secure $1.50 or more a hundred weight over Wichita, Kan., prices and are not in any special ferment. The dairy business is paying well. The dissatisfied folks are the cattle producers, and with the present prices, they have just cause for feeling the way they do. Their failure seems to keep them on a chase from one theory or panacea to another; they have a regard for the consumer more tender than for their own welfare, and a leaning toward "opposition" rather than construction. They want to fix the old bus by taking something more out of it all the time, instead of fixing the vitals in it, and they won't even leave the blame thing and build a new one.

TWO ALTERNATIVES

Two things are before these big range producers, to go the whole route, from range production to retail butcher shops, or to co-operate with the present packing, marketing and retail systems and get their profit on production, even though the consumer does pay. When the consumer gets mad enough, he may change the retail end himself

The bulk of the trouble in cattle loss undoubtedly comes from too much meat

TULARE "TRUCKERS" FIND READY MARKET

EARLIMART—Commercial spinach growing in Tulare county is rapidly developing, according to Horticultural Commissioner Frank R. Brann, who declares the largest acreage is found in this district. This year it is being grown chiefly in conjunction with lettuce, and is to be shipped at the same time. But, according to present indications, next year there will be several hundred acres planted to spinach alone.

Truck gardening in this section is proving to be profitable. Cantaloupes were grown here for the first time last season, and Commissioner Brann predicts that the entire territory between Pixley and Delano will be given over to truck farming within two years.

The produce can be marketed either in Los Angeles or San Francisco

DUAL PURPOSE BREED FOR SHEEP INDUSTRY

With the rapid development of the sheep industry, upon which we so largely depend for wool, as well as for a large amount of meat, it is quite evident that the sheep raised for wool should be a type that can also be used for mutton. According to the California Department of Agriculture many sheepmen raise one kind of sheep for wool, another for mutton and still another for lamb. It has been found by the department that this idea is being more and more regarded as impractical and a number of sheep breeders are cognizant of the fact that the three classes may now be combined in a single type of breed.

It has been demonstrated that a mutton sheep may be bred to produce an amount of wool of a quality equal to that produced by the sheep kept exclusively for wool, and, futhermore, that the lamb of the mutton sheep ordinarily is found to be superior to the lamb of the sheep producing wool only.

A Well Marked Pen.

In an attempt to build up a wool and mutton band, the department experts say that much consideration should be given the ram, which is required to have characteristics pertaining to either the wool or mutton type absent in the ewes to which he is to be mated. Then, too, the ewes must have the requisite qualities in milk production, in order to supply an abundance of milk to a mutton-type lamb, which grows very rapidly when well nourished. An ewe may not have the well-rounded form that typifies a good milk producer, but if she is a free milker and possesses fair qualities required in the dual-purpose type, it is advisable to give her consideration, rather than to select for breeding purposes, a better-formed ewe which yields a scanty flow of milk. A poor milker may give birth to a good lamb, but it requires a good milker to keep a lamb in a healthy, growing condition.

MOIST HEAT KILLS GERMS IN THE DAIRY

A short time ago a county institution detected a marked increase in the bacterial count of its milk supply. The dairyman producing the product was unable to detect the cause of the contamination, so a county inspector made a careful inspection of the dairyman's premises and investigated his methods. The cows were being milked by hand in a sanitary manner and the dairy in general was in a favorable condition. The inspector was likewise unable to account for the existing unfavorable source of trouble.

It was discovered that the dairyman instead of sterilizing his strainer cloths daily was only sterilizing them every other day. When this irregularity was corrected, the bacterial count was reduced from 80,000 to 7000.

In the same vicinity another dairyman was operating a milking machine and his bacterial count was running in the neighborhood of 13,000. It was found that he was thoroughly washing and rinsing the teat cups and milk tubes, and submerging them in a commercial chemical solution until the next milking. The dairyman was advised to thoroughly wash and rinse the teat cups and milk tubes, place them in cold water, heat it to 185 degrees Fahrenheit and hold at that temperature for fifteen minutes. When this advice was followed the bacterial count was lowered to 1000.

These two incidents illustrate the effectiveness of proper sterilization and also the superiority of moist heat as a germ killer over certain harmless chemical solutions.

WATCH FOR SIGNS OF CHOLERA IN SWINE

Watch for the first hog to show signs of cholera, advises a Department of Agriculture specialist. If the herd is treated immediately, it is generally possible to save it with but few losses. If the disease, however, is allowed to reach all the animals before the serum preventive treatment is applied, heavy losses may be expected. Antihog-cholera serum is a preventive and not a cure for hog cholera.

Whenever a hog dies of an unknown cause, the owner should watch his herd closely for at least a week, and if any more hogs in the herd begin to show signs of sickness, a veterinarian should be called immediately, for the chances are that hog cholera has reached the herd, and prompt action in applying the serum treatment is the only thing that will save the well animals.

A high temperature, ranging from 105 degrees to 108 degrees Fahrenheit, in a hog that staggers when it walks, is a pretty good indication of hog cholera. Such hogs should be segregated and not allowed to mingle with other hogs, or to wander about, for they will spread the disease wherever they go, sometimes in places where it is impossible to disinfect. Hogs that die on the farm should be buried, or, preferably, burned, in order to prevent birds, insects, and animals that visit the carcass from spreading the disease.

Usually the disease is most prevalent during the fall months, and losses are invariably heavy in herds where owners neglect to immunize their hogs before the disease reaches them, or fail to call a veterinarian immediately on its first appearance.

VALUE OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

Dairy products in 1922, at farm prices, had a gross value of $2,090,455,000, according to estimates by the United States Department of Agriculture. The value of dairy products in 1921 was placed at $2,352,000,000, and in 1920, the top year in values, at $3,018,000,000. Whole-milk sales from farms and consumption on farms comprised 65 per cent of the total value of all dairy products in 1922, and are given a value of $1,357,000,000. In 1921, the value of such whole milk was placed at $1,567,000,000, and in 1920, at $1,911,000,000. Farm-made butter had a value of $220,000,000 in 1922, compared with $242,000,000 in 1921 and with $366,000,000 in 1920. The 1922 value of cheese made, cream sold, butter fat sold, buttermilk, whey and skim milk, is placed at $513,018,000, compared with $542,817,000 in 1921 and with $740,736,000 in 1920. The farm price of whole milk was 19.09 cents per gallon in 1922, compared with 22.19 cents in 1921, and with 30.10 in 1920. The farm price of butter was 35.23 cents in 1922, compared with 37.16 cents in 1921, and with 54.25 cents in 1920.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

VISALIA—The bill now before the State Legislature to force eradication of weeds, and especially puncture vine, in various counties of the State will have the united support of the Tulare county Supervisors and, they believe, the support of all boards of supervisors in the San Joaquin Valley, where the movement started. At a meeting in Visalia recently, the Valley Association of Supervisors expressed the opinion that the best method of fighting the puncture vine was through united State action. In recent years the puncture vine has spread into the San Joaquin Valley, from Southern California in increasing quantities, until it has become a problem, especially in southern valley counties.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

INDIO—The members of the Coachella Valley Grapefruit Growers' Association were surprised to hear that exhibits of their fruit took first prize at the National Orange Show, as it was entered by the association's packers, who did not tell them of the entry. They consider the results of the contest all the more remarkable because of the fact that the best of the fruit had already been shipped out of the valley and was not available for the exhibit.

PRUNING WELL ADVANCED

YUCAIPA—Pruning in the apple, peach, pear and cherry orchards of the Yucaipa Valley and other deciduous fruit growing sections of San Bernardino county is well advanced, and will be completed in a short time. The prunings are being hauled from the orchards and burned, leaving the land in readiness for the spring plowing. The Yucaipa orchards have been carefully pruned since they were planted and most of them are in fine shape this year, giving promise of good crops.

COLONIZATION PLAN

TURLOCK—A movement has been started in the local Chamber of Commerce by a number of prominent business men and realtors to finance the planting of 1000 acres of figs, east of the city, to be subdivided into small ranches later. The plan is still in its infancy and the question of raising the necessary finances is the greatest obstacle to be overcome. P. H. Bixford, a Department of Agriculture representative, recommended the land which has been selected, as being adapted for fig culture.

LETTUCE SHIPMENTS

HOLTVILLE—According to E. L. Marsh, freight agent for the Holton Interurban Railroad, ninety-six carloads of lettuce had already been shipped from the local sheds by the first of the month. Early estimates of the cantaloupe crop indicate that approximately 1000 cars of melons will be shipped from this district during the coming season.

SHIPMENTS COMPLETE

CALIPATRIA.—The shipments of peas from the north end of Imperial Valley for this season are practically completed, with a record of sixty-five tons from the acreage planted locally. Although a few sacks of peas were marketed around Christmas time, the shipping season proper commenced January 12, and at the peak of the season, two tons a day were sent out by express from the local express office. Large amounts of peas are still being shipped from points farther south in the valley. The yield of peas has been extremely heavy in spite of the slight damage done by the early frost, which nipped the first crop. Three distinct pickings are made of the fields. One tract of twenty acres in the Iris district yielded twelve tons of peas. The price has held up exceptionally well in spite of the heavy shipments from Mexico, which still are coming in.

A NEW POMEGRANATE

EARLIMART—A. J. Lones, a local grower, has had success with a new "No-name" pomegranate. This variety differs from the "Wonderful" in color, as fruits of the Wonderful variety are bright red in color, while the 'No-name" is russet. On one of his old trees which is about 12 years old, Mr. Lones picked 597 fruits, and he estimated that the total weight of the fruit was 400 pounds. A young tree of this variety in its second bearing season bore 105 fruits. Mr. Lones is optimistic over the possibilities of growing pomegranates for market.

OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

SUCCESS—With the approaching Valencia season, the car situation is again the theme of discussion in this district. With the reported addition of many refrigerator cars to the railway service, and encouraging reports of the recent meeting between representatives of the leading railroads, the American Fruit and Vegetable Shippers' Association and the Western States' Transportation Committees, relief in the shipping situation seems to be assured.

LATE CAULIFLOWER

RICHGROVE—The Sierra Vista Growers recently began the cutting of their 160-acre planting of cauliflower, the first to be grown in this district. The company shipped eight carloads the first week of cutting, marketing the 'flower through the company's own packing-house.

RESTRICTED DISTRICT

TUCSON.—For the third season, the Arizona Board of Agriculture and Herticulture has placed quarantine against the growing of cotton on the Santa Cruz and Rillito Valley lands near Tucson, as a precaution against spreading the wild boll weevil, present in the near-by hills.

WOOL POOL PLANNED

PHOENIX.—The Arizona Wool Growers' Association is preparing for the establishment of several bonded warehouses in the Salt River Valley, with incidental pooling of a large part of the clip of 500,000 head of sheep now being sheared near here. Heretofore, the crop usually has been sold to eastern buyers who come to Arizona annually, or has been shipped to eastern warehouses. The new arrangement is expected to aid the grower, who will be able to secure advances on his clip.

ACREAGE TO BE SHORT

SAN FERNANDO.—George Reed, who has been growing sweet potatoes on the East Ranch near here for several years. is shipping sweet potato cuttings to Indio, where he is planting a large acreage this year. Mr. Reed is trying out a new system of sweet-potato culture. He built a glass house and held over last years vines, and is planting cuttings from them this year. Other growers are watching his experiment with interest. The acreage planted to "sweets" in the San Fernando Valley will be smaller than last year's as several large growers will not plant this spring.

EARLY CROPS PLANTED

COMPTON.—The Japanese vegetable growers in the Domingue Hill District have completed their planting of early tomatoes and cucumbers. The south slope of the Hill is usually given over to these crops, the cucumbers being planted under cloth. A large acreage of cabbage was planted last fall and at the present time the growers are busy harvesting the crop, which is reported to be of good quality this year. The cauliflower in the lower ground around Elfman Station was all off some weeks ago, and the growers are preparing for potatoes.

ARIZONA LETTUCE CROP

TUCSON (Ariz.)—Prof. D. W. Albert of the Unviersity of Arizona states that this season's lettuce crop in the State, will be about three times as large as that of last year. In the Salt River valley, 1250 acres were planted, with large acreages in the Yuma, Casa Grande and Toltec-Elroy sections. Last year aboutt 200 acres were planted near Flagstaff, for maturity in September and it proved to be a success. Most of the lettuce is of the Los Angeles Market variety, introduced eight years ago by the Experiment Station and found especially well suited to Arizona conditions.

LARGE CAULIFLOWER

BAKERSFIELD.—A cauliflower weighing sixteen pounds and measuring thirteen inches, grown on the truck farm of C. J. Berg, is the latest record-breaking product of the Shafter district. The winter of 1922 was the first season cauliflower was planted in this section. Frank Munsey of Rio Bravo, being the pioneer grower. This season Mr. Berg set two acres of ground to 15,000 plants, with good results. It is expected that other growers will follow in the footsteps of Mr. Munsey and Mr. Berg, and plant cauliflower this fall, as there seems to be possibilities in this crop here.

PLANT CANNERY FRUITS

TURLOCK.—Over 7000 acres of orchards and vineyards have been planted in Stanislaus county this year, according to Horticultural Commissioner A. P. Rutherford. Peaches for canning purposes and juice grapes have been the most popular varieties planted in the Turlock and Modesto districts, and several growers in the vicinity of Ceres have put out large acreages of figs.

PLANTS COMING IN

GARDENA—Unusually large consignments of strawberry plants from outside the State, principally for this district are reported by quarantine inspectors from the Los Angeles County Horticultural commissioner's office. Nearly 3,000,000 plants have been received to date, according to the data available.

NEW OLIVE PRODUCT

LINDSAY.—W. Winsor, manager of one of the local olive plants, has perfected an olive confection through discovery of a method of making sugar and the oil out of the olive assimilate. He has sold the formula and manufacturing rights to the Charles P. Gronan Company of Los Angeles. The "glazed olive" is something now in the way of sweetmeats, according to Mr. Winsor, and can be stuffed with nut meats and coated with cream or chocolate. This confection is expected to open a new market for sales.

TEST SEED AVAILABLE

Arrangements have been made by the Agricultural Extension Service to secure selected seed of several new and promising grain sorghum varieties developed by the State College of Agriculture for testing under Los Angeles county conditions, and particularly as a possibility for the Antelope Valley. Among the varieties which are to be tested are the White Yolo, developed by Prof. Hendry of the College of Agriculture, select dwarf Milo, double dwarf Milo, and a few others. The outstanding characteristics of these crops are drought resistance and a heavy yielding. The plans are for a location of test plantings of one acre, seed for which will be furnished by the Extension Service. A few co-operators are desired for the San Fernando and Antelope Valleys, especially. Farmers interested in co-operative tests are asked to get in touch with the office of the Farm Advisor.

LEMON COLORING AGENT

L. H. Denny, of the Bureau of Chemistry, announced at a recent meeting of the Lemon Men's Club that the agent causing the coloring of lemons during the curing process has been definitely discovered to be the gas Ethylene. It has also been discovered, Mr. Denny says, that minute quantities of this gas are sufficient to color up the fruit satisfactorily and that the gas is relatively cheap and not dangerous to handle.

GOOD FARMS CARVED OUT OF DESERT WASTE

CALEB—Farming in the lower Coachella Valley, east of here, is not of the "kid glove" kind for the men and women who have taken up land hereabouts and made a success are real pioneers. One of the most successful ranchers in the district is A. B. Ames, who, with his son George, settled here eight years ago, on forty acres of desert land which they bought from the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Mr. Ames has two artesian wells on the ranch with a combined flow of thirty-five inches and handles it carefully so that it will supply the entire planting. Mrs. Ames is a true helpmeet to her husband, and their home is the social center of the district. The son, George Ames, is an overseas veteran, and with the help of his father is improving another forty acres adjoining the home ranch.

The crops raised on the ranch include twenty acres of alfalfa grown for seed, seventeen acres of early table grapes, and three acres of grapefruit. Some date palms are also planted on the place.

After six years of experimental work, C. Smith, another local rancher, has decided that grapefruit, dates and table grapes are the most profitable crops for the desert farmer. Mr. Smith has a wide variety of fruits planted in his ten acres of experimental orchard, including dates, figs, apples, quince, pomoloes, grapes, oranges, almonds, apricots, pomegranates, and jujubes. Both the Ames and the Smith ranches are 220 feet below sea level, the latter being on the north side of the Salton Sea. For thirty miles, the desert stretches away on either side, with its sand storms, heat, cactus, sagebrush, "side winders" and loneliness.

J. W. Sheets is another desert rancher who has found profit and happiness here. He has tried cotton and various other crops, but believes that grapes, preferably the Malaga variety, and alfalfa are the most profitable crops for the local ranchers. Mr. Sheets has a fine reservoir on his ranch which is a very popular place during the hot months. The artesian water is warm when it comes out of the ground, and is of a high degree of purity.

Early tomatoes, bell peppers, egg plant and other vegetables can be raised here during the winter months and are planted between rows of young trees and vines, making a source of revenue to the growers until the orchards and vineyards come into bearing.

NEW ORGANIZATION

The Pacific Slope Dairy Show Association was organized recently at Davis, where members representing every branch of the dairy industry assembled at the annual Stockmen's Week. The officers elected were: Dr. C. L. Roadhouse, Davis, president; vice-presidents, George W. Prising, San Francisco; W. E. Haley, San Francisco, and R. A. Condee, Chino; and secretary treasurer, Sam H. Greene.

A FANCIER'S ADVICE TO AMATEUR BREEDERS

BY HARRY JONES

I wanted to know about Arthur Huskins's chickens for I had heard that the Glendale fancier had a splendid flock and was making money with them. Many persons wonder if the backyard fanciers who cater to high exhibition stock really make money. I wanted to know myself so I "flivered" out to Glendale to visit Mr. Huskins. I found him in a long linen duster, busy with his chickens.

"Mr. Huskins," I said, "I have heard that you are having great success with your birds."

"I am having some success," he answered, "there is money in chickens; but unless one has a natural love for poultry, he will not make a success in the game. He must sacrifice his spare time and many comforts in giving his flock the proper care.

"The best birds have always been bred because of a genuine love of caring for them and for breeding work rather than for the money they would bring. If one does not like chickens, he should not attempt to keep them at all. And success depends upon the way you keep them. I love my birds and keep them well and in return they do well for me."

I then asked Mr. Husins to tell me kabout the qualifications a person should have to make a success of breeding fancy show stock.

"Perserverance is essential," he said, "stick-to-itiveness and a determination to succeed deserve and generally command success in poultry breeding as in all endeavors." Concerning the breeding of better fowls, Mr. Huskins gave the same sound advice.

"Though we do not lack good types in most breeds," he said, "breeding chickens means more than reproducing the species. It means the development and mating of birds that will produce offspring of a greater degree of perfection than their parents. The proof of a breeder's skill lies in his young stock showing improvement over the old along the direction he wants. He must learn that the road to permanent improvement lies through birds that have unmistakable evidence of perfect health and vigor. He must breed for what he wants and must always remember that like begets like if systematically bred from the best.

"Without a good bringing up, involving fection inherited from the parents are only fecton inheritted from the parents are only partially realized. Every improvement and attention to feeding, housing and sanitation means less illness, healthier birds and a better and more uniform type!

"There are simple rules in every game or hobby that help to make for success. The main rule to follow is to carefully study the breed that is desired. After learning the good points that go to make a good specimen of this breed, the prospective fancier should look up a reputable breeder whose birds conform nearest to this standard, and who will be most likely not to impose on a novice, but, on the contrary, give him advice as to the best purchase to make. I would suggest not stinting on the price of the first purchase, as it is far better to get a pen of good birds at a higher figure than a dozen or so just because they are cheap."

When I asked Mr. Huskins if he made [illegible] flock," he said. "I make a [illegible] from the sale of surplus stock, eggs for hatching and the occasional sale of exhibition specimens for a fancy figure. I know personally of fanciers who derive a good income from breeding high-class exhibition birds and I know of no hobby more interesting whether in a business sense or for pleasure."

A visit to Mr. Huskins's place is an object lesson in the care of chickens. One is reminded of the old saw that "cleanliness is next to godliness." Everything is scrupulously clean. The chicken runs are thoroughly gone over once a week at least and the whole plant is cleaned thoroughly every week.

And Mr. Huskins's fine White Wyandottes reflect the care bestowed on them, presenting a striking appearance in their well-kept quarters. The plant is one of the interesting poultry establishments in Southern California.

LIVE-STOCK INDUSTRY UNDERGOES A CHANGE

One of the many phases of the live-stock industry discussed in the most recent year book of the Department of Agriculture, under the title of "Our Beef Supply," is the change that the industry has undergone since 1850, in connection with the variations in the demands of consumers, and the per-capita consumption of beef. This article was prepared by live-stock specialists and economists of the department.

With a larger proportion of beef cows kept and with cattle slaughtered at an earlier age, it is now possible to raise more beef each year than when there were more cattle in the country than at present, the department men say. However, the system of using younger cattle for beef involves the use of more harvested feed per 100 pounds of beef produced, since a larger proportion of the gains in weight are made in the feed lot than was formerly the case when steers were carried four or five seasons on grass.

While the total number of cattle in the country has decreased in recent years the situation is not as serious as might appear, since the number of cattle is greater now than in any year from 1896 to 1917. The census figures for 1900 and 1920 show that there has been an increase in the percentages of beef calves, heifers, cows and bulls, and a decrease in the percentage of steers, especially aged steers. The number of cattle in the country increased 10,200,000 from 1914 to 1919. During the last three years there has been a decrease of 2,000,000 head, but the greater proportion of cows at present makes it possible to grow more beef, especially if more of the calves, instead of being slaughtered, are fed out as yearlings.

Americans are eating less beef per capita than formerly, but the figures show that when demand and prices provide sufficient stimulus the supply can be increased at a surprisingly rapid rate, the year book report says. The consumption of beef and veal in the United States decreased from 87 pounds per person in 1907 to 60 pounds in 1915, a net variation of 27 pounds. Between the periods of 1907 to 1910 and 1911 to 1921, there has been a decrease in consumption amounting to approximately 20 per cent.

CALIFORNIA-GROWN SEED CORN IN DEMAND BY LOCAL SEEDMEN

BY ROSS H. GAST

VISITING Corn Belt fafrmers are often heard to speak disparagingly of California as a corn-growing State. They believe that on account of the cool nights prevalent during the growing season, corn cannot be grown successfully here. But their casual observations are wrong, as the quality of the California grown product compares favorably with the standard of quality in the East. The reason that corn is not grown more extensively here lies in the high price of lands and water, and the fact that more profitable crops than corn can, as a rule, be grown for grain. Large acreages of corn for silage purposes are planted every year, and many growers who have land available for seed corn make a good profit from it.

Local seedsmen have reported a good demand for seed corn for the past several years, due to the increase in the number of silos in Southern California. The growers who plant field corn for silage seldom save seed, but depend upon other growers for it, and for this reason, the price has gone up to some extent. The seedsmen are eager to buy good strains at all times. They are paying around $2.50 a hundred for it at the present time, and as an average yield from the popular varieties is about two tons to the acre, shelled, the profits limit its culture to lands which are not too high in price. Most of the seed corn is grown in the Downey and Artesia districts.

A Thrifty Growth Under Southern California Conditions

This patch of field corn was grown without irrigation in San Diego county.

Although it has proved a profitable crop in some years, the growing of silage on contract for dairymen is not a "good bet" —this for the beginner. The old timers know it only too well. This, of course, applies to growers who are farming high-priced lands. Dairymen pay around $5 per ton for the corn at the silo, and as the average yield per acre for the popular varieties is twenty tons per acre, it is easy to figure profits on the crop. The price paid to the grower depends upon the price of alfalfa to a certain extent, and with alfalfa as cheap as it is this year, the growers other than dairymen down in the Downey district are not thinking favorably of planting heavily this year. But the dairymen have long ago recognized the value of silage, and as most of them have available lands for planting, they grow their own when they cannot contract for it.

The most popular varieties for local planting are the Orange County Prolific, Big Jim and Eureka. The Orange County Prolific is about the same as the Hickory King and is planted perhaps to a greater extent than any of the other sorts.

As the culture of corn under irrigation differs from the methods practiced in the East, a few pointers for beginners will be in order.

The crop is planted any time after the middle of March, although many growers delay planting until the first of May or even later. Often a spring crop is planted on the land and harvested before the corn is planted and dairymen plant in succession until the middle of August, using the first crops for green fodder, and the later ones for the silo.

The soil is plowed deep, and worked down thoroughly with the disc and the harrow, then allowed to settle before the planter is brought onto the field. There are several methods of planting, but the most popular method for planting the crop for silage is by drilling in rows three to three and a half feet apart. The planter is set so that it will drop the seed from six to twelve inches apart. The distance between hills will influence the number of ears that set on the stalk and as dairymen want plenty of grain, the corn is usually spaced wide enough to insure its growth.

When the soil is rather dry, the seed is sometimes planted in furrows so that it will be closer to the moisture. A corn lister used for this purpose is similar to those used in the East. This is a good system for windy sections as it insures a firm anchorage for the stalks.

Irrigation is started as soon as the soil begins to dry out, and when once started,

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped Into Drinking Founts Banish Vermin, Make Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of pure-bred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs and meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 857, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

GREEN FEEDS AND WAYS TO FEED THEM

In Southern California it is no trouble to get green food for family hens, because we have fresh green food ready for buyers all the year 'round. One should buy his lettuce where he can get it with its outer leaves left on, and feed these, well-washed, as they come off the head, to the fowls. He should buy cabbage heads with all possible outer leaves on, but should cut up the leaves into quite fine bits, and feed in a flat dish. One should not buy trimmed cauliflower, but should get lots of leaves with it to cut up for the hens. Carrot greens are a great food, but the hens do not care for the feathery leaves, if fed better greens. They will eagerly devour the green stems of leaves cut in short bits, and if one has a bunch of carrots that have wilted much, he may put the carrots, well-washed, through the green's cutter, or even through the food chopper, as for a family salad. Hens will eat turnip tops from the cutter, but care must be exercised not to cut up rotten leaves. Nothing is quite as bad for fowls as rotten greens, which they will eat because they look green.

It keeps the pen in cleaner condition to feed cut greens in clean flat dishes, and a greens cutter can be bought for little money at the poultry supply house. Some caretakers prefer to hang a head of cabbage a foot from the ground on a big nail in the side of the pen and let the fowls do their own greens cutting and be long at it. It gives them exercise as they jump up to tear off bits, but they are apt to tear off big bits that wilt and get hauled over the yard and litter it with damp, dying stuff. In a backyard one should be careful about accumulating objectionable litter, and should take a pride in showing his next-yard neighbor, as he looks over the fence, that hens are orderly, clean pen-keepers, if permitted so to be by their caretakers. It makes the caretaker a lot of work to have to clean up dirty green stuff that has been pulled off the nail, besides being hard on fowls feeding on stringy, wilted greens flat in the ground dirt. To feed freshly-cut greens at noon, that will soon be eaten up is a cleaner method all around. For hens to be eating long at a time means not being punctual in habits, and punctual habits make egg-machines of hens. They get exercise in the scratch pen, where perhaps not more than a dozen grains of corn have been put by the caretaker, but where hens will scratch during off-nest times all day, because one hen was seen to find one kernel of corn and run with it over the small yard. If a second hen or the cock-bird finds a kernel, a reliable intelligence office is established and exercising to discover a possible dainty goes on happily with much hen zest.—H. W. K.

Why Blame Yards?

Personally, I can't understand why Arizona men are so bitter about Idaho and Colorado and northern cattle coming into Los Angeles through the attraction of a better price as against more freight and 1000 miles further haul, than if they went East to markets. The price must be better out this way if it brings them, and Arizona sells some 300,000 cattle yearly, of which at least 290,000 could not possibly conflict with the northern beef, and 75 per cent of this 290,000 generally goes to these very northern districts. The north buys the bulk of Arizona yearlings and can't do it unless the north has the money through beef sales.

A lot of people want to know why cattle prices declined in February, and the word has gone around that the stockyards caused the decline, that the stockyards is a failure, and so on. The stockyards which Los Angeles always so ardently desired, seems to be the goat when it comes to laying the blame for all the ills of the stock business.

This does not imply that the stockyards as operated and working here are perfect, for nothing new can work without some friction and rough spots. I think it is a deplorable fact, too, that the outside capital backing these new yards doesn't understand western conditions, customs or habits of dealing. The possibility may even exist that these new yards will be hard put to keep from sinking before long, but it is my opinion that when it comes to a question of sinking or swimming, we will see them swimming strong. One thing is sure the new yards must win or fail on the strength of the service they render. In other sections such yards have built up the surrounding livestock industry. If they fail here in helping the producer it will only prove that they are not necessary to Los Angeles or to production hereabouts, for the packers don't seem to care greatly enough either way to be willing to spend an extra dime or pass a possible profit, if it exists, by discriminating between country buying and yard buying. But it is too early to pass any judgement as yet. So far the new Los Angeles stockyards have not had even a half trial.

THOSE FEBRUARY PRICES

The cattle declines the opponents of the yards talk about were not local to Los [illegible] in Omaha and in Kansas City. As this is written (the last of February), there is a meat war in progress among the Los Angeles packers, with the very best steers selling at 15 cents carcass beef, cows at 9 to 10 cents and lambs at 20 to 25. In San Francisco, there isn't any meat war, yet heavy lambs are selling as low as 18 cents and veal at 12. In Boston, medium beef is today 12½ cents, as against 12 for Los Angeles on steers, and medium Boston cow beef is 9.50 as compared to 9 to 10 in Los Angeles, so it can be readily understood that the comparatively low carcass prices are national and not local in scope.

Recently the very first carload of live spring milk lambs to arrive in Los Angeles was sold. They weighed 63 pounds plus and brought 16 cents live weight in the stockyards and dressed 51 per cent. The packer offered them to the retailer for 32 cents. In this double deck carload were 325 lambs that sold for more than $3250. I don't know what these baby lambs will cost the consumer, other than that I know I can't afford to eat one of them. They cost the producer about $4 each to raise; he sold them for $9. The man who bought them paid out the $9, and 75 cents more, in freight and expense to Los Angeles, and took a chance to make about 20 cents. Stockyards yardage and feed figured about 12 cents, to get 43 cents worth of fill into the lamb, and the commission charge for selling was two-thirds of 1 per cent on the $3250, or $20. (The commission man, incidentally, is assailed as the mistletoe on the oak of the cattle industry.) No business on this earth operates on such close margins as the cattle and meat trade while the meat is reaching the retailer.

But to return to those February cattle prices: Last fall, packer hides were on an 18 cent basis. They figure packer hides on 7 per cent of the animal's weight, that is seventy pounds of hide to a 1000-pound steer. Last fall, good fat steers brought here in Los Angeles 8.25 per hundred weight, live weight on the hoof, and the best steers brought 14 cents as carcass beef in the coolers.

In February, packers' hides were on a 12 cent basis, and the decline approximated $4.20 per steer from that one cause. Offal values usually decline in the winter through lack of demand, and increase in the summer. The decline in offal value, including the hide, amounted to 90 cents per hundred weight. In other words, the difference in the price of hides and offal made the meat of the $8.25 steer, which stood an actual cost of 12.05 cents in November, stand on actual cost of 12.95 cents in February. Therefore, with overhead and selling costs to tack on, figured at a usual cent or more, the very beef was costing Los Angeles packers 14 cents or more and selling at 12, and they took the only way out and cut the live weight prices. Exerything a packer buys is on replacement value. The prices of today are based upon what beef sold for yesterday, not on what that beef might have cost last week.

On present offal and hide values, the actual meat cost of the $7.50 live weight steer is 11.61 cents, and with, overhead, delivery and sale expense, the most competent packer can't sell it for 12 cents without losing money. During the meat fight, most of them donated about $6 on every steer they handled in that period.

Whenever hides go up 1 cent it adds 70 cents to animal value. If packers' hides advance 10 cents it adds $7 to that steer. The way of the packer in judging beef is entirely different from that the cowman uses, for the packer looks at it from a basis of the existing demand for that particular kind of carcass. That demand may be for heavy beef at one time and for light at another. The ordinary range man thinks the packer is "spoofing" him when he says he wants either heavy or light steers at different times. The condition of an animal makes its dressing percentage. All the packer has in his mind is how much will that beef carcass cost and how much will it bring. To sell efficiently requires a specified knowledge that most producers lack, and, in addition, a knowledge of the existing state of supply in the coolers of the packers.

Another thing that mystifies is how packers can feed and make at times when producers feed and lose in the same feed yards. The packer buys a 1000-pound half-fat steer. That steer might kill white, but would only dress 50 per cent. All the packer can see is 500 pounds of meat. The packer pays 6 cents, spends $30 for feed, and gets a 1200-pound fat steer, for a total cost of $90. He see 720 pounds of beef instead of 500 pounds, for the fat steer dresses 60 per cent instead of 50 per cent. The packer has made a 220-pound meat gain in actual fact, though the steer itself only gained 200 pounds. The live steer might only be worth 6 cents, but the meat is worth 12 to 14 cents. Do you grasp it?

We begin to learn when we realize how little we know. One thing we want in this cattle industry is education, and none are so high or low as to be above benefiting by knowledge.

This cattle and meat business it vital to our economic welfare. Granting good intention all around, some way should surely be available for solving the problems it presents.

A VALUABLE NEW PRODUCT FROM THE CULL ORANGES AND LEMONS

By W. V. CRUESS, Fruit Products Laboratory, University of California

THE profitable use of cull oranges and lemons has become a problem of growing importance to the citrus industry because of the rapid increase in production in recent years. If the market for the fresh fruit is to be extended, it is necessary that the marketing of cull fruit in competition with graded fruit be prevented and that the present high standard of quality of the latter be maintained.

California normally produces more than 60,000 carloads of fresh citrus fruits annually for the market. Estimates of the amount of cull fruit vary greatly, but it represents probably at least 5 per cent of the total production, or not less than 45,000 tons. Some of this cull fruit is at present utilized in the preparation of citric acid, marmalade, orange vinegar, dried peel, citrus juice, and other by-products, but a very large proportion is discarded or sold in local markets in competition with the graded fruit. In years when frost injury is serious, the proportion of cull fruit is greatly increased.

The writer believes that the manufacture of two products, which we have called "canned marmalade juice" and "jelly juice," would afford a profitable outlet for a large quantity of orange culls. These products are suitable for household use and for the commercial preparation of marmalade and jelly. They would save the housewife and the marmalade manufacturer the expense and trouble of preparing the fresh fruit and would insure more uniformly successful results. Our investigations show that they can be prepared at a cost sufficiently low to enable them to be marketed at a price within the reach of the average consumer. Marmalade or citrus jelly made from the canned juice is much cheaper than similar products purchased in the finished state or prepared in the household from fresh fruit purchased from fruit stores.

Citrus jelly juice, as described in this article, is prepared by boiling sliced oranges, lemons, or grapefruit, or a mixture of any or two or all of these fruits, with water, and then expressing, clarifying, canning or bottling, and sterilizing the liquid so obtained. It is rich in pectin and acid, the constituents of fruits necessary for jelly-making. It is light amber in color, slightly cloudy, and possesses the characteristic flavor of the cooked fruit. When concentrated by boiling with the proper proportion of sugar to the jellied point, it yields a clear, firm jelly of light amber color and pleasing flavor. Citrus marmalade juice is citrus jelly juice to which has been added from 10 to 20 per cent of boiled, sliced peel. These products may be prepared and canned in fruit canneries or in marmalade factories.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

Experiments in the manufacture of marmalade juice were first made at the university in 1915. The results were successful, although no attempt was made at that time to investigate the details of the process. During the past eight years, the writer has given considerable time to a careful study of the factors involved in making citrus jellies, marmalades, and the canned juices and has developed a method of preparing the canned juices which, it is believed, can be applied upon a commercial scale. During 1921 and 1922, Lal Singh, a graduate student at the university, studied the making of marmalade juice and the poor grades of alfalfa, which are made early in the season, especially in certain districts. If an outlet could be established for the off-grades (which, it should be stated, have as high fertilizer value as the best grades,) the market situation would be greatly stabilized, to the marked benefit of the alfalfa producer. He would then have an opportunity to regulate the distribution of the best grades to the dairyman in accordance with the seasonal requirements and at a price which would give the producer a reasonable profit covering the year's operations.

Under such an arrangement the citrus grower would be assured of a permanent and adequate supply of first-class fertilizer at a price which he could afford to pay. From all angles the combination seems to offer unusual advantages in the solution of two of the principal economic problems confronting Southern California agriculture.

A possible plan of operation, which appears feasible and practicable, includes the setting aside of all off-grades of alfalfa hay for sale as fertilizer to citrus growers and others requiring fertilizer materials, the best grades going only to the dairymen and other live-stock feeders. The off-grades should be sold to citrus growers on the unit basis, at a satisfactory market price for alfalfa nitrogen and organic matter. Illustrating the value of alfalfa as a fertilizer, it may be said that at the present time a reasonable price for alfalfa nitrogen appears to be about $7 a unit, with 8 cents a unit for the organic matter. Alfalfa hay, running 2 per cent nitrogen, would therefore be valued at $14 for the nitrogen; estimating 80 per cent organic matter, it would be worth $6.40 for the organic material, or a total of $20.40 per ton.

It is believed that this represents a fair valuation for alfalfa as fertilizer. It is quite likely that, furnished in large quantities, it might be purchased at slightly cheaper prices. The plan would involve the hauling [illegible] specially equipped [illegible] for shipment direct to citrus growers. Under this plan the alfalfa would come in a form adapted for application without difficulty, the necessity and expense of breaking up the bales being avoided. Special fertilizer rates might be secured instead of the usual feed-stuff rates.

It would seem that a mutually advantageous arrangement might be entered into between the purchasing departments of the co-operative marketing associations and the co-operative marketing organization handling alfalfa. As a matter of fact, steps have already been taken looking toward the working out of such an arrangement. The purchasing department of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange is understood to be making a survey of the situation, with a view to possibly entering into some such plan. It is rumored, too, that certain prominent Los Angeles capitalists are investigating the proposition and are contemplating the organization of a corporation for the purpose of purchasing low-grade alfalfa hay, preparing the same for shipment and selling it to citrus growers for use as fertilizer.

Summarizing the advantages of this arrangement, it may be said that it should work to mutual advantage to the citrus grower and alfalfa producer, furnishing a steady source of an excellent fertilizer to citrus growers at a reasonable price and establishing an outlet for all low-grade alfalfa hay, operating greatly to the advantage of the producer of alfalfa in strengthening the market for the best grades. In the opinion of the writer, a few years hence will see the fertilizer problem of the Southern California citrus industry solved in some such manner as above indicated.

Farm life demands self-direction and self-dependence. This is one of its greatest attractions.

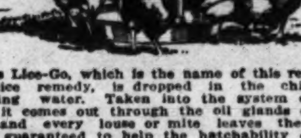
Routs Chicken Lice

Mineralized Water Gets Rid of Dusting or Spraying—Birds Delouse Themselves. Fine for Baby Chicks and All Poultry

A recent discovery promises to revolutionize all the commonly accepted methods for keeping poultry free from lice and mites. This wonderful product keeps the poultry always lice-free without the poultry raiser doing any work. It is the simplest, easiest, surest and best method ever discovered.



Hick's Lice-Go, which is the name of this remarkable lice remedy, is dropped in the chicken's drinking water. Taken into the system of the bird, it comes out through the oil glands of the skin and every louse or mite leaves the body. It is guaranteed to help the hatchability of the eggs and cannot injure the flavor of the eggs or meat; is harmless to chicks and does not affect the plumage. A few days' treatment at the start and then a little added to the drinking water each month is all that is necessary.

Send No Money—just your name and address to Chas. M. Hick & Company, Dept. 316, 1018 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. A card will do it. Mr. Hick is so confident that Hick's Lice-Go will get rid of every louse or mite that he will send you two large double strength $1.00 packages for the price of one. When they arrive, pay postman only $1.00 and postage. Sell one to your neighbor and get yours free. If you are not absolutely satisfied after 30 days' trial, your money will be refunded. This offer is guaranteed by two big Chicago banks, who say that Mr. Hick will do exactly as he agrees without question or argument. Write today before this remarkable trial offer is withdrawn.

[illegible] VALLEY SITUATION

Editor Farm and Tractor Section: A great deal has been said and written about the scarcity and high cost of water in Perris and adjacent valleys. I write to state some facts relative to the subject. The land is only partially developed. The average depth of the wells is 300 feet. The average water level is 90 feet. Alfalfa, the crop which demands the greatest amount of water, has been raised here successfully during the past eighteen or twenty years. For this crop when grown in some districts water is drawn from far greater depths. Point out this fact to the people decrying the Perris Valley and they say, "But those places have artesian water." Artesian water, however, is not usually found at a depth of 300 feet, although at the Poorman Ranch, between Perris and San Jacinto, it is thrown thirty feet from a well 225 feet in depth.

In all the excavations for gold, water has run into the mines in such quantities that operations have had to be suspended sometimes for months in the effort to control the element, which is said to be disappearing from the Perris Valley. In the well, near "March Field," where oil is being prospected for, so much water was found at 600 feet that (according to statements made there) if the well were cased, the water would flow over the top. At the "Tunnel", an abandoned mine, six miles west of Perris, eight inches of water has run off for years past, with no diminution during the drought, while at the other end of the valley toward Menifee, vegetables and some of the finest cotton ginned here, have been grown without irrigation.

Surface water is found all through the town of Perris and the valley at depths varying from seventeen to fifty feet. The well which supplies the town with water is 265 feet deep and while pumping thirty inches, is lowered but two feet. This well when supplied with a better pumping plant, will yield three times the amount of water now drawn from it.

In reference to the "high cost" of water: During war times, farmers, without due consideration of the fluctuating price of alfalfa, and the relative cost of pumping with electric and oil motors, discarded the latter and contracted to use electricity, thus more than doubling their expenses. The price of water is no higher here than in other places, Riverside or Hemet, for instance. But it takes double the amount for alfalfa that is required for growing citrus or other fruits and five times the amount used on the same acreage for cotton so that bills for pumping have naturally been higher.

H. G. Hartshorn stated in his recent article in the Farm and Tractor Section that in the project for piping the water from Warner's Dam to this place, the estimated cost was $4,000,000. This is scarcely accurate. As understood by the property owners here, the initial cost would have been $8,000,000; a distributing system about $2,000,000 (not having been included in the estimate.) This project could not have been expected to meet with much approval from the few hundred inhabitants of the Perris Valley.

There are two ways to financial success. One is in using large sums of capital in the development of resources, the other in the patient, continuous use of resources at hand. The opportunity for the first has never yet come to the Perris Valley. The success of the second has been demonstrated beyond a doubt here in many instances. The Woodward Brothers have demonstrated it on their 100-acre alfalfa ranch. Seventeen years ago when we came to the town of Perris, we were told by every other person we met, that, "Nothing could be done here—there was no water." Being hard-headed, we determined to see for ourselves. At thirty-five feet, we found good water. At fifty feet, we had a fine well. Men watching operations said, "It's nothing but seepage. You can't do anything with that." But it tasted good. And in these years, on our five lots, from the despised water, we have supplied our home table with oranges, lemons, limes, an abundance of olives, melons, pomegranates, loquats, quinces, peaches, several varieties of apples, plums, pears and grapes, and also blackberries and strawberries. And as there was plenty of it, we did not worry about what kind of water it was.—Elizabeth Sharpless, Perris, California.

GARDENA BREEDER FAVORS THE HEAVIES

GARDENA.—One of the largest Light Brahma chicken ranches in the West, is that of A. H. Vaughn at Gardena. The owner, it might be remarked, is so well pleased with this breed that he says he wouldn't be in the chicken business at all if he couldn't raise Brahmas.

Mr. Vaughan raises fowls for breeding purposes only, and sells all the eggs and young chicks he can produce. He says, that contrary to popular belief, a Brahma is not a heavy eater. She eats about like a Minorca, not more than a fifth more than a Leghorn and less than most heavy [illegible]

While the Brahmas have never been considered particularly profitable egg producers, still they are very good layers. Mr. Vaughan has two pens at the Pomona egg laying contest this year, and it will be interesting to note the results at the end of the contest. One of his pullets there laid twenty-three eggs in November and twenty-two in December.

Brahma pullets come into laying around eight months of age, although some come in earlier. One pullet on this ranch began laying at five and a half months. But it is not the intention to force them in any way.

The young chicks are hardy and unusually free from the ordinary diseases that attack young chickens. Mr. Vaughan does not line breed, nor inbreed, but brings in new cockerels every year from the best obtainable strains. He permits the young stock to range over several acres of alfalfa. The laying hens have yards and are never confined to houses in the day time, as Brahmas seem to thrive better out of doors.

Light Brahma Fowls.
They are on the ranch of A. H. Vaughan at Gardena.

On this ranch hen mothers are used for hatching and brooding the chicks hatched there, although Mr. Vaughan also has some of his eggs hatched in a hatchery. These he broods with a gas brooder, in a specially built little house, with a fresh air system which he has worked out in such a way that no drafts are possible, but circulating air is absolutely sure all the time.

To one accustomed to Leghorns, these chickens seem immense, and look very odd with their feathered legs and feet. But they are beautiful and strut around as though fully conscious of the fact.

Forty or fifty years ago the Brahmas were a popular fowl, but of late very little has been heard about them, except from fanciers, and they have been held at rather high prices. People are beginning to find out that they are a valuable back yard fowl and serve about as many people at the Thanksgiving feast or festive board as a young turkey. Being good layers, they are more profitable than turkeys, and do not eat nearly as much, besides much easier to raise.

Unlike most other heavy or dual purpose breeds, the Brahma hen is not inclined to broodiness, and when she does take a notion to set, is very easily "broken up." She is willing to lay a goodly share of her eggs in the winter when eggs are high.

As capons the Brahma is most desirable as it grows to enormous size.

FARM SEWAGE DISPOSAL

Last year, over 400 septic tanks were constructed on farms in California under the direction of the Agricultural Extension and Agricultural Engineering Divisions of the university, co-operating with the various farm bureau centers. According to estimates, the cost of a septic tank system, including tile, varies with the price of material in different localities, $27 to $36 being given as the average material cost and $50 to $66 as the average total cost of the several thousand tanks of this design built in the State the past few years. Septic tank circulars may be obtained from the Agricultural Extension Division, College of Agriculture, University of California, Berkeley, or from the offices of the Farm Advisors.

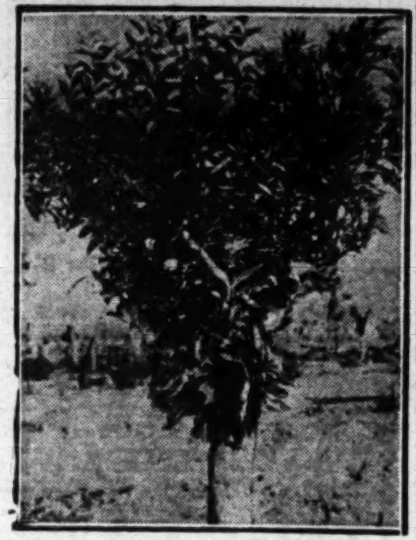
TRANSPLANTED TREES IN GOOD CONDITION

BY C. C. STAUNTON

VENTURA—Many readers of the Farm and Tractor Section were interested last year in the project attempted by the Limoneira Ranch Company at Santa Paula of transplanting over 8000 seven-year-old Valencia orange trees. At that time a great deal of skepticism was expressed by experienced growers and others as to the ultimate outcome of the project.

A report of the present conditions of the trees transplanted should therefore be of interest to many citrus growers in the Southland.



"Didn't Hurt a Bit."

This transplanted tree partially dehorned and with the roots pulled up bare, is now growing almost as though nothing had happened to it.

The Limoneira Ranch Company had in the neighborhood of 9000 orange trees interplanted with lemons. And the trees were beginning to crowd each other, although the gross returns from the whole amounted to approximately $80,000 during their last year in double-set form. Production records had been kept of each of the orange trees, so that when the time came to move them, actual data were available as to which had shown their value from a dollar standpoint.

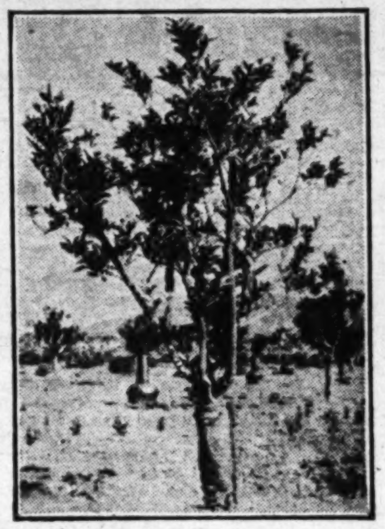
An experimental plot was put out first to determine the best method of top pruning and root pruning and as to whether it was best to take the trees out in balled-root form or bare. An intensive study of bare. An intensive study of methods tried out by others had also been made by J. D. Culbertson ,the manager of the ranch, and of the results obtained by others who had tried such work out before.

The first trees were pruned comparatively lightly a few days before moving either bare or balled roots and a lot of fine growth was left. Other trees were pruned in the test plot down to different stages until finally the completely dehorned trees were tried. Most of this work was done early in March, each tree being inspected and the date on which it budded out being noted and kept on record.

Late in April the real transplanting was done. The results shown by the experimental plot, led them to believe that the quite heavily pruned tree, which was practically dehorned, and the bare root would give the best results in a commercial way.

Since the work was finished last August, each tree has been carefully inspected, and its condition tabulated as to when the buds started, date of growth, and other growing conditions. Early in February of this year, J. W. Babcock, who made the latest survey, reported to the writer that but one tree out of a total of 8248, had died, and that about 3 per cent of them had not budded out though the bark was still green.

The roots were cut about three feet from the trunk, the dirt washed off and the trees planted in their new location within a few hours. Water was immediately run on them and the dirt well settled. This method probably accounts for the high percentage of trees that grew. To check the commercial value of this practice for future reference, young nursery stock was planted in the same block at the same time and production records will be kept on both. This should give some very valuable data.



Successfully Moved.

This tree transplanted on Limoneira Ranch, was neither defoliated nor balled, but came through in good condition.

ARIZONA PRODUCERS FORM ASSOCIATIONS

PHOENIX.—A poultry marketing association is being organized in the Salt River Valley with E. P. Wood of Glendale as temporary head. An expansion of the movement throughout the State is expected and its affiliation with similar associations in California is probable. Prof. R. B. Thompson of the University of Arizona agricultural staff has been active in the organization work. When owners of 75,000 hens have signed, headquarters will be established to handle at least eighty cases of eggs a day.

J. C. Curry and Arthur G. Freeland, of Phoenix, are sponsoring the Arizona Deciduous Fruit Growers' Association, a new organization intended to deal especially with the apricot crop.

The local watermelon growers' association was recently reorganized in preparation for the marketing of the crop next summer.

INTER-CROPS PAY IN AVOCADO ORCHARDS

LA HABRA—Persimmons and avocados are the chosen trees for spring planting in the eastern end of North La Habra Heights, the section lying in the hills just north of the town of La Habra. G. W. Beck has five acres of avocados, including the Lyon, Fuerte, and Puebla. Mr. Beck is a veteran grower of this fruit, having planted the first orchard of avocados in this section. He was also the pioneer in the persimmon industry here. He has four acres of the Hachiya variety. Mr. Beck "cleaned up" a tidy sum last year in persimmon nursery stock trees. While waiting for trees to bear, Mr. Beck has small fruit planted between the rows. Among these are the Missouri Ever-Bearing, Bonnie Brae, and the strawberry Klondyke, black berries of several kinds, and red raspberries. These form a ready source of revenue.

Bruce Stanford is another avocado grower who believes in inter-crops. His trees are planted in terrace form and have as an inter-crop sweet corn, which he has just planted. Price and Bishop have successfully inter-cropped garden truck for he past three years while their avocado and orange orchard is coming in bearing. The soil here is not as heavy as lower down in the valley, and garden truck is easily cultivated.

RECOMMENDS EARLY PRUNING OF CITRUS

The Agricultural Extension Service is recommending that citrus growers plan to do their pruning as early as possible this season, in order to give the trees an opportunity to make a full season's growth and to recover to the greatest possible degree from the effects of last year's injury. It is pointed out that the longer pruning is delayed the shorter the growing season is, and the later the period of active growth will be, with a consequent greater danger that the trees will enter the winter period without the wood properly ripened-up to withstand low temperatures.

The recommendations offered with reference to practices to be used are: (1.) Light to moderate treatment for all classes of trees, since this will aid in the restoration of the equilibrium between root system and above-ground parts. (2.) The gradual elimination of branches showing severe frost injury, and particularly large frost cracks, involving the taking out of the worst in the spring pruning. (3.) The avoidance of heading back, or "stubbing," on account of the waste of energy which this practice occasions, since it invariably results in the production of vigorous vegetative growth, most of which is undesirable and must be later removed.

CHLOROFORM USED TO DESTROY LUNG WORMS

Lung-worm infestations in cattle and sheep cause rather extensive losses among live stock. Sheep and cattle kept on low marshy ground are very likely to contract this trouble. The affected animals generally show a gradual loss of flesh, accompanied by progressive weakness and a slight cough, which may at times develop into paroxysms of coughing, some of the thread-like parasites and their eggs generally being expelled. If this material expelled lodges on feed consumed by animals not yet affected, they may acquire the disease. In severe outbreaks large numbers of animals may die.

Various forms of medication have been suggested for destroying lung worms. The delicate nature of the lung tissue precludes the use of strong active agents, hence in the past the disease was looked upon as incurable. More recently, however, the use of chloroform by inhalation has been tried on a large number of cattle and sheep, and under certain conditions has proved a very good remedy for destroying the worms in the lungs without injuring the animals treated. Sheep are rather sensitive to the action of chloroform but cattle apparently are not injured, and, when mildly affected, often are freed from the trouble after one or two treatments, provided they are otherwise given the proper care and attention.

The average yield of potatoes per acre in the United States varies from about sixty bushels in Texas to more than 200 bushels in Maine, according to reports of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Livestock Bulletin

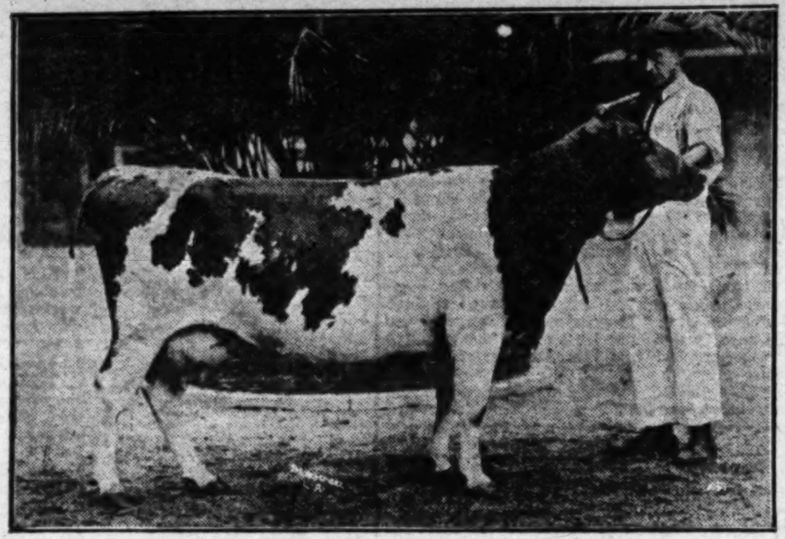
since freshening was 844.4 pounds and her best week's butter production 38.64 pounds. Holland Magda Colantha II, age 9 years, made 27.63 pounds of butter from 531.8 pounds of milk. This is her second record above 25 pounds, and she is holding up well in semi-official test. The County Cow Testing Association last year reported her for the equivalent of 914.2 pounds of butter from 17,570.5 pounds of milk. She is a beautiful cow that has won several awards on the show circuit during the past year; and the County Farm is fortunate in having two A.R.O. daughters that will profit by her increased records. De Kol Korndyke Alcartra Phoenix, who last year made 20,781.8 pounds of milk containing 804.52 pounds of butter in 298 days, has qualified in the 305-day class by calving again within the fourteen months' limit. For several weeks past she has averaged over 100 pounds per day and promises considerably to increase her last year's record. Although she is a small cow, she is perhaps the nicest example of dairy conformation in the entire herd. She has a fine bull calf by King Korndyke Pontiac Mead. Her eldest son is now in service in the herd of Victor Magee, Oceanside.



Lone Pine Luxury.
A royally-bred Guernsey heifer owned by W. H. Dupee, Riverside.

Every one at the County Farm is looking forward with a great deal of interest toward the freshening of the first daughters of King Korndyke Pontiac Mead, who are expected to calve in May and June. As they develop, they are showing more and more the well-known characteristics of the De Kol of Valley Mead strain that has accomplished so much in the hands of California breeders.

Darby Farms, San Bernardino, is rapidly taking shape as one of the modern poultry plants in this section of the country. Wesley Clark, owner, and Russell Clark, manager, of this twenty-eight-acre ranch, have installed a complete irrigation system with a large storage reservoir and several miles of concrete irrigation pipes to supply the water for the ranch, the growing of a large amount of green feed and for ten acres of peaches that are being planted. The ranch is being modeled in accord with scientific poultry keeping principles that are practicable for Southern California conditions, while the foundation stock being used to build up the White Leghorn flock comes from trap-nested stock. The plant has only been in operation a little over a year, but it already is assuming proportions that bespeak for its future success. In January, 1922, 200 hens were purchased by Darby Farms to lay the foundation for high-egg production. Each of these hens is reported to have laid 200 eggs or more in its pullet year. The distribution of this kind of stock with trap-nest ancestry, and properly cared for, should have a very beneficial effect on the White Leghorn industry in this section and the owners of Darby Farms are sincere in their desire to have some part in this improvement of flock averages.

Mallard Ducks on the Darby Farms, San Bernardino

Several more good records have lately been completed in the choice Kern county herd, owned by J. L. Sebastian, Wasco. Centella Victoria Walker, a senior 2-year-old, made 27.47 pounds butter from 512.1 pounds milk in seven days. She is out of Duchess Elizabeth Victoria, Mr. Sebastian's lone entry in the last guaranty sale, now owned by Price Ranch, Los Alamos. Alpha Aaggie De Kol Wasco, senior 3-year-old daughter of the thirty-pound cow, Aaggie Goshen Canary 2d, made 24.17 pounds butter from 546.6 pounds milk in seven days. Her yearling daughter, a beautiful heifer, will be Mr. Sebastian's single entry in this year's guaranty sale. Twilight Shadow of Packwood, mature age, made 28.44 pounds butter from 608.3 pounds milk in seven days. She is mother of the good daughters of Segis Pontiac Crane De Kol, former herd sire in Walter Mitchell's herd at Visalia.

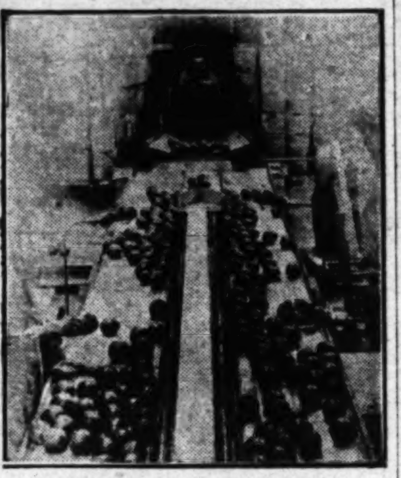
solved many of the problems connected with the process.

The method recommended in this article is based upon the results of these investigations. A brief statement of the results of the experiments having a direct bearing on the subject is given herewith:

(1.) Unripe oranges yielded a bitter juice, as did much of the fruit gathered at the beginning of the season, even when it complied with the 8:1 standard. (2.) It was found better to cut the fruit into pieces about one-eighth of an inch thick, rather than one-quarter or one-half of an inch thick, for boiling and extracting the juice. (3.) Boiling in two lots of water in successive periods of forty-five minutes each gave the best results with respect to yield and clarification. (4.) Pressing the boiled fruit gave a much higher yield than straining through cloth without pressure. (5.) The most effective means of clearing the juice was found to be by settling and racking (drawing off the clear juice.) Filtration through felt bags or wood pulp gave fairly satisfactory results. (6.) Long boiling of the fruit or juice in copper resulted in darkening the color; boiling in aluminum and glass-lined equipment did not darken the color.



An Orange Grader.
New uses for fruit failing to pass the grader test bid fair to add largely to the citrus grower's profits.

(7.) The most satisfactory method of preparing sliced peel for marmalade juice was found to be the following: Cut off small portions at the blossom and stem ends of the fruit. Remove the remainder of the peel in quarters. Cut this lengthwise in very thin slices (about one-sixteenth to one-thirty-second of an inch thick.)

(8.) Lemons yielded a better jelly juice than a mixture of oranges and lemons. A mixture of equal weights of lemons and oranges, however, was almost as good and gave a product much superior in flavor, color, and general appearance to that made from the usual mixture of 10 per cent and 90 per cent, by weight, of lemons and oranges, respectively. Oranges in this large proportion darkened the color of the juice and imparted a "stale" or "medicinal" flavor. Ten per cent, by weight, of grapefruit added to a mixture of equal weight of lemons and oranges gave a juice of pleasing bitterness.

(9.) It was found that the juice should contain at least 1 per cent of pectin and a similar amount of acid. (10.) Marmalade juice canned in December, 1919, at the present writing (February, 1923,) still retains its jelling power and the other desirable qualities. (11.) Juice was found to retain its color and flavor better in lacquered cans than in plain tin cans.

PREPARING THE PRODUCT

The following method is recommended for preparing the product:

(1.) Use equal weights of oranges and lemons. If a bitter juice is desired, add 10 per cent, by weight, of grape fruit.

(2.) Extracting the juice: Slice the mixed oranges and lemons about one-eighth of an inch thick, or crush in an apple grater. Add twice their volume of water. Boil forty-five minutes. Separate the juice by pressing or draining through cheesecloth. Add enough water to cover the pulp and boil again for forty-five minutes. Press again and combine the juice from the two lots and strain through cloth.

(3.) Clearing the juice: Set the juice aside overnight in five-gallon bottles or in a tank that will not be affected by the juice. Pour or siphon off the juice from the sediment and strain through a felt jelly bag. The juice may also be clarified by means of a high-speed centrifuge or by filtration through wood pulp or a filter press.

(4.) Concentration of the juice: Boil the juice down rapidly until it is rich enough in pectin to form a good jelly. If the juice is to be canned commercially, it is suggested that it be concentrated from 10 deg. to 12 deg. Balling, cold test, equivalent to about [illegible] deg. to [illegible] deg. Balling test made on boiling hot juice. Juice of this concentration will make good marmalade or jelly when one cup of the juice is mixed with one and three-quarters to two cups of sugar and boiled one to two minutes. If concentrated to 5 deg. or 6 deg. Balling, only one cup of sugar need be used with each cup of juice. In this case the mixture must be concentrated by boiling to 220 deg or 221 deg F. Strain the hot juice through filter bags or clarify by centrifuging.

(5.) Preparation of peels: Remove the peel in quarters from large oranges after first cutting off small portions from the blossom and stem ends. Slice the peel lengthwise very thin, if possible, to one-thirty-second of an inch. Peels may also be prepared by removing a broad band about three-quarters of an inch to one inch around the greatest circumference of the fruit and cutting these ribbons of peel in very thin shreds about three-quarters inch to one inch long. Boil the peels until tender, then discard the water. Allow to drain on a screen.

(6.) Addition of peel to juice: To cold juice (60 deg. to 64 deg. F.) testing 10 deg. to 12 deg. Balling, add about twenty parts, by weight, of shredded peel to 100 parts by weight of juice, or one and one-half pounds of peel, per one gallon of juice. To juice testing 6 deg. Balling cold, add three-quarters of a pound of peel per gallon of juice.

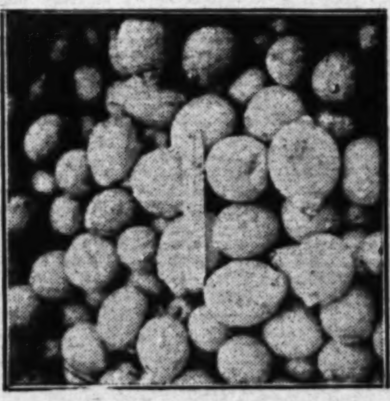
(7.) Testing: Prepare one or more glasses of marmalade from each lot to make certain that the product will jell. If the juice is of 10 deg. to 12 deg. or more Balling (cold test,) the product should make jelly when one and three-quarters or two cups of sugar are added to one cup of juice and the mixture is boiled about two minutes. If the juice is of about 6 deg. Balling (cold test,) add one cup of sugar to one cup of juice and boil to 221 deg. F., or until the boiling marmalade will hang in sheets from a cooking spoon. If the test shows the juice to be deficient in pectin, concentrate it to such a Balling degree that good jelly can be prepared from it without difficulty.

(8.) Canning and sterilizing: Heat the mixture of peels and juice to boiling without adding sugar and place in jars or lacquered cans while boiling hot. Fill cans completely. Seal immediately and invert to cool.

(9.) Recipe for use: The label should carry a suitable and simple recipe for the use of the contents of the can. For juice of 10 deg. to 12 deg. Balling prepared as above this may be: "To each cup of this juice and peel add from one and three-quarters to two level cups of sugar. Boil about two minutes. Skim and pour into glasses." If the liquid is of only 60 deg. Balling, the recipe may read: "To each cup of juice and peel, add one level cup of sugar. Boil until a thermometer inserted in the boiling juice reads 221 deg. F., or until the liquid will hang in sheets (jell) when allowed to fall from a spoon."

HOME EQUIPMENT

The writer prefers the juice of higher concentration (10 deg. Balling) because its use requires no previous experience on the part of the user. A good dairy thermometer is convenient for taking the temperature of the juice. A Balling hydrometer of good quality and reading to one-tenth should be employed. A copper hydrometer cylinder about one and one-half inches wide and fifteen to eighteen inches deep is very convenient for holding samples of juice.



Sheer Waste.
Lemons dumped in San Dimas wash in 1921. The manufacture of "canned marmalade juice" and "jelly juice," it is believed by university investigators, offers a field which will insure against any more fruit being thrown away, regardless of markets.

TO PREPARE THE JELLY JUICE

Use equal amounts of thinly sliced oranges and lemons and proceed as directed above for the preparation of marmalade juice, but omit steps 5 and 6. This product is canned without the addition of peel.

The uncertainty and most of the labor of making citrus fruit jelly and marmalade in the home can be eliminated by the use is composed largely of daughters of King Korndyke Pontiac 29th, the $12,000 son of Miss Valley Mead De Kol Walker, and these are now making splendid long-time records, mostly as 2-year-olds, and have dropped calves by Sir Aaggie Mead. F. S. Borror & Son, Tipton, have been quietly building up a splendid herd. P. M. Longan, the third man in the combination, while absent from California much of the time, has already placed in the hands of his brother, B. F. Longan, the building up of a leading herd. The Longan place is already equipped with buildings that rank it as one of the best-equipped breeding farms in the State and a choice foundation herd of breeding females has already been assembled and official testing is just now getting under way with excellent results.

Miss Topsy Alcartra Prilly, a senior three-year-old daughter of King Segis Alcartra Prilly, owned by the Bridgford Holstein Company, Patterson, has just made an official record of 29.82 pounds butter from 561.2 pounds milk in seven days with second calf. This makes seven daughters of the Prilly bull tested at second freshening to date, the seven ranging from 26.59 to 40.19 pounds butter in seven days, with an average of 31.40 pounds for the seven.

F. R. Bain, owner of La Lomita Ranch, Palms, recently acquired seventeen acres adjoining that property. This makes the ranch ninety-two acres in extent. He will devote a considerable area to the growing of alfalfa, grain and root crops for his fine herd of Jersey cattle, which is gradually growing in numbers, there being now over 100 head of registered cattle on the ranch. Mr. Bain reports that this herd has already twice passed the Federal accredited test and that it is his intention to keep up this good record.

A Modern Establishment

The center of the stage at the Los Angeles County Farm, still continues to be occupied by Hollywood Lilith Palmyra Abbekerk, who has just completed another seven days' official test beginning 112 days after calving. Her production is given as 36.05 pounds of butter from 720.9 pounds of milk, her fat test still holding up above 4 per cent average. Her best week's milk volume. This great surplus of meat in packing-houses puts the retailer in the golden chair, with a great reservoir of beef to pick and choose from. And, as he is the buyer with the money, he makes the packer go a hard route which the latter is forced by economic necessity to pass on to the producer. Price above or below cost of production has little or no effect after the meat goes into the retail shop. The one item of taxes, which helps name the rent amount, is of far more importance to the retail butcher than a few cents either way on beef.

Why Blame Yards?

Today, the very finest steer beef is selling to the retail butcher for 12 cents per pound and he gets good lamb for 24 cents. The consumer pays in most shops 50 cents for steaks from the beef or for chops from the loin of either animal. During the war, when cattle were twice as high as now, the retailer sold the meat at the same price. The retailer pays twice as much for the lamb as for the beef, but there is plenty of margin in the residence shops to make the same price for loin cuts by the time the consumer gets it. All this is an old story, of course, and doubtless many of the 1200 retail meat shops doing business today in Los Angeles have troubles of their own. They would not have if the number was 600 and all were kept going to capacity, and sold meat at a considerably less price.

Like the 15 per cent fighting end of the livestock production, these men don't want any change. Their associated influence, banking accounts, ads, and buying power are sufficient to make even the fighting 15 per cent of the range cattlemen chary about bringing up the "retail problem."

WHY STAND STILL?

As the West has developed, great cities have been built up with increased demand for food. Los Angeles is already the third beef-consuming city in the United States. San Francisco is the second lamb-consuming city. All this has meant great change. We can't expect marketing methods to stand still.

Not long ago the great cattle country resented the arrival of the homesteaders, fought them, drove them out, and made life hard for them, but the homesteaders still came. They conquered too, for progress was on their side. In our fathers' time the same kind of conflict occurred in parts of the Middle West. In Arizona, less than thirty years ago, we certainly made life a burden for the sheep men who came onto our cattle ranges, but we finally had to accept the "Woolies." Then we objected to new settlers coming in and farming all those nice open parks we had, but we had to accept them also.

My compatriots in Arizona say they don't want any stockyards. Well, only a few years ago they would not sell a beef or feeder animal by weight, but wanted to "head" them off. While the bulk has come to a weight basis, some of them still persist in wanting to "head them off," even in the fall grass beef time, and they still want to do it in spring yearling sales.

One Week each Month and note the difference
You CAN get more milk from your cows—now, and all through the winter and spring. Read how—and why—then act.
Late fall, winter and spring months are a severe strain on the milch cow's system. Winter feeds are harder to assimilate and turn into milk than green pasturage. The digestive and milk-making organs become run down. Less milk and lowered vitality results.
BUT—you can easily maintain vitality at summer level and decidedly increase the milk flow by a one-week-a-month use of Kow-Kare. This famous medicine for cows tones up the genital and digestive organs—enables them to throw off disease and make milk faster.
Thousands of dairymen follow this plan and find the very slight cost of the treatment repaid a hundred fold. Only a tablespoonful of Kow-Kare morning and night is required—and only one week out of the month.
If disease does creep into the herd, Kow-Kare goes to this origin of the trouble and acts promptly. For Barrenness, Retained Afterbirth, Abortion, Scours, Milk Fever, Bunches, Loss of Appetite. etc., Kow-Kare has been the standard remedy the country over for twenty-five years.
Make a test of this more-milk plan—try it on part of your herd and convince yourself. Your feed dealer, general store or druggist will supply you—large size Kow-Kare $1.25; medium size 65c. If your dealer is not supplied, we mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

HIGH TONNAGE FROM PURPLE VETCH PLOT

BY C. C. STAUNTON

VENTURA—Many arguments pro and con concerning the use of purple vetch as a winter cover in citrus groves have been advanced. Some have stated that it would not do well during the colder days of winter, that it harbored aphis, that the total tonnage was very low and so on. Others have reported huge success in growing it and would not use anything else, notwithstanding the relatively high cost of the seed.

One place on Ventura avenue, in Ventura county, has shown consistently heavy yields so far as may be judged by the eye,

"Tree Dentistry.

Horse-power equipment for stump pulling, and stump pulled out of the ground by it.

and now comes the report that some of this has been weighed to determine the actual yield.

The grove is planted to lemons, about 24x24 feet apart and which are now 10 years old and producing quite heavily. About the first of last August, the ground was cultivated with a chisel to a depth of fourteen to sixteen inches and very thoroughly irrigated after. Just as soon after irrigation as the soil would allow, it was spring-toothed and well worked-up into a seed bed, the seed being planted about August 15. On the twelfth of September, the whole was again irrigated, as the same was done again on October 20. As the rains came fairly early, no further irriga- [illegible] and the crop carefully cut off at the surface of the ground, no dirt or trash being allowed to collect on the vines. The whole was then weighed, and the estimate made that there was a yield of fifteen and a half tons to the acre.

The owner was informed as to where this sample was taken from and stated that it could not have been taken from a lighter yielding place if one had been looked for. From an observation made in several places in the grove, this appeared to be so, but as it was a figure nearer the minimum than the maximum which was desired, the above plot was selected. Some sections looked as if they would run from three to four times the tonnage of the plot selected.

A course of instruction in stock judging will be added this year to the subjects to be handled at the teachers' short course that is to be conducted by the University of California in Los Angeles this summer. Another subject which probably will be added to the course will be that of milk testing and butter testing probably also will be included, so that this may be added to the agricultural curriculum in the high schools. The State-wide high school judging contest on the elimination plan will be carried out again this year. Contests will be held at the State Fair, for the northern section of the State, the Fresno Fair, for the central section of the State, and at the Southern California Fair, Riverside, for the southern section. J. B. Lillard, State Superintendent of Agricultural Education, Sacramento, will be in general charge of this work as before. Prof. E. H. Hughes, of the Animal Husbandry Division of the University Farm at Davis, will direct the contest. Charles S. Perrin, of the Chaffee Union High School, at Ontario, will be in charge for the southern district. Mr. Perrin will appoint a committee of five to assist him in arranging the contest for the South.

of concentrated canned citrus jelly juice and marmalade juice. These juices can be prepared in canneries in the citrus-growing districts, by methods described above, and distributed through the usual trade channels. The cost to the housewife of juice and sugar to make a six-ounce glass of marmalade or jelly will not exceed 5 cents. The canned juices are also suitable for use in the preparation of marmalade and jelly upon a commercial scale.

The jelly juice is prepared by boiling sliced oranges and lemons (equal weight of each) with water and pressing, followed by straining, settling, drawing off the juice from the sediment, filtering, and concentrating by boiling. The juice is filled boiling-hot into lacquered cans and sealed at once. Marmalade juice is prepared in the same manner, except that thinly-cut boiled peel is added at the time of canning.

A higher yield of pectin is obtained by the use of fruit cut to one-eighth of an inch in thickness or less than from that cut one-fourth of an inch or thicker. Boiling for an hour and a half is necessary to obtain a maximum yield of pectin. The juice is more easily cleared and the yield of pectin is increased if the fruit is boiled and leached with two lots of water for forty-five minutes in each case (a total of one and one-half hours.) The juice should contain at least 1 per cent of acid and pectin, respectively.

The writer believes that canned marmalade juice, and to a less degree, canned citrus jelly juice, possess sufficient merit to make their commercial production worthy of serious consideration by canners and manufacturers of citrus by-products. Their production should afford a profitable means of utilizing fruit-canning equipment during the winter and spring months.

The Livestock Bulletin.

BY [illegible]

Twenty-eight herds, comprising 948 cows, were tested under the auspices of the Riverside County Cow Testing Association during February. The average milk production of the cows tested was 755 pounds, the average fat production, 32 pounds. Cows giving over 40 pounds of fat numbered 202. The winners of first place ribbons for the month were as follows: For highest producing pure-bred cow (Holstein,) Glenwood Stock Farms; highest producing pure-bred heifer (Holstein,) Glenwood Stock Farms; highest producing grade cow, M. E. Goodreau; highest producing grade heifer, J. A. Clark; best five cows in herds of fifteen and under, R. E. Babcock; best five cows in herds of sixteen to thirty, M. E. It is estimated, according to the Crop Reporting Service bulletin issued under date of March 5, that the eastern shipment of California lambs will begin about March 25, which is almost a month earlier than last year. This early movement is indicative of a longer shipping period than prevailed in 1922, but it is more than likely that the peak of the movement will occur during April. Based upon conditions existing about March 1, it was expected that the first shipments would be made from Fresno county, gradually extending northward as the season advances. No eastern movement of lambs was expected from the Imperial Valley. Shipments of California lambs to the eastern markets in 1921 were about 300,000 head, while in 1922 there were about 230,000 live lambs and 35,000 dressed lambs sent East. Arizona expects the shipment of 35,000 lambs between April 15 and May 15, compared to 18,000 in 1922. The early lamb crop in Idaho is estimated to be 20 per cent greater than last year. In the past it has been found that the early movement of lambs from Kentucky and Tennessee has come into competition with the tail-end of the California shipments. It is estimated that this year Tennessee will ship about 8000 lambs in April as compared with 6000 last year and 6000 in 1921, with no movement from Kentucky. In May, Tennessee and Kentucky will this year probably move about 139,000 lambs as compared with 111,000 last year and 140,000 in 1921; while in June this year's movement is placed at 224,000 as compared with 229,000 last year and 208,000 in 1921. There is a considerable movement of spring lambs from Virginia, particularly during June, but the Virginia supply is usually marketed in the North Atlantic States, the greater part going to Jersey City, and will therefore not come into competition at any time during the season with California lambs.

During Stockmen's Week, held recently at the University Farm, Davis, a conference was held by W. W. Van Pelt, secretary of the Southern California Fair, and H. A. Miller of the agricultural department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, with Prof. Roadhouse and Prof. Turnbow of the College of Agriculture, as a result of which the co-operation of the dairy department of the university was offered for the putting on of an educational exhibit for 1923 at the Riverside fair. This feature of the fair will comprise an exhibit showing the advantages of better breeding of dairy cattle, sanitary equipment and methods of handling milk, improved equipment for pasteurizing and bottling milk, and varieties of cheese and other dairy products made of surplus skimmed milk.

During the month of February, the third month of its organization, the Imperial Valley Cow Testing Association tested [illegible] per cow for the month. The [illegible] number of [illegible]-pound record cows in any one herd was sixteen, the herd belonged to A. Baldge, of Silsbee. W. R. Farmer of Holtville, was second, with twelve, and John Masserini of Calexico, third, with eleven. The 2490 cows tested averaged 642 pounds of milk and 25.1 pounds of butter fat per cow for the month. The following are the dairymen having sixty-pound butter fat cows, the production of the best cow being given: F. G. Reiber, Heber, 73.6; Warne & Son, Holtville, 69.1; A. H. Smithson, Holtville, 68.9; W. R. Farmer, Holtville, 68.9; Joseph Netto, Holtville, 64.8, and Hiorth Bros., Holtville, 64.4.

An important contribution to the literature on infectious abortion is Bulletin No. 353, entitled "Bovine Infectious Abortion and Associated Diseases of Cattle and New-Born Calves," just issued by the University of California Agricultural Experiment Station. Six subjects are included in the publication of nearly 400 pages: I. Methods of Controlling Abortion. II. The Importance of Bacterium Abortum of Bang and Other Micro-organisms in Bovine Infectious Abortion. III. Manifestations of Abortion Disease without Demonstrable Etiological Factor. IV. Diseases of the Genital Tract of Cattle Frequently Associated with Abortion. V. The Diagnosis of Pregnancy in Cattle, and VI. Scours and Pneumonia in Calves. While this bulletin appeals especially to research workers, practical livestock men will profit by the information contained therein. Scours, probably the most important cause of losses of young calves, is discussed at length. The bacterial causes are described and also other factors active in bringing about the disease. The avenues of infection are indicated and methods of prevention and treatment stated. The attention of the breeder is called to the fact that the diseases of generative organs of breeding animals are numerous, widespread and call for the most expert attention in order to preserve and maintain the breeding efficiency of the herds, and further that there is no one cause why a cow will not breed, nor any one treatment that will meet all classes of sterility. A copy of the bulletin may be secured by addressing the Director of the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of California, Berkeley.

The Jersey cow, Mabel's Raleigh's Figgis, owned by W. H. Rough, Arlington, is the new California champion senior four-year-old. She started test at 4 years 7 months of age and in 365 days produced 12,046 pounds milk and 593.08 pounds of butter fat. This exceeds the state class record by 22.10 pounds. This cow's sire is Mabel's Raleigh's Poet and her dam is Fern's Figgis of H. F.

Cattle are susceptible to various forms of "scab." Recently a severe form of this disease was introduced into California through movements of scabby cattle from [illegible] Agriculture to immediately take measures to prevent its spread and finally to eradicate it. If this outbreak had been permitted to spread without interference, the department officials believe that quarantine and dipping, necessary to eradicate it, would have resulted in heavy losses to cattlemen.

Official announcement has been made that the World's Dairy Congress, to which President Harding has invited official representatives from all nations in the world, will be held in Washington, D. C., Oct. 2 to 5, 1923.

H. W. Rice, Santa Ana, received the highest average for herds under fifteen cows, in the Orange County Cow Testing Association for the month of January, his average being 1254 pounds milk and 53.2 pounds butter fat. One of his pure-bred cows, Sharlet DeKol, produced 116 pounds of butter fat from 2835 pounds milk. This is an exceptionally good record and Mr. Rice has every reason to be proud of this good cow. The Orange County Association tested 790 cows during the month and the average production for all was 902 pounds milk and 36.2 pounds butter fat.

An outstanding California Holstein event of last year was the purchase in December of the wonderfully bred young bull, Prince Aaggie Acme Mead, by W. J. Higdon, Tulare; P. M. Longan, Tulare, and F. S. Borror & Son, Tipton, from the A. W. Morris & Sons Corporation, Woodland. The price is reported to have been the highest yet paid for a bull of equal youth in California, the youngster being a 12-month-old calf. He is sired by Sir Aaggie De Kol Mead, $30,000 son of Miss Valley Mead De Kol Walker, now heading Fred Hartsook's herd at Lankershim. His dam is the noted 1034-pound junior 2-year-old Miss Aaggie Acme Burke, who is also the dam of the $41,000 King Korndyke Pontiac Acme, heading the Santa Anita Ranch herd at Santa Anita. Miss Aaggie Acme Burke, her dam, and second dam comprise one of the very highest record combinations of three direct generations of 1000-pound cows of the breed. The seven nearest dams of Prince Aaggie Acme Mead have each made over 1000 pounds butter in one year, the seven averaging 1137.51 pounds butter and 23,606.9 pounds milk. His seven nearest dams each have two or more yearly records, the two best years of each averaging for the seven the tremendous total of 2146.74 pounds butter and 46,457.2 pounds milk. He is a three-quarter brother to the $41,000 King Korndyke Pontiac Acme at Santa Anita Rancho. In making this purchase Messrs. Higdon, Borror and Longan are following on with a remarkable line of breeding, as they already jointly own Sir Aaggie Mead, the $9250 son of Sir Aaggie De Kol Acme and Aralia De Kol Mead, the middle cow in the highest three direct generations of 1000-pound cows of the breed. A SHOWER OF BULLS

During the last few weeks we have had a heavy run of bull calves—from some of our best cows, too. Just when we have the greatest need for milk, because of our increased population, we can not afford to feed these fellows for long—so we are offering them at the lowest prices yet, for immediate sale. Sons of cows with records up to 800 lbs. butter in 305 days; 2-year olds with 20 lbs. in 7 days, etc. Also some from well-bred heifers just going on test. Six of them are brothers or grandsons of cows over 1100 lbs. butter.

SOME HINTS ON TOOL-MAKING FOR THE FARMER-BLACKSMITH

By A. G. HARGRAVE, Mechanic Arts Department, Chaffey Union High School

TOOL-MAKING is one of the most essential branches of all the practical arts and is probably the least understood. In this article the writer will endeavor to bring out the various "kinks" of this art in definite, practical form, so that any ordinary job may be performed.

Wrought iron and machine steel are the materials used in the making of the various kinds of band iron, rods, bolts and engine frames. This material may be welded or forged into almost any shape, but cannot be hardened by ordinary methods. It is easily bent and will stand great pulling strains.

Cast iron is the metal used in making engine cylinders, bases and other machine parts that are of irregular form. Cast iron will stand great loads but will not stand any pulling or bending. It cannot be welded except by the oxy-acetylene, electric or thermit processes and must not be suddenly cooled under any condition, or it will break like a piece of glass.

Tool steel has the characteristics of both wrought and cast iron to the extent that in its soft or annealed form it may be bent and forged into various shapes. It cannot be welded in the forge fire, though it may be suddenly cooled from a red heat, and in the process will undergo a complete change of structure, becoming very hard and brittle.

All malleable iron, cast iron or steel comes from the same iron ore. These various structures are caused by the varying percentages and forms of carbon that they contain. It is a hard matter to tell the difference between a piece of tool steel and a piece of iron by the looks. The best positive test is to take the piece of metal to an emery wheel and grind it so as to make a shower of sparks. It is the color and shape of these sparks that determine whether the material is steel. The best way to get a definite idea of the spark test is to take an old file and an old bolt, (the file being made of tool steel and the bolt of either wrought iron or machine steel,) to a grinder and note carefully the color and shape of sparks as they are ground off. This may be relied on as a positive test at all times.

HARDENING HEATS

As has been stated before tool steel may be hardened by sudden cooling from a red heat. In as much as there are many shades of red, and the usual one stated for hardening is "cherry red," the next thing to find out is the variety of cherry which must be matched. This is the point of success well to note that the various kinds of tool steels are graded by the percentage of carbon they contain. As these percentages vary, so does the correct color to which the steel must be heated.

To test for the proper heat to obtain for each type, either an ordinary compass or a bar magnet can be used. Set the compass near at hand, or suspend the magnet on a string near the forge. Bring the tool that is being made (before it is heated) up to either, and it will be found that both the compass and the magnet are attracted to the tool steel. Then heat the material to a dull red and try it on the compass or magnet again, and they will still be attracted. Gradually bring the heat of the steel up to the point where the needle is not attracted or the bar does not stick. At this heat the steel should be suddenly cooled. Heating the steel to a brighter red will make it poorer, not better. At no time while the tool is being forged should the heat be allowed to run much higher than this color, as it tends to burn out the carbon from the steel and, if this happens, the tool is liable to break when put to use. A tool which has been overheated in forging or hardening will show a very coarse grain when broken.

The purpose of the hardening heat is to obtain a very fine grain in the steel. The holding of this grain is dependent on the rapidity of cooling. There should be no time wasted in taking the tool from the fire and quenching it in water. The quenching must be carefully done or warping or cracking are liable to result. To eliminate warping, remember that the tool should always be quenched point first, in a vertical position, and never sidewise.

To avoid cracking, do not allow the tool to cool with the water level on it in any one position for the part that is below the water-line will cool and shrink, while all above will still be hot and expanded. Between these two points a violent strain is set up, which causes cracking. Gradually move the tool up and down in a vertical plane, to blend this cooling belt and this trouble will not be encountered. Under no circumstances should the point or cutting edge be lifted from the water until it is thoroughly cold or, as a result, the steel will not harden.

TEMPERING PROCESS

Tempering is the process of reducing the hardness to the correct point for the particular tool and its use. Should a tool, for example, a cold chisel, be put into use as soon as it is hardened, the cutting edge would break off. By removing this hardness or reducing it, a certain "toughness" is obtained. One must be sacrificed to obtain the other. Hardness is reduced through the application of heat.

The absorbtion of heat by any polished piece of steel (either hard or soft) causes a chemical action on the surface to form various colors. Each color denotes the temperature to which the steel has been heated. It may be called a color scale, and water is applied about every ten days or two weeks until the crop is ready to cut. The furrows between rows are cultivated with a one-horse cultivating outfit, and very shallow, as under irrigation, the corn roots grow close to the surface of the soil. To save one operation, some of the growers rig up an outfit which will cultivate the space between rows thoroughly and leave a shallow furrow for the next irrigation also. Others irrigate, but do not cultivate, when the corn is almost ready to cut.

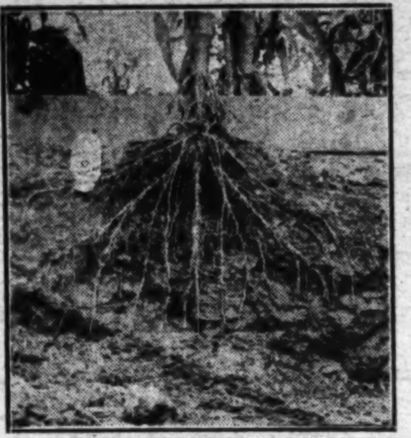
When grown for the grain, or for seed, corn is planted in hills, spaced about two feet apart, with rows three and a half feet apart. Some of the best seed corn is grown without irrigation in the valleys close to the ocean, where the fogs supply ample moisture for its growth. But, under irrigation, the care after planting is much the same as for that grown for silage purposes.



The Root System.

When the stalk is tasseled out the roots are distributed as shown in this picture. The cultivator shovel at the left shows that only by shallow cultivation will the top roots escape injury.

FUMIGATION RESULTS

County Horticultural Inspector H. C. Pegler, stationed in the San Fernando district reports fumigation results as very good in red and black scale during the past season, and that orchards not fumigated show quite heavy infestations. Similar reports have been received from J. B. Marlow regarding black scale in lot work in the Glendale district and from A. G. Smith, Inspector in the Pasadena district. A. M. Trundy reports that in the Pomona district unfumigated groves are very badly infested. He states however, that excellent results have been attained in the fumigation for both black and citricola scales.

HEED NOT THE "TIPS" OF "STUNT" MECHANICS

BY A. S. MOSES

Agricultural Engineering Division College of Agriculture, Davis

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing." We often hear this axiom quoted, but the truth of it is never so well realized as when an autoist who has learned a little about an automobile, tells a new owner how he primes his engine when he stops it by speeding it up and shutting off the spark, and how he cools his motor nicely by running down hill on compression.

Suppose someone were to tell you that every time you stopped your sewing machine you should take a rag and carefully wipe off all the oil from the bearings and that when you started up next time, you should re-oil it? Would you take his advice?

This, in effect, is what you are doing when the engine is speeded up and run several revolutions with the spark off. Raw fuel is drawn through the carburetor, and condenses in the cylinders, thoroughly washing all oil off the cylinder walls and pistons. When the engine is started again, instead of the cylinders and pistons having a good film of oil, they are dry. Not only does this result, but the engine may even be over-primed, and this in time will dilute the lubricating oil in the crank case to a harmful degree.

The practice of running down hill on compression, unless the gasoline can be shut off, has something of the same effect. If the hill is very long, when the bottom is reached you will have a nice, clean piston working in a nice, clean unlubricated cylinder.

A man recently told his friend that he had a "stunt" for cleaning his spark plugs. "I just retard my spark and let the engine run hot and burn off the oil on the plug," he said. Instead of getting out of the machine and locating the plug and cleaning it properly; this autoist heats up his whole engine and nine times out of ten does not get the results he is striving for.

Another fellow rejoices over the fact that he can use heavy fuel, perhaps distillate, through a simple process. He buys a few mothballs at the drug store and drops them into the gasoline tank. The real effect of adding mothballs to gasoline is to make it heavier instead of lighter and at the same time make it burn with a heavier deposit of soot. So instead of helping his engine materially, he is making the gas harder to vaporize and dirtier in its combustion. Nearly every automobile manufacturing company furnishes instruction books with its cars and these should be studied carefully. The novice had best not place too much credence in advice given by the "Gasoline Alley" type of mechanic.

COURSE ON APPLES

The Division of Agricultural Education, of the University of California, recently announced that it is offering a new correspondence course on apple culture. An interesting feature recently brought out by H. M. Butterfield, supervisor of the agricultural correspondence courses, is that California's apple crop has an annual value about equal to that of the total gold output of the State. Those interested in taking the course are requested to write to the Division of Agricultural Education, University of California, Berkeley.

runs, in degrees of heat, as follows: Pale yellow, 430 deg. F.; straw yellow, 460; brown-yellow, 500; light purple, 525; blue, tinged with red, 570, and blue, 580. The colors to which the various tools should be drawn to are as follows: Engraving tools and very hard tools for lathe work; pale yellow. Taps, reamers, milling cutters and general lathe tools, straw-yellow. Hammers, sledges, stone drills, twist drills, axes and woodworking tools, deep straw. Cold chisels for light work and boiler-maker's tools, light purple. Cold chisels for ordinary work and knife blades, blue tinged with red. Springs, picks, etc., blue.

As an example of hardening and tempering a cold chisel or punch in one heat, the following instructions may be given: Fit a pair of tongs to hold the chisel around the body of the tool, half way between point and head. (The tongs should not be of too light a lip or they are liable to loose their grip when hot.) Build a long, even fire, then hold the chisel so as to heat it evenly from the point to the head to the hardening heat. Turn the chisel over several times as it heats, to aid in uniform heating. When both ends are up to the right heat, remove the tool from the fire and quench it (small end first,) with an up and down motion, until at least the fire half inch of the point is cold. Then turn it end for end and cool the head in the same manner. Now take an old piece of sand paper on a piece of lath ,or an old piece of grindstone of some sort and polish the ends that have been cooled. The center is still hot and soft and the points are cold, hard and bright. The heat from the center will travel to the points as fast as the colors on the polished surfaces indicate, softening them proportionally. When the desired color reaches the point (redish blue) it should be cooled. The head end may be left slightly harder (light purple.) Let the middle cool as slowly as possible, so that it will be soft and tough.

An angle of 60 degrees has been found to be most satisfactory for grinding points and cutting edges. An angle of this size may be easily constructed by forming a triangle of three pieces of wire, cut the same length, or any three-sided figure, all of whose sides are equal Care should be exercised in grinding tools on dry stones to see that the temper is not drawn from the cutting edge by the heat generated in grinding. This is especially true with woodworking tools, as any heat higher than a "straw" is harmful.

Many very handy ranch tools can be made of old automobile parts that have been discarded. Thin tools, such as screw drivers and flat wrenches, may be worked out of old spring leaves, and wrecking bars, pinch or crow bars and nail pullers out of old axles.

ARIZONA GROWERS FAVOR ACALA COTTON

PHOENIX.—Despite the experiences of the past two seasons, the Salt River Valley will have as much cotton this season as last, or about 110,000 acres. It is reported that there will be a heavier planting of short staples, as the eastern mills fail to give preference to Pima. Much of the machinery of the large gins, which have been handling long staple exclusively, is being changed over to handle the short staple.

The Acala variety is being preferred for planting. It is secured mainly in California and is admitted after vacuum fumigation in Los Angeles. Two carloads of Coachella Valley Acala seed were recently received at Gila Bend, for the planting of 8000 acres under the Gillespie canal, leased by the McDevitt Company and others. Growers believe that the Acala will sell for nearly as much as Pima. It has a shorter growing season, yields heavier than the Pima, and, is much more easily picked and ginned. Some Delta and Mebane also will be planted in the Salt River and Yuma valleys.

Though the crop is not in, arrangements for picking already are being made by the Arizona Cotton Growers' Association, which has headquarters in Tempe. Mexicans will continue to be the main source of labor and a large number of pickers is to be brought across the line.

IRRIGATION BULLETIN

"The Measurement of Irrigation Water on the Farm" is the title of a new circular, No. 250, recently issued by the University of California college of agriculture. The publication discusses most of the common methods of measuring water, laying especial emphasis upon the adaptability of each method toward the conditions which may be found on the farm of the actual water user. The work contains many useful tables, some of which appear for the first time in a form available for public distribution. Copies of Circular No. 250 can be obtained free of charge by addressing the director of the college of agriculture, University of California, Berkeley.

An Interesting Date Garden

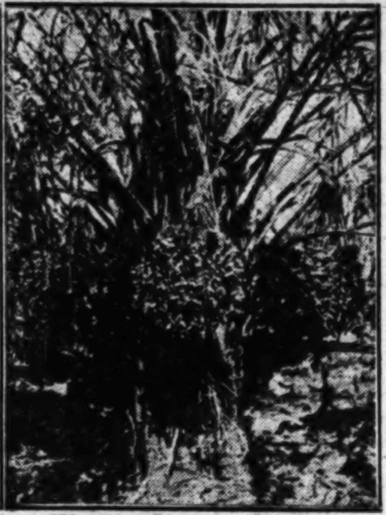
There are aisles of nursery seedlings suggestive of ornate promenades for Palm Sunday processions. In addition to the palms, there are small numbers of other trees, such as lemon, orange, grapefruit, fig, and peach, indiscriminately planted about in the jungle of palms.

What renders the scene still more riotous is the presence, in season, of watermelon vines densely carpeting the ground and climbing up into the palms to dangle their smile-producing globes of refreshingness among the palm leaves. Then, four years ago, Mr. DuVall planted a cover crop of peanuts. These took rank possession; he did not harvest them, and they have been maintaining their sway ever since. Practically all of the surface not occupied by watermelon vines is covered with peanuts, or wattled over with both. Dead palm leaves that have been pruned off and a good many of the grubbed-out nursery males and discarded females, also occupy the inter-spaces in the tangled company of the vines.

There is a reason to this lack of interference with the self-assertiveness of nature. Mr. DuVall believes in the wild forest scheme of plant life—a sort of Thoreau slant on horticulture. He has confidence in nature's ways and believes that the natural weathering away of cover crops and general plant debris into the ground, by means of decay, winter rain and shifting sand, is as sure a way to the maintenance of fertility as arduous cultivation.



"Wonder Giantess Seedling.

It carries nine bunches of dates having a total weight of about 800 pounds.

It certainly entails much less trouble. He watches his garden for the appearance of obnoxious weeds, such as Bermuda grass, morning glory and cockle-burrs, and destroys them immediately, but the rest he permits to develop and wither up as nature designs, incidentally shading the ground from the too ardent caress of the sun in summer. His one great point of intervention is in supplying water and he irrigates frequently in wide, permanent furrows banked some years ago across the garden. The peanut crop this fourth year from the seed was being harvested at the time I visited the garden by some boys, on shares. The stand was certainly thrifty, and they seemed to be finding plenty of peanuts.

A bunch of "Jumbos."

Recently, Mr. DuVall has sold out his [illegible] fruit and grapes. The grapes will probably be used as an intercrop until the trees become large enough to require all the space. Part of the date acreage will be planted to offshoots from the best seedlings and the remainder to Deglet Noor and Saidy offshoots procured from the government. Already a second well is being drilled with a twelve-inch casing. From the two wells a flow of 150 inches is expected.

Mr. Meyers is also installing a processing and packing-house of the most modern type for the dates. This is being built of concrete and will contain a vacuum fumigator, an electrically heated maturation room, an air dehydrator, a cleaning and polishing machine and the necessary equipment for packing and storage.

Part of the consideration in the deal, stipulated by the purchaser, was that Mr. DuVall should remain with the property one year to oversee the planting of the additional acres to dates. The property will be known as The Wonder Date Garden.

THE VALUE OF THE BEE TO THE ORCHARDIST

BY G. W. BERCAW

Every day, in every way, the fruit grower is beginning to learn that the fertilization of the fruit blooms by the agency of the common honey bee is of no little importance in the production and growing of fruits, both citrus and deciduous, especially in Southern California where so much fruit is produced. The vital importance of the honey bee, as a prime factor to the fruit growing industry cannot in fact be overlooked.

Nature's immutable laws say that there must be cross fertilization of blooms. Nature has provided ways in which this fertilization may take place, and winged insects play a bog part in the plan. The bee is undoubtedly the most important pollen carrier and should not be overlooked by the practical fruit grower, no difference what variety of fruit he may specialize in.

Extensive experimentation proves the part the bee plays in the distribution of pollen from bloom to bloom. Much has been said about the self-fertilization of blooms and, while, to a limited degree this may be true among certain kinds of blooms, observation shows that it cannot always be depended upon. It has been proven that the common honey bee performs the greater part of the cross-fertilization, and that is far more to be depended on than other agencies, such as wind and rain. It is a fact that not only are flowers and blooms necessary, as a source of food for bees, nectar and pollen, but that bees and other insects are necessary to most flowers, especially in their native wild state, in order that the species may be perpetuated. The failure of fruit crops is often due to damp, cold weather at a time when the blooms are on, preventing bees and other insects from actively working on the open bloom. This stage of weather sometimes comes in Southern California, the result being that we have light crops of the various kinds of fruit so common to the section.

In an orange grove, when millions of the orange blooms are at their peak, the weather balmy, the ocean breezes tempered by the desert winds, wafting the perfume of millions of blooms far over the adjoining valleys, one will discover millions of honey bees almost forming a cloud between the groves and near-by apiaries. Many books have been written on the subject of the cross fertilization or pollenization of plants and flowers, but only in very recent years has any active research into this important subject been carried on.

VETCH DISCUSSED

A brief account of the history and seed production of purple vetch by Roland McKee, agronomist, is contained in Department Circular 256, recently released by the United States Department of Agriculture. Purple vetch has proved to be a valuable green-manuring crop for orchards and is much in demand by citrus growers of California. Through efforts of the California Citrus Growers' Exchange, purple vetch seed is being produced under contract by growers in the Coos Bay region of Western Oregon, where the conditions are particularly favorable, and also in Northwestern California. Copies of the circular may be had, upon request, of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

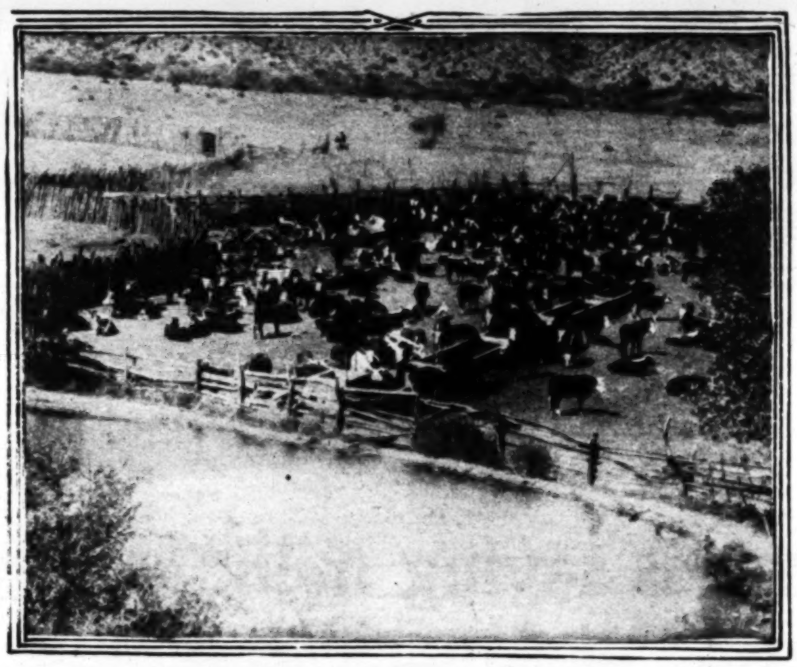
That Interesting Western Institution—The Cow Corral

BY R. H. WILLIAMS

A rope corral for the Remuda (cow ponies.)

Stockade corral on M. A. Perkins Ranch, Verde River. Arizona.



Corrals on a Gila county, Arizona, ranch.

"Horse-high, hog-tight and bull-strong." Corral on La Osa Ranch, Palo Alto, Arizona.

THE corral is the center of activities in every cow outfit. Many a stirring bucking contest has been staged in this kind of inclosure. In them, generations of cows have been separated from their calves so that the latter might be branded, earmarked and vaccinated. There is not a corral in the entire range country that has not been scaled by some man in a hurry to escape an irate old cow, longhorned steer or raging bull.

The first use of the corral was to confine animals at night and to protect them from robbers and predatory animals. Since the early colonial days, corrals have been used in America to facilitate the handling of the semiwild range stock. The Spaniard was the first American stockman, and it was he who adapted and improved the corral, as well as giving us the name. Some of the corrals built under the supervision of the industrious padres in South America and Mexico during the seventeenth century remain standing today. They were made of wood, stone, and adobe, together, a liberal supply of rawhide being often used to bind some of the material together.

Strength rather than beauty is desired in corrals. They must be horse high, hog tight and bull strong. Herds of cattle are always ready to stampede and panicky horses to surge and mill and they often throw tremendous pressure against the corral sides. Round structures are favored because almost any range cow will "go on the prod" if cornered. A level place with soft soil, free from rocks is selected. It is difficult enough for a mounted man to throw the rope accurately or cut out stock without having to watch uneven ground under foot.

Cattlemen take a pride in their corrals, aiming to have them well arranged and serviceable. The stockade type is most common in the Southwest. It is made of native posts placed on end in a trench, two or more feet below the ground and extending six feet high. Wire or poles are used to bind the posts together. Another type of corral often constructed in the Southwest looks more like a wood-pile than anything else. The walls are made by planting posts in the ground in pairs one or two feet apart and at intervals of four to six feet. The space between these posts is filled with posts of all sizes, shapes and lengths, placed in a horizontal position. A liberal supply of wire or supple branches binds the posts together. Lumber and poles are used more now than formerly for corrals, but such materials cost more and are not as durable as the makeshift ones formerly used. Besides, corrals made from lumber do not look as well in the cowman's eyes as the genuine old-time ones.

The size of the corral varies according to the number of cattle to be confined. As the animals are usually handled in small groups, it is very seldom that corral room is available for more than 20 per cent of the stock in the outfit. Small pastures or "traps" are used for holding cattle while they are not being worked.

Time means money to the modern cattleman. Bruised or injured animals entail a loss, so the cattlemen aim to handle their stock at the right time and as easily and rapidly as possible. Cutting chutes for separating cattle into different lots and squeezers for holding stock while being vaccinated, dehorned, branded or handled in any way are both important in any corral.

The old method whereby a dozen or more outfits rounded up the cattle in big droves, then close-herded them on a level place while the calves were dragged out to the fire and flanked to the ground so that they could be branded and earmarked, has passed, never to return. The cutting up of the large outfits into smaller units, the construction of more fences and the urge to reduce high-priced labor, "chuck" and other operating expenses all have increased the use of corrals.

Handling range cattle inside of corrals helps to gentle them just as working them in the open tends to make them wilder. It may be as fast and as easy to "tie onto" a long-eared calf wherever it is found on the range and to build a fire and brand, ear-mark, vaccinate or treat it for screwworms as it is to drive the cow and calf along with a few other cattle to a corral for treatment, but the results are different. The cowboy may have to run both cow and calf a quarter of a mile before roping the calf; then he must tie it down while the iron is heated. On the sounding of its plaintive call of her offspring the cow begins racing around in a frenzy and as soon as the calf is released, both of them bolt away. They will always fear a mounted person from then on more than any wild animal. A child riding to school will make the cow tremble and break for the brush.

The calf handled in the corral has an entirely different reaction to man. Branding hurts just as much there as anywhere, and neither the cow nor the calf enjoy it. But they do not have the frantic fear of man when other stock are near, and, besides, they are not run or roped on the range. The stock lick salt until the iron is hot, then the calf is roped or driven into a chute to be handled. When it is turned back with its mother, both are left in the corral for a short time to settle down before they are turned out on the range again.

Wild cattle run the fat off their bodies, and as range stock do not have a tendency to become any too fat, they must be handled carefully to conserve weight. Gentle cattle are more easily managed and raise more and better calves than wild ones. No wonder cattlemen report that calves branded in the open do not weigh within twenty-five to fifty pounds as much as those branded in corrals.

As the ranges become fenced and modern systems of management are introduced some of the picturesqueness of the cowboy life will disappear. But although the cowboys may develop into cowmen, so to speak, the day will never come when corrals will be called barnyards, paddocks or pens in the range country.

Production of peanuts in the United States declined from 841,474,000 pounds in 1920 to 829,307,000 pounds in 1921 and to 623,507,000 pounds in 1922, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Uncle Sam's Poultry Experiment Work in Arizona

By RAY E. LUCE, U. S. Department of Agriculture,
Poultryman in Charge of Glendale Station

WHEN the United States Department of Agriculture decided, four years ago, to establish a Poultry Experiment Station in the Southwest, the most available site seemed to be the tract in the Salt River Valley in Arizona, where for some years an Ostrich Breeding Station had been conducted. The need for the ostrich station had passed, but the demand for experimental work in breeding and feeding of poultry raised under the conditions prevailing in the semiarid regions of the Southwest had become urgent. The poultry work was started in November, 1919, by Dan Green, who was sent out from Washington for that purpose. Mr. Green was recalled to Washington in May, 1920, and, in July of the same year, the writer was placed in charge of the new station.

Soon after the writer entered upon his duties, an effort was made to obtain a more desirable and convenient site. Showing splendid co-operation, the residents of Glendale, Ariz., raised funds and purchased a tract of ten acres, which was presented to the Department of Agriculture. This tract of land is on a paved street and, being in close proximity to Glendale, has the advantage of city water and electricity, which have helped, in a great measure, to build up the present fine plant.

The work of the station, in scope, is, first of all, experimental and investigational, but, though of a scientific nature, it is also very practical in its application, since, in the study of feeding and breeding principles, much work along housing and hatching lines and in the care of young stock must be done. Many of the experiments in feeding have proven to be quite valuable to the farmers and the commercial poultrymen of the Southwest.

In one experiment in feeding, started Nov. 1, 1920, and known as "the farmer's pen," the birds were fed on whole grain entirely, no animal food or laying mash being used, although the hens were allowed an alfalfa run and grit and shell. This pen lost $1.58 per hen in the first year of the experiment. During this time the average egg yield was ninety-four and one-half eggs per hen. The second year this pen was fed a regular ration of laying mash, grain once each day, buttermilk (as a liquid,) and allowed an alfalfa run. This year the same hens came through with an average egg yield of 161½ eggs per hen, thus turning from a loss to a profit, simply as a result of right methods in care and feeding. The third year of experimentation with the same hens began on Nov. 1, 1922, and this year the birds are being used as breeders. At the present time they are giving a good egg yield and producing good fertile eggs of strong hatchability.

Several feeding experiments now being carried on will help to solve many feeding problems confronting the poultry raisers of the Southwest. In breeding rapid strides have been made, especially in the development of higher egg production, more uniformly large eggs, in bringing up higher fertility, greater uniformity in standard qualities, with larger size (fully up to standard weight) in better-flock vigor and in type.

One feeding experiment in particular, which is now being carried on promises, from present indication at least, to give some valuable data as to the use of grains grown in the Southwest for the feeding of poultry. A mash was made up containing all ingredients grown here with only the meatmeal, bone and linseed oil cake meal coming from outside this territory. The scratch feed consists of wheat, milo and hegari, all grown locally. The pen (twenty Leghorns) has led in egg production for the first three months of our laying year, with the lowest cost for feeding. Of course the labor and overhead expense will be the same as for the other pens.

The varieties of fowls bred at this station are Single-Comb White Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds and Barred Plymouth Rocks. The breeding stock was sent here from the U. S. Experimental Farm at Beltsville, Md.

Another view, showing yards and colony-houses. The cement ditch, at the left in this picture, is a part of the 2000-foot cement irrigation system installed on the farm.

This year turkey-breeding is to be made one of the major projects of the farm experimental work, as this station has been selected to carry on experiments and investigations in the feeding and breeding of turkeys for the Department of Agriculture. The best stock obtainable has been secured and the work is now started and will be developed with the raising of young poults of this season's hatching. This work will be of utmost importance to the entire country and to the Southwest in particular. A large part of the supply of this American bird for the markets of the United States is now being produced in the Southwest, Texas, Missouri, Oklahoma and California, in the order named, being the principal sources for the holiday birds. The Southwest is fast becoming the most important turkey-raising section and undoubtedly will soon claim this distinction. It is fitting, therefore, that this station should have been chosen for such work.

The Glendale station is fully equipped, with suitable buildings, consisting of a foreman's cottage, houses for poultry, turkey sheds, a commodious feed house, an incubator cellar, especially designed for this section of country, and a cockerel house that will care for twenty males, each with a compartment four feet square and an outside run, four by eight feet. Males can be kept in such quarters for reserve, as, when the breeding season is over, they are removed from the pens and infertile eggs only are produced. There is also a good barn and work shop with sheds for storage and a room for a power feed-cutter. Nearly 2000 feet of cement irrigation ditch has been constructed, and a number of acres of alfalfa have been planted to supply green feed for the laying hens and the young growing stock. The chickens have a separate range from the young turkeys.

Water hydrants have been placed on all parts of the farm for the convenience of the workers and to supply fresh water at all times to the stock. A large number of mulberry trees have been planted to provide shade for the hens and turkeys and the driveways are lined with date and fan palms, both typical of the Southwest.

The colony-brooding system is used in the plant, with small, well-constructed houses, six by eight feet in dimensions being used. The brooders are put into them and when the chicks are ready to go without heat, the brooders are removed from houses so that the latter can be used as colony-houses for the growing stock. When the chicks are wing-banded the cockerels are separated from the pullets and taken to another part of the farm for development, leaving the latter in their original houses undisturbed, there to remain until they are leg-banded and put into laying-houses.

All hens are trapnested and all records kept, from the incubator up, so that reliable data may be kept as to pedigree and performance of each individual. We expect to raise about 1000 chicks this season and all turkey poults possible, from stock we have. The first hatch this year was 80 per cent and the following hatches were nearly as good.

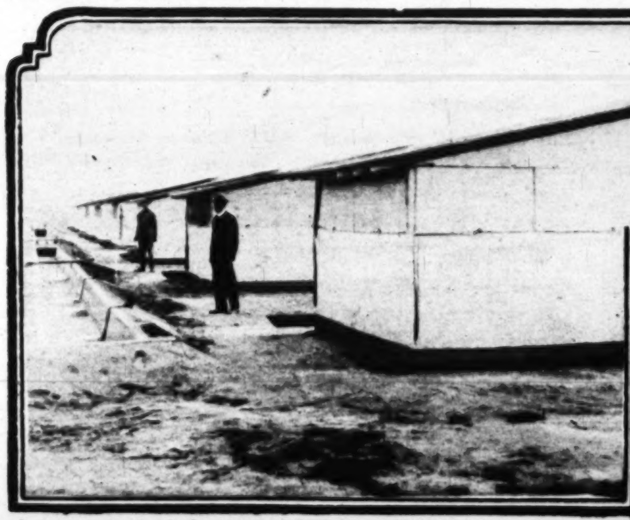
It might be of interest to poultryman-readers to know the formula for the mash fed our layers and breeders. This is known here as Government Laying Mash No. 10, and is composed of ingredients as follows: Bran, 325 pounds; wheat shorts, 160 pounds; corn meal, 165 pounds; meat scraps, 100 pounds; bone meal, 100 pounds; charcoal, 50 pounds, and linseed oil cake meal, 25 pounds. This mash has been very satisfactory and is now being used for the third year.

There are a number of things that are required of a mash for laying and breeding hens. First, the mash must contain a balance that, in combination with the whole grains fed, will keep the hen in a good, vigorous condition the year round; second, it must furnish the materials needed for the maximum number of eggs; third, it must contain the elements that will carry the hen into the moult in a vigorous and healthy condition; fourth, it must be strong enough to carry her through the moult in good condition, vigorous and ready to begin the next season's lay.

The Station has accomplished a great deal in breeding to build up egg production. In three yards we have sixty pullets, for which the records show an average egg yield of twenty-one eggs a month per bird for the period from Nov. 1, 1922 to Jan. 31, 1923. They were still keeping up the record when this article was written. We have individual records from some of these pullets as follows:

Hen No. 620—November, 26 eggs; December, 21 eggs; January, 22 eggs. Total, 69 eggs. Hen No. 628—November, 21 eggs; December, 22 eggs; January, 22 eggs. Total, 65 eggs. Hen No. 632—November, 21 eggs; December, 22 eggs; January, 23 eggs. Total 66 eggs. Hen No. 634—November, 23 eggs; December, 24 eggs; January, 26 eggs. Total, 73 eggs. Hen No. 637 November, 22 eggs; December, 24 eggs; January, 24 eggs. Total, 66 eggs.

The pullets in these pens were hatched April 14 and May 8, 1922. It is expected that a large number of hens will pass the 200-egg mark this year, and from experiments so far carried on, we believe it possible to breed up a flock of high egg-producers in a comparatively short period by proper matings from carefully selected stock. In our breeding yards this year, we have thirty-six hens, 2 and 3 years of age, with egg records from 180 to 252 eggs each in one year.



A "close-up" of the colony-houses. The wooden curtains on the sides of the houses are opened in the summer, providing ample ventilation. These houses were especially designed for the climatic conditions of the Southwest.

The Glendale Station is fully equipped with modern buildings and outhouses for all purposes. This view shows the foreman's cottage (center) and the feed and incubator houses. Inset—A cockerel from a 252-egg dam.
